accusation that on 24.8.2018, at 10.00 AM, Kharag Bahadur, alongwith others, tried to encroach upon his land by planting Bamboo plant over it, which was protested by the complainant. Reacting to it, on being exhorted by applicant, Kharag Bahadur Chauhan, co-accused, Anil Kumar, Vishal Kumar, Nand Lal and others, abused complainant and did criminal trespass into his house. They assaulted him and, thereby, damaged the household goods. The occurrence was instantly reported at local Police Station, but to no avail. Thus, this complaint, through Registered Post, was sent to the Superintendent of Police, but that too yielded no action. Hence, this complaint was moved before the Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate and on the basis of testimonies, these applicants were summoned for offences, punishable, under Sections 452, 323, 504, 506, 427 IPC.

5. In exercise of inherent power, conferred by Section 482 of Cr.P.C., this Court is not expected to analyze factual evidence, which is to be placed during trial before the Trial court. Prima facie, there was evidence, which was recorded, under Sections 200 and 202 of Cr.P.C., on the basis of which impugned summoning order was passed.

6. Saving of inherent power of High Court, as given under Section 482 Cr.P.C, provides that nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or affect the inherent powers of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under this Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice.

7. Meaning thereby this inherent power is with High Court (I) to make such order as may be necessary to give effect to any other order under this Code (II) to prevent abuse of the process of any Court (III) or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. But Apex Court in State of Andhra Pradesh v. Gaurishetty Mahesh, JT 2010 (6) SC 588: (2010) 6 SCALE 767: 2010 Cr. LJ 3844 has propounded that "While exercising jurisdiction under section 482 of the Code, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable apprehension of it accusation would not be sustained. That is the function of the trial Judge/Court". In another subsequent Hamida v. Rashid, (2008) 1 SCC 474*, hon'ble Apex Court propounded that "Ends of justice would be better served if valuable time of the Court is spent in hearing those appeals rather than entertaining petitions under Section 482 at an interlocutory stage which after filed with some oblique motive in order to circumvent the prescribed procedure, or to delay the trial which enable to win over the witness or may disinterested in giving evidence, ultimately resulting in miscarriage of Justice". In again another subsequent* Monica Kumar v. State of Uttar Pradesh, (2008) 8 SCC 781*, the Apex Court has propounded "Inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself." While interpreting this jurisdiction of High Court Apex Court in Popular* Muthiah v. State, Represented by Inspector of Police, (2006) 7 SCC 296 has propounded "High Court can exercise jurisdiction suo motu in the interest of justice. It can do so while exercising other jurisdictions such as appellate or revisional jurisdiction. No formal application for invoking inherent jurisdiction is necessary. Inherent jurisdiction can be exercised in respect of substantive as well as procedural matters. It can as well be exercised in respect of incidental or supplemental power irrespective of nature of proceedings".

8. Regarding prevention of abuse of process of Court, Apex Court in Dhanlakshmi v. R.Prasana Kumar, (1990) Cr LJ 320 (DB): AIR 1990 SC 494 has propounded "To prevent abuse of the process of the Court, High Court in exercise of its inherent powers under section 482 could quash the proceedings but there would be justification for interference only when the complaint did not disclose any offence or was frivolous vexatious or oppressive" as well as in State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1989) Cr LJ 1005: AIR 1989 SC 1, Apex Court propounded "In exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 High Court would not embark upon an enquiry whether the allegations in the complaint are likely to be established by evidence or not".

9. Meaning thereby, exercise of inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 Cr.P.C. is within the limits, propounded as above.

10. In view of what has been discussed above, this proceeding, under Section 482 of Cr.P.C., lacks merits and as such, this Application, under Section 482 of Cr.P.C., stands dismissed.

11. However, it is directed that if the applicants appear and surrender before the court below within 30 days from today and apply for bail, their prayer for bail shall be considered and decided in view of the settled law laid by this Court in the case of Amrawati and another Vs. State of U.P. reported in 2004 (57) ALR 290 as well as judgement passed by Hon'ble Apex Court reported in 2009 (3) ADJ 322 (SC) Lal Kamlendra Pratap Singh Vs. State of U.P.

12. For a period of 30 days from today, no coercive action shall be taken against the applicants. However, in case, the applicants do not appear before the Court below within the aforesaid period, coercive action shall be taken against them.

A. Cr.P.C., 1973 - Section 482 - For Cancellation of bail granted to opposite party no. 2 & 3 -Maintainability of Criminal Application under section 482 Cr.P.C. - when specific provision present under section 439(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure for cancellation of bail - Present petition under section 482, Cr.P.C. for that very purpose is not maintainable.

The High Court while exercising jurisdiction under section 482,C.P.C. is empowered enough to make orders in the nature as contended by the applicant but it is equally true and well settled that the inherent powers under section 482 can be exercised only when no other remedy is available to the litigant and not where specific remedy is provided by the statute.

Since Section 439 (2) occurring in Chapter XXXIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure which deals with the provisions as to bail and bonds, specifically provides that a High Court or Court of Session may direct that any person who has been released on bail under this Chapter, be arrested and commit him to custody, therefore, this Court is not inclined to accept the submission as raised by the Applicant , hence the present petition under section 482,Cr.P.C. is dismissed as not maintainable, leaving it open for the applicant to take recourse to section 439(2),Cr.P.C.

1. Heard applicant Sri Braj Lal, Advocate, in person. and Sri Moeez Uddin, learned counsel for opposite party no. 2 & 3.

2. By this petition under section 482,Cr.P.C., the applicant seeks cancellation of bail orders dated 25.4.2018 & 24.3.2018 to opposite party no. 2 & 3 passed by the learned Special Judge,SC/ST Act, Allahabad in Case Crime No. 362/2014, U/s 147,382,504,506 IPC and U/s 3(2)(V), SC/ST Act, S.T. No. 422/2018, Police Station Phoolpur, Allahabad.

3. A preliminary objection has been raised by the learned counsel appearing for the opposite party no. 2 & 3 regarding maintainability of the present petition on the ground that when specific provision is there under section 439(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure for cancellation of bail, the present petition under section 482,Cr.P.C. for that very purpose is not maintainable.

4. In reply, Sri Braj Lal, Advocate submits that inherent powers of the High Court under section 482,Cr.P.C. are very wide and the same can be exercised in order to prevent the abuse of the process of any court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice.

5. No doubt, the High Court while exercising jurisdiction under section 482,C.P.C. is empowered enough to make orders in the nature as contended by the applicant but it is equally true and well settled that the inherent powers under section 482 can be exercised only when no other remedy is available to the litigant and not where specific remedy is provided by the statute. The inherent jurisdictio0.79 "n under section 482 has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in section 482 itself.

7. The preliminary objection raised by Sri Moeez Uddin, learned counsel for the opposite parties has force and is sustained.

8. In view of the above, the present petition under section 482,Cr.P.C. is dismissed as not maintainable, leaving it open for the applicant to take recourse to section 439(2),Cr.P.C.

A. Indian Evidence Act, 1872 - Section 103 - Quashing of Charge-sheet and entire criminal proceedings - Plea of alibi cannot be examined by this Court in the exercise of its inherent powers under Section 482 Cr.P.C. - For the Plea of Alibi the burden of proof can only be discharged by leading evidence before the trial Court-Statement recorded under Section 161 of Cr.Pc is not a substantive piece of evidence - Judicial precedent-has to be understood in context of facts based on which the observation made therein are made. (Para 9,10,11,12,13 & 14)

Accused resorted to indiscriminate firing upon the brother of informant who after sustaining injuries succumbed on the spot.

Plea of alibi cannot be examined by this Court in the exercise of its inherent powers under Section 482 Cr.P.C. whether it is the stage of taking cognizance or the framing of charge. The Magistrate at the stage of taking cognizance of the offence has primarily to be satisfied that prima facie commission of cognizable offence is disclosed and cannot meticulously scan the statements of witnesses recorded under Section 161 Cr.P.C. and other material / evidence collected during investigation by the Investigating Officer.

Section 103 of Evidence Act - The burden of proof as to any particular fact lies on that person who wishes the Court to believe in its existence, unless it is provided by any law that the proof of that fact shall lie on any particular person - This could be done by leading evidence in the trial court.

Statement recorded under Section 161 Cr.P.C. is not a substantive piece of evidence and in view of proviso Sub-section (1) to Section 162 Cr.P.C. the statement can be used only for the limited purpose of contradicting the maker thereof in the manner laid down in the said proviso.

Authority/judicial precedent has to be understood in context of facts based on which the observation made therein are made. The ratio of a decision is generally secundum subjectam materiam. - The application under Section 482 Cr.P.C. is bereft of merit and is, accordingly, dismissed.

3. Criminal Appeal No.1105 of 2019 Shiv Prakash Mishra Vs St. of U.P. & Ors. (S.C. of India)- Distinguished on facts.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Rajul Bhargava, J.)

1. Heard Ms Zia Naz Zaidi, learned counsel for the applicants, Sri Dhirendra Kumar Agrahari, learned counsel for the opposite party no.2 and learned A.G.A. for the State and perused the material placed on record.

2. This application under Section 482 Cr.P.C. has been filed for quashing the entire criminal proceeding as well as charge-sheet no. 14B of 2019 dated 25.5.2019 in Case No.4050 of 2019 (State vs. Nirdosh Tyagi and others) arising out of Case Crime No. 202 of 2016 under Sections 302 and 120-B IPC, P.S.Sayana, District Bulandshahar, pending in the court of Chief Judicial Magistrate, Bulandshahar.

3. Brief facts of this case are that an F.I.R. was lodged by opposite party no.2 on 29.6.2016 at 10.30 a.m. with the allegation that on the same day at about 7.30 a.m., his elder brother Sanjay and father were present on the tubewell, at that time the applicants and two others armed with firearms reached there and then accused Nirdosh and Alok resorted to indiscriminate firing upon the brother of informant who after sustaining injuries succumbed on the spot. The accused persons unleashed reign of terror by indiscriminating firing and fled away from the place of the occurrence.

4. Submission of learned counsel for the applicants is that the applicants have not committed any offence and they have been falsely nominated in the F.I.R. by opposite party no.2. The allegation in the F.I.R. that the applicants had taken part in commission of murder of informant's brother stood falsified from the fact that on the date of the incident the applicants were present in High Court of Judicature at Allahabad on the alleged date and time of the incident for swearing an affidavit in connection with some case. During investigation ample evidence was placed before the Investigating Officer that on 29.06.2016 verification photo for affixing on the affidavit was done at 12.23 p.m. and 12.24 pm, evidencing that the applicants could not have been present at the place of the incident in the morning at 7.30 a.m. Copy of the verification photo has been annexed as annexure-4 to the affidavit. It has been argued that the applicants had also furnished tickets that they have travelled by Sangam Express a day before the incident i.e. 28.06.2016 and they had reservation in sleeper class, the ticket was booked online on 28.06.2016.

5. The applicants had given the tickets to investigating officer that they had travelled on 28.06.2016 from Ghaziabad to Allahabad and they had returned to Ghaziabad on 29.06.2016. The investigating officer has also recorded the statement of Manager of the hotel where the applicants had stayed in a hotel on 28.06.2019 and checked out on 29.06.2016. The statement under Section 161 Cr.P.C. was recorded especially of the lawyer who had got photo verification done from High Court and statements of some other persons from which earlier investigating officer drew conclusion that the applicants could not remain present on the place of the occurrence. Thereafter, the matter was transferred to CBCID and ultimately charge-sheet was submitted against the applicants on which cognizance was also taken by learned Magistrate. Learned counsel has argued that that there was ample evidence in the form of documentary and oral evidence i.e statements of the witnesses recorded under Section 161 Cr.P.C., yet not only charge-sheet was submitted by the investigating officer for extraneous considerations against the applicants but learned Magistrate has also taken cognizance in a routine manner without considering the evidence collected in respect of plea of alibi of the applicants. Therefore, prayer for quashing the cognizance order and impugned charge-sheet has been made.

6. Per contra, learned A.G.A. as well as learned counsel for the opposite party no.2 have submitted that the applicants had challenged the F.I.R. on the basis of plea of alibi and had prayed for quashing of the F.I.R. and the entire investigation in Criminal Misc. Writ Petition No.14162 of 2019. The said writ petition was dismissed vide order dated 24.05.2019 by the Division Bench of this Court while recording that from perusal of the F.I.R. prima facie offence of committing murder is made out against the applicants. The F.I.R. was lodged promptly against them. The applicants have challenged aforesaid order in Special Leave to Appeal (Criminal) 5265 of 2019) in which the applicants had placed material / evidence in support of their plea of alibi. However, the Hon'ble Apex Court vide order dated 17.06.2019 declined to interfere in the matter and the SLP was accordingly dismissed.

7. Learned A.G.A. as well as learned counsel for the opposite party no.2 have further argued that plea of alibi of an accused cannot be considered at the stage of taking cognizance or the framing of charge against the accused and submitted that the applicants will have ample opportunity to place their evidence at appropriate stage. They have relied on judgement of the Hon'ble Apex Court, rendered in the case of State of Orissa Versus Debendra Nath Padhi, 2004(8) Supreme Court Cases 568 which is quoted below:

" .....Further, at the stage of framing of charge roving and fishing inquiry is impermissible. If the contention of the accused is accepted, there would be a mini trial at the stage of framing of charge. That would defeat the object of the Code. It is well-settled that at the stage of framing of charge the defence of the accused cannot be put forth. The acceptance of the contention of the learned counsel for the accused would mean permitting the accused to adduce his defence at the stage of framing of charge and for examination thereof at that stage which is against the criminal jurisprudence. By way of illustration, it may be noted that the plea of alibi taken by the accused may have to be examined at the stage of framing of charge if the contention of the accused is accepted despite the well settled proposition that it is for the accused to lead evidence at the trial to sustain such a plea. The accused would be entitled to produce materials and documents in proof of such a plea at the stage of framing of the charge, in case we accept the contention put forth on behalf of the accused. That has never been the intention of the law well settled for over one hundred years now. It is in this light that the provision about hearing the submissions of the accused as postulated by Section 227 is to be understood. It only means hearing the submissions of the accused on the record of the case as filed by the prosecution and documents submitted therewith and nothing more. The expression 'hearing the submissions of the accused' cannot mean opportunity to file material to be granted to the accused and thereby changing the settled law. At the state of framing of charge hearing the submissions of the accused has to be confined to the material produced by the police."

8. The above judgement relates to framing of charge. However, they argued that even at the stage of taking cognizance no meticulous scrutiny of the material collected during investigation can be done.

9. After giving my anxious consideration to the submission made by learned counsel for the parties, I find sufficient force in the submission made by learned counsel for the opposite party no.2 and learned A.G.A. that plea of alibi cannot be examined by this Court in the exercise of its inherent powers under Section 482 Cr.P.C. whether it is the stage of taking cognizance or the framing of charge. The Magistrate at the stage of taking cognizance of the offence has primarily to be satisfied that prima facie commission of cognizable offence is disclosed and cannot meticulously scan the statements of witnesses recorded under Section 161 Cr.P.C. and other material / evidence collected during investigation by the Investigating Officer.

10. Section 103 of Evidence Act says that the burden of proof as to any particular fact lies on that person who wishes the Court to believe in its existence, unless it is provided by any law that the proof of that fact shall lie on any particular person. Second illustration to Section 103 of Indian Evidence Act reads as under:

B wishes the Court to believe that, at the time in question, he was elsewhere. He must prove it.

11. This proviso makes it obvious that burden to establish plea of alibi set up by the accused-applicants in petition filed under Section 482 Cr.P.C. lay squarely upon them. There is hardly any doubt regarding this legal proposition. This could be done by leading evidence in the trial court. Learned counsel for the applicants wants this court to believe the statements of the some of the witnesses recorded under Section 161 Cr.P.C. to record a positive finding that the applicants could not have been present at the scene of occurrence as they were present in High Court Allahabad. It is well settled that statement recorded under Section 161 Cr.P.C. is not a substantive piece of evidence. In view of proviso Sub-section (1) to Section 162 Cr.P.C. the statement can be used only for the limited purpose of contradicting the maker thereof in the manner laid down in the said proviso. Therefore, High Court, especially in the present case wherein brutal day light murder has been committted, cannot quash the proceeding relying on the wholly inadmissible evidence to accept the plea of alibi of the applicants.

12. Learned counsel for the applicants has placed reliance on a recent judgement of Hon'ble Apex Court rendered in Criminal Appeal No.1105 of 2019 Shiv Prakash Mishra Versus State of Uttar Pradesh and another wherein the accused were named in the F.I.R. and were exonerated during investigation and the application for summoning them under Section 319 Cr.P.C. was moved, based on the plea of alibi and the material collected during investigation in respect of their plea of alibi the trial court refused to summon them and the said order was upheld by the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad. Thus the Hon'ble Apex Court has also recognized that evidence/material collected in support of plea of alibi during investigation that accused were not present on the spot of the incident can be considered, even at the stage of summoning them under Section 319 Cr.P.C. At the very outset, with profound respect and utmost humility, I may record that the aforesaid judgement of Hon'ble Apex Court renders no help to the applicants and is distinguishable on the facts of the case inasmuch as there were material contradictions in the statements of the witnesses recorded during trial.

13. It is well settled that authority/judicial precedent has to be understood in context of facts based on which the observation made therein are made. The ratio of a decision is generally secundum subjectam materiam. In Quinn v. Leathem (1901) AC 495, Earls of Halsbury L.C. stated:

"...that every judgment must be read as applicable to the particular facts proved, or assumed to be proved, since the generality of the expressions which may be found there are not intended to be expositions of the whole law, but governed and qualified by the particular facts of the case in which such expressions are to be found."

14. In the light of aforesaid, I do not find good ground to quash the impugned charge-sheet and the order taking cognizance against the applicants.

15. The application under Section 482 Cr.P.C. is bereft of merit and it is, accordingly, dismissed.

A. Indian Penal Code, 1860 – Section 498-A, 406, 323, 504 and 506 and Cr.P.C., 1973 - Section 482 - Complaint filed against husband and other relatives - Only husband of the complainant summoned since specific allegations made only against him- In exercise of inherent powers under Section 482 of Cr.P.C High Court cannot examine questions of fact.

Complainant was examined, under Sections 200 and 202 of Cr.P.C. wherein she has specifically levelled accusations against her husband only. No recital against in-laws regarding demand of dowry. Even, in the complaint, it has been written that gift was given to her husband by complaint's parents. Thus, on the basis of it, only husband was summoned for above offence and this order was confirmed in the revision as well by the revisional Court.

This Court, in exercise of inherent power, under Section 482 of Cr.P.C., is not expected to analyze the factual aspect of the cases because the same remains with trial court, being questions of fact. Section 482 of Cr.P.C. is the saving of inherent power of High Court, with a provision that nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or affect the inherent powers of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under this Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. The orders, impugned, do not suffer from any illegality or irregularity or defeat ends of justice. Hence, this proceeding, by way of Application under Section 482 of Cr.P.C., merits rejection and as such Application stands dismissed accordingly.

1. This Application, under Section 482 of Criminal Procedure Code, has been filed by Smt. Manisha @ Ranu, against State of U.P. and others, challenging the order dated 30.5.2018, passed in the Complaint Case No. 1299 of 2017, Smt. Manisha vs. Vivek Kumar and others, under Section 498-A, 406, 323, 504 and 506 of Indian Penal Code, Police Station-Mahila Thana, District Jhansi, pending in the court of Judicial Magistrate-I, Jhansi as well as order of the Revisional Court, dated 15.5.2019, passed in Criminal Revision No. 131 of 2018, Smt. Manisha vs. State of U.P. and others, passed by the Court of Additional District & Sessions Judge/Special Judge, Dacoity Affected Area, Jhansi, with a prayer for allowing this application and quashing of impugned order, dated 30.5.2018 in above Complaint Case No. 1299 of 2017, as well as order of the Revisional court, dated 15.5.2019 and for summoning of Opposite party nos. 2 , 3, 4, 5 and 6, in Complaint Case No. 1299 of 2017, Smt. Manisha vs. Vivek Kumar and others, under Sections 498-A, 406, 323, 504 and 506 IPC, Police Station Mahila Thana, Jhansi.

2. Learned counsel for the applicant argued that the complaint was filed against Vivek Kumar @ Santosh Kumar (Husband), Daya Ram Prajapati, Ashok Kumar Prajapati, Ganesh Prasad Prajapati, Smt. Poonam @ Pukkhan, and Smt. Rajni for offence punishable, under Sections 498-A, 406, 323, 504 and 506 IPC, read with Section 3/4 of Dowry Prohibition Act, Police Station Mahila Thana, Jhansi, but the learned Magistrate passed the impugned order of summoning whereby only Opposite party no.1, husband of the complainant, has been summoned for offence, punishable, under Sections 498-A, 406, 323, 504 and 506 IPC, read with Section 3/4 of Dowry Prohibition Act, leaving behind other accused persons whereas there was sufficient evidence on record, under Sections 200 and 202 Cr.P.C., against those accused persons, but they were not summoned. Criminal Revision, under Section 397 of Cr.P.C. was filed against the impugned summoning order wherein the order of Magistrate was confirmed and revision was dismissed. Hence, this proceeding, with above prayer.

3. Learned AGA, representing State of U.P., has vehemently opposed this Application, filed under Section 482 of Cr.P.C.

4. This Court, in exercise of inherent power, under Section 482 of Cr.P.C., is not expected to analyze the factual aspect of the cases because the same remains with trial court, being question of fact.

5. Section 482 of Cr.P.C. is the saving of inherent power of High Court, with a provision that nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or affect the inherent powers of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under this Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice.

6. Meaning thereby this inherent power is with High Court (I) to make such order as may be necessary to give effect to any other order under this Code (II) to prevent abuse of the process of any Court (III) or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. But Apex Court in State of Andhra Pradesh v. Gaurishetty Mahesh, JT 2010 (6) SC 588: (2010) 6 SCALE 767: 2010 Cr. LJ 3844 has propounded that "While exercising jurisdiction under section 482 of the Code, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable apprehension of it accusation would not be sustained. That is the function of the trial Judge/Court". In another subsequent Hamida v. Rashid, (2008) 1 SCC 474, hon'ble Apex Court propounded that "Ends of justice would be better served if valuable time of the Court is spent in hearing those appeals rather than entertaining petitions under Section 482 at an interlocutory stage which after filed with some oblique motive in order to circumvent the prescribed procedure, or to delay the trial which enable to win over the witness or may disinterested in giving evidence, ultimately resulting in miscarriage of Justice". In again another subsequent Monica Kumar v. State of Uttar Pradesh, (2008) 8 SCC 781, the Apex Court has propounded "Inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself." While interpreting this jurisdiction of High Court Apex Court in Popular Muthiah v. State, Represented by Inspector of Police, (2006) 7 SCC 296 has propounded "High Court can exercise jurisdiction suo motu in the interest of justice. It can do so while exercising other jurisdictions such as appellate or revisional jurisdiction. No formal application for invoking inherent jurisdiction is necessary. Inherent jurisdiction can be exercised in respect of substantive as well as procedural matters. It can as well be exercised in respect of incidental or supplemental power irrespective of nature of proceedings".

Regarding prevention of abuse of process of Court, Apex Court in Dhanlakshmi v. R.Prasana Kumar, (1990) Cr LJ 320 (DB): AIR 1990 SC 494 has propounded "To prevent abuse of the process of the Court, High Court in exercise of its inherent powers under section 482 could quash the proceedings but there would be justification for interference only when the complaint did not disclose any offence or was frivolous vexatious or oppressive" as well as in State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1989) Cr LJ 1005: AIR 1989 SC 1, Apex Court propounded "In exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 High Court would not embark upon an enquiry whether the allegations in the complaint are likely to be established by evidence or not".

7. Meaning thereby, exercise of inherent jurisdiction under Section 482

8. In the present case, complainant was examined, under Sections 200 and 202 of Cr.P.C. wherein she has specifically levelled accusations against her husband only. She has said that she was married with Vivek Kumar on 30.4.2013 at Chirgaon and Vivek Kumar was in Job at Mumbari. She, after her marriage, made her first entry in his nuptial house at Chirgaon and she remained there for 15 days where her husband used to to always say that the marriage was settled for Rs.10 laksh ,as dowry, whereas complainant's father had given cash of Rs.8 Lakhs and house hold goods, valuing to Rs.2 lakhs. Complainant remained with her husband for one year and she conceived pregnancy, when she has been sent to Baruasagar, where she delivered a family child on 7.7.2014. Again she was taken to Mumbai and was illtreated by her husband Vivek Kumar, who demanded Rs.2 lakhs as the additional dowry there-at. He was a government employee in Railways, who used to give her of of life and caused cruelty with the complainant. Her brother-in-law was also in Railways and was having a flat separately at a distance of ten steps from her nuptial house. This illtreatment was owing to exhortion by husband's sister-in-law. Her husband beaten her, while at Mumbai. Meaning thereby, no recital was there against in-laws regarding demand of dowry. Even, in the complaint, it has been written that gift was given to her husband by complaint's parents. Thus, on the basis of it, only husband was summoned for above offence and this order was confirmed in the revision as well by the revisional Court.

9. In view of above, the orders, impugned, do not suffer from any illegality or irregularity or defeat ends of justice. Hence, this proceeding, by way of Application under Section 482 of Cr.P.C., merits rejection and as such Application stands dismissed accordingly.

A. Indian Penal Code, 1860 - Section 498-A and Cr.P.C., 1973 - Section 482 - Applicants being father-in-law and mother-in-law summoned for offence punishable under Section 498-A, on basis of statements recorded under sections 200 & 202 of the Cr.P.C. and after giving full reasons-Jurisdiction under section 397 Cr.P.C. - Revisional court is never expected to analyse factual aspect of the matter -Jurisdiction under section 482 of the Code - High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable apprehension of it accusation would not be sustained or whether the allegations in the complaint are likely to be established by evidence or not. (Para 4,5,6,7 & 8)

Husband and his family members caused mental and physical cruelty with regard to demand of additional dowry resulting in ouster of Complainant from her nuptial house, but, subsequently, taken back by her husband and his relatives. She delivered a female child which infuriated them culminating in a specific occurrence committed by husband, father-in-law, and mother-in-law, (both present applicants, herein), in which demand of dowry, cruelty with regard to it, abuse and threat were given by the accused persons. Complaint was filed and the version was reiterated by the complainant, in her statement, recorded under Section 200 of Cr.P.C and witnesses, in their statements, recorded, under Section 202 of Cr.P.C. Hence, on the basis of those evidences, accused persons were summoned for offence, punishable, under Section 498-A of IPC and this summoning was with full reasons and was based on evidence on record.

Revisional court, in exercise of its power of revision, conferred under Section 397 of Cr.P.C., is never expected to analyze factual aspect of the matter and as such Revisional court passed the impugned order well within its jurisdiction confirming the summoning order.

While exercising jurisdiction under section 482 of the Code, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable apprehension of it accusation would not be sustained or whether the allegations in the complaint are likely to be established by evidence or not. That is the function of the trial Judge/Court.

Hence, Application under Section 482 of Cr.P.C., stands dismissed accordingly with direction to the Applicants to surrender and apply for bail before the learned Court below.

1. This Application, under Section 482 of Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 (In short 'Cr.P.C.) has been filed, by the applicants, Ramesh Chandra and Smt. Ramwati, with a prayer for quashing of the summoning order, dated 3.10.2018, passed by the Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate, Amroha, as well as order, dated 10.5.2019, passed by the Additional Sessions Judge, Amroha, and a further prayer for quashing of entire criminal proceeding of Complaint Case No. 730 of 2018 (Sushama vs. Mahendra singh and others), under Section 498-A of Indian Penal Code, Police Station Mahila Thana, District Amroha.

2. Learned counsel for the applicants argued that both the applicants are father-in-law and mother-in-law of the complainant and they have been summoned for offence, punishable, under Section 498-A, whereas similar accusation was also made against sister-in-law and brother-in-law of the complainant, who were also summoned, but in a proceeding, filed by them, proceeding, against them has been stayed. Applicants have no concern, but both the courts failed to appreciate facts placed before them. Hence, this proceeding, with above prayer.

3. Learned AGA opposed this proceeding.

4. From very perusal of the complaint, statements, recorded, under Sections 200 and 202 of Cr.P.C. and other materials, it is apparent that the complainant was married on 16.1.2012, with Mahendra, Son of Ramesh Chandra and Smt. Ramwati. Husband, Mahendra, and his family members were not satisfied with dowry given in the marriage. They were causing mental and physical cruelty with regard to demand of additional dowry of Rs. 5 lakhs. She was ousted from her nuptial house, but, subsequently, taken back by her husband and his relatives on 1.10.2014. She delivered a female child on 11.9.2017, which furiated them. A specific occurrence of 11.3.2018 of 5.00 PM has been said on oath, which was said to have been committed by Mahendra, husband, father-in-law, Ramesh Chandra and mother-in-law, Smt. Ramwati (both present applicants, herein), with Surendra and Chaman @ Laxmi in which demand of dowry, cruelty with regard to it, abuse and threat were given by those accused persons. Thenafter, this complaint was filed and this version was reiterated by the complainant, in her statement, recorded under Section 200 of Cr.P.C and her two witnesses, CW-1, Devendra Kumar and CW-2, Premwati, in their statements, recorded, under Section 202 of Cr.P.C. Hence, on the basis of those evidences, accused persons were summoned for offence, punishable, under Section 498-A of IPC and this summoning was with full reasons and was based on evidence on record.

5. Revisional court, in exercise of its power of revision, conferred under Section 397 of Cr.P.C., is never expected to analyze factual aspect of the matter and as such Revisional court passed the impugned order well within its jurisdiction confirming the summoning order.

6. Saving of inherent power of High Court, as given under Section 482 Cr.P.C, provides that nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or affect the inherent powers of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under this Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice.

Meaning thereby this inherent power is with High Court (I) to make such order as may be necessary to give effect to any other order under this Code (II) to prevent abuse of the process of any Court (III) or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. But Apex Court in State of Andhra Pradesh v. Gaurishetty Mahesh, JT 2010 (6) SC 588: (2010) 6 SCALE 767: 2010 Cr. LJ 3844 has propounded that "While exercising jurisdiction under section 482 of the Code, the High Court would not ordinarily embark upon an enquiry whether the evidence in question is reliable or not or whether on a reasonable apprehension of it accusation would not be sustained. That is the function of the trial Judge/Court". In another subsequent Hamida v. Rashid, (2008) 1 SCC 474, hon'ble Apex Court propounded that "Ends of justice would be better served if valuable time of the Court is spent in hearing those appeals rather than entertaining petitions under Section 482 at an interlocutory stage which after filed with some oblique motive in order to circumvent the prescribed procedure, or to delay the trial which enable to win over the witness or may disinterested in giving evidence, ultimately resulting in miscarriage of Justice". In again another subsequent Monica Kumar v. State of Uttar Pradesh, (2008) 8 SCC 781, the Apex Court has propounded "Inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 has to be exercised sparingly, carefully and with caution and only when such exercise is justified by the tests specifically laid down in the section itself." While interpreting this jurisdiction of High Court Apex Court in Popular Muthiah v. State, Represented by Inspector of Police, (2006) 7 SCC 296 has propounded "High Court can exercise jurisdiction suo motu in the interest of justice. It can do so while exercising other jurisdictions such as appellate or revisional jurisdiction. No formal application for invoking inherent jurisdiction is necessary. Inherent jurisdiction can be exercised in respect of substantive as well as procedural matters. It can as well be exercised in respect of incidental or supplemental power irrespective of nature of proceedings".

Regarding prevention of abuse of process of Court, Apex Court in Dhanlakshmi v. R.Prasana Kumar, (1990) Cr LJ 320 (DB): AIR 1990 SC 494 has propounded "To prevent abuse of the process of the Court, High Court in exercise of its inherent powers under section 482 could quash the proceedings but there would be justification for interference only when the complaint did not disclose any offence or was frivolous vexatious or oppressive" as well as in State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan, (1989) Cr LJ 1005: AIR 1989 SC 1, Apex Court propounded "In exercising jurisdiction under Section 482 High Court would not embark upon an enquiry whether the allegations in the complaint are likely to be established by evidence or not".

7. Meaning thereby, exercise of inherent jurisdiction under Section 482 Cr.P.C. is within the limits, propounded as above.

8. In view of what has been discussed above, this proceeding, under Section 482 of Cr.P.C., lacks merits and as such, this Application, under Section 482 of Cr.P.C., stands dismissed.

9. However, it is directed that if the applicants appear and surrender before the court below within 30 days from today and apply for bail, their prayer for bail shall be considered and decided in view of the settled law laid by this Court in the case of Amrawati and another Vs. State of U.P. reported in 2004 (57) ALR 290 as well as judgement passed by Hon'ble Apex Court reported in 2009 (3) ADJ 322 (SC) Lal Kamlendra Pratap Singh Vs. State of U.P.

10. For a period of 30 days from today, no coercive action shall be taken against the applicants. However, in case, the applicants do not appear before the Court below within the aforesaid period, coercive action shall be taken against them.

A. (Para 2,4,5,6,7 & 8)

On facts, it is apparent that there was dishonest deception by the Applicants, who had taken money in lieu of promise for making transfer of a plot of land and there was evidence to this effect, under Section 200 of Cr.P.C., which stood further corroborated by evidence, recorded, under Section 202 of Cr.P.C., hence summoning order was passed for offence, punishable, under above sections, against the applicants.

In exercise of inherent power, conferred by Section 482 of Cr.P.C., factual aspect is not to be appreciated by this Court because of same being question of fact. Allegations made in the complaint are supported by evidence, recorded in the enquiry, by the Magistrate, hence cannot be interfered with by this Court.

1. Heard learned counsel for the applicants over this Application, moved under Section 482 of Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 (In short 'Cr.P.C.), by Smt. Kanta Devi and Dinesh Baghel, against State of U.P. and Mitthan Khan, challenging summoning order, dated 13.3.2019, passed in Complaint Case No. 6901940 of 2018 (Mitthan Khan vs. Zannat & others), under Section 420 of Indian Penal Code (In short 'IPC'), Police Station-Shahganj, District Agra, pending in the court of Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate, court no.4, Agra as well as impugned summoning order, dated 13.3.2019 and other process issued against them.

2. Learned counsel for the applicants argued that both the applicants are having no concern nor there was any evidence for their summoning for offence, punishable, under Section 420 of IPC, whereas vide impugned order, dated 13.3.2019, they have been summoned, but no summoning is there for those other accused persons, who were also made party in complaint, filed by the complainant, Opposite party no.2. Hence, this was abuse of process of court and as such this Application, with a prayer for quashing of impugned summoning order and entire proceeding of above case.

3. Learned AGA, representing State of U.P., has vehemently opposed this Application, under Section 482 of Cr.P.C.

4. Having heard learned counsel for both sides and gone through the summoning order as well as the complaint, filed before the Magistrate, it is apparent that the complaint was filed by Mitthan Khan against Zannat and five others for offence, punishable, under Sections 147, 148, 420, 467, 468, 471, 323, 504, 506 and 120B of IPC, Police Station-Shahganj, District Agra, by way of an application, moved, under Section 156 (3) of Cr.P.C., which was treated to be a complaint, wherein contention was that Mitthan Khan entered in an agreement for purchase of a plot of 40 sq. yard of Khasra No. 59, Mauja Dauretha, Tehsil & District Agra, through a dealer, Mukesh Kumar with Dinesh Baghal, applicant no.2 herein, and in lieu of above, amount of Rs.75,000/- and Rs.30,000/- were paid to Dinesh Baghel and his wife, Kanta Devi, applicant no.1 herein. Subsequently, Rs.1,45,000/- was also paid in cash to them, but they did not execute sale deed, rather disclosed the property to be owned by Zannat. Ultimately, by making additional payment, through Bank Cheque, above property was got purchased, by way of registered sale deed from Zannat on 23.6.2017. Lateron, it was came to notice that Kanta Devi had executed sale deed in favour of Bhuri Begum, fraudulently, for the same plot, prior to execution of sale deed by Zannat. Hence, it was a dishonest deception by Dinesh Baghel and Kanta Devi, who had taken money in lieu of promise for making transfer of above plot and there was evidence to this effect, under Section 200 of Cr.P.C., which stood further corroborated by evidence, recorded, under Section 202 of Cr.P.C., that is why summoning order was passed for offence, punishable, under above sections, against the applicants.

5. In exercise of inherent power, conferred by Section 482 of Cr.P.C., factual aspect is not to be appreciated by this Court because of same being question of fact. Allegations made in the complaint are supported by evidence, recorded in the enquiry, by the Magistrate, hence cannot be interfered with by this Court.

6. Section 482 Cr.P.C, provides that nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or affect the inherent powers of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under this Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice.

7. Meaning thereby this inherent power is with High Court (I) to make such order as may be necessary to give effect to any other order under this Code (II) to prevent abuse of the process of any Court (III) or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. But Apex Court in State of Andhra Pradesh v. Gaurishetty Mahesh, JT 2010 (6) SC 588: (2010) 6 SCALE 767: 2010 Cr. A. Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908 - Section 7 - Quashing of Charge-sheet and Summoning Order – On the basis of allegations prima facie case made out-Alibi-is a matter of evidence-Impermissible to consider defence of accused at this stage- Criminal Procedure Code, 1973-Purpose of coercive processes- to procure the attendance of accused before the Court in trial-Issuance of process like summons then bailable warrant or non-bailable warrant as and when required under the alternating circumstances before the court is not punitive-Interest of Justice and Bonafides-Requirement of balance-Application for bail by the applicant to be considered on the same day by the court concerned. (Para 12,14,18,21,22,23,25,26,34 & 35)

The allegations in the FIR are disclosing the commission of offence as the allegations made therein on being taken on their face value as correct, in their entirety, the allegations do not seem impossible or improbable. Defences cannot be looked into at this stage and the Court has to see into the FIR allegations and the materials placed before the Court in the chargesheet only. The question whether the accused-applicant was present in the assembly or not is of evidence which can be seen only in the trial.

In the present case when accused are alleged, blocking the national highway obstructing the movement of passengers on the road by using criminal force making inflammatory, derogatory and abusing speeches, causing apprehension in the mind of people, are undoubtedly fulfilling the ingredients of such offence with which the accused persons are slapped.

Making prima facie findings by this Court as to the correctness, falsity of allegations in the FIR or the materials included in the chargesheet would be premature at this stage. It is sufficient to see that whether the FIR allegations along with the materials placed on record are fulfilling the ingredients of the offence alleged against the accused. There is no prima facie case as to the quashing of FIR found in the application, therefore, it deserves to be rejected.

It is clear that after chargesheet, summoning was made first by the Court and ultimately after the lapse of eight years, presently non-bailable warrant is running against the accused-applicant.Therefore, there is no skip in the procedure and no abuse of process on the part of complainant or the Court reflecting from the application. In view of the procedure provisioned in Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 to procure the attendance of accused before the Court in proceeding of trial the issuance of process like summons then bailable warrant or non-bailable warrant as and when required under the alternating circumstances before the court is not punitive.

Simply by reason of defaulting the process of the Court issued to procure her appearance in the trial her arrest can cause irreparable loss to her present reputation.

Interest of justice to make balance between the apprehension of the feared applicant from the non-bailable warrant running against her with regard to irreparable loss of her reputation and in convenience of her presence being lady of 68 years old age and the proceeding of a legitimate trial running against her.

7. The accused-applicant to appear and apply for bail, the Court concerned is to entertain the same, if possible, on the same date keeping in mind that the accused-applicant is a 68 years old lady and is willing to participate in the proceedings. Application under Section 482 Cr.P.C. disposed of accordingly.

1. The application in hand is moved under section 482 of Criminal procedure code,1973 by learned counsel on behalf of applicant-accused involved in case crime no.1147 registered under Sections 147, 149, 341, 332, 352, 336, 506 of IPC and Section 7 of Criminal Law Amendment Act in Police Station Gazipur, District Lucknow. The applicant seeks following reliefs-

"To quash/set aside the chargesheet submitted by police after investigation and the order dated 22.07.2011 summoning the accused in the case."

2. Heard the learned counsel for the applicant and the Learned AGA appearing on behalf of the state opposite parties. Perused the materials available on record.

3. Learned counsel has moved this application with grounds for the relief of quashing the chargesheet no.125 of 20111, submitted by police after investigation of case crime no.1147 of 2008 under Sections 147, 149, 341, 332, 352, 336, 506 of IPC and Section 7 of Criminal Law Amendment Act. The grounds as pleased are:-

"First information report was lodged by the Station Officer of Police Station Gazipur, District Lucknow dated 01.10.2008 reporting the incident that an Ex-MLA, 'Rajendra Singh Yadav' alongwith corporator, 'Smt. Malti Singh' and companions, more than two hundred in number, blocked the national highway near Surendra Nagar turning and thus obstructed the traffic. They were raising slogans using inflammatory and filthy words against government and the administration, they were delivering inflammatory speeches. When they were requested to remove the blockade from the road for the sake of public convenience, irritated thereby they jointly assaulted and made the police party, threatened and began to pelt the bricks and stones."

4. Learned counsel in the above context submits that the MLA and the corporator are members of well reputed family and elected representative of public. They individually have not used any filthy or derogatory word. Since at the time of incident the applicant was in power being leader of ruling party, in her connivance the police falsely implicated her.

5. Learned counsel further submits that none of the offence under Sections 147, 149, 341, 334, 352, 336, 506 of IPC and Section 7 of Criminal Law Amendment Act is made out from the allegations in F.I.R. then also the Investigating Officer, under the pressure of leaders of the ruling party, submitted the chargesheet without any materials to support the constitution of offence thereunder.

6. Before entering into merit of the present application under Section 482 Cr.P.C., it would be relevant to keep into mind the scope and ambit of the said section and circumstances under which the extra ordinary power of the court inherent therein can be exercised. It is explained in a plethora of judgements of the Honorable the Apex Court. One of those judgements is, Inder Mohan Goswami v. State of Uttaranchal (2007)12 SCC 1, para 23 is quoted here under:

"This court in a number of cases has laid down the scope and ambit of courts powers under section 482 Cr.P.C. Every High Court has inherent power to act ex debito justitiae to do real and substantial justice, for the administration of which alone it exists, or to prevent abuse of the process of the court. Inherent power under section 482 Cr.P.C. can be exercised:

(i) to give effect to an order under the Code;

(ii) to prevent abuse of the process of court, and

(iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice."

7. In the light of materials placed on record as well as ingredients of the concerned Sections of IPC and Criminal Law Amendment Act wherein the applicant is charged, Sections 147 and 149 from the offence falling under Chapter VIII of the IPC relate to, "offence against the tranquility", Section 146 of the IPC defines the 'rioting', ingredients to constitute offence are given under Section 146 IPC. It is constituted, when force or violence is used by an unlawful assembly or by any member thereof, in prosecution of the criminal object of such assembly, every member of such assembly is guilty of the offence of rioting.

8. Section 147 of the IPC provides punishment of imprisonment of description for a term which may extend to two years or with fine or with both, the offence is cognizable and bailable.

9. Section 149 of the IPC is relating to common object wherein every member of unlawful assembly is guilty of offence committed in prosecution of common object.

10. "Unlawful Assembly" is defined in Chapter VIII of IPC in Section 141 as an assembly of five or more persons and is designated "Unlawful Assembly." If the common object of the persons comprising the assembly is:

"(First) -- To overawe by criminal force, or show of criminal force, 1[the Central or any State Government or Parliament or the Legislature of any State], or any public servant in the exercise of the lawful power of such public servant; or (Second) -- To resist the execution of any law, or of any legal process; or (Third) -- To commit any mischief or criminal trespass, or other offence; or

(Fourth) -- By means of criminal force, or show of criminal force, to any person, to take or obtain possession of any property, or to deprive any person of the enjoyment of a right of way, or of the use of water or other incorporeal right of which he is in possession or enjoyment, or to enforce any right or supposed right; or

(Fifth) -- By means of criminal force, or show of criminal force, to compel any person to do what he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do what he is legally entitled to do. Explanation.--An assembly which was not unlawful when it assembled, may subsequently become an unlawful assembly."

11. To determine the existence of common object, the Court is required to see the circumstances in which the incident had taken place and conduct of the members of unlawful assembly including the weapon of offence though carried or used on the spot. This can be find out from circumstances and facts proved in trial on the basis of legally adduced evidence.

12. Further, in the case of Ramchandran Vs. State of Kerala reported in AIR (2011) SCC 3581, it is alleged that common object may be formed in spur of the moment. "Prior concern in the sense of meeting of unlawful assembly of members is not necessary" whether or not the common object of the unlawful assembly was possessed by him or her at the time of incident is immaterial. The question whether the accused-applicant was present in the assembly or not is of evidence which can be seen only in the trial.

13. Further, Section 341 of the IPC falls in Chapter XVI, "offence effecting the human body". One of such offence is 'wrongful restraint', defined under Section 339 of IPC, when a person voluntarily obstructs another person so as to prevent that person from proceeding in any direction in which that person has have a right to proceed, is said to wrongfully restrain that person. Section 341 is punishment for wrongful restraint.

14. In the present matter, it is alleged in the FIR that national highway was blocked by the accused-applicant alongwith the accused MLA and their companions more than two hundred in person. The public at large were stood obstructed on the highway, restrained to move on the road in the direction where they were proceeding and had right to proceed. As such these allegations even if their face value taken in their entirety, they constitute fulfilling their ingredients.

15. Section 332 and Section 336 of IPC are also the offence "affecting the human body" and relate with the offence of hurt. Both the above offences are related to voluntarily causing hurt to detect public servant from his duty and at endangering life or personal safety of others respectively.

16. In the present case, the allegation is to the effect that the police officials when forbidden and requested the unlawful assembly to remove the blockade and let the public free to move on the road, they became irritated and began to attack the police party throwing bricks and stones upon them. They were making slogans in absurd and derogatory words thus offence of Section 506 of IPC is slapped thereon.

17. So far as Section 352 of IPC is concerned, it falls within Chapter XVI, "offence affecting the life". Criminal force is defined in Section 350 of the IPC. It is constituted when a person intentionally uses force without that person's consent in order to commit any offence or intending by the use of such force to cause, or nothing it to be likely that by the use of such force he will cause injury, fear or annoyance to the person to whom the force is used, is said to use criminal force to others. Further, assault is defined under Section 351 of IPC and this offence is constituted when a person makes any gesture, or any preparation intending or nothing it to be likely the such gesture or preparation will cause any person to apprehend that he who makes gesture or makes the preparation is about to use criminal force to that person. Section 352 of IPC is the punishment for assault or criminal force otherwise on grave provocation.

18. In the present case when accused are alleged, blocking the national highway obstructing the movement of passengers on the road by using criminal force making inflammatory, derogatory and abusing speeches, causing apprehension in the mind of people, are undoubtedly fulfilling the ingredients of such offence with which the accused persons are slapped. Further, on being forbidden by the police personnel having been requested to remove the blockade, the unlawful assembly led by the applicant attacked the police party, began stone pelting and throwing bricks on the police party are reported in unambiguous explicit words in the first information report.

19. Hon'ble the Supreme Court in Mahesh Chaudhary Vs. State of Rajasthan and Another reported in (2009) 4 SCC 439 in para 11, 12, 14 and 17 has held as under:

"11. The principle providing for exercise of the power by a High Court under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to quash a criminal proceeding is well known. The court shall ordinarily exercise the said jurisdiction, inter alia, in the event the allegations contained in the FIR or the Complaint Petition even if on face value are taken to be correct in their entirety, does not disclose commission of an offence.

12. It is also well settled that save and except very exceptional circumstances, the court would not look to any document relied upon by the accused in support of his defence. Although allegations contained in the complaint petition may disclose a civil dispute, the same by itself may not be a ground to hold that the criminal proceedings should not be allowed to continue. For the purpose of exercising its jurisdiction, the superior courts are also required to consider as to whether the allegations made in the FIR or Complaint Petition fulfill the ingredients of the offences alleged against the accused.

14. While saying so, we are not unmindful of the limitations of the court's power under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure which is primarily for one either to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. The court at that stage would not embark upon appreciation of evidence. The Court shall moreover consider the materials on record as a whole.

In Kamaladevi Agarwal vs. State of W.B. & ors. [(2002) 1 SCC 555], this Court opined:

"7. This Court has consistently held that the revisional or inherent powers of quashing the proceedings at the initial stage should be exercised sparingly and only where the allegations made in the complaint or the FIR, even if taken it at the face value and accepted in entirety, do not prima facie disclose the commission of an offence. Disputed and controversial facts cannot be made the basis for the exercise of the jurisdiction."

It was furthermore observed that the High Court should be slow in interfering with the proceedings at the initial stage and that merely because the nature of the dispute is primarily of a civil nature, the criminal prosecution cannot be quashed because in cases of forgery and fraud there would always be some element of civil nature.

17. The charge-sheet, in our opinion, prima facie discloses commission of offences. A fair investigation was carried out by the Investigating Officer. The charge-sheet is a detailed one. If an order of cognizance has been passed relying on or on the basis thereof by the learned Magistrate, in our opinion, no exception thereto can be taken. We, therefore, do not find any legal infirmity in the impugned orders. We, however, must place on record that before us Mr. Dhankar stated that the appellant is ready and willing to get the disputes and differences between the parties settled.

20. As such power under Section 482 Cr.P.C. is to be exercised to prevent abuse of process of Court or to secure ends of justice as repeatedly have been held and guided by the Hon'ble the Apex Court in present case where the relief of chargesheet on the basis of facts and materials placed before the Court and discussed hereinabove, relief of quashing the chargesheet is sought.

21. Here the allegations in the FIR under Sections 147, 149, 341, 332, 352, 336, 506 of IPC and Section 7 of Criminal Law Amendment Act in Police Station Gazipur, District Lucknow are disclosing the commission of offence as the allegations made therein on being taken on their face value as correct, in their entity the allegations do not seem impossible or improbable. Further, Hon'ble the Apex Court held that while considering the materials placed before the Court for quashing the chargesheet should not to embark upon the appreciation of evidence, and should consider only materials on record as a whole.

22. In the present case, the allegations in the FIR and materials placed before the Court as collected by the Investigating Officer in chargesheet submitted before the Magistrate are fulfilling the ingredients of the offence alleged against the accused. So far as the defences as to the malafide of leaders of ruling party, connivance with the police of such leaders for false implication or to be gathered from the evidence legally adduced before the Court during trial. Such defences can not be looked into at this stage and the Court has to see into the FIR allegations and the materials placed before the Court in the chargesheet only.

23. Making prima facie findings by this Court as to the correctness, falsity of allegations in the FIR or the materials included in the chargesheet would be premature, at this stage. It is sufficient to see that whether the FIR allegations alongwith with the materials placed on record are fulfilling the ingredients of the offence alleged against the accused.

24. In the case of State of Haryana and Ors. Vs. Bhajan Lal and Ors. reported in MANU/SC/0012/1992, the following seven guidelines are given:

"(1) Where the allegations made in the first information report or the complaint, even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out a case against the accused.

(2) Where the allegations in the first information report and other materials, if any, accompanying the FIR do not disclose a cognizable offence, justifying an investigation by police officers under Section 156(1) of the Code except under an order of a Magistrate within the purview of Section 155(2) of the Code.

(3) Where the uncontroverted allegations made in the FIR or complaint and the evidence collected in support of the same do not disclose the commission of any offence and make out a case against the accused.

(4) Where, the allegations in the FIR do not constitute a cognizable offence but constitute only a non-cognizable offence, no investigation is permitted by a police officer without an order of a Magistrate as contemplated under Section 155(2) of the Code.

(5) Where the allegations made in the FIR or complaint are so absurd and inherently improbable on the basis of which no prudent person can ever reach a just conclusion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused.

(6) Where there is an express legal bar engrafted in any of the provisions of the Code or the concerned Act (under which a criminal proceeding is instituted) to the institution and continuance of the proceedings and/or where there is a specific provision in the Code or the concerned Act, providing efficacious redress for the grievance of the aggrieved party.

25. In view of the aforesaid guidelines of Hon'be Supreme Court, it is clear from the materials placed before the Court in the application that there is no prima facie case to interfere in the lower court's proceeding or to quash the chargesheet after such long lapse of time of eight years or to set aside the non-bailable warrant running against the accused-applicant. The purpose of Section 482 Cr.P.C. and the power given therein is not to exercise the same for stifling the bonafide proceeding of the Court unless some abuse of process is sufficiently shown. The power is to be used sparingly.

26. There is no prima facie case as to the quashing of FIR found in the application, therefore, it deserves to be rejected.

27. Since in criminal proceeding submission of charge sheet by the Investigating Officer, the Court takes cognizance of offence on the basis of material placed in chargesheet. Thereafter it issues summon. In the present case, admittedly it is issued. If the summons are avoided then issuance of bailable warrant and ultimately when that is too avoided, non-bailable warrant is issued. If non-bailable warrant is also defied then the procedure under Sections 82 and 83 Cr.P.C is to be started. From the allegation made in the application, it is clear that after chargesheet, summoning was made first by the Court and ultimately after the lapse of eight years, presently non-bailable warrant is running against the accused-applicant. Therefore, there is no skip in the procedure and no abuse of process on the part of complainant or the Court reflecting from the application.

28. In view of the procedure provisioned in Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 to procure the attendance of accused before the Court in proceeding of trial the issuance of process like summons then bailable warrant or non-bailable warrant as and when required under the alternating circumstances before the court is not punitive. The case on the part of court is not to skip the proceeding prescribed for issuing them. In the present case such skipping of proceeding is neither pleaded nor shown by the materials on record.

29. However, hearing the learned counsel for the parties, it becomes apparently clear that the applicant is afraid of process against her however the purpose of the process is only to ensure the presence before the Court for the participation in the trial.

30. Learned counsel conceded that the accused-applicant would like to participate if her personal liberty is secured. If it is so then it is bonafide on the part of accused-applicant to have intent of participating in the proceeding. It is just and proper to secure the liberty of the accused-applicant keeping in view her bonafide intention.

In Kamaladevi Agarwal vs. State of W.B. & ors. [(2002) 1 SCC 555], this Court opined:

18. In that view of the matter and keeping in view the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case and with a view to do complete justice to the parties, we, in exercise of our jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution of India, direct that in the event the appellant appears before the learned Magistrate within a period of four weeks from date and files an application for grant of bail, he shall be released on bail on such terms and conditions as the learned Magistrate may seem fit and proper. In the event, the appellant files an application for exemption from his personal appearance, the same may also be considered on its own merits. It would be open to the complainant to consider the offer of the appellant."

31. Further, this is important to refer here that in case of Joginder Kumar Vs. State of UP (1994) 4SCC 260, it is held that arrest is not a must when FIR is lodged in a cognizable offence. Further, Hon'ble the Apex Court held that arrest of person can cause irreparable loss to the person's reputation.

32. In the application, the applicant has averred the status of applicant as 68 years old lady of political carrier, therefore, simply by reason of defaulting the process of the Court issued to procure her appearance in the trial her arrest can cause irreparable loss to her present reputation.

33. Keeping in view in the full bench decision of Hon'ble High Court, Allahabad in Amravati Vs. State of UP reported in (2005) CRLJ 755 (Allahabad) approved by Hon'ble Supreme Court (Supra) in Joginder Kumar Vs. State of UP and Anothers reported in 1994 AIR 1349 held that the Court if it deems fit in the facts and circumstances of the case, may grant interim bail pending final decision of the bail applications though in the present case, Section 438 Cr.P.C. is made applicable in the State of UP also but so far as the principles propounded in the case of Amravati (Supra) by the full Bench of our own High Court as approved by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Lal Kamlendra Pratap Singh Vs. State of U.P and Anothers reported in 2009 (3) ADJ 322 are fully applicable in the circumstances and facts of the case in hand where the non-bailable warrant for the reason of skipping the process issued to procure the presence of applicant in trial running against her.

34. This would be in the interest of justice to make balance between the apprehension of the feared applicant from the non-bailable warrant running against her with regard to irreparable loss of her reputation and in convenience of her presence being lady of 68 years old age and the proceeding of a legitimate trial running against her by issuing certain directions in exercise of power under Section 482 Cr.P.C. as follows.

35. In view of the aforesaid observation, the accused-applicant if appears within three weeks from the date of order and applies for bail, the Court concerned is directed to entertain the same promptly as soon as practicable, if possible, on the same date keeping in mind that the accused-applicant is a 68 years old lady and she is willing to participate in proceeding, moreover, the purpose of issuance of process is only to ensure the participation in the trial, the same be disposed of.

36. Till the aforesaid three weeks or till the applicant appears/surrenders and applies for bail on non-bailable warrant running against the accused-applicant, no coercive action shall be taken pursuant to the non-bailable warrant.

37. Accordingly the application under Section 482 Cr.P.C. is disposed of.

A. Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1966 - Section 3 - Essential that the allegations of theft of Railway property or dishonest misappropriation should be alleged to prosecute anyone under Section 3 of the Act - Only averment against the applicant is that he was the Supervisor and was negligent - No case made out for prosecuting the applicant under Section 3 of the Act. (Para 5,6,7,12,13 & 14)

It is essential that the allegations of theft of Railway property or dishonest misappropriation should be alleged to prosecute anyone under Section 3 of the "Act, 1966'. Even in the allegations levelled in the complaint, there is no averment or whisper with regard to any theft or misappropriation of any Railway property as against the applicant. The only allegation is that the applicant being a Supervisor was negligent in supervising. It is clear that the negligence will not constitute an offence which can be tried under Section 3 of the "Act, 1966'.

On the basis of law laid down by the Apex Court as well as the plain reading of the complaint, no case is made out for prosecuting the applicant under Section 3 of the "Act, 1966'. The learned Magistrate has further erred in summoning the accused without any application of mind.

The proceedings in Criminal Case under Section 3 of Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1966, as well as the summoning order as against the applicant are quashed and the application under Section 482 Cr.P.C. is allowed.

4. Som Mittal Vs Govt. of Kar. (2008) 3 SCC 753

(Delivered by Hon'ble Pankaj Bhatia, J.)

1. The present application under Section 482 Cr.P.C. has been filed praying for quashing the enquiry report/charge-sheet dated 30.3.2019 passed in Criminal Case No. 1203 of 2019 arising out of Crime No. 13 of 2018, under Section 3 of Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1966 (hereinafter referred to as the "Act, 1966'), Police Station R.P.F. Post Gonda, District Gonda as well as the summoning order dated 3.5.2019.

2. I have heard learned counsel for the applicant as well as the learned A.G.A. for the State.

3. The brief submission of the learned counsel for the applicant is that from perusal of the F.I.R., the charge-sheet even if taken to be a gospel truth, does not make out any case against the applicant under Section 3 of the "Act, 1966'. The learned counsel for the applicant has taken me across the F.I.R. filed, which is on record as Annexure-6. A plain reading of the F.I.R. on record states that on 19.7.2018, Sri Vishal Srivastava, Chief Commercial Superintendent, Gonda had written a written report that Sri Jamuna Prasad, the Ticket Inspector, Gonda did not deposit the entire amount collected for the period October, 2016 to May, 2018, which amounts to approximately Rs. 13,78,673/-. It is stated that the said report was sent by the Chief Commercial Superintendent, Gonda to the Zonal Officer, Lucknow, which is being audited at Gorakhpur. The said Audit Department has confirmed the deficiency of Rs. 4,12,584/- for the period January, 2018 to May, 2018, the rest amount is under audit. It was further stated that Sri Jamuna Prasad, the Ticket Inspector, did not deposit the amoutn of Rs. 92,830/- for the month of Autust, 2017 and subsequently when the matter came to light, Sri Jamuna Prasad deposited the said amount. It was thus alleged that not depositing the income of the Railways in accordance with law amounts to misappropriation and criminal breach of trust. As regards the applicant, it was stated that Supervisor J.N. Tiwary is also negligent and prima facie appears to be involved in the crime and with the said allegations, the complaint was filed.

4. The counsel for the applicant has placed on record a report dated 13.6.2018, wherein departmental action was proposed against Sri Jamuna Prasad on account of non-deposit of the revenue of Railways. Counsel for the applicant has further placed on record the fact that on the basis of the allegations made in the complaint, summoning orders were passed on 31.5.2019 recording that on the basis of the complaint a cognizable offence is made out for trial and thus the accused Jamuna Prasad and Jai Narain Tiwary be summoned. It is stated that in pursuance to the said summons, the applicant was not arrested and was released on personal sureties. The summoning order was under Section 3 of the "Act, 1966'. The counsel for the applicant has specifically argued that from the plain reading of the provisions of Section 3 of the "Act, 1966', no offence can be said to be made out even if the entire allegations levelled are treated to be correct. It is stated that the only averment with regard to the applicant is that he was the Supervisor and was negligent and thus Jamuna Prasad could carry out the offences as alleged against him.

5. Section 3 of the "Act, 1966' is as under:-

"3. [Penalty for theft, dishonest misappropriation or unlawful possession of railway property.]

[Whoever commits theft, or dishonestly misappropriates or is found, or is proved] to have been, in possession of any railway property reasonably suspected of having been stolen or unlawful obtained shall, unless he proves that the railway property came into his possession lawfully, be punishable--

(a) for the first offence, with imprisonment for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both and in the absence of special and adequate reasons to be mentioned in the judgment of the Court, such imprisonment shall not be less than one year and such fine shall not be less than one thousand rupees;

(b) for the second or a subsequent offence, with imprisonment for a term which may extend to five years and also with fine and in the absence of special and adequate reasons to be mentioned in the judgment of the Court, such imprisonment shall not be less than two years and such fine shall not be less than two thousand rupees."

6. A plain reading of Section 3 of the "Act, 1966' as quoted above makes it clear that for the rigour of the Section 3 of the "Act, 1966' to apply, it is essential to allege that theft or dishonest misappropriation was found or the person accused should have been in possession of any Railway property reasonably suspected of having been stolen or unlawfully obtained. Thus, in sum and substance, it is essential that the allegations of theft of Railway property or dishonest misappropriation should be alleged to prosecute anyone under Section 3 of the "Act, 1966'. As already pointed out even in the allegations levelled in the complaint, there is no averment or whisper with regard to any theft or misappropriation of any Railway property as against the applicant. The only allegation is that the applicant being a Supervisor was negligent in supervising. It is clear that the negligence will not constitute an offence which can be tried under Section 3 of the "Act, 1966'.

7. The learned counsel for the applicant states that for prosecuting under Section 3 of the "Act, 1966' it is essential to allege that the property recovered is a Railway property and the same was found in possession of the accused and if these two allegations are alleged and established the onus shifts on the accused to prove that the Railway property came into his possession lawfully. There being no averment even in the complaint against the applicant, the prosecution under Section 3 of the "Act, 1966' is not made out against the applicant.

8. The Apex Court in Madhavrao Jiwajirao Scindia and others vs. Sambhajirao chandrojirao Angre and others (1988) 1 SCC 692 observed in para 7 as under :-

"The legal position is well settled that when a prosecution at the initial stage is asked to be quashed, the test to be applied by the Court is as to whether the uncontroverted allegations as made prima facie establish the offence. It is also for the Court to take into consideration any special features which appear in a particular case to consider whether it is expedient and in the interest of justice to permit a prosecution to continue. This is so on the basis that the Court cannot be utilized for any oblique purpose and where in the opinion of the Court chances of an ultimate conviction is bleak and, therefore, no useful purpose is likely to be served by allowing a criminal prosecution to continue, the Court may while taking into consideration the special facts of a case also quash the proceeding even though it may be at a preliminary stage."

9. The Apex Court in State of Harayana and others vs Chaudhary Bhajan Lal and others 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, considering a series of decisions has laid down seven criterias for quashing the entire proceedings in exercise of powers under Section 482 Cr.P.C. by this Court, which reads as under:-

"(a) where the allegations made in the First Information Report or the complaint, even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out a case against the accused;

(b) where the allegations in the First Information Report and other materials, if any, accompanying the F.I.R. do not disclose a cognizable offence, justifying an investigation by police officers under Section 156(1) of the Code except under an order of a Magistrate within the purview of Section 155(2) of the Code;

(c) where the uncontroverted allegations made in the FIR or 'complaint and the evidence collected in support of the same do not disclose the commission of any offence and make out a case against the accused;

(d) where the allegations in the FIR do not constitute a cognizable offence but constitute only a non-cognizable offence, no investigation is permitted by a police officer without an order of a Magistrate as contemplated under Section 155(2) of the Code;

(e) where the allegations made in the FIR or complaint are so absurd and inherently improbable on the basis of which no prudent person can ever reach a just conclusion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused;

(f) where there is an express legal bar engrafted in any of the provisions of the Code or the concerned Act (under which a criminal proceeding is instituted) to the institution and continuance of the proceedings and/or where there is a specific provision in the Code or the concerned Act, providing efficacious redress for the grievance of the aggrieved party;

(g) where a criminal proceeding is manifestly attended with malafide and/or where the proceeding is maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge."

10. The Apex Court in case of Dilawar Babu Kurane Vs. State of Maharashtra 2002 (2) SCC 135, has observed that:-

" In exercise of jurisdiction under Section of Code of Criminal Procedure, the Judge cannot act merely as a post office or a mouthpiece of the prosecution but has to consider the broad probabilities of the case, the total effect of the evidence and the documents produced before the court but could not make a roving enquiry into the pros and cons of the matter and weigh the evidence, as if he was conducting a trial."

11. The Apex Court in the case of Som Mittal vs Government of Karnataka, 2008 (3) SCC 753, has held that :-

"When grave miscarriage of justice would be committed if the trial is allowed to proceed; or where the accused would be harassed unnecessarily if the trial is allowed; or when prima facie it appears to Court that the trial would likely to be ended in acquittal. Then the inherent power of the Court under section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure can be invoked by the High Court either to prevent abuse of process of any Court, or otherwise To secure the ends of justice."

12. Thus on the basis of law laid down by the Apex Court as well as the plain reading of the complaint, no case is made out for prosecuting the applicant under Section 3 of the "Act, 1966'. The learned Magistrate has further erred in summoning the accused without any application of mind.

13. As a result of the conclusion and the findings recorded above, the proceedings in Criminal Case No. 1203 of 2019 arising out of Crime No. 13 of 2018, under Section 3 of Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1966, Police Station R.P.F. Post Gonda, District Gonda as well as the summoning order dated 3.5.2019 as against the applicant Jai Narain Tiwari are quashed.

14. The application under Section 482 Cr.P.C. is allowed in terms of the order passed above.

A. Cr.P.C., 1973 - Section 482 and Section 197 - For initiation of prosecution of Public Servant, the sanction under Section 197 of Cr.P.C. is mandatory and submission of charge sheet without any valid sanction is illegal - Subsequent sanction granted by State Government on the same materials cannot be a ground for reviewing or reconsidering the earlier order refusing to grant sanction - On facts, act of the Petitioners found to be done within their official capacity and in discharge of their official duty-The act complained of is done in performance of duty or in purported performance of duty is to be determined by the competent authority and not by the Court- No prima facie case made out. (Para 21, 22,23,24,25,32,33,45,47,48,54 & 55)

"(I). Whether the act done by petitioners in the present case was within the official capacity in discharge of their official duty? - Section 129 is attracted in the instant case and any Executive Magistrate or officer in-charge of the Police Station or, in the absence of such officer in charge, any police officer not below the rank of a Sub-Inspector may command any unlawful assembly to disperse. If such a command given under sub-section (1) is not obeyed, then such force as may be necessary may be used to disperse the assembly. The facts of the case clearly show that the petitioner Siya Ram Saran Aditya who was the then Senior Superintendent of Police are present on the spot and took decision to open fire and accordingly firing was done after examining the situation and necessity of the said act.

(II) Whether prior sanction under Section 197 of Cr.P.C. is necessary in the present case before prosecuting the petitioners?

(III) Whether the charge-sheet could be submitted against the petitioners without prior sanction under Section 197 of Cr.P.C.? (Considering issues no, II & III together) - The petitioners were (sic) at the place of incident in his official capacity and during that time he was the Senior Superintendent of Police, therefore, being the senior most police officer at the place of incident, it was the duty of the petitioner Siya Ram Saran Aditya to maintain law and order of the said locality. In the present case on hand, the accused being a Police Officer while maintaining the law and order was discharging the official duty. Therefore, for initiation of prosecution, the sanction under Section 197 of Cr.P.C. is required whereas in the present case the charge-sheet was filed against the accused persons in absence of any valid sanction.

(IV) Whether the court concerned has committed legal error in taking cognizance and summoning the petitioners to face trial in absence of valid / prior sanction under Section 197 of Cr.P.C.?

(V) Whether the firing in which one person died and other sustained firearm injury was justified?" (Considering issues no, IV & V together)- The question as to whether the act complained of is done in performance of duty or in purported performance of duty is to be determined by the competent authority and not by the Court. The Legislature has conferred "Absolute Power" on the statutory authority to accord sanction or withhold the same and the court has no role in this subject. In such a situation, the court would not proceed without sanction of the competent statutory authority. The entire incident of firing by the police personnel was only in order to maintain law and order and while directing for firing, the Competent Officer has followed the procedure as prescribed in the Police Manual. A change of opinion per se on the same materials cannot be a ground for reviewing or reconsidering the earlier order refusing to grant sanction. However, in a case where fresh materials have been collected by the investigating agency subsequent to the earlier order and placed before the sanctioning authority and on that basis, the matter is reconsidered by the sanctioning authority and in light of the fresh materials an opinion is formed that sanction to prosecute the public servant may be granted, there may not be any impediment to adopt such course.

It is settled law that when the documents relied on by the respondents demonstrate that no prima facie offence is made out on the face value of those materials, then the criminal prosecution should not be allowed to continue and, therefore, it should be quashed, and in such a situation and circumstances, the petitioner who had got a right under the Constitution for the protection of their liberty have rightly approached this Court and this Court in these circumstances has no option left except to grant the relief as prayed by the petitioner.

Impugned orders quashed.

1. By means of Criminal Misc. Case No.3855 of 2013 filed under Section 482 of Criminal Procedure Code (in short "Cr.P.C."), the petitioner Siya Ram Saran Aditya has challenged the order dated 16.08.2013 passed in Criminal Revision No.164 of 2012 by the Additional Sessions Judge/ Special Judge (SC/ ST Act), Lucknow, whereby the criminal revision preferred by the petitioner has been dismissed affirming the order 26.03.2012 passed in Case No.3/ 12, R.C. No.7(S)/ 2008, under Sections 147, 148, 302, 307, 342, 504, 506 IPC, Police Station CBI (ACB), Lucknow by the Special Judicial Magistrate (CBI), Lucknow by which the protest petition filed by Sri Ram Gopal (complainant) was accepted and summoned the petitioner along with other co-accused persons under Sections 34, 304(2) and Section 326 IPC.

2. Petitioners of Criminal Misc. Case No.5430 of 2013 filed under Section 482 of Cr.P.C. have also prayed for quashing of the order dated 26.03.2012, whereby they have been summoned under the said sections by the learned special Judicial Magistrate (CBI), Lucknow.

3. As common question of law and facts arise in both these petitions filed under Section 482 of Cr.P.C. and arises out of common impugned judgment and order, therefore, both the petitions are being decided together by this common judgment and order.

4. In the year 2007, the then Government had put a ban on the Students' Union Elections in the entire State of U.P. On 08.01.2008, a protest against ban had been started by a Political Party on the Foundation Day Function of Jai Narain Post Graduate College, Lucknow under the supervision of Political Party's Youth Wing-Samajwadi Chhatrasabha. The Police Authorities after taking into consideration the aggressiveness of the protesters started Lathi charge and as a result whereof, one of the leaders, namely, Sunil Singh and some others were received injuries and they were admitted in the Hospital. Some other protesters were arrested and sent to jail.

5. After the aforesaid incident in order to protest Sri Shiv Pal Singh Yadav

(Ex-Minister) and Sri Akhilesh Yadav (Ex-Chief Minister) along with other party members sat on Dharna in front of the office of the Superintendent of Police, Lucknow on the same day i.e. 08.01.2008. On the very next day, on 09.01.2008, a news item was flashed in print and electronic media with regard to pushing Sri Shiv Pal Singh Yadav in a van and slapping him by the police personnel. Thereafter, Political Party had announced a massive protest across the State on 09.01.2008 to register their anger against the alleged police highhandedness including the alleged misbehave with Sri Shiv Pal Singh Yadav.

6. Sri Syed Mohammad Abbas the then Station Officer, Police Station Saifai, District Etawah had received an information with regard to blockage of road before the Chaudhary Charan Singh P.G. College, Hewra which resulted into a heavy traffic jam. The Station Officer along with other police personnel reached there and found that about 400-500 students and public persons blocked the road. The Station Officer, Police Station, Saifai while trying to convince the students and controlled the situation, the Additional Superintendent of Police, Sri Ram Pal Gautam along with other personnel reached there and tried to pacify the matter but the students instead of stopping Dharna started abusing and pelting stones on the police party. The Senior Superintendent of Police also reached at the place of Dharna and asked the unlawful assembly to vacate the site but they did not pay any heed to the request of the then Senior Superintendent of Police and started firing on the police personnel. It is said that in self defence and since no other effective option left, the police force had also fired and as a result whereof, two persons were received injuries on their persons in which one of the injured, namely, Mukesh had died.

7. Sri Syed Mohammad Abbas, Station Officer, Police Station Saifai, District Etawah had lodged a first information report in Case Crime No.01 of 2008, under Sections 147, 148, 149, 342, 504, 336, 307, 353, 332, 427, 435, 504 IPC and Section 7 of the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act and in Crime No.02 of 2008, under Sections 25/ 27 of the Arms Act and arrest several persons who were the members of unlawful assembly.

8. After concluding investigation, the Investigating Officer had submitted charge-sheet on 19.02.2008 in Case Crime No.01 of 2008 against 20 persons upon which the learned Magistrate had taken cognizance vide orders dated 01.03.2008 and summoned the accused persons. In the aforesaid incident, a magisterial inquiry was also conducted and in the magisterial inquiry, it was found that none of the police officials were responsible for the said incident.

9. The Complainant Sri Ram Gopal had filed an application under Section 156(3) of Cr.P.C. with the allegation that on 09.01.2008 at about 11:30 A.M., the petitioners Siya Ram Saran Aditya posted as Senior Superintendent of Police along with Additional Superintendent of Police Sri Ram Pal Gautam, Head Constable Malkhan Singh, Constable Rajiv Dubey, Constable Shri Krishna Saini and Constable Sanjiv Kumar Gautam along with others had entered into the premises of the College and had taken away some of the students. It is also alleged that on protest made by the student, the Senior Superintendent of Police and the Additional Superintendent of Police started abusing and exhorted the police personnel to fire, as a result whereof, three students, namely, Mukesh, Avnish and Sunil had suffered firearm injuries.

10. The aforesaid application under Section 156(3) of Cr.P.C. filed by Sri Ram Gopal was allowed and an FIR was registered as Case Crime No.1-B of 2008, under Sections 147, 148, 149, 302, 307, 342, 506, 504 IPC on 01.03.2008. After concluding investigation, the Investigating Officer had submitted final report, against which, complainant Ram Gopal had approached this Court at Allahabad by way of filing Criminal Misc. Writ Petition No.6589 of 2008. The Co-ordinate Bench of this Court vide an ad-interim order dated 11.11.2008 had directed for entrustment of the investigation to the Central Bureau of Investigation with a further direction to transfer the Senior Superintendent of Police and the Additional Superintendent of Police from Etawah. It had also been directed that during the course of investigation, the Officers named in the FIR shall not be arrested. The said writ petition was dismissed for want of prosecution vide order dated 29.09.2010.

11. In compliance of the direction of this Court, the Central Bureau of Investigation had registered a formal case as R.C. No.7(S) of 2008 and applied for sanction under Section 197 of Cr.P.C. which was refused by the State Government vide order dated 03.12.2010. Thereafter, after completing investigation, the Central Bureau of Investigation had submitted its Closure Report under Section 173 of Cr.P.C. on 24.12.2010 in the court concerned and prayed for acceptance of the same. Against the Closure Report, the Complainant Ram Gopal has submitted an objection on 19.04.2011 with a prayer to reject the closure report and summoned the accused persons. The learned Magistrate concerned after considering the reply submitted by the Central Bureau of Investigation and the objection of the complainant, vide impugned order dated 26.03.2012, summoned the petitioners as accused for the offences punishable under Section 34, 304(2), 326 IPC. The order dated 26.03.2012 had been challenged by the petitioner Siya Ram Saran Aditya in Criminal Revision No.164 of 2012 before the learned Sessions Judge, which had been dismissed vide impugned order dated 06.08.2013 by the learned Additional Sessions Judge/ Special Judge (SC/ ST Act), Lucknow. In the meantime, vide order dated 31.08.2012, the State Government has granted sanction under Section 197 of Cr.P.C. to prosecute the petitioners and other persons.

12. Learned Counsel for petitioners have submitted that the Central Bureau of Investigation after registering the case had applied for sanction against the petitioners but the same had been refused by the Government. Thereafter, the Central Bureau of Investigation filed its closure report before the concerned Magistrate. In the meantime, the Government has been changed due to fresh election and the matter was again put up before the State Government for sanction of the prosecution without placing any fresh material. The State Government having found that as the learned Magistrate has already taken cognizance in the matter, so there is no need to grant sanction but it has also been stated that in order to avoid any technicality in the progress of trial, it would be appropriate to grant sanction for prosecution to the petitioners and accordingly, the sanction has been granted, which is not permissible in the eyes of law as the prosecution has failed to place any fresh material.

13. It has further been submitted by learned Counsel for the petitioners that once the sanction for prosecution under Section 197 of Cr.P.C. has been refused, the subsequent sanction might have not been granted by the State Government on the same material which were produced before the Sanctioning Authority, as such the subsequent sanction dated 31.08.2012 is nothing but only to harass the petitioners. In support of his submissions, learned Counsel for the petitioners have relied upon the judgment rendered by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of State of Himachal Pradesh vs. Nishant Sareen; (2010) 14 SCC 527, in which it has been held by the Apex Court that where, after the refusal of the sanction once, if no material was produced for the second sanction, it ought to have challenged the order of the Sanctioning Authority but that was not done. Learned Counsel have further placed reliance on the judgment rendered by the Apex Court in the case of State of Army Head Quarter vs. CBI; (2012) 6 SCC 228, in which it has been held by the Apex Court that the question as to whether the act complained off, is done in performance of the duty or in purported performance of the duty is to be determined by the competent authority and not by the Court. The legislature has conferred the absolute power on the statutory authority to accord sanction or withhold the same and the Court has no role in this subject. In such a situation, the court would not proceed in absence of prosecution sanction, and therefore, the order passed by the learned Magistrate concerned is liable to be quashed.

14. It has been contended by learned Counsel for petitioners that the order passed by the State Government refusing to accord sanction was not challenged either by the Central Bureau of Investigation or by the complainant Ram Gopal before any forum or before any court of law, therefore, the subsequent sanction order passed by the State Government in absence of new material is illegal and arbitrary. Learned Magistrate failed to consider the provisions of Section 132 of Cr.P.C. which provides protection against the prosecution.

15. Per contra, the learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the Central Bureau of Investigation has vehemently opposed the submissions made by learned Counsel for petitioners and has submitted that the Central Bureau of Investigation has concluded the investigation in most scientific and objective manner by engaging experts of Central Forensic Science Laboratory, New Delhi and All India Institute of Medical Sciences, New Delhi to arrive at the truth vis-a-vis allegations made against the petitioners. It is further submitted that CBI conducted the investigation without favouring to any person and without being influenced by anyone. He has further submitted that the order passed by the learned Judicial Magistrate taking cognizance of the offence as well as the order of the learned Additional Sessions Judge/ Special Judge (S.C./ S.T. Act), Lucknow dated 6.8.2013 upholding the cognizance taken by the learned Judicial Magistrate for the offences, is according to the judicial process of law.

16. Learned Counsel for the complainant has submitted that on 09.01.2008, while the complainant was discharging his duties in the College on 09.01.2008 at about 11:30 AM, the petitioners along with other police personnel entered into the premises of the College and taking away the innocent students forcibly. The other students of the College protested against the act of the police personnel and after hearing the hue and cry of the students, the complainant and the Principal of the College also came out and they also started protest. The petitioners instigated other police personnel to kill the students, as a result whereby, three students namely, Mukesh Singh, Avnish and Sunil had sustained fire armed injuries and out of which, Mukesh Singh succumbed to the injuries.

17. It has further been submitted by learned Counsel for the complainant that after investigation, the Central Bureau of Investigation has found that the accused persons have committed serious offence under sections 34, 304(ii) IPC and section 326 IPC. He has again submitted that in the instant case, the sanction for prosecution is not required as the killing of the innocent person cannot be said to be anyway connected with the discharge of official duty.

18. It has again been submitted by the learned Counsel for the complainant that in the instant case, the Central Bureau of Investigation was not supposed to ask sanction for prosecution as the offence committed by the petitioner and other accused persons cannot be said to be connected with the discharge of official duty. Further, since the petition before the Hon'ble Court was kept pending for monitoring, there was no need for obtaining sanction and also, the petitioner may raise the said question of sanction during the trial. So far as section 132 Cr.P.C. is concerned, it falls within Chapter-X of Cr.P.C. and provides for Maintenance of Public Order and Tranquility. It is submitted that the Section 132 of Cr.P.C. comes when previous sections of the aforesaid Chapter i.e. Sections 129 to 130 Cr.P.C. are applicable.

19. It has also been submitted by learned Counsel for the complainant that a perusal of the order dated 31.08.2012 shows that after considering the entire material in detail and examining the matter afresh as also subsequent developments, the sanction for prosecution has been granted. It has consistently been held by Hon'ble Supreme Court as well as this Court that litigants are supposed to approach the Court with clean hands and if a litigant does not come to the court with clean hands is not entitled for any discretionary relief from any of the court.

20. I have heard learned Counsel for the parties and perused the record.

21. The following issues are required to be adjudicated while deciding the instant petition under Section 482 of Cr.P.C.:

"(I). Whether the act done by petitioners in the present case was within the official capacity in discharge of their official duty?

(II) Whether prior sanction under Section 197 of Cr.P.C. is necessary in the present case before prosecuting the petitioners?

(III) Whether the charge-sheet could be submitted against the petitioners without prior sanction under Section 197 of Cr.P.C.?

(IV) Whether the court concerned has committed legal error in taking cognizance and summoning the petitioners to face trial in absence of valid / prior sanction under Section 197 of Cr.P.C.?

(V) Whether the firing in which one person died and other sustained firearm injury was justified?"

ISSUE NO.I

22. The situation was such that if the police had not opened fire, there was apprehension of death or grievous injury to the police personnel. It was in the exercise of the right of private defence falling under Section 99 of the Indian Penal Code. In such an event, the question is whether the act of petitioners was referable to the delegation of sovereign power of the State is available. For dealing of this aspect, it would be useful to refer certain statutory provisions which governs maintenance of public order and tranquility. Chapter X of Cr.P.C. has laid down the procedure that is required to be followed in the dispersal of unlawful assemblies either by the use of civil force or armed force. Section 129 reads thus:

"129(1). Any Executive Magistrate or officer in charge of police station or, in the absence of such officer in charge, any police officer, not below the rank of a sub-inspector, may command any unlawful assembly, or any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, to disperse; and it shall thereupon be the duty of the members of such assembly to disperse accordingly.

(2) If, upon being so commanded, any such assembly does not disperse, or if, without being so commanded, it conducts itself in such a manner as to show a determination not to disperse, any Executive Magistrate or police officer referred to in sub-section (1), may proceed to disperse such assembly by force, and may require the assistance of any male person, not being an officer or member of the armed forces and acting as such, for the purpose of dispersing such assembly, and, if necessary, arresting and confining the persons who form part of it, in order to disperse such assembly or that they may be punished according to law."

23. Sections 130 to 132 relate to the use of armed forces to disperse the unlawful assembly which are not material for our purpose as the services of the armed forces were not requisitioned. Section 132 deals with protection against prosecution for acts done under the aforesaid Sections. Under sub-section (1) of Section 132, no prosecution against any person for any act purporting to be done under Sections 129, 130 or 131 shall be instituted in any Criminal Court excepting with the sanction of the Central Government where such person is an officer or member of the armed forces; or with the sanction of the State Government in any other case. Similarly, no Executive Magistrate or Police Officer acting under any of the said Sections in good faith or no person doing any act in good faith in compliance with a requisition under Section 129 or Section 130 shall be deemed to have thereby committed an offence (Section 132 (2)(a) and (b)). Sub-section (3) of Section 132 defines "armed forces" to mean the military, naval and air forces operating as land forces and includes any other armed forces of the Union so operating. Suffice it to note that

Section 129 is attracted in the instant case and any Executive Magistrate or officer in-charge of the Police Station or, in the absence of such officer in charge, any police officer not below the rank of a Sub-Inspector may command any unlawful assembly to disperse. If such a command given under sub-section (1) is not obeyed, then such force as may be necessary may be used to disperse the assembly.

24. These are some of the salutary instructions given to the police officers and men who are called upon to control riotous mobs and to disperse them. Section 129 of Cr.P.C. makes it amply clear that only an Executive Magistrate or Officer in charge of a Police Station or in the absence of such Officer in charge, any police officer not below the rank of a Sub-Inspector has the power to command an unlawful assembly to disperse, it is clear from these various safeguards against reckless use of force that officers with some responsibility should command use of force including one of firing to disperse an unlawful assembly.

25. In the instant case, the Senior Superintendent of Police and the Additional Superintendent of Police along with others are present on the spot and the firing was opened by the police personnel on the direction of the petitioner Siya Ram Saran Aditya as it was necessary to take an action or to open a fire for the disbursal of the unlawful assembly. It is abundantly clear from the facts and circumstances of the case that opening of fire was on the direction of the petitioner Siya Ram Saran Aditya, which is not below the rank of Inspector, after examining the situation on the spot. The facts of the case clearly shows that the petitioner Siya Ram Saran Aditya who was the then Senior Superintendent of Police are present on the spot and took decision to open fire and accordingly firing was done after examining the situation and necessity of the said act.

26. For examining Issue No.I, there must be a reasonable connection between the act and the official duty. It does not matter even if the act exceeds what is strictly necessary for the discharge of the duty. What I must find out is whether the act and the official duty are so interrelated that one can postulate reasonably that it was done by the accused in the performance of the official duty, though possibly in excess of the needs and requirements of the situation.

27. The act must fall within the scope and range of the official duties of the public servant concerned. There cannot be any universal rule to determine whether there is a reasonable connection between the act done and the official duty, nor is it possible to lay down any such rule. One safe and sure test in this regard would be to consider, if the omission or neglect on the part of the public servant to commit the act complained of could have made him answerable for a charge of dereliction of his official duty. If the answer to this question is in the affirmative, it may be said that such act was committed by the public servant while acting in the discharge of his official duty and there was every connection with the act complained of and the official duty of the public servant.

28. It is necessary to protect the public servants in the discharge of their duties. In the facts and circumstances of each case protection of public officers and public servants functioning in discharge of official duties and protection of private citizens have to be balanced by finding cut as to what extent and how far is a public servant working in discharge of his duties or purported to discharge of his duties, and whether the public servant has exceeded his limit. It is true that Section 197 of Cr.P.C. states that no cognizance can be taken and even after cognizance having been taken if facts come to light that the acts complained of were done in the discharge of the official duties then the trial may have to be stayed unless sanction is obtained. The protection given under Section 197 of Cr.P.C. is to protect responsible public servants against the institution of possibly vexatious criminal proceedings for offences alleged to have been committed by them while they are acting or purporting to act as public servants. The policy of the legislature is to afford adequate protection to public servants to ensure that they are not prosecuted for anything done by them in the discharge of their official duties without reasonable cause, and if sanction is granted, to confer on the Government, if they choose to exercise it, complete control of the prosecution.

29. To what extent an act or omission performed by a public servant in discharge of his duty can be deemed to be official was explained by the Supreme Court in the case of Matajog Dubey Vs. H.C. Bhari; AIR 1956 SC 44, which is as under:

"The offence alleged to have been committed must have something to do, or must be related in some manner with the discharge of official duty ... there must be a reasonable connection between the act and the discharge of official duty; the act must bear such relation to the duty that the accused could lay a reasonable (claim) but not a pretended or fanciful claim, that he did it in the course of the performance of his duty."

30. The nexus between the discharge of the public duty and the offending act or omission must be inseparable. The obvious reason is to balance the public good and efficiency of the performance of the public duty by a public servant and the legitimate and bona fide grievance of an aggrieved person. Sometimes while discharging or purported to discharge the public duty, the officer may honestly exceed his limit or pass an order or take a decision which may later be found to be illegal, etc. Therefore, the prior sanction by the appropriate Government is an assurance to a public servant to discharge his official functions diligently, efficiently and honestly without fear or favour, without having haunt of later harassment and victimization, so that he would serve his best in the interest of the public.

31. The offending act must be integrally connected with the discharge of duty and should not be fanciful or pretended. If the act complained of is directly, and inextricably connected with the official duty, though it was done negligently, or in dereliction of duty or in excess thereof, Section 197 and similar provisions operate as a canopy against malicious, vexatious or frivolous accusation or prosecution at the hands of the aggrieved persons. It is well settled law that public servant can only be said to act or purported to act in the discharge of his official duty if his act or omission is such as to lie within the scope of his official duty.

32. In the instant case, the petitioner Siya Ram Saran Aditya along with other petitioners, who was the then Senior Superintendent of Police, had reached at the place where the students and other people was sitting on Dharna and blocked the road. The petitioner tried to convinced them to vacate the road but the crowed stood aggravated and started pelting stones upon the police personnel. Some of them opened fire on the police personnel while they are discharging their official duty. In order to maintain law and order and on the defence, the police personnel on the direction of the petitioner Siya Ram Saran Aditya had also opened fire, as a result whereof, one died and some others are injured. It is crystal clear from the facts stated above that the petitioners were at the place of incident in his official capacity and during that time he was the Senior Superintendent of Police, therefore, being the senior most police officer at the place of incident, it was the duty of the petitioner Siya Ram Saran Aditya to maintain law and order of the said locality.

ISSUES NO.II & III

33. Whether court below has erred grievously in taking cognizance of the above case against the petitioners as the opposite parties/ prosecuting agency failed to obtain the sanction under Section 197 (1) of Cr.P.C. against the petitioners who had nexus to official duty only in complexity with their work as police official. In the absence of the valid sanction under Section 197 (1) of Cr.P.C., the case is void abinito.

34. Section 197 of Cr.P.C. reads as follows:

"197. Prosecution of Judges and public servants - (1) When any person who is or was a Judge or Magistrate or a public servant not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of the Government is accused of any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty, no Court shall take cognizance of such offence except with the previous sanction [save as otherwise provided in the Lokpal and Lokayuktas Act, 2013] -

(a) in the case of a person who is employed or, as the case may be, was at the time of commission of the alleged offence employed, in connection with the affairs of the Union, of the Central Government;

(b) in the case of a person who is employed or, as the case may be, was at the time of commission of the alleged offence employed, in connection with the affairs of a State, of the State Government:

[Provided that where the alleged offence was committed by a person referred to in clause (b) during the period while a Proclamation issued under clause (1) of Article 356 of the Constitution was in force in a State, clause (b) will apply as if for the expression "State Government" occurring therein, the expression "Central Government" were substituted.

(2). No Court shall take cognizance of any offence alleged to have been committed by any member of the Armed Forces of the Union whole acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty, except with the previous sanction of the Central Government.

(3). The State Government may, by notification, direct that the provisions of sub-section (2) shall apply to such class or category of the members of the Forces charged with the maintenance of public order as may be specified therein, wherever they may be serving, and thereupon the provisions of that sub-section will apply as if for the expression "Central Government" occurring therein, the expression "State Government" were substituted.

[(3-A) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (3), no Court shall take cognizance of any offence, alleged to have been committed by any member of the Forces charged with the maintenance of public order in a State while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty during the period while a Proclamation issued under clause (1) of Article 356 of the Constitution was in force therein, except with the previous sanction of the Central Government.

(3-B). Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in this Code or any other law, it is hereby declared that any sanction accorded by the State Government or any cognizance taken by a Court upon such sanction, during the period commencing on the 20th day of August, 1991 and ending with the date immediately preceding the date on which the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1991, receives the assent of the President, with respect to an offence alleged to have been committed during the period while a Proclamation issued under clause (1) of Article 356 of the Constitution was in force in the State, shall be invalid and it shall be competent for the Central Government in such matter to accord sanction and for the Court to take cognizance thereon.]

(4) The Central Government or the State Government, as the case may be, may determine the person by whom, the manner in which, and the offence or offences for which, the prosecution of such Judge, Magistrate or public servant is to be conducted, and may specify the Court before which the trial is to be held."

35. The protection given under Section 197 of Cr.P.C. is to protect responsible public servants against the institution of possibly vexatious criminal proceedings for offences alleged to have been committed by them while they are acting or purporting to act as public servants.

36. The applicability of Section 197 of Cr.P.C. needs careful consideration. In Bakhshish Singh Brar Vs. Smt. Gurmej Kaur and another; AIR 1988 SC 257, the Hon'ble Supreme Court while emphasizing on the balance between protection to the officers and the protection to the citizens observed as follows:-

"It is necessary to protect the public servants in the discharge of their duties. In the facts and circumstances of each case protection of public officers and public servants functioning in discharge of official duties and protection of private citizens have to be balanced by finding out as to what extent and how far is a public servant working in discharge of his duties or purported discharge of his duties, and whether the public servant has exceeded his limit. It is true that Section 196 states that no cognizance can be taken and even after cognizance having been taken if facts come to light that the acts complained of were done in the discharge of the official duties then the trial may have to be stayed unless sanction is obtained. But at the same time it has to be emphasised that criminal trials should not be stayed in all cases at the preliminary stage because that will cause great damage to the evidence."

37. In P.K. Pradhan Vs. State of Sikkim; (2001) 6 SCC 704, the Hon'ble Supreme Court held as follows:

"The legislative mandate engrafted in sub-section (1) of Section 197 debarring a court from taking cognizance of an offence except with the previous sanction of the Government concerned in a case where the acts complained of are alleged to have been committed by a public servant in discharge of his official duty or purporting to be in the discharge of his official duty and such public servant is not removable from office save by or with the sanction of the Government, touches the jurisdiction of the court itself. It is a prohibition imposed by the statute from taking cognizance. Different tests have been laid down in decided cases to ascertain the scope and meaning of the relevant words occurring in Section 197 of the Code: "any offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty". The offence alleged to have been committed must have something to do, or must be related in some manner, with the discharge of official duty. There must be a reasonable connection between the act and the official duty. It does not matter even if the act exceeds what is strictly necessary for the discharge of the duty, as this question will arise only at a later stage when the trial proceeds on the merits. What a court has to find out is whether the act and the official duty are so interrelated that one can postulate reasonably that it was done by the accused in the performance of official duty, though, possibly in excess of the needs and requirements of the situation."

38. The offences led in Section 197 of Cr.P.C. is that no court shall take cognizance of offence against a public servant alleged to have committed while acting or purported to act in the discharge of official duty, except with previous sanction of the appropriate Government. The object behind prior sanction is to prevent malicious, vexatious and unnecessary harassment to a public servant by laying false or frivolous accusation or prosecution. In other words Section 197(1) and related sections intended to immune a public servant who discharges his duties honestly and diligently from the threat of prosecution. Honest discharges of public duty would impinge adversely of the interests, acts or omissions of private persons who would be prone to harass in criminal proceedings and prosecution to demoralize a public servant.

39. In Yusofalli Mulla Vs. The King; AIR 1949 PC 264, the Privy Council was examined whether failure to obtain sanction affected the competence of the Court to try the accused. A Court cannot be competent to hear and determine a prosecution the institution of which is prohibited by law and the institution of a prosecution in the absence of a proper sanction. The Magistrate was no doubt competent to decide whether he had jurisdiction to entertain the prosecution and for that purpose to determine whether a valid sanction had been given, but as soon as he decided that no valid sanction had been given, the Court became incompetent to proceed with the matter. Their Lordships agree with the view expressed by the Federal Court in Basdeo Agarwalla Vs. King Emperor; AIR 1945 FC 16 that a prosecution launched without a valid sanction is a nullity.

40. The Federal Court in Basdeo Agarwalla's case (supra), summed up the legal position regarding the effect of absence of a sanction in the following words:

"In our view the absence of sanction prior to the institution of the prosecution cannot be regarded as a mere technical defect. The clause in question was obviously enacted for the purpose of protecting the citizen, and in order to give the Provincial Government in every case a proper opportunity of considering whether a prosecution should in the circumstances of each particular case be instituted at all. Such a clause, even when it may appear that a technical offence has been committed, enables the Provincial Government, if in a particular case it so thinks fit, to forbid any prosecution. The sanction is not intended to be and should not be an automatic formality and should not so be regarded either by police or officials. There may well be technical offences committed against the provisions of such an Order as that in question, in which the Provincial Government might have excellent reason for considering a prosecution undesirable or inexpedient. But this decision must be made before a prosecution is started. A sanction after a prosecution has been started is a very different thing. The fact that a citizen is brought into Court and charged with an offence may very seriously affect his reputation and a subsequent refusal of sanction to a prosecution cannot possibly undo the harm which may have been done by the initiation of the first stages of a prosecution. Moreover in our judgment the official by whom or on whose advice a sanction is given or refused may well take a different view if he considers the matter prior to any step being taken to that which he may take if he is asked to sanction a prosecution which has in fact already been started."

41. In the case of Budha Mal vs. State of Delhi [Criminal Appeal No.17 of 1952 disposed of on 3/10/1952], the Hon'ble Apex Court clearly ruled that absence of a valid sanction affected the competence of the Court to try and punish the accused.

42. The object of the provisions of Section 197 of Cr.P.C. is to prevent public servant from undue harassment. The sanction is in the nature of safeguard provided to public servant of his being illegally and falsely harassed, impleaded and then prosecuted. Therefore, on the reading of above provision of law, it can be gathered that the object of getting sanction from the competent authority is to protect the public servant from discharge of his official duty without fear and favour.

43. It is the duty of the prosecution to produce necessary record to establish that after application of mind and consideration thereof to the subject the grant or refusing to grant sanction was made by the appropriate authority. At any time before the Court takes cognizance of the offence, the order of sanction could be made. It is settled law that issuance of the process to the accused to appear before the court is sine quo non of taking cognizance of the offence. The emphasis of Section 197(1) of Cr.P.C. or other similar provisions that "no court shall take cognizance of such offence except with the previous sanction" posits that before taking cognizance of the offence alleged, there must be before the court the prior sanction given by the competent authority. Therefore, at any time before taking cognizance of the offence, it is open to the competent authority to grant sanction and the prosecution is entitled to produce the order of sanction.

44. If the sanction is not valid and legal or not granted by the competent authority and even if the prosecution has not sought sanction to prosecute the accused for the offence punishable under the provisions of Indian Penal Code, it is fatal to the case of the prosecution. Therefore, if the Investigating Officer was not successfully get sanction against the accused as required under Section 197 of Cr.P.C., he may not chose to file charge-sheet against the accused for the commission of offences punishable under the provisions of Indian Penal Code.

45. Admittedly, in the present case on hand, the accused being a Police Officer while maintaining the law and order was discharging the official duty. Therefore for initiation of prosecution, the sanction under Section 197 of Cr.P.C. is required whereas in the present case the charge-sheet was filed against the accused persons in absence of any valid sanction.

ISSUES NO. IV & V

46. In the case of General Officer Commanding, RashtriyaRifles Vs. Central Bureau of Investigation and another; (2012) 6 SCC 228, the Apex Court while dealing "Good Faith" has observed as under:

"69. A public servant is under a moral and legal obligation to perform his duty with truth, honesty, honour, loyalty and faith etc. He is to perform his duty according to the expectation of the office and the nature of the post for the reason that he is to have a respectful obedience to the law and authority in order to accomplish the duty assigned to him.

70. Good faith has been defined in Section 3(22) of the General Clauses Act, 1897, to mean a thing which is, in fact, done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not. Anything done with due care and attention, which is not mala fide, is presumed to have been done in good faith. There should not be personal ill-will or malice, no intention to malign and scandalise. Good faith and public good are though the question of fact, it required to be proved by adducing evidence. (Vide: Madhavrao Narayanrao Patwardhan Vs. Ram Krishna Govind Bhanu; AIR 1958 SC 767, Madhav Rao Jivaji Rao Scindia Vs. Union of India; (1971) 1 SCC 85, Sewakram Sobhani v. R.K. Karanjiya; (1981) 3 SCC 208, Vijay Kumar Rampal v. Diwan Dev; AIR 1985 SC 1669, Deena v. Bharat Singh; (2002) 6 SCC 336 and Goondla Venkateswarlu v. State of A.P.; (2008) 9 SCC 613).

73. Performance of duty acting in good faith either done or purported to be done in the exercise of the powers conferred under the relevant provisions can be protected under the immunity clause or not, is the issue raised. The first point that has to be kept in mind is that such a issue raised would be dependent on the facts of each case and cannot be a subject matter of any hypothesis, the reason being, such cases relate to initiation of criminal prosecution against a public official who has done or has purported to do something in exercise of the powers conferred under a statutory provision. The facts of each case are, therefore, necessary to constitute the ingredients of an official act. The act has to be official and not private as it has to be distinguished from the manner in which it has been administered or performed.

74. Then comes the issue of such a duty being performed in good faith. ''Good faith' means that which is founded on genuine belief and commands a loyal performance. The act which proceeds on reliable authority and accepted as truthful is said to be in good faith. It is the opposite of the intention to deceive. A duty performed in good faith is to fulfil a trust reposed in an official and which bears an allegiance to the superior authority. Such a duty should be honest in intention, and sincere in professional execution. It is on the basis of such an assessment that an act can be presumed to be in good faith for which while judging a case the entire material on record has to be assessed.

75. The allegations which are generally made are, that the act was not traceable to any lawful discharge of duty. That by itself would not be sufficient to conclude that the duty was performed in bad faith. It is for this reason that the immunity clause is contained in statutory provisions conferring powers on law enforcing authorities. This is to protect them on the presumption that acts performed in good faith are free from malice or ill will. The immunity is a kind of freedom conferred on the authority in the form of an exemption while performing or discharging official duties and responsibilities. The act or the duty so performed are such for which an official stands excused by reason of his office or post.

76. It is for this reason that the assessment of a complaint or the facts necessary to grant sanction against immunity that the chain of events has to be looked into to find out as to whether the act is dutiful and in good faith and not maliciously motivated. It is the intention to act which is important.

77. A sudden decision to do something under authority or the purported exercise of such authority may not necessarily be predetermined except for the purpose for which the official proceeds to accomplish. For example, while conducting a raid an official may not have the apprehension of being attacked but while performing his official duty he has to face such a situation at the hands of criminals and unscrupulous persons. The official may in his defence perform a duty which can be on account of some miscalculation or wrong information but such a duty cannot be labelled as an act in bad faith unless it is demonstrated by positive material in particular that the act was tainted by personal motives and was not connected with the discharge of any official duty. Thus, an act which may appear to be wrong or a decision which may appear to be incorrect is not necessarily a malicious act or decision. The presumption of good faith therefore can be dislodged only by cogent and clinching material and so long as such a conclusion is not drawn, a duty in good faith should be presumed to have been done or purported to have been done in exercise of the powers conferred under the statute."

47. Thus, in view of the above, the law on the issue of sanction can be summarized to the effect that the question of sanction is of paramount importance for protecting a public servant who has acted in good faith while performing his duty. In order that the public servant may not be unnecessarily harassed on a complaint of an unscrupulous person, it is obligatory on the part of the executive authority to protect him. However, there must be a discernible connection between the act complained of and the powers and duties of the public servant. The act complained of may fall within the description of the action purported to have been done in performing the official duty. Therefore, if the alleged act or omission of the public servant can be shown to have reasonable connection inter-relationship or inseparably connected with discharge of his duty, he becomes entitled for protection of sanction. If the law requires sanction, and the court proceeds against a public servant without sanction, the public servant has a right to raise the issue of jurisdiction as the entire action may be rendered void ab-initio for want of sanction. Sanction can be obtained even during the course of trial depending upon the facts of an individual case and particularly at what stage of proceedings, requirement of sanction has surfaced. The question as to whether the act complained of, is done in performance of duty or in purported performance of duty, is to be determined by the competent authority and not by the Court. The Legislature has conferred "Absolute Power" on the statutory authority to accord sanction or withhold the same and the court has no role in this subject. In such a situation, the court would not proceed without sanction of the competent statutory authority.

48. From the facts of the case, in hand, the road was blocked by unsocial elements before Chaudhary Charan Singh P.G. College, Hewra which resulted into a heavy traffic jam, then Station Officer along with other police personnel reached there and tried to convince the people, who had created the blockage on the road, and tried to control the mob but everything is in vain. On the information received from the then Station Officer, the Additional Superintendent of Police reached there and tried to pacify the matter with the mob and requested to stop Dharna on the road but the mob become uncontrolled and started pelting stones on the police party. The mob had started firing on the police personnel and, therefore, the situation had become uncontrolled and then the competent police officers i.e. Senior Superintendent of Police and Additional Superintendent of Police, who are present at the time of incident on the spot, having no other effective option left directed for firing in self defence, as a result whereof, two persons were received injuries on their persons and out of which one died. The entire incident of firing by the police personnel was only in order to maintain law and order and while directing for firing, the Competent Officer has followed the procedure as prescribed in the Police Mannual. No extra force was applied and the said unfortunate incident has taken place only for the purpose of maintaining the law and order which were become serious at that time. The action had been taken place as per the procedure prescribed in law and the police mannual while discharging official duty.

49. As per the record, for the abovesaid incident, the Magisterial inqury was conducted and in that Magisterial inquiry, it was found that none of the police officials are responsible for the said incident.

50. There are crucial question is whether the High Court, in exercise of its extra-ordinary jurisdiction under Section 482 of Cr.P.C., would interfere and quash the charge-sheet and the cognizance order of the trial court.

51. In the case of Punjab Vs. Mohd. Iqbal Bhatti; (2009) 17 SCC 92, the Hon'ble Apex Court while considering the question whether the State has any power of review in the matter of grant of sanction in terms of Section 197 of the Code has observed as under:

"6. Although the State in the matter of grant or refusal to grant sanction exercises statutory jurisdiction, the same, however, would not mean that power once exercised cannot be exercised once again. For exercising its jurisdiction at a subsequent stage, express power of review in the State may not be necessary as even such a power is administrative in character. It is, however, beyond any cavil that while passing an order for grant of sanction, serious application of mind on the part of the concerned authority is imperative. The legality and/or validity of the order granting sanction would be subject to review by the criminal courts. An order refusing to grant sanction may attract judicial review by the superior courts.

7. Validity of an order of sanction would depend upon application of mind on the part of the authority concerned and the material placed before it. All such material facts and material evidences must be considered by it. The sanctioning authority must apply its mind on such material facts and evidences collected during the investigation. Even such application of mind does not appear from the order of sanction, extrinsic evidences may be placed before the court in that behalf. While granting sanction, the authority cannot take into consideration an irrelevant fact nor can it pass an order on extraneous consideration not germane for passing a statutory order. It is also well settled that the superior courts cannot direct the sanctioning authority either to grant sanction or not to do so. The source of power of an authority passing an order of sanction must also be considered."

52. The Hon'ble Supreme Court in Mohd. Iqbal Bhatti's case (Supra) then noticed the opinion of the High Court which was recorded as follows:

"9. ..... Once the Government passes the order under Section 19 of the Act or under Section 197 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, declining the sanction to prosecute the concerned official, reviewing such an order on the basis of the same material, which already stood considered, would not be appropriate or permissible."

53. While affirming the above opinion of the High Court, Hon'ble Apex Court in paras 20 and 21 of the Mohd. Iqbal Bhatti's case (supra) has observed as under:

"20. It was, therefore, not a case where fresh materials were placed before the sanctioning authority. No case, therefore, was made out that the sanctioning authority had failed to take into consideration a relevant fact or took into consideration an irrelevant fact. If the clarification sought for by the Hon'ble Minister had been supplied, as has been contended before us, the same should have formed a ground for reconsideration of the order. It is stated before us that the Government sent nine letters for obtaining the clarifications which were not replied to."

21. The High Court in its judgment has clearly held, upon perusing the entire records, that no fresh material was produced. There is also nothing to show as to why reconsideration became necessary. On what premise such a procedure was adopted is not known. Application of mind is also absent to show the necessity for reconsideration or review of the earlier order on the basis of the materials placed before the sanctioning authority or otherwise."

54. It is true that the Government in the matter of grant or refusal to grant sanction exercises statutory power and that would not mean that power once exercised cannot be exercised again or at a subsequent stage in the absence of express power of review in no circumstance whatsoever. The power of review, however, is not unbridled or unrestricted. It seems to us sound principle to follow that once the statutory power under Section 19 of the 1988 Act or Section 197 of the Code has been exercised by the Government or the competent authority, as the case may be, it is not permissible for the sanctioning authority to review or reconsider the matter on the same materials again. It is so because unrestricted power of review may not bring finality to such exercise and on change of the Government or change of the person authorized to exercise power of sanction, the matter concerning sanction may be reopened by such authority for the reasons best known to it and a different order may be passed. The opinion on the same materials, thus, may keep on changing and there may not be any end to such statutory exercise. In my opinion, a change of opinion per se on the same materials cannot be a ground for reviewing or reconsidering the earlier order refusing to grant sanction. However, in a case where fresh materials have been collected by the investigating agency subsequent to the earlier order and placed before the sanctioning authority and on that basis, the matter is reconsidered by the sanctioning authority and in light of the fresh materials an opinion is formed that sanction to prosecute the public servant may be granted, there may not be any impediment to adopt such course.

55. After perusal of the entire documents on record as well as the submissions made by learned Counsel for the parties, I find that there is no prima facie case is made out on merits and chances of ultimate conviction is bleak. It is settled law that when the documents relied on by the respondents demonstrate that no prima facie offence is made out on the face value of those materials, then the criminal prosecution should not be allowed to continue and, therefore, it should be quashed, and in such a situation and circumstances, the petitioner who had got a right under the Constitution for the protection of their liberty have rightly approached this Court and this Court in these circumstances has no option left except to grant the relief as prayed by the petitioner.

56. In view of above, the order dated 16.08.2013 passed by the Additional Sessions Judge/ Special Judge (SC/ ST Act), Lucknow in Criminal Revision No.164 of 2012 and the order 26.03.2012 passed by the Special Judicial Magistrate (CBI), Lucknow in Case No.3/ 12, R.C. No.7(S)/ 2008, under Sections 147, 148, 302, 307, 342, 504, 506 IPC, Police Station CBI (ACB), Lucknow are quashed. The petitions under Section 482 of Cr.P.C. are allowed.

Held :- the Writ Petition succeeds and is allowed in part only to the extent that the adjustment chart enclosed to the impugned order shall be appropriately corrected to bring it in accord with the order under reference and include the area of the petitioner's holding, as directed in the substantive part of the order. To this extent, the impugned order stands modified.

Writ Petition allowed in part (E-8)

(Delivered by Hon'ble J.J. Munir, J.)

1. This Writ Petition is directed against an order of the Deputy Director of Consolidation, Azamgarh, dated 14.01.1976 passed in Revision no.428, Guru Granth vs. Naumi and others, and Revision no.583, Sant Kumar vs. Guru Granth and others. Also, under challenge, is a subsequent order dated 21.02.1976 passed by the Deputy Director of Consolidation, Azamgarh in Restoration Application no.111, Sant Kumar vs. Guru Granth and others, seeking to set aside the order dated 14.01.1976, in so far it relates to the two Revisions aforesaid, seeking to restore those Revisions to their original number, and determine them afresh.

2. At the outset, it must be remarked that the prayer clause in the Writ petition is rather vaguely worded, and reads thus:

"It is, therefore, prayed that Writ in the nature of Certiorari be issued to send for the records of the case and to quash the orders of the Deputy Director, and that any other suitable Writ, Order or direction be issued in the interest of Justice."

3. From the substance of the allegations in the Writ Petition, it is, however, clear that the petitioner has assailed the order of the Deputy Director of Consolidation, Azamgarh, dated 14.01.1976, in so far as it pertains to Revision nos.428 and 583, last mentioned. It is also clearly discernible that the further order dated 21.02.1976 passed on the restoration application made to set aside the judgment and order dated 14.01.1976, is one that is made on the application referable to the two Revisions last mentioned, and not others. It further requires to be said in order to set the record straight that pointed reference to the two Revisions, where the impugned order dated 14.01.1976 has been passed, is made on account of the fact that by the said order the Deputy Director has disposed of some thirty-two Revisions, about the rest of which except the two above mentioned, there is no issue in this Writ Petition.

4. This Writ Petition was admitted to the hearing as long back as on 3rd August, 1976. Notice was sent out on 18.09.1976 returnable on 01.12.1976. A perusal of the order sheet shows the fact that between 18.09.76 and 02.02.1993, that is, a period of about little more than 16 years, the Writ Petition never came up before the Court; at least, there is no order scribed on the order sheet between these two dates. On 22.02.1993, a substitution application, seeking to bring on record the heirs of the sole petitioner, who has died in the meanwhile, was filed. This Writ Petition, which arises from a chak allotment matter, had a host of substitution applications, an abatement application, and, in between, a restoration application. All these were disposed of on 08.02.2019, whereafter decks were cleared for hearing. Vide office report dated 21.02.2019, and reiterated on 07.03.2019, the matter was posted for final hearing. The said report was reiterated again on 08.05.2019 and 02.07.2019. On 03.07.2019, the Writ Petition was heard in a single hearing and judgment was reserved.

5. Heard Sri Rahul Sripat, learned Senior Advocate assisted by Sri Ishir Sripat, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the petitioner and Sri J.N. Sharma, learned counsel appearing on behalf of respondent nos.2 & 3.

6. The proceedings giving rise to this petition relate to consolidation operation, and were current in the district of Azamgarh in the year 1976. The dispute relates to land situate in Village Azmatgarh of district Azamgarh. The petitioner was proposed a single chak by the Assistant Consolidation Officer, that included, inter alia, khasra nos.1226(M), 1434(M), 1435(M), 2329(M) and 1330(M). The petitioner was satisfied with the said allotment, and did not file any objection from the proposal. A number of other tenure holders filed objections, but none of them related to the ACO's proposal, vis-a-vis, the petitioner's chak, 'directly' or 'indirectly', as the petitioner seeks to plead. The petitioner's chak is claimed to have become final, and also confirmed under Section 23 of the U.P. Consolidation of Holdings Act, 1953 (for short, 'the Act'). No appeal was carried from the order or the determination made in favour of the petitioner, as the petitioner would submit.

7. Guru Granth, respondent no.3 is said to have filed a revision to the Deputy Director of Consolidation, bearing Revision no.428, impleading the petitioner as a party. It is asserted by the petitioner that notice of this Revision was not served upon the petitioner, in consequence of which at the hearing, neither the petitioner had knowledge or did he appear or sign the order sheet. It is further pleaded that Revision no.583 of was filed by another co-tenure holder, Sant Kumar. No notice of this Revision was issued or given to the petitioner, or did he otherwise acquire knowledge of these proceedings. In consequence, neither the petitioner or the learned counsel could appear at the hearing before the Deputy Director of Consolidation. It is also asserted in paragraph 3 of the Writ Petition that at the time of local inspection made by the Deputy Director of Consolidation, the petitioner's son was not present at the place of inspection. It is also claimed by the petitioner that the impugned order passed by the Deputy Director of Consolidation, disposing of the two Revisions, above mentioned, along with a host of others, has been passed behind the petitioner's back, without any opportunity of hearing to him, and further that by an ex parte determination done behind the petitioner's back, he has been given two chaks in the same sector and a third in another sector. The total holding of the petitioner is claimed to be about six bighas. It is asserted in paragraph 2 of the Writ Petition by the petitioner that Revision no.428, filed by Guru Granth, where he was impleaded as a party, no notice was issued to him. He did not appear at the hearing of the Revision, or sign the order-sheet of proceedings, or otherwise had knowledge. Likewise, it is asserted, that Revision no.583 filed by Sant Kumar, no notice was issued to the petitioner, and he had no knowledge of the proceedings. In consequence, he or his counsel did not appear at the hearing of Revision no.583 also.

8. There is an assertion in paragraph 3 of the Writ Petition by the petitioner, that at the time of inspection done by the Deputy Director of Consolidation, the petitioner's son was not present. It is then asserted that both these Revisions under reference, one filed by Sant Kumar, and the other filed by Guru Granth, came to be heard and allowed behind the petitioner's back. It is said that these Revisions have been decided without affording the petitioner any opportunity of hearing. These assertions regarding denial of opportunity have been boldly made in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of the Writ Petition. It is also asserted that both the Revisions were allowed, in consequence of which, the petitioner's chak, as proposed by the ACO, has been completely altered by the Deputy Director of Consolidation. The petitioner has been given bad quality land. It is also asserted, as already said by the petitioner, that he has been given two chaks in one sector, and a third in another sector. The total land in his hand, after determination of the Deputy Director of Consolidation, is six bighas.

9. It appears that the petitioner filed an application for restoration seeking to set aside the order of the Deputy Director of Consolidation, dated 14.01.1976 made in the two Revisions under reference, primarily on ground that these Revisions were decided behind his back without affording him opportunity of hearing, and that the decision rendered there, substantially prejudices the petitioner as already indicated. The said restoration application was rejected by the Deputy Director by means of an order dated 21.02.1976. It is asserted by the petitioner that the finding recorded by the Deputy Director of Consolidation that the petitioner was heard in the Revision filed by Sant Kumar, and that all Revisions were heard after being consolidated, is wrong. It is asserted that each Revision was heard separately as there were different parties and different plots. It is also asserted that there was no counter affidavit filed on behalf of the opposite parties to the restoration application, on account of which the assertions made in the restoration application, that was filed to the Deputy Director of Consolidation, remained unrebutted at the instance of any of the respondents here. It is also asserted that the petitioner's son was not present at the hearing of the Revision, or at the time of local inspection, as already asserted. There is a particular assertion in paragraph 7 of the Writ Petition that the Deputy Director of Consolidation ordered that the petitioner be allotted land on his original holding bearing plot no.1460, but in the adjustment chart, plot not.1460 has not been given to him. Instead plot nos.1660, 1263, 1264, 1266 and 1473, have been entered in the petitioner's chak, that are far inferior than plot no.1460. It is also claimed in the paragraph under reference that earlier, the petitioner was given two chaks comprising his original holding, but now he has been given three chaks, and these do not carry his original holding. It is also asserted that Sant Kumar has been given the best quality land, whereas his original holding was of bad quality, mostly. There is an assertion in paragraph 8 of the Writ Petition that the Revision filed by Sant Kumar against the order of the Settlement Officer of Consolidation, dated 31.10.1974, was filed on 03.06.1975. It was barred by time, but the same has been entertained and allowed, without condoning the delay in filing the Revision.

10. Of the two respondents, that is to say, Sant Kumar, respondent no.2 and Guru Granth, respondent no.3, a counter affidavit has been filed on behalf of Guru Granth alone. It is an affidavit dated 12th July, 2009. No counter affidavit has, however, been filed on behalf of respondent no.2. Something that requires to be noticed regarding respondent no.3 evident from the counter affidavit filed on their behalf, is that the party described as Guru Granth in Revision no.428, Guru Granth vs. Naumi and others, decided by the impugned judgment and order dated 14.01.1976, is not a man in flesh and blood. Instead, the party referred as Guru Granth, is a Math of Guru Granth Ji Mahatam Swami, represented by its Mahanth, Mahanth Balak Dass. In the counter in paragraphs 4, 5 & 6, the petitioner's assertions that the two Revisions nos.583 and 428 filed by Sant Kumar and Guru Granth respectively, have been decided without notice or opportunity to the petitioner, have been specifically denied. The said fact has been refuted with reference to the findings recorded in the subsequent order of the Deputy Director of Consolidation, dated 21.02.1976, passed on the restoration application preferred by the petitioner. In paragraph 6 of the rejoinder affidavit, it is asserted amongst other things that the assertion in paragraph 4 of the counter affidavit about denial of opportunity, has not been specifically denied in the counter affidavit.

11. Since the question of the two Revisions being decided vitally affecting the petitioner's chak without opportunity of hearing to him as claimed, is a question that goes to the root of the matter, it is expedient to deal with and answer the issue in the first instance. Both, Sri Rahul Sripat, learned Senior Advocate and J.N. Sharma, learned counsel appearing for respondent nos.2 & 3 are firm in their respective stands about the issue.

12. The Court has considered the matter and, in particular, perused the order dated 21.02.1976, which is an order passed by the Deputy Director of Consolidation, on the restoration application preferred by the petitioner, where the principal ground was denial of opportunity, and decision of the Revisions under reference against the petitioner without notice to him or within his knowledge. The Deputy Director has recorded a specific finding with reference to Revision no.428, that is, the Revision filed by respondent no.3, Guru Granth to the effect that the petitioner was issued notice of the said Revision, the record of which is appended to the Revision papers. It has further been recorded that the order-sheet of this Revision has been signed by the petitioner. A further finding has been recorded that the petitioner has also been heard in opposition to the Revision preferred by the revisionist, Sant Kumar, even though the order-sheet of that Revision, does not bear his signatures. There is a further specific finding recorded by the Deputy Director of Consolidation, that the petitioner's son was present at the time of spot inspection. Now, this Court thinks that the other contention of the petitioner that the spot inspection was done by the Deputy Director of Consolidation in his absence, particularly of his son, must also be disposed of here. The contention that the petitioner was not heard in opposition to the Revision, is essentially a question to be answered with reference to record. To the extent that it cannot be answered with reference to record, it can best be answered with reference to personal knowledge of the Presiding Officer who heard the matter, or the learned counsel who appeared in the proceedings. A perusal of the later order dated 21.02.1976 passed by the Deputy Director shows that it is an order recorded by Sri Ram Sahai Lal Srivastava, the then Deputy Director of Consolidation, Azamgarh. It is the said Officer who decided the two Revisions under reference, along with a host of others by his judgment and order dated 14.01.1976. Thus, the said Officer is in a pre-eminent position to certify as to whether the petitioner, in fact, appeared and was heard in the two Revisions or not. He has specifically recorded, in his order dated 21.02.1976, that the petitioner was heard in both the Revisions. It is also recorded by him that on the order-sheet of Revision no.428, the petitioner has appended his signatures. As regards Revision no.583 filed by Sant Kumar, the Deputy Director of Consolidation has remarked that though he has not signed the order-sheet, but in fact he was heard in opposition to the said Revision. There is no record or evidence to the contrary filed by the petitioner to show that in fact he was never served with notice of the Revision, or that he did not appear at the hearing of the two Revisions. Though the assertions by the petitioner are specific that he did not appear at the hearing of the two Revisions, but there is not the slightest evidence to displace the strong presumption that arises from the contents of the order dated 21.02.1976 passed by the Deputy Director of Consolidation, both with reference to record and his personal knowledge, that the petitioner was heard in answer to the Revisions. About one of the Revisions as already said, there are signatures of the petitioner on the order-sheet. The petitioner has not said anywhere that the signatures on the order-sheet of Revision no.428 filed by respondent no.3, are not his signatures. The order of the Deputy Director of Consolidation, dated 21.02.1976, was filed along with the Writ Petition, as one of the two impugned orders, or as one of the orders on record. The petitioner was well aware of the finding there that the Deputy Director of Consolidation has said that the petitioner has signed the order-sheet of Revision no.428, but the petitioner has not asserted or averred anywhere in the Writ Petition, that those signatures on the order-sheet are forged, or in any way not his signatures. The petitioner has also not said anywhere that the findings in the order dated 21.02.1976, which says that the petitioner was heard in opposition to the Revision, has been falsely recorded on account of some malice of the Presiding Officer though he has said that the finding that he was heard in the Revision filed by Sant Kumar is incorrect. In the absence of allegations of mala fide against the Presiding Officer, the presumption of regularity that attaches to all official actions, more particularly, when they are done in a judicial capacity, also attaches to the remark of the Presiding Officer, who has certified that the petitioner was heard in both Revisions.

13. In this view of the matter, there is no substance in the contention of the petitioner that he was not heard while deciding the Revisions under reference by means of impugned order dated 14.01.1976.

14. Likewise, the other contention that the petitioner's son was not present at the time of spot inspection by the Deputy Director of Consolidation, is also not acceptable for the singular reason that it was canvassed before the same Officer who had gone about the exercise of inspection, and decided the Revision, but he did not accept the same. Instead, he specifically recorded it for a fact in his order dated 21.02.1976 that the petitioner's son was present during the spot inspection, whom he met at that time. This kind of a finding coming from the pen of the same Officer, who held the inspection and decided the Revisions under reference, cannot be disturbed by this Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution.

15. It is no doubt true that the assertion in paragraph 4 of the Writ Petition that the Deputy Director of Consolidation by the orders impugned has given the petitioner bad quality land, has not been denied for a fact in paragraph 6 of the counter affidavit. However, in the assertions made in paragraph 4 of the Writ Petition, it has not been pleaded with sufficient precision as to how the land allotted to the petitioner by the order impugned, is of poor quality compared to what was proposed to him by the ACO. It has also not been averred in the said paragraph that land allotted by the Deputy Director of Consolidation, is of poor quality when compared to the petitioner's original holding, that is comprised of khasra no.1460. That assertion has figured in paragraph 7 of the Writ Petition, but in a different context of limited scope, that will be dealt with hereinafter.

16. The other grievance of the petitioner that he has been spread out in three chaks, instead of two, as proposed by the ACO, is also not in dispute. The question is whether on these grounds the consolidation scheme for the village is to be disturbed at the instance of the petitioner by interfering with the same in these writ proceedings. This Court does not think so. The framing of a provisional consolidation scheme and making it final is a wholesome exercise. It is not necessary for the Consolidation Authorities to weigh in golden scales the rights of parties when they go about the exercise of consolidation. All that is required to be done is that the fundamental principles that the Act and Rules lay down, are not violated. The petitioner has not indicated in the case that he has taken in paragraph 4 as to what was the precise valuation and nature of land that comprised his original holding and that given to him by the impugned order. A vague assertion that he has been given bad quality land, that does not spell out, in what precise terms that land is bad when compared with the land that was his original holding, or the land proposed by the ACO, is not warrant enough for this Court to interfere on that ground. So far as the question that the petitioner has been placed on three chaks instead of two as proposed by the ACO, is in no way illegal, inasmuch as, it is only when chaks more than three are allotted to a tenure holder, that prior approval of the Deputy Director of Consolidation is required. Even that in the present case, would not apply as the allotment has been made here by the Deputy Director of Consolidation himself. In any case, the provisions of Section 19(1)(e) of the Act clearly indicate that allotment of three chaks to a tenure holder is regarded as nothing exceptionable or something which the Consolidation Authorities must go about with special care. The discretion, therefore, exercised by the Deputy Director of Consolidation on this score, cannot be faulted.

17. The last submission canvassed by Sri Rahul Sripat, learned Senior Advocate is to the effect that the Deputy Director of Consolidation has allotted land to the petitioner on his original holding bearing plot no.1460, but in the allotment, plot no.1460 has not been given to him. Instead, he has been given plot nos.1660, 1263, 1264, 1266, 1473, all of which are worse than his original holding, comprised of plot no.1460.

18. This Court has perused the impugned order which shows that respondent no.2, Sant Kumar has been given land from the petitioner's proposed chak, comprising plot no.1334, that is Sant Kumar's original holding, and to compensate the petitioner, the said land that has been taken out from the eastern part of the petitioner's chak, it has been ordered that land of equivalent value in plot no.1460, that is the original holding of the petitioner, be given. A perusal of the adjustment chart appended to the impugned order dated 14.01.1976, shows in Column 8 that the following plot numbers have been entered in the three chaks of the petitioner: 1263(M), 1264(M), 1266(M), 1463(M), 1473(M), 1463(M), 1616(M) and 1462(M). There is some more area of plot no.1463(m), that has been entered in the petitioner's chak, may be in a different chak out of the three allotted. What is apparent on the face of record, is that keeping in view the orders passed by the Deputy Director of Consolidation in Revision no.583, filed by Sant Kumar, the petitioner has not been given any part of his original holding in plot no.1460. There is, thus, clearly incongruence between the impugned order and the adjustment chart appended to it, in terms whereof plot numbers allotted to the petitioner are to be actually entered in the consolidation records. To this extent, the submission of Sri Rahul Sripat, learned Senior Advocate is well founded that there is incongruence between the impugned order dated 14.01.1976 and the appended chart where in the petitioner's chak, the area of land

19. In the result, the Writ Petition succeeds and is allowed in part only to the extent that the adjustment chart enclosed to the impugned order dated 14.01.1976 shall be appropriately corrected to bring it in accord with the order under reference and include the area of the petitioner's holding in plot no.1460, as directed in the substantive part of the order. To this extent, the impugned order dated 14.01.1976 stands modified. Costs easy.

Writ Petition allowed (E-8)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Salil Kumar Rai, J.)

The application was filed in the Court on 3.4.2019 and was taken on record.

Office is directed to grant regular number to the application.

The application has been filed to record the word 'deceased' before the name of Smt. Santosh Sharma referred as petitioner no. 2/1 in the application and the wife of the deceased petitioner no. 2 - Mr. Manjul Kumar Sharma and also to record the fact that Sri Manish Sharma, the son of deceased petitioner no. 2 referred as petitioner no. 2/2 in the application is the heir and legal representative of Smt. Santosh Sharma and is already on record. The array of parties in the memorandum of writ petition reveals that Smt. Santosh Sharma was not substituted in place of deceased petitioner no. 2 and only Sri Manish Sharma, i.e., the son of petitioner no. 2 was substituted in his place as petitioner no. 2/1.

In view of the aforesaid, the application is misconceived and is dismissed.

1. The present writ petition arises out of proceedings registered under Section 229-B of the Uttar Pradesh Zamindari Abolition & Land Reforms Act, 1950 (hereinafter referred to as, 'Act, 1950').

2. The dispute between the parties relates to Khata No. 1430 which included Plot Nos. 3655, 3656, 3664, 3667, 3668, 3670 and 3671 (hereinafter referred to as, 'Suit Property'). It is admitted between the parties that one Durga Prasad had two sons, namely, Ram Swarup and Bal Mukund. Ram Swarup died in 1932 and his widow Sukhdei died in 1935. Bal Mukund died in 1960. From his first wife, Bal Mukund had one son, namely, Sagar Dutt and from his second wife, Bal Mukund had two sons, namely, Shyam Lal and Jai Prakash. Shyam Lal died in 1978. Sagar Dutt died during the pendency of the case in the courts below. The respondent nos. 2 to 7 are the legal heirs of Sagar Dutt and respondent nos. 8 to 11 are the legal heirs of Shyam Lal. Jai Prakash is the petitioner in the present writ petition. During his life time, Ram Swarup was recorded as the tenure holder of the suit property. It appears that after 1932, i.e., after the death of Ram Swarup, Sagar Dutt was recorded as the tenure holder of the suit property and continued to be so recorded in 1359 Fasli and in the subsequent revenue records prepared under the Uttar Pradesh Land Revenue Act, 1901. In 1983, the petitioner instituted a suit under Section 229-B of the Act, 1950 impleading Sagar Dutt and the descendants of Shyam Lal as defendants and prayed for a decree declaring him to be a co-tenure holder of the suit property having 1/3 share in the same and for a partition of the suit property. It appears from the records that the said case was re-numbered as Case No. 10 of 1994 and shall be referred as such in the present order. Case No. 10 of 1994 was filed by the petitioner alleging that Bal Mukund and Ram Swarup constituted a Hindu undivided family and the suit property was purchased by Ram Swarup from the joint family fund and Ram Swarup, being the 'head' of the family, was recorded in the revenue records as tenant of the suit property. It was stated in the plaint that the petitioner and the respondents are members of a Hindu undivided family and there had been no partition either between Ram Swarup and Bal Mukund or between the petitioner and the respondents. It was alleged that the suit property was part of the hindu joint family property and, therefore, the petitioner along with the respondents was a co-tenure holder of the suit property having 1/3 share and entitled to seek partition of the suit property.

3. Sagar Dutt contested Case No. 10 of 1994 and filed his written statement denying the averments made in the plaint that there was no partition between Ram Swarup and Bal Mukund. In his written statement, Sagar Dutt stated that the suit property was the self acquired property of Ram Swarup who purchased it from his independent income. It was stated in the written statement that after the death of Ram Swarup, Sagar Dutt became the sole tenure holder of the suit property on the basis of a family settlement and was recorded as such in the revenue records. It was further stated in the written statement that the defendant was in exclusive possession of the suit property since 1932 without any obstruction either by Bal Mukund or the petitioner and respondent nos. 8 to 11 and no objections were filed either by the petitioner or by Bal Mukund after the enforcement of the Act, 1950 or during the different settlements made before the enforcement of the Act, 1950 and, therefore, the claim of the petitioner was barred by limitation as well as by the principle of estoppel and acquiescence.

4. On the pleadings of the parties, the trial court, i.e., the Assistant Collector / Additional City Magistrate, District Meerut framed eight issues. The issues framed by the trial court and relevant for a decision of the present writ petition were as to whether the plaintiff, i.e., the petitioner was a co-tenure holder of the suit property along with the defendant nos. 1 to 5, i.e., Sagar Dutt and respondent nos. 8 to 11, whether the suit property was self acquired property of Ram Swarup which Sagar Dutt got in a family settlement and whether the suit was barred by the principle of estoppel and acquiescence. During the proceedings in Case No. 10 of 1994, the petitioner filed different revenue records to show that there had been no partition between Bal Mukund and Ram Swarup and the mutation order dated 18.10.1932 to prove that Bal Mukund was the legal heir of Ram Swarup. Apart from the aforesaid, certain electricity bills and receipts of house tax as well as the voter list were filed by the petitioner to show that the sons of Bal Mukund, which included Sagar Dutt, were part of a Hindu undivided family and there had been no partition between them and Sagar Dutt was the head of the family. The petitioner also filed documents to show that in 1953, Bal Mukund installed a tube-well in the suit property and after the death of Bal Mukund, the tube-well was registered in the name of the three sons of Bal Mukund, i.e., the petitioner, Sagar Dutt and Shyam Lal who jointly paid its bill. In the trial court, respondents also filed revenue records to show that Sagar Dutt had been consistently recorded as the sole tenure holder of the suit property since 1932. The respondents also filed the statement of Bal Mukund recorded in Case No. 179-1366 registered under the Large Land Holdings Tax Act (hereinafter referred to as, 'LLHT Act') in which, according to the defendant Sagar Dutt, Bal Mukund had admitted that as a result of a family settlement Sagar Dutt became the sole tenure holder of the suit property after the death of Ram Swarup. It appears from the records filed before this Court that in his statement recorded by the trial court under Order X, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, Sagar Dutt stated that he became the sole tenant of the suit property as a result of a family settlement between Sukhdei (the widow of Ram Swarup), Bal Mukund and himself. The statement under Order X CPC is annexed as Annexure No. RA-1 to the rejoinder affidavit.

5. The trial court vide its judgment and order dated 16.3.1994 dismissed Case No. 10 of 1994. In its judgment dated 16.3.1994, the trial court held that the suit property was the self acquired property of Ram Swarup and was not purchased from the joint family fund. Relying on the statement of Bal Mukund recorded in proceedings under LLHT Act, the trial court held that Sagar Dutt was recorded as the sole tenure holder of the suit property as a result of a family settlement which was accepted by all members of the family and no objections were raised by any member of the family including Bal Mukund. On the basis of its aforesaid findings, the trial court held that the petitioner was not a co-tenure holder of the suit property and the suit was barred by the principle of estoppel and acquiescence.

6. Aggrieved by the judgment and decree dated 16.3.1994, the petitioner filed Appeal No. 104 of 1993-94 before the Additional Commissioner (Judicial), Meerut and the Additional Commissioner vide his judgment and decree dated 27.7.1994 allowed the appeal and decreed Case No. 10 of 1994. Relying on the receipts and bills relating to different municipal taxes and charges and the entries in the voter list, the first appellate court held that the petitioner, Sagar Dutt and Shyam Lal were part of a Hindu joint family. In its judgment and order dated 27.7.1994, the first appellate court also held that Ram Swarup and Bal Mukund constituted a Hindu joint family and it was not proved that the suit property was the self acquired property of Ram Swarup or that there was any partition between Ram Swarup and Bal Mukund. Relying on the document which showed that Bal Mukund installed the tube-well existing on the suit property and after the death of Bal Mukund, the said tube-well was registered in the name of the three sons of Bal Mukund who jointly paid its bill, the first appellate court held that the suit property was joint family property and the petitioner, Sagar Dutt and Shyam Lal and consequently their descendants were co-tenure holders of the suit property and the petitioner had 1/3 share in it. The first appellate court also reversed the findings of the trial court that the suit was barred by limitation and by the principle of estoppel and acquiescence.

7. Sagar Dutt died during the pendency of the first appeal and, therefore, aggrieved by the judgment and order dated 27.7.1994 passed by the first appellate court, respondent nos. 2 to 7 filed Second Appeal No. 124 of 1993-94 under Section 331(4) of the Act, 1950 before the Board of Revenue, Uttar Pradesh at Allahabad. Through its judgment and order dated 4.4.1995, the Board of Revenue, Uttar Pradesh at Allahabad allowed the second appeal and restored the order passed by the trial court. In its judgment and order dated 4.4.1995, the Board of Revenue held that the suit property was purchased by Ram Swarup from his independent income and relying on the admission of Bal Mukund, the Board held that Sagar Dutt was the sole tenant of the suit property and the petitioner had no share in it. The Board also held that as Sagar Dutt was recorded in the revenue records since 1932 and was in continuous possession, therefore, the claim of the petitioner was barred by limitation. In its order dated 4.4.1995, the Board of Revenue also took note of the different sales and purchases separately made by the parties. The judgment and order dated 4.4.1995 passed by the Board of Revenue has been challenged in the present writ petition.

8. Challenging the judgment and order dated 4.4.1995 passed by the Board of Revenue, the counsel for the petitioner has argued that the different revenue records filed by the petitioner before the trial court proved that Bal Mukund and Ram Swarup constituted a Hindu joint family and there was no partition either between Ram Swarup and Bal Mukund or after the death of Bal Mukund, between his sons and Sagar Dutt was the head of the family and the suit property was a joint family property and the petitioner had 1/3 share in it. It was argued that the findings recorded by the Board of Revenue that the claim of the petitioner was barred by limitation and by estoppel and acquiescence was contrary to law. It was further argued that the family settlement pleaded by Sagar Dutt in his favour was not proved by the evidence on record. It was argued that the Board of Revenue had exceeded its jurisdiction in allowing the appeal without framing any substantial question of law which was mandatory under Section 331(4) of the Act, 1950 read with Section 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (as amended in 1976) and in reversing the findings of the first appellate court even though the findings of the first appellate court were based on evidence on record. It was argued that for the aforesaid reasons, the order dated 4.4.1995 passed by the Board of Revenue is contrary to law and is liable to be set-aside. In support of his arguments, the counsel for the petitioner has relied on the judgment of the Supreme Court in Sita Ram Bhama Vs. Ramvatar Bhama 2018 (15) SCC 130.

9. Rebutting the arguments of the counsel for the petitioner, the counsel for the respondents has argued that an oral family settlement is recognized under the law. It was argued that the family settlement pleaded by Sagar Dutt had been acted upon and neither the widow of Ram Swarup nor the father of Sagar Dutt, i.e., Bal Mukund ever objected to it. It was argued that the plaintiff/petitioner could not show the existence of any nucleus or source of income of the joint hindu family to prove that the suit property was purchased from the joint family fund. It was argued that from the evidence on record especially, the sale deed dated 31.8.1922, it was proved that Ram Swarup and Bal Mukund were living separately. It was further argued that Sagar Dutt was recorded as the sole tenure holder of the suit property even in 1342 Fasli, i.e., during the settlement of Mr. Waugh and was recorded as Sirdaar of the suit property under Section 18 of the Act, 1950. It was argued that under the Act, 1950, Sagar Dutt acquired new rights which had attained finality. It was also argued that from the admission of Bal Mukund, it was evident that Bal Mukund had no concern with the suit property and the said admission was binding on the petitioner who claimed through Bal Mukund. It was argued that the claim of the petitioner was barred by the principle of estoppel and acquiescence and the suit was barred by limitation. It was argued by the counsel for the respondents that there was no jurisdictional error in the order passed by the Board of Revenue because under Section 331(4) of the Act, 1950, the Board of Revenue was not required to frame any substantial question of law as the amendments in 1976 in Section 100 were not applicable while the Board of Revenue exercised its power as a second appellate court under Section 331(4) of the Act, 1950 and the powers of the Board under Section 331(4) of the Act, 1950 were governed by Section 100 CPC as it existed prior to the amendment. It was further argued that it was not a fit case for interference under Article 227 of the Constitution of India. In support of his arguments, the counsel for the respondents has relied upon the judgments of the Supreme Court in Kale and Ors. Vs. Deputy Director of Consolidation and Ors. 1976 (3) SCC 119; Shalini Shyam Shetty and Anr. Vs. Rajendra Shankar Patil 2010 (8) SCC 329; State of Uttarakhand Vs. Mohan Singh and Ors. 2012 (13) SCC 281 and Marabasappa (Dead) by Lrs. and Ors. Vs. Ningappa (Dead) by Lrs. and Ors. 2011 (9) SCC 451.

10. I have considered the rival submissions of the counsel for the parties.

11. It is not disputed that the suit property was purchased in the name of Ram Swarup through a sale deed executed by one Amba Prasad. It is also not disputed that Ram Swarup died issueless leaving behind his widow Sukhdei. The issue whether Ram Swarup and Bal Mukund had separated or whether the suit property was purchased from the joint family fund or from the independent income of Ram Swarup is not relevant to decide the dispute between the parties and the present writ petition. The claim of Sagar Dutt is not dependent on a decision on the issue as to whether the suit property was a joint family property or the separate property of Ram Swarup. It is not the case of respondent nos. 2 to 7 that, through any recognised mode of transfer, Ram Swarup, during his lifetime, had transferred the suit property to Sagar Dutt or had executed any Will in favour of Sagar Dutt. Thus, after the death of Ram Swarup, by virtue of Section 24 of Agra Tenancy Act, 1926, the suit property devolved on Sukhdei, the widow of Ram Swarup and after the death of Sukhdei, the estate would have devolved on Bal Mukund, the brother of Ram Swarup. After the death of Bal Mukund, under Section 171 of the Act, 1950, the estate would devolve on his three sons. If Section 24 of Agra Tenancy Act, 1926 and Section 171 of the Act, 1950 operate, Sagar Dutt had no rights in the suit property during the lifetime of Sukhdei and Bal Mukund and was only a co-tenure holder of the suit property along with his brothers including the petitioner irrespective of whether the suit property was joint family property or self acquired property of Ram Swarup purchased by his independent income. In order to succeed in their case that Sagar Dutt was the sole tenant of the suit property, the respondent nos. 2 to 7 had to prove some event which excluded the operation of Section 24 of Agra Tenancy Act, 1926 or Section 171 of the Act, 1950. The said was necessary because when one co-heir is found to be in possession of the properties it is presumed to be on the basis of a joint title. (See P. Lakshmi Reddy Vs. L. Lakshmi Reddy AIR 1957 SC 314).

12. The case of respondent nos. 2 to 7 is that after the death of Ram Swarup, Sagar Dutt became the sole tenant of the suit property through a family settlement between Sukhdei, Bal Mukund and Sagar Dutt. Apparently, the case of respondent nos. 2 to 7 was that Bal Mukund or his other two sons never acquired any tenancy rights in the suit property. If the case of family settlement as pleaded by respondent nos. 2 to 7 is believed, Sukhdei relinquished her rights, title and interest in the suit property in favour of Sagar Dutt even though Sagar Dutt had no antecedent title in the property. In view of the law laid down by the Supreme Court in Kale and Ors. Vs. Deputy Director of Consolidation and Ors. 1976 (3) SCC 119, such a family settlement would be valid even if Ram Swarup had separated from Bal Mukund and was the sole tenure holder of the suit property and also even if the suit property was a joint family property and Ram Swarup was recorded as the tenure holder of the suit property only as the 'Karta' of the family and all the members of the family had not entered into the arrangement. At this stage, the observations of the Supreme Court in Paragraph No. 17 of Kale (supra) are reproduced below:

"In Krishna Beharilal v. Gulabchand, it was pointed out that the word "family" had a very wide connotation and could not be confined only to a group of persons who were recognised by law as having a right of succession or claiming to have a share.

The Court then observed: [SCC p. 843, paras 7-8]

"To consider a settlement as a family arrangement, it is not necessary that the parties to the compromise should all belong to one family. As observed by this Court in Ram Charan Das v. Girjanandini Devi - the word "family" in the context of a family arrangement is not to be understood in a narrow sense of being a group of persons who are recognised in law as having a right of succession or having a claim to a share in the property in dispute. If the dispute which is settled is one between near relations then the settlement of such a dispute can be considered as a family arrangement - see Ramcharan Das case.

The courts lean strongly in favour of family arrangements to bring about harmony in a family and do justice to its various members and avoid in anticipation future disputes which might ruin them all."

13. The issue in the present case is whether the family settlement was proved by respondent nos. 2 to 7 and whether the findings recorded by the first appellate court accepting the case of the petitioner were based on evidence on record and further whether, under Section 331(4) of the Act, 1950 read with Section 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, the Board of Revenue had exceeded its jurisdiction in reversing the findings of the first appellate court and record its own findings rejecting the claim of the petitioner.

14. The family settlement was set-up by respondent nos. 2 to 7 and, therefore, the burden was on respondent nos. 2 to 7 to prove the family settlement. To prove the family settlement, the respondent nos. 2 to 7 relied on the alleged admission of Bal Mukund made in proceedings under the LLHT Act and on the conduct of the petitioner and Bal Mukund in not filing any objections against the entries in the revenue records showing Sagar Dutt to be the sole tenant of the suit property. In this context, the respondent nos. 2 to 7 also argued that the claim of the petitioner was barred by the principle of estoppel and acquiescence. So far as the plea of respondent nos. 2 to 7 that the claim of the petitioner was barred by the principle of estoppel, it is sufficient to note that mere long standing revenue entries without any legal sanction or authority of law confer no right on the recorded person. A Division Bench of this Court in Shri Ram and Ors. Vs. Deputy Director of Consolidation, Allahabad and Ors. 2011 (4) ADJ 289 (DB) held, in the context of Section 49 of the Uttar Pradesh Consolidation of Holdings Act, 1953, that there was no public policy which prohibited a person to seek reversal of state of affairs continuing for scores of years if he had a right to do so. It was held that a person can claim his right to a property even after a lapse of considerable period, which right he had neither abandoned nor relinquished, provided the claim is not barred by any law of limitation.

15. The counsel for the respondents has not brought to the notice of the Court any statutory provision attaching finality to the settlement of Mr. Waugh in 1942 or entries in the revenue records as a result of Section 18 of the Act, 1950. The claim of the petitioner was also not barred by any law of limitation as it is not the case of respondent nos. 2 to 7 that Sagar Dutt had matured his rights by adverse possession.

16. In order to prove family settlement, the respondent nos. 2 to 7 have relied on the alleged admission of Bal Mukund. The statement of Bal Mukund has been annexed with the writ petition and I have perused the same. Interestingly, the statement of Bal Mukund was disbelieved by the Assessing Officer and the Appellate Authority in proceedings under the LLHT Act on the ground that Bal Mukund had not been able to establish any severance of joint family status between himself and Sagar Dutt. A perusal of the statement of Bal Mukund does not show that there was any admission by Bal Mukund of any family settlement between Bal Mukund, Sukhdei and Sagar Dutt. In his statement given in proceedings under the LLHT Act, Bal Mukund had stated that the suit property belonged exclusively to Sagar Dutt and was given to him by Ram Swarup. The said statement is not an admission of a family settlement as set-up by the respondent. An admission has to be clear and unambiguous and adverse to the interest of the maker. The proceedings under the LLHT Act were not between Sagar Dutt and Bal Mukund and the statement of Bal Mukund did not adversely affect his interest in the said proceedings. The statement of Bal Mukund only leads to the inference that the suit property was gifted or in any way transferred by Ram Swarup to Sagar Dutt. It is not the case of respondent nos. 2 to 7 that Sagar Dutt got the suit property directly from Ram Swarup either as gift or through any other mode of transfer. The statement of Bal Mukund in proceedings under the LLHT Act cannot be characterized as admission of a family settlement between himself, Bal Mukund and Sukhdei, i.e., the widow of Ram Swarup. Evidently, the statement of Bal Mukund in proceedings under LLHT Act did not prove the family settlement set-up by respondent nos. 2 to 7. Further, the statement of Bal Mukund cannot act as estoppel against the petitioner as there is nothing on record to show and there are no findings by the courts below that Sagar Dutt acted upon the said statement to his detriment.

17. The first appellate court, relying on the bills and the receipts relating to the municipal taxes and the electricity bills which showed that the bills were jointly paid by the three sons of Bal Mukund, held that there was no severance of joint family status between the three sons of Bal Mukund and their descendants. The first appellate court while accepting the case of the petitioner also took note of the fact that the tube-well installed on the suit property was initially registered in the name of Bal Mukund and after the death of Bal Mukund, the said tube-well was registered in the name of the three sons of Bal Mukund and the different charges relating to the said tube-well were jointly paid by the three sons of Bal Mukund and their descendants. The first appellate court, after considering the aforesaid evidence, held that the petitioner was a co-tenure holder of the suit property along with the respondents having 1/3 share in it. The aforesaid evidence does indicate that there was no ouster of Bal Mukund or the petitioner from the suit property. The findings of the first appellate court are supported by the evidence on record. It is true that while recording its finding, the first appellate court did not consider the alleged admission of Bal Mukund. However, as held earlier, the statement of Bal Mukund was not an admission of any family settlement and did not prove the family settlement set-up by respondent nos. 2 to 7.

18. The findings of the first appellate court were findings of facts and did not give rise to any question of law. The weight to be put on a particular piece of evidence is in the realm of appreciation of evidence and does not give rise to any question of law. Even under Section 100 CPC, as it existed prior to the amendment of 1976, a second appeal was maintainable only on a question of law. In Sree Meenakshi Mills, Madurai Vs. Commissioner of Income Tax, Madras (AIR 1957 SC 49), the Supreme Court referred, with approval, the decision of Privy Council in Wadi Mohammed Vs. Mohd. Baksh AIR 1930 PC 1 wherein it was held that there is no jurisdiction to entertain a second appeal on ground of erroneous findings of facts, however, gross the error may seem to be and the question whether a fact has been proved when evidence for and against has been properly admitted is necessarily a pure question of fact (Para 21). A reading of the impugned order dated 4.4.1995 passed by the Board of Revenue shows that the Board of Revenue has substituted its own findings after reversing the findings recorded by the first appellate court which the Board of Revenue could not have done even under Section 100 CPC as it existed before the Amendment Act, 1976.

19. In its order dated 4.4.1995, the Board of Revenue has held that the first appellate court had ignored the relevant evidence and has referred to certain sales and purchases made separately by the parties to infer that there was a severance of joint family status. The counsel for the respondents has also handed over the statement given by the petitioner before the trial court to show that the petitioner had purchased certain properties. I have carefully gone through the order passed by the trial court and find that the different sale deeds referred as evidence by the trial court were executed either before the death of Ram Swarup or were executed by Bal Mukund. The sale deeds executed before the death of Ram Swarup have no evidentiary value to decide the rights of the parties regarding the suit property because, as held earlier, the said sale deeds only prove that Bal Mukund and Ram Swarup had separated and there was a severance of joint family status between Bal Mukund and Ram Swarup and the issue as to whether Bal Mukund and Ram Swarup continued as a hindu undivided family till the death of Ram Swarup is not relevant for deciding the dispute between the parties. So far as the sale deeds executed by Bal Mukund are concerned, the same also do not help the respondent nos. 2 to 7 because the said sale deeds, as evident from the order of the trial court were executed in 1953 or 1959. Under the Act, 1950, Bal Mukund had absolute right over his Bhumidhari plots including the right to transfer and the sale deeds would not adversely affect the rights of the petitioner in relation to the suit property. The sale deeds allegedly executed by the petitioner and referred in the statement of the petitioner handed over to this Court by the counsel for the respondents show that the petitioner had purchased certain plots from his independent income and has stated that the said plots were purchased by him and Shyam Lal from their independent income. A member of a hindu undivided family is not deprived of his right to purchase property from his independent income and in his own name and not mix-up the same with the joint family property.

20. In view of the reasons given above, the evidence relied upon by the Board of Revenue in its impugned order were not relevant to decide the title of the parties in the suit property and the findings of the first appellate court could not have been set-aside on the ground that the said evidence were not considered by the first appellate court. There was no perversity in the findings of the first appellate court empowering the Board of Revenue to interfere in the said findings exercising its powers under Section 331(4) of the Act, 1950 read with Section 100 CPC. Evidently, the Board of Revenue had exceeded its jurisdiction under Section 331(4) of the Act, 1950 read with Section 100 CPC by interfering in the findings of the first appellate court and the impugned order of the Board of Revenue is contrary to law.

21. For the aforesaid reasons, the order dated 4.4.1995 passed by the Board of Revenue in Second Appeal No. 124 of 1993-94 is liable to be set-aside and is, hereby, quashed. The order dated 27.7.1994 passed by the first appellate court in Appeal No. 104 of 1993-94 is restored.

22. The writ petition is allowed.

Writ Petition allowed in part (E-8)

(Delivered by Hon'ble J.J. Munir, J.)

1. This writ petition has been filed originally by one, Ram Dular S/o Bharos a native of village Akkipur Post Chhatai Kala (Shahganj), District Jaunpur challenging an order of the Deputy Director of Consolidation dated 16.02.1987, whereby he has restored an order of the Consolidation Officer dated 05.05.1984 made on an objection under Section 9A(2) of the U.P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (for short the 'Act'), setting aside the order dated 21.08.1986, passed by the Settlement Officer of Consolidation.

2. Heard Sri Neelabh Srivastava, Advocate holding brief of Sri Adarsh Bhushan, learned counsel for the petitioner and Sri Ram Prakash Ram, learned counsel appearing on behalf of respondent no. 3, Ram Lakhan, now represented by his heirs and legal representatives, numbering six.

3. These proceedings have commenced on an objection under Section 9A(2) of the Act filed by a third respondent before the Consolidation Officer. The dispute relates to khasra nos. 77 and 385 of Khata No. 100 that was entered in the name of the petitioner and the third respondent when Chakbandi operations commenced a second time in the year 1983-84. The objection of the petitioner was that he was entitled to be recorded as the sole tenure holder over the said plots, that are hereinafter referred to as the 'property in dispute', to the exclusion of third respondent. It was the third respondent's case that the name of the petitioner had been wrongly recorded and was liable to be expunged. The petitioner contested third respondent's objection and claimed that it was a joint holding that had been inherited from the parties' common ancestor one, Chikhur. According to the petitioner, Chikhur had two sons, Shivraj and Bujha. Bujha had a son, Bharos. The petitioner is the son of Bharos. He had two brothers, Matai and Satai, who died issueless. According to the petitioner, the property came from Chikhur and went by way of succession with a half share each in the branches of Shivraj and Bhuja. What came to the petitioner was the half share that went to the branch of Bujha. During the life time of the petitioner's brothers, Matai and Satai, the petitioner along with two brothers had a 1/6th share each. Since, Matai and Satai, the two brothers of the petitioner died during his life time and issueless, their share was inherited by the petitioner enlarging it to a complete half. It was urged that in the branch of Shivraj, his half share was inherited by his only son Hichhu, and from him by his son, Ram Lakhan (respondent no. 3). The contention of the petitioner is that in his reply to the objections of the third respondent was that half share over the land in dispute was rightly recorded in the basic year khatauni of the second round of Chakbandi operations, and that, that was the position which remained throughout. The first round of chakbandi operations commenced in the year 1955. He contended that during the first round of chakbandi operations, no issue about the petitioner's share was raised by Ram Lakhan or his predecessor-in-interest and those chakbandi operations were concluded with the de-notification under Section 52 of the Act. It was contended that the present chakbandi operations, that had commenced in the year 1983-84, therefore, correctly recorded in the basic year, a half share for the petitioner and the third respondent, regarding which no objections could now be raised. Bar of Section 49 of the Act was also pleaded on the basis of the first round of chakbadi operations, where this objection was not at all raised.

4. The Consolidation Officer, while deciding objection framed issues to the following effect:

1. Whether the name of Ram Dular, Satai and Matai are liable to be expunged from the khata in dispute?, and;

2. Whether the name of Ram Lakhan deserves to be recorded exclusively?

5. The third respondent in support of his objection filed a khatauni for the Fasli year 1334, which shows the name of Hichhu S/o Shivraj to be recorded there, exclusively. A further khatauni for the fasli year 1309 was filed which shows the name of Chikhur to be recorded. In another khatauni for the Fasli year 1356, has been filed on behalf of the third respondent, where name of Hichhu finds record. There is a copy of the khatauni for the Fasli year 1362 filed by the objector-respondent no. 3, where the name of Hichhu, his father is exclusively recorded.

6. Lateron, during mutation, the name of Hichhu has been expunged, and in his place, the name of Ram Lakhan has been recorded as his heir. The Consolidation Officer has recorded that in the khatauni for the Fasli Year 1362 there is a note that the name of Ram Lakhan has been rubbed off and in the order of the ACO, dated 23.05.1956 the name of one, Bharos has been entered. The name of petitioner's father has been recorded as Sirdar and co-tenure holder along with Ram Lakhan. The aforesaid entry does not mention the case number wherein the ACO passed that order. CH Form 41 has also been noticed to be filed amongst other documents on behalf of third respondent. On behalf of the petitioner, by way of documentary evidence, a copy of khatauni for the Fasli year 1362 has been filed. CH Form 20 relating to the last chakbandi operations and the record of proceedings under Section 8 of the Act has been filed. There is also a copy of a judgment passed in Case No. 58/2971 "State vs. Ram Dular' decided on 16.12.1971, which the Consolidation Officer has noted, has been filed to show that a criminal litigation was persued between Ram Lakhan and Ram Dular, under Section 313 IPC. The Consolidation Officer has mentioned in the passing in his judgment that extracts of khatauni and the revenue recipets, have also been filed. It must be remarked here that the Consolidatin Officer has not elaborated as to what those khataunies are, or what is detailed there, or what the revenue receipts filed indicate. There is no reference to the contents of any of these documents, including the revenue receipts or the khatauni that have been filed on behalf of the petitioner. Oral evidence on behalf of Ram Lakhan figures as as the testimony of Ram Lakhan himself and his witness Vanshu that was recorded in the witness box, whereas in support of Ram Dular's case, Ram Dular himself and his witness Rampyare's deposition. The Consolidation Officer held that in the old khatauni for the Fasli year 1309, name of Chikhur finds record and, thereafter, in the khatuani for the fasli year 1334, name of Hichhu S/o Shivraj has been recorded. It has been observed by the Consolidation Officer during the course of his decision that the petitioner, Ram Dular has not filed any documentary evidence to show that Chikhur had two sons. He observed that in case Chikhur had two sons, names of both would have figured in the khatauni for the fasli year 1334. It has been reasoned that no documentary evidence has been brought on record to show that Hichhu was the only son of Chikhur or he had another son. The Consolidation Officer has also held that in the fasli year 1362, name of Hichhu finds record and after him, the name of Ram Lakhan has been entered on the basis of succession. From all this, the Consolidation Officer has inferred that Chikhur had no son by the name of Bujha; instead, it is inferable that he had one son, Shivraj, whose lone son is Hichchu. The Consolidation Officer further held that Ram Dular, his father Bharos and his father, Bhuja have nothing to do with the property in dispute.

7. The Consolidation Officer has addressed the question as to what is the effect of non objection during the previous chakbandi, Bharos being recorded as a co-sharer. His name has entered in the khatauni for the fasli year 1362, but the mutation made under an order of the ACO does not mention any case number, which shows that the entry is fictitious. No copy of the decision rendered by the ACO, on the basis of which the said entry has been made, has been filed. The Consolidation Officer also recorded that during the old Chakbandi CH Form 4-7 would carry these kinds of orders but there is no certification of the said forms also.

8. The Consolidation Officer has also reasoned in support of his conclusions that in fasli year 1362, the mutation that has been made, there is an endorsement in red ink and also a note in red Ink, where the name originally entered has been erased, and, the name of Bharos has been added there. Nothing about this objection was said during the first round of Chakbandi. The Consolidation Officer has held that the third respondent was a minor at that time and that Bharos got his name recorded, illegally. In order to reassure himself about his conclusions, he has recorded the fact that the petitioner, Ram Dular would be aged about 36 years during the first round of Chakbandi in the year 1955-56, whereas third respondent would be aged about 8 years. As such, the Consolidation Officer has concluded that the name of first petitioner has been recorded without any basis, and, is the result of a fictitious entry on the foot of which the petitioner now claims a half share. Accordingly, the objections of third respondent were allowed and the name of the petitioner was ordered to be expunged with regard to his half share in the land in dispute.

9. The petitioner appealed the decision of the Consolidation Officer, under Section 11 of the Act to the Settlement Officer of Consolidation. The Settlement Officer of Consolidation undertook a plenary review of the evidence on record. A perusal of that judgment shows that the Settlement Officer of Consolidation took into consideration the khatauni for the fasli year 1309 in relation to which he has said that the said khatauni shows that on some part of the land in dispute, during the fasli year 1309, Chikhur is recorded for the past 26 years. From the said entry and its age relative to the point of time to which it relates, the Settlement Officer of Consolidation concluded that this entry relates to the time of the last bandobast, and, that it shows the property in dispute to be a self acquired property of Chikhur. The Appellate Court has then considered the khatauni for the fasli year 1354-1356, where the name of Hichhu S/o Shivraj is recorded. He has further taken note of the entry that finds place in 1362 fasli (basic year relating to the first round of chakbandi), where the land in dispute is recorded in the name of Hichhu S/o Shivraj. There is an order of the Sub Divisional Officer, dated 07.01.1955 where in place of Hichhu(deceased), the name of Ram Lakhan, respondent no. 3 is recorded as his heir. The Settlement Officer, Consolidation has gone on to note that on 19.03.1955, chakbandi operations were notified in the gazette and the Assistant Consolidation Officer passed an order dated 23.05.1956 on the basis of which the name of Bharos has been entered over the land in dispute (Khata no. 45), as a co-sharer along with the third respondent. It is also noted here that in relation to Khata no. 123 which is not the property in dispute, the name of Bharos has been recorded under orders of the Consolidation Officer, in fasli year

1362 as a co-sharer in that khata. The Consolidation Officer noted in the order impugned that in accordance with the rules applicable to chakbandi operations during that time, that is to say, when the first round of chakbandi operations went through, the Assistant Consolidation Officer did a partal (survey) under Section 8 of the Act. He verified in that exercise as to what the dispute between the parties was all about. He issued a provisional notice to both parties, that is to say, to Bharos, the predecessor-in-title of the petitioner on one hand and to Ram Dular, respondent no. 3, on the other.

10. Dealing with the third respondent's case that the entry claimed by the petitioner in the fasli year 1362 was the result of a forgery, the Settlement Officer of Consolidation took note of the draft khatauni, CH Form 30, relating to another khata no. 95, where names of Ram Lakhan and Bharos have been entered together as co-sharers. He has also taken note of like entries as co-sharers between the petitioner and the third respondent, in relation to the land at village Sadpur, where in CH Form 20, the name of both, Bharos and the the third respondent, Ram Lakhan find place. In particular, the Settlement Officer of Consolidation took into consideration, some 40 odd revenue receipts. The order of the Settlement Officer of Consolidation shows that the land was co-shared by Bharos and Ram Dular.

11. The Settlement Officer, Consolidation has specifically noted the fact that the pedigree propounded by Ram Dular in his written statement has not been dispelled by Ram Lakhan, respondent no. 3, on the basis of evidence led in the case. He has taken note of the family register relating to the year 1983, which shows that in the house no. 45, Ram Lakhan has been indicated to be the head of the family, living along with one Bhikaiya and another Bhagwandei. Bhikaiya is the widowed mother, whereas Bhagwandei is the third respondent's wife. The Court has recorded for a fact that on the basis of oral evidence of Ram Lakhan where he has testified himself, besides his witness, Vanshu, it has been acknowledged by Vanshu in his cross-examination that he does not know that Bujha and Shivraj were brothers, and the number of sons that Chikhur had. The witness has also said that he does not know about the family tree of parties. It is also said by him that land in dispute is very old. He does not know about the khata number. The witness also said that he has no animosity against Ram Dular. He has denied testifying in the criminal case on behalf of Ram Dular. The witness has been opined by the Settlement Officer of Consolidation to be one not acquainted with important and material facts. It is also observed by the Court that this witness has refuted documentary evidence. The Appellate Court has noticed that on the basis of proceedings of a criminal case between parties, the details of which have been recorded in the judgment, it has proven that criminal litigation between Ram Dular and Ram Lakhan at some point of time was there. The testimony of Ram Dular in the witness box has also been taken note of. It has been remarked by the Appellate Court that in his evidence Ram Dular has sought to prove the pedigree propounded by him with the aid of own evidence in the witness box and that of his witness, Rampyare. It is observed by the Trial Court that Ram Dular has supported the pedigree pleaded by him in his written statement, whereas Ram Lakhan has said nothing about this pedigree in oral evidence, recorded in the witness box. Here, it is remarked by the Appellate Court that not only Ram Lakhan has not said anything to disprove the pedigree in his oral evidence, but he has also not disputed Ram Dular's pedigree in his oral evidence. This Court must remark here that by this the Appellate Court does not mean that Ram Lakhan has accepted for a case Ram Dular's pedigree, which he has disputed in all his objections, filed before the Court of first instance. All that, the Appellate Court has remarked is that in his evidence, Ram Lakhan has not disputed Ram Dular's pedigree, by words patent.

12. It is also remarked by the Settlement Officer of Consolidation that when the co-sharers were recorded in the basic year khatauni during the first round of chakbandi, Ram Lakhan was a minor, and, therefore, those entries do no bind him. He has perused the family register to find that the date of birth of Ram Lakhan, recorded there, is 12.07.1947. It is a matter of arithmetical calculation that going by the said date of birth, Ram Lakhan was a minor in the year 1956. In the year 1965, he would have turned a major. He did not object during the entire period of limitation from 1965 to 1968, which he could and ought to have done, if he were aggrieved by the entry made in the basic year, in the year 1962. It has also been recorded that Ram Lakhan has not filed in his documentary evidence, even a single receipt evidencing payment of land revenue paid by him whereas Ram Dular has filed numerous such receipts, which indicate him to be a co-tenure holder along with Ram Lakhan, since the previous round of chakbandi. It has been inferred from these facts that the land appears to be ancestral, where the name of Ram Dular's predecessor was left out, but recorded in the basic year, before commencement of first round of chakbandi operations. The Settlement Officer of Consolidation has also taken note of a submission advanced on behalf of the petitioner, Ram Dular that Ram Lakhan got a reference made by the Consolidation Officer, regarding his claimed rights to exclusive tenure of the land in dispute which was made to the Deputy Director of Consolidation, behind the petitioner's back. It was also accepted by the Deputy Director of Consolidation without notice to the petitioner. The submission of learned counsel for the petitioner also is that the Appellate Court took into account that this exercise of a reference being made and decided behind the petitioner's back, shows that Ram Lakhan knew well that the basic year entry in favour of Ram Dular was not wrong, and that these were only stray entries in his favour, that showed him as the exclusive bhumidhar. The Settlement Officer of Consolidation here also noticed that submission advanced on behalf of Ram Dular that both parties knew that the name of Bharos has been recorded as a co-tenure holder during the first round of chakbandi, but no steps were taken to undo that entry, while the said chakbandi was current. This feature made it clear that the case of the third respondent is hindered by an estopple, besides the statutory bar of Section 49 of the Act. Thus, the entries in the first round of chakbandi could now not be challeged. The Settlement Officer of Consolidation also took into account the submission of learned counsel for the third respondent, Ram Lakhan that during the last bandobast, once the name of Hichhu S/o

Shivraj has been recorded after the last bandobast in the fasli year 1334, that continued for a long period of time, in case Shivraj and Bhuja were brothers, Bhuja ought to have filed a suit under the U.P. Tenancy Act, seeking to get himself declared and recorded as a co-sharer. The Settlement Officer of Consolidation after going through all these evidence very carefully took note of the fact that during the last chakbandi in the CH Form 20 and 25, on the basis of valid orders, entries of co-sharer's rights were made in favour of the petitioner's predecessors' which Ram Lakhan or his predecessor never challenged. They have also not produced any revenue receipts to establish that they have been in exclusive possession of the land in dispute, paying land revenue to the Government in token of such exclusive possession. On the basis of all this analysis the Settlement Officer of Consolidation held the petitioner to be a validly recorded co-tenure holder, along with the third respondent, Ram Lakhan, to the extent of half share and allowed the appeal.

13. Aggrieved, the third respondent, Ram Lakhan preferred a revision to the Deputy Director of Consolidation. The Deputy Director of Consolidation by means of the impugned order set aside the order of the Settlement Officer, Consolidation and restored that of the Consolidation Officer. In doing so, the reasoning adopted by the Deputy Director of Consolidation is this. According to him chakbandi in the village had commenced, in the second round, in the fasli year 1309. The land in dispute was recorded in the name of Chikhur. Subsequently, in the khatauni for the years 1334, 1356 and 1362, Hichhu S/o Shivraj was recorded. In the fasli year 1362 that was the basic year for the first round of chakbandi, there were three mutation orders recorded. The first was a mutation under orders of the Sub Divisional Officer dated 07.01.1955, relating to the succession in favour of Ram Lakhan, whereby the name of Hichhu was mutated out and on the basis of inheritance, the name of Ram Lakhan was entered. The second and the third mutation orders were those of the Assistant Consolidation Officer, dated 23.05.1956, whereby over khata no. 439, the name of Bharos was recorded as a sirdar. By the second mutation order carried out over khata no. 45 (land in dispute), the name of Bharos was recorded as a sirdar. From these mutation orders, the Deputy Director of Consolidation has remarked that it is clear that during the previous round of chakbandi, the present dispute had been raised and these orders in relation to that dispute were passed and recorded. Here, he has noted the contention of the third respondent, Ram Lakhan that the order of Assistant Consolidation Officer dated 23.05.1956 relates to khata no. 439 alone, by which the name of Bharos has been directed to be entered as a sirdar over the said khata, whereas according to the petitioner, Ram Dular, by the order of the Assistant Consolidation Officer dated 23.05.1956, he has been directed to be recorded as a co-sharer over the land in dispute also. The Settlement Officer of Consolidation has identified the issue as one where he had to find out that out of the two orders, which of these are correct. In his reasoning, the Deputy Director of Consolidation has held that in the khatauni of 1362 fasli, it is clear that the mutation carried out pursuant to the order of the Assistant Consolidation Officer, does not bear signatures of the officials carrying out the mutation and verifying it.

The mutation entry also does not bear the case number. It is also recorded that the names of tenure holders also show that there is erasure somewhere and overwriting, all of which make it clear that these mutations are fictitious. It has then been remarked that this Court in its various authorities has expressed judicial opinion in favour of construing such fictitious entries as not conferring any title. The Deputy Director of Consolidation has then held that so far as the question of parties belonging to the same family is concerned, when the question was not raised or determined during the first round of chakbandi, the same cannot be raised now, in view of the bar under Section 49 of the Act. The order of the Settlement Officer, Consolidation has been held to be flawed and that of the Consolidation Officer to be valid. The entries in the khatauni of 1362 Fasli have been held to be fictitious by the Deputy Director of Consolidation.

14. Now, the question to be considered by this Court is whether truly speaking the Deputy Director of Consolidation is right in his conclusions, about the entries in favour of the petitioner being fictitious. A perusal of the order of the Deputy Director of Consolidation would show that he has gone straight to the entries made in the basic year, that is to say, 1362 fasli and viewed it in the same manner as the Consolidation Officer has done. Sitting as a Court of revision above the appellate determination made by the Settlement Officer of Consolidation, the Deputy Director of Consolidation has not dealt with or reversed well considered and reasoned findings, recorded by the Settlement Officer of Consolidation. These findings are based not only on documentary evidence, or the way the entries have appeared to the eyes of the Deputy Director of Consolidation and the Consolidation Officer, but also on the basis of other relevant documentary evidence, that prima facie corroborate the petitioner's case, besides oral evidence of parties, which the Settlement Officer of Consolidation has considered and evaluated in great detail to reach his conclusions.

15. No doubt, the Deputy Director of Consolidation with all his wide powers under Section 48 of the Act, that have become wider after the additon of explanation (3) could have reversed the Settlement Officer of Consolidation, but that he could do, provided he reversed all those findings that the Settlement Officer, Consolidation has recorded on the basis of evidence, and for prima facie good reasons assigned. Reversal also has to be made for cogent reasons, may be different from those recorded by the Settlement Officer of Consolidation. There could not be just reversal of the Settlement Officer's findings, without assigning reasons. These are various findings that the Settlement Officer Consolidation has recorded about the pedigree of the parties, the inheritance of the joint tenancy, the record of proceedings during the first round of chakbandi, and, particularly, non raising of objections during the first round of chakbandi, where entry in favour of the petitioner was made in the basic year relative to the first round of chakbandi. Here, it must be remarked that an entry that is forged and fictitious, no doubt can and ought to be ignored where it is found to be so and expugned, but at the same time, an entry that has not been objected to for years together and allowed to continue in the revenue records, so much so that it was there at the commencement of the first round of chakbandi, and travelled to the second round of chakbandi, without any objection by the person who claims it to be forged now, is a circumstance which ought to be considered before an inference about that entry being forged is drawn. So far as the submission that during the first round of chakbandi the third respondent was a minor, the Settlement Officer of Consolidation has recorded detailed findings that evidence prima facie shows that though he was a minor at the time of commencement of those operations, pending those opereations, the third respondent came of age and could have very well raised this objection that the entries were forged, which he did not do. These are the factors which the Settlement Officer of Consolidation took into the consideration, but the Deputy Director of Consolidation while upturning the Settlement Officer of Consolidation's orders has not bestowed any consideration to this finding of the Settlement Officer of Consolidation. This and the other findings, as already said ought to have been reversed if the order had to be set aside by the Deputy Director of Consolidation, for cogent reasons assigned. There could be no upsetting of the appellate order by the order impugned scripted across two pages, but in substance, one that does not effectively reverse all those detailed findings that the Settlement Officer of Consolidation has recorded. Even if the reversal of the findings by the Deputy Director of Consolidation is to be inferred, it is no more than an ipse dixit of the Officer, without any reason assigned for the reversal. This Court at this stage makes it clear that there is no expression of opinion about the validity of the findings, either recorded by the Settlement Officer of Consolidation, or the Deputy Director of Consolidation. It is all about the manner in which the Deputy Director of Consolidation has reversed the order of Settlement Officer of Consolidation, without adhering to the fundamental requirements of writing a judgment of reversal. It is also made clear that Deputy Director of Consolidation, when he re-determines this matter, pursuant to the order being hereby made will be free to record his findings without being influenced by anything said in this order, but certainly in accordance with the standard and requirements of writing a judgment of affirmation, reversal, or a remand further down, whatever he determines. It goes without saying that while taking his decision Deputy Director of Consolidation will be guided by relevant evidence, and, of course, by the provisions of law that create or support rights of parties, such as the bar under Section 49 of the Act, if inferable, or the principle of estopple or the other well settled principles attracted.

16. In the result this petition succeeds in part and is allowed to the extent that the impugned order passed by the Deputy Director of Consolidation dated 05.05.1984 is hereby quahsed. The matter is remanded to the Deputy Director of Consolidation where Revision No. 1347 shall stand restored to the file of the Deputy Director of Consolidation to be determined afresh in accordance with law after putting both parties to notice. Since, both parties are represented before this Court, it is directed they will appear before the Deputy Director of Consolidation on 30.08.2019, whereafter the Deputy Director of Consolidation will fix a date for hearing. The Deputy Director of Consolidation will proceed to determine the revision afresh, within a period of three months next from the date of first appearance by the parties.

17. Until decision by the Deputy Director of Consolidation the status-quo regarding possession over the land in dispute as exits today shall be maintained by both parties.

18. Costs easy.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Rajiv Joshi, J.)

1. The present writ petition under Article 226 of the Constitution has been filed by the plaintiffs-petitioners challenging the validity of the order dated 16.4.2004 passed by the Board of Revenue U.P. At Allahabad in Second Appeal No. 06 of 2002-2003 (Dashrath & Ors Vs. Panna Lal & Ors) whereby the second appeal filed by respondent nos. 7 to 11 was allowed and the judgment and decree dated 7.6.2003 passed by the Commissioner, Vindhyachal Division Mirzapur as well as order dated 22.10.2002 passed by the Assistant Collector /Upziladhikari, Gyanpur, Badohi were set aside.

2. The relevant facts for consideration in the present case are; that plot no. 47 having area of 2 bighas situate in Village Bhatpura, Tehsil Aurai, District- Sant Ravidan Nagar is the disputed land and said land is also part of Khata No. 40.

3. The mother of the plaintiffs-petitioners namely Smt. Kalawati Devi and defendant -respondent no. 12 Panna Lal s/o Lalloo Yadav executed a registered sale-deed dated 10.7.1970 in favour of Ram Pyare Singh (father of respondent nos. 2 to 5) and Lal Pratap Singh, (father of defendant respondent no.6). On the strength of said sale-deed, the names of Ram Pyare Singh- father of respondent nos. 2 to 5 and Lal Pratap Singh- father of respondent no.6, were mutated in the revenue record. Subsequently, Shiv Ram Singh and others (Sons of Ram Pyare Singh and Late Lal Pratap Singh respondent nos. 2 to 6), executed a registered sale-deed dated 11.2.1988 in favour of respondent nos. 7 to 11 (Dashrath & Ors), who got their names mutated in the revenue record on the strength of said sale-deed.

4. The plaintiffs-petitioners filed a suit on 14.6.1988 being Suit No. 293 of 1989 under Section 229-B of U.P. Z.A & L.R. Act before the Assistant Collector/Upziladhikari, Gyanpur at Badohi, praying that decree be passed declaring the plaintiffs/petitioners and defendant-respondent No.12 (Panna Lal) as bhumidhar of the land in dispute and the sale-deed executed by their mother and their brother Panna Lal (respondent no.12) be declared to be a void document on the ground that on the date of execution of the said sale-deed, the plaintiffs were minors and said deed has been executed without taking prior permission from the District Judge in terms of the provisions of Hindu Minority & Guardianship Act, 1956 (hereinafter referred to as the "Act of 1956").

5. The suit filed by the plaintiffs-petitioners was contested by the father of respondent nos. 2 to 5, father of respondent no.6 and father of respondent nos. 7to 11 that the sale-deed has rightly been executed by the mother and brother of the plaintiffs in their favour and sale-deed dated 10.7.1970 is not void document and the suit filed by the plaintiffs-petitioners cannot be decreed by the revenue court and the same is also not maintainable.

6. Both the parties in support of their respective claims adduced the oral evidence and filed documentary evidence.

7. The trial court partly decreed the suit of the plaintiffs-petitioners vide judgment and decree dated 22.10.2002.

8. Aggrieved by the judgment and decree passed by the trial court, the defendants-respondents no. 7 to 11 filed an appeal registered as Appeal No. 87 of 2003 before the Commissioner, Vindhyachal Division, Mirzapur which was dismissed by the Commissioner vide judgment and order dated 7.6.2003. The respondent nos. 7 to 11 filed a second appeal being Second Appeal No. 6 of 2002-03 before the Board of Revenue U.P. At Allahabad against the judgment and decree dated 22.10.2002 and 7.6.2003. The Board of Revenue vide judgment and order dated 16.4.2004 has allowed the second appeal filed by the respondent nos. 7 to 11, setting aside the judgment and decree dated 7.6.2003 and 22.10.2003 of the trial court and appellate court. It is the judgment and order dated 16.4.2004 which is impugned in the present writ petition.

9. I have heard Sri Ashutosh Srivastava, learned counsel for the petitioners and Sri N.B. Nigam, learned counsel for the respondents and perused the record.

10. Contention of learned counsel for the petitioners is that the Board of Revenue has committed manifest error in law while allowing the second appeal by holding that the sale-deed in question is not a void document and the suit filed by the plaintiffs-petitioners for declaration before the revenue court is not maintainable, in absence of any relief for cancellation of sale-deed. Learned counsel for the petitioner while elaborating his argument submits that the relief claimed in the suit is for declaration of rights by unrecorded tenure holder and the said declaration can only be made by the revenue court, even if it is admitted that the sale-deed is voidable in view of Section 8 (3) of the Act of 1956.

11. It is further argued by learned counsel for the petitioner that at the time of execution of the sale-deed, the petitioners were minors and in absence of natural guardians, de-facto guardians could not deal with the minors property in view of Section 11 and 12 of the Act of 1956. In support of his contention, he relied upon the following judgments in the cases of Punni Lal Vs. Rajender Singh & Anr. 1993 (SC) 1117, Prem Singh Vs. Birbal (2006) 5 SCC 353, Kamla Prasad & Ors Vs. Krishna Kant Pathak & Ors (2007) 4 SCC 213 and Tej Bhan Singh Anr. Vs. IX ADJ Jaunpur & Ors. 1994 RD 496

12. On the other hand, learned counsel for the respondents submits that in view of Section 8(3) of the Act, the sale-deed dated 10.7.1970 cannot be said to be a void document and it is merely a voidable document.

13. Counsel for the respondent further contends that since the sale-deed is a voidable document and admittedly the name of respondent no.7 to 11 have been mutated in the revenue records, therefore, the suit for declaration under Section 229-B of the U.P. Z.A. & L.R. Act is not maintainable, the remedy available to the plaintiffs-petitioners was to get the sale-deed cancelled. In support of his contention, he relied upon the following judgments in cases of Ram Awalamb Anr Vs. Jata Shanker & Ors AIR 1969 ALL 526 (F.B.), Vishwambhar & Anr Vs. Laxmi Narayana (Dead) through Lrs. & Ors. AIR 2001 SC 2607, Sursati Devi Vs. Joint Director of Consolidation, Basti & Ors 1983 ALL L.J. 1473 (Parag 53) and Ram Padarath and Ors Vs. Second ADJ & Ors 1989 (1) AWC 290 (F.B.).

14. I have considered the rival submissions so raised by the learned counsel for the parties and perused the record.

15. The suit for declaration of title under Section 229-B of U.P. Act No.1 of 1951 in respect of agricultural land was filed by the plaintiffs-petitioners on the ground that the petitioners were minor at the time of execution of sale-deed dated 10.7.1970 and same was executed without taking permission from the competent authority (District-Judge of the concerned District) and therefore, the said deed is void ab initio having no binding effect upon the petitioners and therefore, the declaration be made in their favour.

16. The Board of Revenue vide impugned judgment and decree had formulated the following substantial questions of law:

(a) Whether sale-deed of agricultural land executed by the natural guardian on behalf of minors requires a necessary permission of the competent authority (District-Judge).

(b) Whether sale-deed executed by guardian of the minors without permission or with permission is void or voidable.

(c) Whether the suit for mere declaration is maintainable in revenue court unless the voidable sale deed executed by the guardian of the minor is cancelled by the competent civil Court and whether without the prayer of setting aside the sale deed the suit is maintainable.

(d) Whether after the expiry of limitation of three years a minor can sue for setting aside a voidable sale deed and regain property and whether in case of two sons/respondents having attained majority more than three years ago and have not filed suit within three years, the suit to the extent of those sons/respondents is barred by limitation.

17. The Board of Revenue came to the conclusion that no permission is required under Section 8 of Guardianship and Wards Act in respect of sale of agricultural land of minors by his guardians and the sale-deed executed by the mother and brother of the petitioners is not void but a voidable document. Secondly, the suit was filed on 14.6.1988 i.e. after 18 years from the date of execution of the sale-deed and all the petitioners attained the majority as provided in Article 60 of the Schedule of Indian Limitation Act, the limitation for minors for filing the suit for cancellation of sale-deed is three years appears to be barred by limitation and thirdly, the name of the respondents have already mutated in the revenue record and said mutation has not been challenged by the petitioners after they had attained majority and further in view of Section 31 of Specific Relief Act 1966 the suit without seeking the cancellation of the sale-deed dated 10.7.1970 is not maintainable.

18. In the present petition, the questions that arises for consideration are as under;

(1) Whether the sale-deed dated 10.7.1970 executed by the mother and brother of the petitioners is void or voidable instrument.

(2) Whether the suit is cognizable by the Revenue Court or the Civil Court.

19. So far as the first question is concerned, Section 8 of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act,1956 (for short "Act of 1956") is relevant which reads thus:-

"8. Powers of natural guardian.--

(1) The natural guardian of a Hindu minor has power, subject to the provisions of this section, to do all acts which are necessary or reasonable and proper for the benefit of the minor or for the realisation, protection or benefit of the minor's estate; but the guardian can in no case bind the minor by a personal covenant.

(2) The natural guardian shall not, without the previous permission of the court,--

(a) mortgage or charge, or transfer by sale, gift, exchange or otherwise, any part of the immovable property of the minor; or

(b) lease any part of such property for a term exceeding five years or for a term extending more than one year beyond the date on which the minor will attain majority.

(3) Any disposal of immovable property by a natural guardian, in contravention of sub-section (1) or sub-section (2), is voidable at the instance of the minor or by any person claiming under him.

(4) No court shall grant permission to the natural guardian to do any of the acts mentioned in sub-section (2) except in the case of necessity or for an evident advantage to the minor.

(5) The Guardians and Wards Act, 1890 (8 of 1890), shall apply to and in respect of an application for obtaining permission of the court under sub-section (2) in all respects as if it were an application for obtaining the permission of the court under section 29 of that Act, and in particular--

(a) proceedings in connection with the application shall be deemed to be proceedings under that Act within the meaning of section 4A thereof;

(b) the court shall observe the procedure and have the powers specified in sub-sections (2), (3) and (4) of section 31 of that Act; and

(c) an appeal shall lie from an order of the court refusing permission to the natural guardian to do any of the acts mentioned in sub-section (2) of this section to the court to which appeals ordinarily lie from the decisions of that court.

(6) In this section "court" means the city civil court or a district court or a court empowered under section 4A of the Guardian and Wards Act, 1890 (8 of 1890), within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the immovable property in respect of which the application is made is situate, and where the immovable property is situate within the jurisdiction of more than one such court, means the court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any portion of the property is situate...."

20. From the perusal of the aforesaid section, it is apparent that the previous permission of the competent authority (District-Judge of the concerned district) is required in case of transfer of immovable property by the natural guardian. Admittedly, as per the plaint, no permission was taken by the natural guardian of the petitioners while making the transfer and, hence, in view of Section 8 (3) of the aforesaid Act of 1956 any disposal of immovable property by natural guardians in contravention sub-section (1) or sub-section (2), of the the Act is voidable at the instance of minors or any person claimed under him and therefore, the sale-deed dated 10.7.1970 is voidable document and even the learned counsel appearing on behalf of the petitioners conceded the said position.

21. Now coming to the second question, whether the suit is cognizable by the civil court or the revenue court a suit for cancellation of instrument, is based on provisions of Section 31 of Specific Relief Act which is quoted as under:-

"31. When cancellation may be ordered.--

(1) Any person against whom a written instrument is void or voidable, and who has reasonable apprehension that such instrument, if left outstanding may cause him serious injury, may sue to have it adjudged void or voidable; and the court may, in its discretion, so adjudge it and order it to be delivered up and cancelled.

(2) If the instrument has been registered under the Indian Registration Act, 1908 (16 of 1908), the court shall also send a copy of its decree to the officer in whose office the instrument has been so registered; and such officer shall note on the copy of the instrument contained in his books the fact of its cancellation."

22. Thus, the Section 31 of Specific Relief Act refers to both void and voidable instrument and it is the discretional relief.

23. It is true that as per the Full Bench decision of this Court in the case of Ram Padarat (supra) even a suit for cancellation of void sale-deed in respect of agricultural land may be maintainable before the civil court. The decision of the said Full Bench decision has been upheld by the Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of Smt. Bismilla Vs. Janeshwar AIR 1990 SC 504; the Hon'ble Apex Court has held that if the plaintiff is of opinion that without getting the offending deed set aside, he cannot get proper reliefs, then the bar is not attracted and the plaintiff is at liberty to file suit before the Civil Court.

24. In Shri Ram & Anr. Vs. Ist Additional Judge, 2001 (92) RD 241 (SC), the Apex Court also held that the recorded tenure holder is not required to approach the Revenue Court for declaration of rights and can challenge the sale-deed purported to have been executed before the civil court.

25. The paragraphs Nos. 7 and 41 of the Full Bench decision of this Court in the case Ram Padarat (supra) which has been approved by the Apex Court in the Case of Smt. Bismilla (supra) read as under:

"7. So far as voidable documents like those obtained by practising coercion, fraud, misrepresentation, undue influence etc., are concerned, their legal effect cannot be put to an end without its cancellation. But a void document is not required to be cancelled necessarily. Its legal effect if any can be put to an end to by declaring it to be void and granted some other relief instead of canceling it. Once it is held to be void it can be ignored by any court or authority being of no legal effect or consequence. A document executed without free consent or one which is without consideration or the object of which is unlawful or executed by a person not competent to contract like a minor or in excess of authority would be a void document. In case it is in excess of authority it would be void to that extent only. There is presumption of due registration of a document and correctness of the facts mentioned in the same, but the said presumption is not conclusive and be dislodged.

"41..... Suit or action for cancellation of void document will generally lie in the Civil court and a party cannot be deprived of his right getting this relief permission under lad except when a declaration of right or status of a tenure holder is necessarily needed in which even relief for cancellation will be surplusage and redundant. A recorded tenure- holder having prima facie title in his favour can hardly be directed to approach the Revenue Court in respect of Seeking relief for cancellation of a void document which made him to approach the Court of law and in such case he can also claim ancillary relief even through the same can be granted by the Revenue Court."

26. In view of the aforesaid decision of the Full Bench of this Court as well as Hon'ble Apex Court; a person who question the sale deed executed or purported to be executed by him in respect of agricultural land can file a suit for its cancellation before the civil court if the sale is void or voidable on the ground of fraud coercion, undue influence, misrepresentation or impersonation.

27. This Court in the case of Sursati Devi (supra), has also taken a similar view to the effect that in view of provision contained in sub section (3) of Section 8 of the Act of 1956, any alienation made by the guardians of the minor rendered it voidable and the said alienation cannot be ignored by the revenue/consolidation courts. Paragraph 53 of the said judgment is quoted hereunder:

"53. The sale deed in question has not been dubbed as a void document. Opposite party No. 4 had asserted that since no permission of the District Judge was obtained as was required by S. 8 of Act No. 32 of 1956 while making transfer of the land in question by his father and as such he was not bound by the said transfer being void in law. Learned counsel for the opposite party No. 4, however, conceded that on the aforesaid ground the impugned sale deed cannot be said to be void but he asserted that it was voidable in view of the provisions contained under Sub-sec (3) of S. 8 of the H. M. & G. Act. The consolidation authorities, therefore, could not ignore the said document while treating it to be a void document as has been held by them. The impugned orders passed by the consolidation authorities thus suffer from a manifest error of law."

28. The Apex Court in the case of Vishwambhar (supra) has also taken same view, which applies in the present case on its four corners. Relevant portion of the said judgment i.e. paragraph nos. 9 and 10, are quoted hereunder:

"9. On a fair reading of the plaint, it is clear that the main fulcrum on which the case of the plaintiffs was balanced was that the alienations made by their mother-guardian Laxmibai were void and therefore, liable to be ignored since they were not supported by legal necessity and without permission of the competent court. On that basis the claim was made that the alienations did not affect the interest of the plaintiffs in the suit property. The prayers in the plaint were inter alia to set aside the sale deeds dated 14.11.1967 and 24.10.1974, recover possession of the properties sold from the respective purchasers, partition of the properties carving out separate possession of the share from the suit properties of the plaintiffs and deliver the same to them. As noted earlier, the trial court as well as the first appellate court accepted the case of the plaintiffs that the alienations in dispute were not supported by legal necessity. They also held that no prior permission of the court was taken for the said alienations. The question is in such circumstances are the alienations void or voidable? In Section 8 (2) of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956, it is laid down, inter alia, that the natural guardian shall not, without previous permission of the Court, transfer by sale any part of the immovable property of the minor. In sub-section (3) of the said section it is specifically provided that any disposal of immovable property by a natural guardian, in contravention of sub-section (2) is voidable at the instance of the minor or any person claiming under him. There is, therefore, little scope for doubt that the alienations made by Laxmibai which are under challenge in the suit were voidable at the instance of the plaintiffs and the plaintiffs were required to get the alienations set aside if they wanted to avoid the transfers and regain the properties from the purchasers. As noted earlier in the plaint as it stood before the amendment the prayer for setting aside the sale deeds was not there, such a prayer appears to have been introduced by amendment during hearing of the suit and the trial court considered the amended prayer and decided the suit on that basis. If in law the plaintiffs were required to have the sale deeds set aside before making any claim in respect of the properties sold then a suit without such a prayer was of no avail to the plaintiffs. In all probability realising this difficulty the plaintiffs filed the application for amendment of the plaint seeking to introduce the prayer for setting aside the sale deeds. Unfortunately, the realisation came too late. Concededly, plaintiff no.2 Digamber attained majority on 5th August, 1975 and Vishwambhar, plaintiff no.1 attained majority on 20th July, 1978. Though the suit was filed on 30th November, 1980 the prayer seeking setting aside of the sale deeds was made in December, 1985. Article 30 of the Limitation Act, prescribes a period of three years for setting aside a transfer of property made by the guardian of a ward, by the ward who has attained majority and the period is to be computed from the date when the ward attains majority. Since the limitation started running from the dates when the plaintiffs attained majority the prescribed period had elapsed by the date of presentation of the plaint so far as Digamber is concerned. Therefore, the trial Court rightly dismissed the suit filed by Digamber. The judgment of the trial court dismissing the suit was not challenged by him. Even assuming that as the suit filed by one of the plaintiffs was within time the entire suit could not be dismissed on the ground of limitation, in the absence of challenge against the dismissal of the suit filed by Digambar the first appellate court could not have interfered with that part of the decision of the trial court. Regarding the suit filed by Vishwambhar it was filed within the prescribed period of limitation but without the prayer for setting aside the sale deeds. Since the claim for recovery of possession of the properties alienated could not have been made without setting aside the sale deeds the suit as initially filed was not maintainable. By the date the defect was rectified (December, 1985) by introducing such a prayer by amendment of the plaint the prescribed period of limitation for seeking such a relief had elapsed. In the circumstances the amendment of the plaint could not come to the rescue of the plaintiff.

10. From the averments of the plaint it cannot be said that all the necessary averments for setting aside the sale deeds executed by Laxmibai were contained in the plaint and adding specific prayer for setting aside the sale deeds was a mere formality. As noted earlier, the basis of the suit as it stood before the amendment of the plaint was that the sale transactions made by Laxmibai as guardian of the minors were ab initio void and, therefore, liable to be ignored. By introducing the prayer for setting aside the sale deeds the basis of the suit was changed to one seeking setting aside the alienations of the property by the guardian. In such circumstance the suit for setting aside the transfers could be taken to have been filed on the date the amendment of the plaint was allowed and not earlier than that."

29. The proposition of law as per the aforesaid judgment are thus:

(i) the alienation made by the mother, the natural guardian of the minor are voidable at the instance of plaintiffs;

(ii) the plaintiffs are required to get the alienation set aside, if they wanted to avoid such transfer and regain the property from its purchasers;

(iii) the plaintiffs were also required to get the sale deed set aside before making any claim in respect of properties sold by them and the suit without setting aside the alienation was of no avail;

(iv) when there were more than one minor and some of them had attained the majority, the prescribed period has lapsed by the date of presentation of plaint for some of them and even for setting aside the suit, alienation would be barred by limitation as prescribed under Article 60 of the Limitation Act, which prescribes the limitation period of three years for filing the suit for setting aside the deed; and

(v) if the suit was not filed within the prescribed period of three years from the date of attaining the majority by the plaintiffs, the other relief for declaration of their rights or possession would not be maintainable.

30. In view of the above, it is clear in the present case that suit for mere declaration of rights in respect of agricultural land under Section 229B of U.P.Z.A & L.R. Act is not maintainable as the same is based on transfer made by the guardians of the plaintiffs without taking the permission from the competent court (District Judge) and the said document is rendered voidable in view of Section 8 (3) of the Act of 1956 for which the suit for cancellation of said instrument is required to be filed before the competent court.

31. The judgment cited on behalf of the petitioners are distinguishable in view of the above proposition of law as the same relates to the void instrument and which does not give any help to the petitioners.

32. I do not find any merit in the writ petition. The Board of Revenue vide impugned order has considered each and every aspect of the matter in detail while allowing the appeal filed by the respondent nos. 7 to 11.

33. Writ petition lacks merit and is, accordingly, dismissed.

34. No order as to costs.

A. Registration of Births and Death Act, 1969 - Section 17 - read with Indian Evidence Act,1872 - Section 76 - Generally Certified copies of public documents carries presumption of correctness of its entries - but if there is tampering and overwriting there can be no presumption of genuineness and correctness of entries of "Birth Register".

Since the very basis of entry of Birth Register about death of Nawal Kishor on 27.09.1984 is not proved in view of tampering in 'Death Certificate' the presumption of correctness of certified copy of 'Birth Register' duly issued under section 17 (2) of Birth Act may not be drawn under Section 76 of Evidence Act. (Para 17)

B. Practice and Procedure - Plaintiff's application - for obtaining report of fingerprint and handwriting expert – for comparison of thumb impressions of Nawal Kishor over the sale deed in favour of defendant, with his thumb impression over other exemplar sale deed filed by plaintiff - Rejected - Held - No illegality as No relief for cancellation of sale deed was sought and despite specific plea about execution of sale deed on 19.10.84 by Nawal Kishor in favour of defendant in written statement, there are no pleadings by plaintiff by amendment of plaint or by filing replication, that sale deed has been obtained by impersonation after death of Nawal Kishor. (Para 19)

Second Appeal Dismissed (E-5)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Harsh Kumar, J.)

1. The instant second appeal has been filed against impugned judgment and decree dated 13.2.1991 passed by Additional District Judge, Allahabad in Civil Appeal No.267 of 1987, arisen out of Civil Suit No.770 of 1986 "Nageshwar Prasad and another Vs. Santosh Kumar".

2. The appeal was admitted vide order dated 10.4.2007 on following two substantial questions of law:-

"1.Whether the Courts below having admitted three documents namely, Papaer No.10/Ga, 15/Ga and 16/Ga by written orders of Sri Chandra Prakash, XIth Additional District Judge, Allahabad dated 18.04.1999 and the said documents were 'Janm Evam Mrityu Register' regarding family of Nawal Kishor deceased the date of death is shown as 27.09.1984, Mst. Sonpatti, Widow of deceased Nawal Kishor. The second is the 'Kutumb Register' of Nawal Kishor which shows Sonpatti is his widow, Gulab Kali W/o Nageshwar Prasad (Appellant), Phool Kali W/o Prem Shanker, Smt. Anar Kali W/o Santosh who admittedly are three daughters of Nawal Kishor. The third documents is the family register of Trivedi Prasad who appeared as witness for Defendant. The name of witness was given by him was Ram Baran in fact he was not Ram Baran but in fact he was Trivedi Prasad R/o Village-Sansarpur, Tehsil-Koraon, District-Allahabad. The family register of Ram Baran witness the question and answering regarding him obtained by the Appellant and reply given by the department from which it is admitted that witness who said that his name is Ram Baran S/o Jagat Dhari born on 25.02.1954 and is illiterate. In fact his name is Trivedi Prasad mentioned above. It has been filed to say that Ram Baran who was a witness to the sale deed of the Defendant, in fact never signed before the Registrar as witness and that said Ram Baran is not the son of Jagat Dhari instead he dubbed the Court. In fact his name is Trivedi Prasad S/o Jagat Dhari. The above said documents have not been considered in the judgment of the Lower Appellate Court, and whether the Lower Appellate Court were justified in ignoring the above said material documentary evidence?

2. Whether the Courts below were justified in accepting the sale deed which was not proved according to law in as much as none of the marginal witnesses have proved the said sale deed"

3. During hearing, the parties counsel submitted that the substantial questions of law framed earlier on 10.04.2007, at the time of admission of appeal are very lengthy and also ambiguous to some extent. It was found appropriate to reframe substantial questions of law for just and appropriate disposal of appeal and upon submissions made by parties counsel following three substantial questions of law were framed, replacing the earlier framed two substantial questions of law:-

"1.Whether the courts below acted wrongly and illegality in disbelieving death certificate of Nawal Kishore as well as entries in the Birth and Death Register and Family Register with regard to his death, from which it is fully proved that Nawal Kishore had died on 27.09.1984.

2. Whether the lower appellate court acted wrongly in not relying on the additional evidence filed under Order XLI Rule 27 of CPC per list 11/C as paper No.12C, 13C and 14C viz., (i) copy of Family Register, (ii) question-answer regarding Ram Baran and (iii) Life Insurance Policy of plaintiff appellant no. 2.

3. Whether the courts below acted wrongly and illegally in relying on the sale deed dated 19.10.1984 in favour of defendent-respondent, though it was not proved in accordance with law."

4. The brief facts relating to the case are that plaintiffs-appellants Nageshwar and Gulabkali (hereinafter referred as plaintiffs) filed Civil Suit No.770 of 1986 against defendant-respondent Santosh Kumar (hereinafter referred as defendant) for obtaining a decree of permanent injunction restraining the defendant from interfering in peaceful possession of plaintiffs over land in suit Plot No.287, area, 11 Bigha, 17 Biswa and 13 Dhur situated in Mauja Bhaluha Tappa Manda, Pargana-Kheragarha, District-Allahabad, with the allegations that Nawal Kishor son of Ram Sunder the original tenure holder of land in suit, died on 27.9.1984 leaving behind him his widow Smt. Sonapatti as his legal heir who succeeded him and became owner/bhumidhar in possession of land in suit and executed two registered sale deeds of land in suit in favour of plaintiffs on 5.6.1985, hence plaintiffs are owners/bhumidhars in possession of the property in suit. It was also contended that on 4.8.1986, without any right, title or interest defendant attempted to take forcible possession over the property in suit, hence, arose cause of action for filing suit for injunction.

5. The sole defendant filed written statement denying all the allegations of plaint and contended that Nawal Kishor was Bhumidhar in possession of the land in suit till 19.10.1984, when he executed a registered sale deed of land in suit in favour of defendant for a valuable consideration of Rs.40,000/- and handed over actual physical possession over the land to defendant; that Nawal Kishor had three daughters out of whom Ist the eldest one Gulabkali, the plaintiff no.2 was married to plaintiff no.1 Nageshwar Prasad, IInd one Phoolkali was married to Prem Shankar and IIIrd the youngest one Anarkali was married to defendant; that Nawal Kishor died much after execution of the registered sale deed dated 19.10.1984 in favour of defendant and plaintiff no.1 has dishonestly got executed two sale deeds from his mother-in-law Smt. Sonpatti on 5.6.1985, in favour of himself and his wife, which are without consideration, illegal, ineffective and without authority as Smt. Sonpatti never succeeded land in suit and never became bhumidhar in possession.

6. On parties' pleadings, learned trial Court framed as many as five issues viz. "(1) whether suit is under valued and Court fee paid is insufficient, (2) whether suit is barred by provisions of Section 331 of U.P. Z.A. & L.R. Act, (3) whether plaintiffs are owners in possession of the disputed property, (4) whether Nawal Kishor died on 27.9.1984 as alleged in para 2 of plaint, and (5) to what reliefs, if any, are the plaintiffs entitled"

7. After taking evidence of parties, trial Court decided issue no.1&2 in negative in favour of plaintiffs and holding that plaintiffs have failed to prove actual date of death of Nawal Kishor or his death having taken as copy of Birth Register having not been countersigned as per provisions of Section 109-A of Panchayat Raj Act, is inadmissible in evidence and place on 27.9.1984, decided issue no.4 in negative against the plaintiffs. On issue no.3, trial Court came to the conclusion that plaintiffs have failed to prove their right, title and possession over land in suit and deciding issue no.3 in negative against the plaintiffs, dismissed plaintiffs' suit for injunction.

8. Feeling aggrieved, plaintiffs preferred Civil Appeal No.267 of 1987 before District Judge, Allahabad which was dismissed by XIth Additional District Judge, Allahabad by impugned judgment and decree dated 13.2.1991, hence, the plaintiffs have approached this Court by way of instant second appeal which has been admitted on 10.4.2007 on two substantial question of law mentioned above, which were replaced with three substantial questions of law reframed during hearing of appeal on 5.8.2019.

9. Heard Shri Rahul Mishra, Advocate for appellants and Shri Dharam Pal Singh, Senior Counsel assisted by Dr. Vinod Kumar Rai for respondent at length on substantial questions of law framed and reframed and perused the record as well as lower court record summoned in appeal.

10. Learned counsel for plaintiff/appellant submitted that trial Court as well as lower appellate Court have acted wrongly and illegally in not relying on public documents viz. the copy of "Birth and Death Register" (hereinafter referred as "Birth Register") as well as copy of Family Register duly corroborated by death certificate issued by medical officer at the time of death of Nawal Kishor; that duly attested true copies of "Birth Register" and "Family Register" of Nawal Kishor on record show that Nawal Kishor died on 27.9.1984 and the entry about his death was made in "Birth Register" on 5.10.1984; that copy of "Birth Register" issued under provisions of Section 17 of Registration of Births and Death Act, 1969, hereinafter referred as "Birth Act", was a public document which carries presumption of correctness of its entries under provisions of Section 76 of Indian Evidence Act; that all the witnesses of plaintiff consistently stated on oath that Nawal Kishor died on 27.9.1984; that there is no iota of evidence to the contrary, to disbelieve the uncontroverted on oath statements of plaintiffs' witnesses and for believing that Nawal Kishor died after 19.10.1984; that the defendant who was none other than son-in-law of Nawal Kishor could not dare to give any other specific date of death of Nawal Kishor; that the learned courts below acted wrongly and illegally in disbelieving the entry of "Birth Register" regarding death of Nawal Kishor on 27.9.1984 merely on the basis of copy of application paper no.49(c) dated 18.3.1987 (filed by defendant) allegedly given by village Pradhan Tribhuvan Singh at P.S. Koraon with averments that his signatures were obtained by Ram Kishor, Lekhpal, Ram Ji Tiwari, Secretary, Nyay Panchayat and Prem Shankar Tiwari on 20.2.1987 on certain blank papers (at the time of obtaining signatures on official papers in ordinary course of business) and suspecting that above blank papers may be used to show death of Nawal Kishor as on 27.9.1984 instead of 27.10.1984; that defendant could not dare to produce Tribhuwan Singh or any other person to witness box to prove paper no.49(c) and the same is inadmissible in evidence; that courts below acted wrongly in relying on paper no.49(c) and in discarding the public documents filed by plaintiffs-appellant; that the contention of defendant about execution of sale deed by Nawal Kishor on 19.10.1984 in favour of defendant is absolutely false and incorrect as Nawal Kishor was not at all alive on 19.10.1984 and sale deed appears to have been obtained by defendant by impersonating some other person in place of Nawal Kishor (deceased); that undisputedly Gulabkali, the eldest daughter of Nawal Kishor, is wife of plaintiff-appellant no.1 and the courts below acted wrongly and illegally in disbelieving the plaintiffs' case on mere slip of tongue by PW-3 Smt. Sonpatti wherein in place of Gulabkali she stated that Phoolkali is married to plaintiff Nageshwar; that in para 17 of written statement denying the execution of impugned sale deeds dated 6.8.1985 by Smt. Sonpatti in favour of plaintiff-appellant Nageshwar and his wife, the defendant has specifically stated that plaintiff no.2 Smt. Gulabkali is wife of plaintiff no.1 Nageshwar; that it is fully proved from the copies of family register on record that Nawal Kishor (deceased) left behind him his widow Smt. Sonpatti and three daughters Gulabkali (eldest), Phoolkali (middle) and Anarkali (youngest) who were married respectively to Nageshwar Prasad (plaintiff no.1) Prem Shankar (not party to suit) and Santosh Kumar (defendant); that it was fully proved from the evidence on record that plaintiffs were bhumidhars in possession over the property in suit by virtue of registered sale deeds dated 5.6.1985 executed by Smt. Sonpatti in their favour, after death of Nawal Kishor, her husband; that impugned judgments and decrees passed by two courts below are liable to be set aside and by allowing present appeal, suit of plaintiffs for a decree of permanent injunction is liable to be decreed with costs throughout.

11. Per contra, learned counsel for defendant supported the concurrent findings of fact recorded in impugned judgments and decrees passed by two courts below and contended that learned courts below have rightly disbelieved the contention of plaintiffs regarding death of Nawal Kishor on 27.9.1984; that as per copy of "Birth Register" paper no.18 C on record issued on 11.7.1985, the entry about death of Nawal Kishor was made on 5.10.1984 regarding his death on 27.9.1984; that in villages where people do not care for getting the death or birth registered, such a prompt registration of death of Nawal Kishor, which is in contradiction with oral evidence, creates great suspicion on the correctness and genuineness of above entry; that as per plaint case, on death of Nawal Kishor, the medical officer issued a death certificate paper no.17-A on lower court record, wherein there is deliberate overwriting and tampering over date 27.9.84 wherever it has been mentioned, at all the three places, in the digits of month and year and it is crystal clear that date of death of Nawal Kishor 27.01.85, has been tampered by overwriting and converting 01 to 9 and 85 to 84, so that it may appear and may be read as 27.9.84 i.e. prior in time to the date of execution of impugned sale deed dated 19.10.84; that entry of date of death in "Birth Register" is alleged to have been made on written request/application, but neither Sonpatti nor any other person could dare to state that he/she had sent written information of death of Nawal Kishor to the authorities concerned, rather Sonpatti in her statement on oath before Court has stated that she did not make any written application in this regard, as has been observed by Courts below; that it is proved from the evidence on record, that after obtaining signatures of Tribhuwan Singh the then village Pradhan over blank papers by Secretary, Nyay Panchayat, Ram Ji Tiwari, Lekhpal, Ram Kishor and Prem Shankar Tiwari, in collusion with plaintiffs, by misusing that paper, false entry has been got made in "Birth Register" in back date by mentioning date of death of Nawal Kishor as 27.9.1984; that amongst above persons, Prem Shankar Tiwari was in collusion with plaintiffs is being none other than husband of Phoolkali, sister of plaintiff no.2; that there is presumption of genuineness and correctness about execution of registered sale deed dated 19.10.1984 by Nawal Kishor in favour of defendant-respondent unless proved otherwise; that copy of "Family Register" showing death of Nawal Kishor on 27.9.1984 as well copy of "Birth Register" are copies of forged and fictitious records/entries and are not admissible in evidence; that since there is tampering and overwriting in dates mentioned in 'Death Certificate' of deceased, paper no.17A filed by plaintiffs there can be no presumption of genuineness and correctness of entries of "Birth Register"; that entry of the name of plaintiff no.1 Nageshwar in the "Family Register" of Nawal Kishor (deceased) creates doubt over its genuineness as name of Nageshwar, the son-in-law (DAMAD) of Nawal Kishor (deceased) may not find place in the family register of his father-in-law Nawal Kishor; that the concurrent findings of fact recorded by two courts below may not be interfered with in this second appeal, in absence of any illegality and perversity; that no substantial question of law is involved or arises in this second appeal and the substantial questions of law framed and reframed are liable to be decided against plaintiffs-appellants; that the appeal has been filed with absolutely false and incorrect allegations and is liable to be dismissed with costs throughout.

12. Upon hearing parties counsel and perusal of record as well as lower court record summoned in appeal, I find that as per plaintiff, erstwhile owner and bhumidhar of land in suit Sri Nawal Kishor died on 27.09.1984 and after his death the land in suit succeeded by his widow and was purchased from her by plaintiffs through two registered sale-deeds dated 05.06.1985. On the other hand, defendant contends that Nawal Kishor did not die on 27.09.1984 rather he executed a registered sale deed of land in suit on 19.10.84 in favour of defendant for a valuable consideration of Rs. 40,000/- and died thereafter, upon which, in mutation proceedings his widow Sonpatti filed reply admitting execution of sale deed dated 19.10.1984 while the eldest daughter and son-in-law of Nawal Kishor, in order to usurp the land in suit obtained two sale-deeds from Smt. Sonpatti (widow of Nawal Kishor) and got recorded a false and forged entry of death of Nawal Kishor on 27.09.1984 in 'Birth Register' in order to avoid registered sale deed dated 19.10.84 in favour of defendant and since Nawal Kishor had sold his land in suit in his lifetime, so the plaintiffs did not get any right, title or interest in the land in suit and the sale deeds obtained from Smt. Sonpatti are wrong, illegal, without consideration, without authority and null and viod ab-initio.

13. The plaintiffs have filed original "Death Certificate" of Nawal Kishor paper no.17-A issued by Dr. A.K. Mishra, MBBS, I/c Medical Officer of Primary Health Centre Korao, District Allahabad, certifying death of Nand Kishore due to "Acute respiratory failure due to pulmonary oedema" at Mauja Bhaluha Tehsil Meza. The copy of Birth Register 18c on trial Court shows that entry of death of Nawal Kishor on 27.9.1984 has been made on 05.10.1984 on the basis of written report, but there is no evidence on record to show that any written information was ever given to authorities concerned regarding death of Nawal Kishor on 27.9.84 by his widow Sonpatti or any other family member on 5.10.1984 or at any other date. In any case, the basis of above entry in "Birth Register" or "Family Register" is the death certificate paper no. 17A issued by Dr. A.K. Mishra, genuineness of which is of much importance.

14. During arguments the learned counsel for the respondent taken the Court to records of trial court and paper no. 17A 'death certificate' filed by plaintiffs. In above 'death certificate' date 27.9.1984 has appeared at 3 places; (i) on the left lower side of certificate (ii) below signatures of Medical Officer and (iii) in the body of certificate. It is noteworthy that at all the three places date '27' is clear and untampered (without any tampering or overwriting thereon) but in the digits of month '9' as well as second digit of year '84', there is repeated overwriting and deliberate tampering at all the three places, which indicates that deliberate tampering has been committed in above 'Death Certificate' in order to change the actual date of death of Nawal Kishor. From bare perusal of 'Death Certificate paper' No. 17A, it is crystal clear that the person who has committed tampering, has tried his best that original digits may not be visible at all. I find force in the submissions made by learned counsel for the respondent, that above 'Death Certificate' appears to have been issued on 27.01.1985, but by way of tampering two digits of month "01" have been converted to "9"and similarly by tampering in digit 5 in the year "85" it has been converted to "84" so that it may be read as "8"4 and date may be read as 27.9.84 instead of 27.01.1985. In the date mentioned below signatures of Medical Officer, year 85 is better visible in comparison to other two places, because stroke of digit "5" is visible at this place despite tempering. Since the tampering in date of death in "Death Certificate 17A" is visible by bare eyes, the courts below rightly disbelieved plaintiff's case and considering the contradictory evidence of plaintiff rightly held that plaintiffs failed to prove that Nawal Kishor died on 27.9.84.

15. The 'Death Certificate 17-A' of Nawal Kishor certifying his death on 27.9.84 may not be believed as (i) the Medical Officer was not authorized to issue 'Death Certificate', (ii) the Medical Officer who issued certificate was not produced to prove it, (iii) there is tampering in date 27.9.84 at all the 3 places, (iv) there is no evidence on record to show that Nawal Kishor deceased was under treatment of Dr. A.K. Misra who issued 17-A while plaintiff Nageshwar in his on oath statement as PW1 as stated 'that 15-20 days before death Dr. Achyutanand Pandey attended Nawal Kishor and on death day also he was attended by Dr. Pandey'. In view of above facts on record, whatever may be the date of death of Nawal Kishor, but in view of tampering in date of death mentioned in 'Death Certificate 17-A', there is sufficient reason to disbelieved his death on 27.9.1984.

16. It is also pertinent to mention that in copy of family register of Nawal Kishor 43C on trial Court record or 12C filed in first appeal, it has also been mentioned that he died on 27.09.1984. The above entry has also no evidentiary value as (i) the entry about death of Nawal Kishor in the family register is not primary entry and (ii) in copy of family register paper no. 43-C on lower court record or 12C filed during first appeal, name of Nageshwar also finds place as member of the family though admittedly he is son-in-law (DAMAD) of Nawal Kishor, who may not be considered to be member of family of his father-in-law.

17. In view of the above, since the very basis of entry of Birth Register about death of Nawal Kishor on 27.09.1984 is not proved in view of tampering in 'Death Certificate' the presumption of correctness of certified copy of 'Birth Register' duly issued under section 17 (2) of Birth Act may not be drawn under Section 76 of Evidence Act while trial Court has held that it has not been issued in accordance with provision of Section 109 A of Panchayat Raj Act.

18. The Court is of considered view that there is no incorrectness or perversity in concurrent findings recorded by courts below, in holding that plaintiffs failed to prove death of Nawal Kishor on 27.09.84, before execution of sale deed dated 19.10.84 in favour of defendant. There is no cogent, reliable or independent evidence on record so as to believe that Nawal Kishor died on 27.09.1984 or died before 19.10.84. The argument of plaintiffs that the defendant who is DAMAD of deceased did not give any specific date of death of Nawal Kishor so date of death given by plaintiff must be accepted, has no force rather Court finds force in arguments of learned counsel for defendant that Nawal Kishor appears to have died at some time in the year 85 or so. Learned trial court rightly disbelieved the contention of plaintiffs about death of Nawal Kishor on 27.09.1984 for not producing Medical Officer in evidence and upon finding the false and forged entries in Birth register and Family register to be doubtful.

19. I do not find any force in the arguments advanced by learned counsel for the appellant that lower appellate court acted wrongly in not allowing appellant's application for obtaining report of fingerprint and handwriting expert for comparison of thumb impressions of Nawal Kishor over the sale deed dated 19.10.1984 in favour of defendant, with his thumb impression over other exemplar sale deed filed by plaintiff in view of the fact that no relief for cancellation of sale deed was sought and despite specific plea about execution of sale deed on 19.10.84 by Nawal Kishor in favour of defendant in written statement, there are no pleadings by plaintiff by amendment of plaint or by filing replication, that sale deed has been obtained by impersonation after death of Nawal Kishor.

20. The two sale deeds were obtained by plaintiffs from Sonpatti on 05.06.85 each of which is alleged to be executed for a sale consideration of Rs. 40,000/- paid by each plaintiff, however, in contradiction to above plaintiff no.1 as P.W.1 has stated on oath that the sale consideration of Rs. 48,000/- was paid by each plaintiff which indicates that sale deeds were obtained without payment of any consideration. Since Nawal Kishor had sold land in suit to defendant during his lifetime, so on his death the land in suit could not have devolved upon his widow and since she had no right title or possession over land in suit, the sale deeds dated 05.06.1985 obtained by plaintiffs are without authority wrong, illegal and null and void ab-initio and plaintiffs did not acquire any right, title or possession over the property in suit and had no locus standi to file suit and obtain a decree for injunction.

21. Learned counsel for appellants also addressed the Court on substantial questions of law initially framed vide order dated 10.4.2007 apart from questions framed during arguments on 5.8.2019. He pointed out that paper nos.10-Ga, 15-Ga and 16-Ga have been wrongly mentioned in substantial questions of law no.1 framed on 10.4.2007 and in fact above documents are Janm and Mrityu Register and Kutumb Register respectively paper no.18-C and 43-C and another family register paper no.13-C. Referring the family register 13-C of Mantoria as well as Triveni Prasad and in view of question-answer filed during first appeal, he contended that D.W.-2 Ram Baran who was examined as marginal witness of sale deed dated 19.10.1984 by Naval Kishore in favour of defendant Santosh Kumar, was in fact Triveni Prasad and so the sale deed in favour of defendant was not duly proved by its marginal witness.

22. The above contention has no force and above paper "Question-Answer" has no evidenciary value as it was never suggested by plaintiffs to D.W.-2 Ram Baran, in his lengthy cross examination, that he is Triveni Prasad and not Ram Baran or is giving false evidence by impersonating himself as Ram Baran.

23. The Courts below rightly held that plaintiffs failed to prove that Naval Kishore died on 27.9.1984 prior to execution of sale deed dated 19.10.1984 of land in suit in favour of defendant, or that upon death of Naval Kishore the land in suit devolved on his widow Smt. Sonpatti and she had any right, title or authority to execute valid sale deeds in favour of plaintiff and the above sale deeds were for valuable consideration. The findings of courts below are well considered and based on correct and proper appreciation of evidence on record and cogent reasonings and in recording concurrent findings. The Court is of considered view that the Courts below have not committed any error, mistake or perversity in disbelieving the contention of plaintiffs-appellants regarding death of Nawal Kishor on 27.09.1984 and did not acted wrongly or illegally in disbelieving the Death Certificate as well as entries of 'Birth Register' as well as 'Family Register'. The lower appellate Court did not ignore any material documentary evidence on record of trial Court or filed in appeal and committed no mistake in relying the sale deed 19.10.1984 in favour of defendant which was fully proved in accordance with law.

24. The Court is of the considered view that there is no illegality, irregularity, incorrectness or perversity in the concurrent findings recorded by both the courts below. The substantial questions of law framed and reframed are decided in negative against plaintiffs. No other substantial question of law arises or was raised.

25. The appeal is devoid of merits and is liable to be dismissed.

26. The appeal is dismissed with costs throughout. The impugned judgment and decree are affirmed.

27. Interim orders, if any, stand vacated.

28. Let the lower court record be transmitted back to the court below along with a copy of this judgment, for necessary action, after preparation of decree in the appeal.

APPELLATE JURISDICTION
CIVIL SIDE

BEFORE

THE HON'BLE J.J. MUNIR, J.

Second Appeal No. 1392 of 1998

Ram Nihore & Ors. ...Appellants
Versus
Aiyab Lal ...Respondent

Counsel for the Appellants:
Sri N.D. Kesari, Sri K.M. Garg, Sri P.K. Kesari

Counsel for the Respondent:
Sri A.N. Mishra, Sri Rohit Verma

A. General Clauses Act - Section 27 - Meaning of expression 'ordinary course of post' – At the end of 30 days, with a few days of variation on either side, presumption of service by post would arise. (Para 38)

B. Contract Act - Section 55 - Whether time essence of contract or not - True intention of parties to be gathered from the terms of the contract / covenant - In contracts relating to immovable property - mere fixation of time within which contract must be performed would not make time the essence of contract - however if the language employed is couched in specific terms - that completion of transaction should be done within specified term - intention to make time the essence may be inferred.

C. Specific Relief Act, 1963 - Section 20 – Discretion as to decreeing specific performance - Plaintiff's conduct / inaction for a long period of time on the part of the plaintiff in bringing the suit and substantial rise in prices of properties - a relevant factor to refuse specific performance. (Para 60)

Held: -No plausible explanation as to why the suit that should have been filed shortly after 02.02.1981, came to be filed as late as on 10.08.1983, with a delay of two years and six months. During this period of time, the defendant executed a sale deed conveying the suit property in favour of the purchasers on 03.08.1983. It is indeed reflective of conduct certainly not bona fide on the plaintiff's part that he brought this suit within seven days of the aforesaid sale deed being executed by the defendant in favour of the purchasers - By his utter inaction to bring a suit during all the long period of time of two years and six months and doing that when rights in favour of the purchasers were created under a sale deed executed for valuable consideration by the defendant, most certainly makes equity work against the plaintiff and in favour of the defendant. (62 & 65)

Decree of specific performance set aside and substituted by a decree for refund of the earnest money – defendant shall refund to the plaintiff the earnest money of Rs. 1800/- together with interest @ 14% per annum, past and pendentelite; future interest would be payable @ 6% per annum in accordance with the provisions of Section 34 C.P.C.

1. This second appeal by the defendant is directed against a judgment and decree of Shri Subodh Kumar, the then XIIth Additional District Judge, Allahabad, dated 31.08.1998 passed in Civil Appeal no.139 of 1985, allowing the said appeal by the plaintiff and reversing an original decree of Shri B.B. Singh, the then Munsif (East), Allahabad, passed in Original Suit no.572 of 1983, dismissing the plaintiff-respondent's suit for specific performance of contract and alternate relief for refund of earnest money with interest.

2. The facts giving rise to this appeal are these: that the plaintiff-respondent, Ajayab Lal, who shall hereinafter be referred to as the plaintiff, instituted Original Suit no.572 of 1983 with averments to the effect that Ram Nihor, defendant-appellant no.1, since deceased, and now represented before this Court by his heirs and legal representatives, appellants nos.1/1 to 1/5, was the owner of the property as detailed at the foot of the plaint. The original defendant-appellant, Ram Nihor will hereinafter be referred to as the defendant, and for the sake of convenience, would be construed to bear reference to his five heirs and legal representatives, now on record in his stead. It was averred by the plaintiff that the defendant executed a registered agreement to sell, dated 02.07.1980 in favour of the defendant agreeing to convey property as detailed at the foot of the plaint (for short the suit property) for a total sale consideration of Rs.8060/-. It was further pleaded that at the time of execution of the suit agreement, the defendant accepted by way of earnest, a sum of Rs.1800/-, leaving a residue of Rs.6260/- that the plaintiff covenanted to pay the defendant at the time of execution of the sale deed. It was further specifically pleaded that the suit agreement carried a term that the sale deed would be executed upto 02.02.1981.

3. It was averred further that in accordance with the terms of the suit agreement, the plaintiff always remained ready and willing to get a sale deed executed, and that he requested the defendant a number of times, verbally, to execute a conveyance as contracted. It is then pleaded that on 24.01.1982, he caused a notice to be sent to the plaintiff to come forward and execute a sale deed in terms of the suit agreement, accepting the balance of sale consideration, and for the purpose to appear in the office of the Sub-Registrar, Karchhana on 02.02.1981. It is averred that the defendant on the scheduled date did not appear to execute the agreed conveyance. It is pleaded that thereafter the plaintiff sent further notices, dated 30.03.1981 and 19.04.1982, calling upon the defendant to discharge his obligations in terms of the suit agreement, both of which were duly served upon the defendant. It is averred that despite service of these notices, the defendant did not come forward to fulfill his obligations. It is then pleaded that defendant nos.2 to 6 to this appeal, who shall hereinafter be referred to as the purchasers, despite knowledge of the suit agreement, got a registered sale deed dated 03.08.1983, executed in their favour by the defendant.

4. The plaintiff has described the sale deed as one executed by conspiracy between the defendant and the purchasers, which has no binding effect on the rights of the plaintiff. It was on the basis of these facts that the plaintiff instituted the present suit on 10.08.1983, seeking to enforce the suit agreement against the defendant and the purchasers, by way of relief of specific performance; in defeasance of the plaintiff not being found entitled to specific performance, alternate relief by way of refund of the earnest money of Rs.1800/- together with interest at the rate of 2% per mensem was sought, payable for the period past, pendente lite and future. The defendant filed his written statement dated 20.12.1982, whereas purchasers filed a written statement together, also dated 20.12.1982, independent of the defendant.

5. The stand taken by the defendant in his written statement was to the effect that he acknowledged execution of the suit agreement dated 02.07.1980 for an agreed sale consideration of Rs.8060/-. He, however, pleaded that the plaintiff did not have with him the balance sale consideration to get a sale deed executed as covenanted. The defendant further averred that he was in dire need of funds, and on that account, he had executed the suit agreement in favour of the plaintiff. It was also averred that considering his dire need for money, a specified date i.e. 02.02.1981 was covenanted, by which the plaintiff was obliged to get the sale deed executed. The defendant has also said that upon the plaintiff failing to get a sale deed executed as contracted, he sold the suit property by executing a sale deed in favour of the purchasers on 03.08.1982, forfeiting the earnest paid by the plaintiff. The defendant has also averred that on 02.02.1982, he remained present in the office of the Sub-Registrar, Karchhana from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in order to execute a sale deed in terms of the suit agreement, but the plaintiff did not come forward. He has also averred in his written statement that he never received any notice from the plaintiff.

6. The purchasers in their separate written statement have averred that they are purchasers of the suit property. It is pleaded that in accordance with the suit agreement dated 02.07.1980, the plaintiff had a right to get the sale deed executed by 02.02.1981, and that on account of his failure to do so by 02.02.1981, the suit agreement got discharged, putting an end to obligations inter se the plaintiff and the defendant on the suit agreement. The other pleadings put forward by the purchasers are to like effect as the defendant.

7. The Trial Court, on the basis of the pleadings of parties, struck the following issues (translated into English from Hindi vernacular):

(1) Whether defendants nos.2 to 6 are bhumidhars in possession of the property in dispute?

(2) Whether notices sent by the plaintiff were duly served upon the defendant? If so, its effect?

(3) Whether the agreement to sell dated 02.07.1980 after 02.02.1981 is enforceable in law?

(4) Whether defendant no.1 executed an agreement to sell dated 02.07.1980 in favour of the plaintiff?

(5) Whether the plaintiff is entitled to any other relief?

(6) Whether the instant suit is barred by time?

(7) Whether the agreement to sell dated 02.07.1980 can be specifically enforced on the basis of grounds pleaded in the plaint?

8. The Trial Court held on issue no.1 that the factum of execution of the sale deed dated 03.08.1983 is acknowledged to the purchasers, and so is their possession on the basis of the sale deed aforesaid. As such, the Trial Court held that the issue was not required to be adjudicated. Regarding issue no.4, it was opined by the Trial Court that the execution of the suit agreement was admitted to the parties, and the issue between the parties was limited to the extent, whether the suit agreement remained enforceable in law, after 02.02.1981. And, if it was, whether it can be specifically enforced. It was, therefore, held by the Trial Court on the said issue that the same also did not call for a decision. The Trial Court proceeded to determine issues nos.2, 3 & 7, taking them up together and decided all of these in favour of the defendant and the purchasers. He held in conclusion that the suit agreement was not capable of being specifically enforced or any relief could be granted on its basis to the defendant as prayed. Issue no.6 that relates to limitation and is a defendant's issue was decided in favour of the plaintiff, holding the suit within time. Upon the findings substantially recorded on issues nos.2, 3 & 7, the Trial Court dismissed the suit with costs.

9. That plaintiff appealed to the learned District Judge vide Civil Appeal no.139 of 1985, under Section 96 of the Code of Civil Procedure (for short, the Code). The appeal came up for determination before the learned XIIth Additional District Judge, Allahabad, who by means of his impugned decree, reversed the Trial Court and decreed the plaintiff's suit for specific performance, ordering the defendant and the purchasers together to execute the sale deed in terms of the suit agreement, in favour of the plaintiff after accepting the balance sale consideration, within a period of one month. It was further decreed that in case the defendants do not execute a sale deed, as ordered, despite the plaintiff paying the balance sale consideration within a month, the plaintiff would be entitled to get the sale deed executed through process of Court.

10. Aggrieved, the defendant and the purchasers have joined in the present appeal preferred under Section 100 of the Code. This Appeal was admitted to hearing on 24.09.1998, on the following substantial questions of law:

"(1) Whether the time was the essence of the agreement for sale in question and non-compliance of the terms of the suit agreement by the plaintiff-respondent would result in revocation of the agreement for sale by the appellant No.1?

(2) Whether the agreement for sale in question was voidable at the option of the appellant no.1 in view of Section 55 of the Indian Contract Act?

(3) Whether the judicial discretion exercised by the learned trial Court in refusing to decree the suit for specific performance could be interfered with by the lower appellate Court ignoring the provisions of Section 10, 16 and 20 of the Specific Relief Act?"

11. This Appeal was heard across a number of days. It was heard on 20.02.2019, 25.02.2019, 28.02.2019, 07.03.2019, 08.03.2019, 11.03.2019 and 27.03.2019 when judgment was reserved. On 11.03.2019, during the course of hearing, a further substantial question of law was framed, that reads:

"Whether a suit for Specific Performance instituted by a vendee after the vendor has executed a sale deed in favour of a third party can be decreed without there being a relief seeking cancellation of the sale deed executed in favour of the third party?"

12. Sri K.M. Garg, learned Advocate has been heard on behalf of the Defendant and the purchasers (the appellants) and Sri C.S. Agnihotri, learned Advocate on behalf of the plaintiff (respondent).

13. The first submission advanced on behalf of the defendant to assail the judgment of the lower Appellate Court is that the finding of the learned Judge in Appeal to the effect that time was not essence of the contract is not the case of either party, which according to the learned counsel for the defendant, could never have been arrived at on the pleadings and the evidence of parties.

14. Learned counsel for the defendant has, in this connection, invited the attention of the Court to the dock evidence of PW-1, where on 08.01.1985, he has testified as under:

"०२.०७.१९८० को मैंने राम निहोर को १८००/- रुपया देकर इकरार नामा लिखाया था और इस इकरार नामा में यह लिखा गया था कि बाकी ६२६०/- रुपया देकर के विवादित भूमि का बैनामा करा लेंगे। यदि २-२-८१ बैनामा की रजिस्ट्री नहीं करा लूगा या २-८-८० का माहदया बय इकरारनामा रद्द समझा जावे।"

15. In order to further buttress his contention that time was of the essence, learned counsel for the defendant has drawn the attention of the Court to the following recital in the suit agreement:

"मुझको मुबलिग 1800/- एक हजार आठ सौ रुपया आज नकद रुबरु सब रजिस्ट्रार साहब करछना के श्री अजायबलाल महाजन मजकूर से बतौर जर बयाना के मिल गया बाकी मुबलिग 6260/- छ: हजार दो सौ रुपया बरवक्त बैनामा रुबरु सब रजिस्टार साहब करछना के लूँगा यह तय पाया है लेहाजा बखुशी व रजामन्दी अपनी व बिला दबाव किसी दूसरे के मैं एकरार करता हूँ कि दो फरवरी सन 1981 ई० तक मे जब भी मजकूर के पास पूरा रुपया हो जायेगा और महाजन इसकी सूचना मुझे लिखित या मौखिक जैसे ही देगे मैं उनकी सुविधानुसार निम्नलिखित जायदाद का बैनामा उनके हक मे कर दूँगा और अगर महाजन अन्दर मियाद मुकर्ररा के बैनामा नहीं करवा लेते तो उनका जर बयाना रद्द समझा जायेगा और मै जायदाद निम्नलिखित को दूसरे के हाथ बेचने का अधिकारी हूँगा।"

16. Learned counsel for the defendant has urged that from the aforesaid recital in the agreement and the testimony of the plaintiff in the witness box extracted above, the intention of the parties on a true construction of the suit agreement about time being of the essence is indisputable. He submits that determining a date in the agreement coupled with a covenant to the effect if by that date the plaintiff fails to get a sale deed executed, the suit agreement would be deemed to be cancelled and further that the defendant would be free to alienate the suit property in favour of any third party, is clearly indicative of the intent that time was of essence. In support of his contention, learned counsel for the defendant has placed reliance on a decision of the Hon'ble Supreme Court in M/s. Hind Construction Contractors by its sole proprietor Bhikamchand Mulchand Jain (Dead) by L.R's vs. State of Maharashtra1, where in paragraph 7 of the report, it has been held:

"7. The first question that arises for our consideration, therefore, is whether time was of the essence of the contract that was executed between the parties on July 12, 1955 (Ex. 34). It cannot be disputed that question whether or not time was of the essence of the contract would essentially be a question of the intention of the parties to be gathered from the terms of the contract. ....."

17. Sri K.M. Garg, learned counsel for the defendant has further depended on the decision of the Supreme Court in Smt. Chand Rani (dead) by LRs vs. Smt. Kamal Rani (dead) by LRs2, where in paragraphs 12, 18, 19, 20, 24, 25, 26 and 28 of the report, it has been said thus:

"12. The Division Bench of the High Court erred in its construction of clause (1) of the suit agreement. In the case of an agreement for sale of immovable property time is never regarded as the essence of the contract. It would be an essence of the contract only when it is specifically stipulated or it clearly emerges by way of implication. That is not the case here. The word "only" occurring under clause (1) of the suit agreement would qualify only the amount and not the time for payment. In support of this argument the learned counsel relied on Gomathinayagam Pillai v. Pallaniswami Nadar [(1967) 1 SCR 227 : AIR 1967 SC 868], Hind Construction Contractors v. State of Maharashtra [(1979) 2 SCC 70 : (1979) 2 SCR 1147] and Jamshed Khodaram Irani v. Burjorji Dhunjibhai [AIR 1915 PC 83].

18. It is a well-accepted principle that in the case of sale of immovable property, time is never regarded as the essence of the contract. In fact, there is a presumption against time being the essence of the contract. This principle is not in any way different from that obtainable in England. Under the law of equity which governs the rights of the parties in the case of specific performance of contract to sell real estate, law looks not at the letter but at the substance of the agreement. It has to be ascertained whether under the terms of the contract the parties named a specific time within which completion was to take place, really and in substance it was intended that it should be completed within a reasonable time. An intention to make time the essence of the contract must be expressed in unequivocal language.

19. We will now refer to the decisions of this Court. In Gomathinayagam Pillai case[(1967) 1 SCR 227 : AIR 1967 SC 868] it was held at pages 231 to 233:

"... Section 55 of the Contract Act which deals with the consequences of failure to perform an executory contract at or before the stipulated time provides by the first paragraph:

"When a party to a contract promises to do a certain thing at or before a specified time, or certain things at or before specified times, and fails to do any such thing at or before the specified time, the contract, or so much of it as has not been performed, becomes voidable at the option of the promisee if the intention of the parties was that time should be of the essence of the contract.'

It is not merely because of specification of time at or before which the thing to be done under the contract is promised to be done and default in compliance therewith, that the other party may avoid the contract. Such an option arises only if it is intended by the parties that time is of the essence of the contract. Intention to make time of the essence, if expressed in writing, must be in language which is unmistakable: it may also be inferred from the nature of the property agreed to be sold, conduct of the parties and the surrounding circumstances at or before the contract. Specific performance of a contract will ordinarily be granted, notwithstanding default in carrying out the contract within the specified period, if having regard to the express stipulations of the parties, nature of the property and the surrounding circumstances, it is not inequitable to grant the relief. If the contract relates to sale of immovable property, it would normally be presumed that time was not of the essence of the contract. Mere incorporation in the written agreement of a clause imposing penalty in case of default does not by itself evidence an intention to make time of the essence. In Jamshed Khodaram Irani v. Burjorji Dhunjibhai [ILR 40 Bom 289] the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council observed that the principle underlying Section 55 of the Contract Act did not differ from those which obtained under the law of England as regards contracts for sale of land. The Judicial Committee observed:

"Under that law equity, which governs the rights of the parties in cases of specific performance of contracts to sell real estate, looks not at the letter but at the substance of the agreement in order to ascertain whether the parties, notwithstanding that they named a specific time within which completion was to take place, really and in substance intended more than that it should take place within a reasonable time .... Their Lordships are of opinion that this is the doctrine which the section of Indian Statute adopts and embodies in reference to sales of land. It may be stated concisely in the language used by Lord Cairns in Tilley v. Thomas [(1867) 3 Ch App 61] :

"The construction is, and must be, in equity the same as in a Court of law. A Court of equity will indeed relieve against, and enforce, specific performance, notwithstanding a failure to keep the dates assigned by the contract, either for completion, or for the steps towards completion, if it can do justice between the parties, and if (as Lord Justice Turner said in Roberts v. Berry [(1853) 3 De GM &G 284]) there is nothing in the "express stipulations between the parties, the nature of the property, or the surrounding circumstances' which would make it inequitable to interfere with and modify the legal right. This is what is meant, and all that is meant, when it is said that in equity time is not of the essence of the contract. Of the three grounds ... mentioned by Lord Justice Turner "express stipulations' requires no comment. The "nature of property' is illustrated by the case of reversions, mines, or trades. The "surrounding circumstances' must depend on the facts of each particular case."

Their Lordships will add to the statement just quoted these observations. The special jurisdiction of equity to disregard the letter of the contract in ascertaining what the parties to the contract are to be taken as having really and in substance intended as regards the time of its performance may be excluded by any plainly expressed stipulation. But to have this effect the language of the stipulation must show that the intention was to make the rights of the parties depend on the observance of the time-limits prescribed in a fashion which is unmistakable. The language will have this effect if it plainly excludes the notion that these time-limits were of merely secondary importance in the bargain, and that to disregard them would be to disregard nothing that lay as its foundation. "Prima facie, equity treats the importance of such time-limits as being subordinate to the main purpose of the parties, and it will enjoin specific performance notwithstanding that from the point of view of a court of law the contract has not been literally performed by the plaintiff as regards the time-limit specified.'"

20. In Govind Prasad Chaturvedi v. Hari Dutt Shastri [(1977) 2 SCC 539] following the above ruling it was held at pages 543-544: (SCC para 5)

"... It is settled law that the fixation of the period within which the contract has to be performed does not make the stipulation as to time the essence of the contract. When a contract relates to sale of immovable property it will normally be presumed that the time is not the essence of the contract. [Vide Gomathinayagam Pillai v. Pallaniswami Nadar [(1967) 1 SCR 227 : AIR 1967 SC 868] (at p. 233).] It may also be mentioned that the language used in the agreement is not such as to indicate in unmistakable terms that the time is of the essence of the contract. The intention to treat time as the essence of the contract may be evidenced by circumstances which are sufficiently strong to displace the normal presumption that in a contract of sale of land stipulation as to time is not the essence of the contract."

24. From an analysis of the above case-law it is clear that in the case of sale of immovable property there is no presumption as to time being the essence of the contract. Even if it is not of the essence of the contract the Court may infer that it is to be performed in a reasonable time if the conditions are:

1. From the express terms of the contract;

2. from the nature of the property; and

3. from the surrounding circumstances, for example: the object of making the contract.

25. In the above legal background, we will now look at the terms of the suit contract dated August 26, 1971. The agreement reads as under:

"Now, therefore this agreement to sell witnesseth and the parties hereto have agreed as follows:

1. That in pursuance of the said agreement, the 1st party has received a sum of Rs 30,000 (rupees thirty thousand only) from the second party as earnest money the receipt whereof the 1st party hereby separately acknowledges. Rs 98,000 (rupees ninety-eight thousand only) will be paid by the second party to the 1st party within a period of ten days only and the balance of Rs 50,000 (rupees fifty thousand only) at the time of registration of the sale deed before the Sub-Registrar, New Delhi.

2. That the 1st party has completed the house with all fixtures and fittings and it has been agreed to between the parties that the 1st party shall take necessary steps for immediate redemption of the said property from the said mortgagee and shall inform the second party in writing about the completion of the said redemption.

3. That the 1st party shall apply immediately for the permission to sell to the income tax authorities and after getting the permission to sell by getting an income tax clearance certificate in respect of the said property the sale deed of the same shall be executed by the 1st party in favour of the second party or her nominee/nominees on or before October 31, 1971.

4. That in case 1st party fails to execute and get the sale deed registered within the period stipulated in para 3 above, the 2nd party shall have the right to get this agreement enforced by specific performance through the court of law.

5. That if the second party fails to pay the balance sale consideration and get the sale deed executed and registered within the specific period mentioned in para 3 above, the earnest money of Rs 30,000 (rupees thirty thousand only) shall stand forfeited to the 1st party and this agreement deemed null and void.

6. That the 1st party shall pay all taxes, rates municipal taxes up to the date of registration of the sale deed and that the previous deeds and other documents pertaining to the said plot No. 30, Block "K' sanctioned place and completion certificate from the Municipal Corporation, Delhi in respect of the super-structure built on the said plot shall be handed over along with the vacant possession of first floor by September 30, 1971 and the front portion of the property by the first party to the second party at the time of registration of the sale deed."

26. Then comes the question as to the payment of Rs 98,000. The question is as to what is the meaning of the words "within a period of 10 days only"? Does it apply to the amount or the time-limit of 10 days from August 26, 1971. The trial court was of the view that the word "only" was meant to stress and qualify the amount of Rs 98,000 and cannot be read to mean as if payment within 10 days was the essence of the contract. On this aspect, the appellate court takes the contrary view and holds that the amount of Rs 98,000 ought to have been paid on or before September 6, 1971. Failure to do so would constitute a breach committed by the defendant. We are of the considered view that the Division Bench is right in its conclusion. As rightly pointed out in the judgment under appeal, the word "only" has been used twice over

(1) to qualify the amount of Rs 98,000 and

(2) to qualify the period of 10 days.

28. The analysis of evidence would also point out that the plaintiff was not willing to pay this amount unless vacant delivery of possession of one room on the ground floor was given. In cross-examination it was deposed that since income tax clearance certificate had not been obtained the sum of Rs 98,000 was not paid. Unless the property was redeemed the payment would not be made. If this was the attitude it is clear that the plaintiff was insisting upon delivery of possession as a condition precedent for making this payment. The income tax certificate was necessary only for completion of sale. We are unable to see how these obligations on the part of the defendant could be insisted upon for payment of Rs 98,000. Therefore, we conclude that though as a general proposition of law time is not the essence of the contract in the case of a sale of immovable property yet the parties intended to make time as the essence under clause (1) of the suit agreement. From this point of view, we are unable to see how the case in Nathulal [(1969) 3 SCC 120 : (1970) 2 SCR 854] could have any application to the facts of this case."

18. Sri C.S. Agnihotri, learned counsel for the plaintiff countering the submission of Sri Garg, learned counsel for the defendant, submits that what is evident from the decision relied upon by the की नहीं प्राप्त हुई defendant, is that in cases relating to sale of immoveable property, the Rule is that time is not of the essence, even if a specific date for performance is specified. The presumption is always in favour of the time not being of the essence where the contract is about sale of immoveable property. In particular, he has submitted that the principles laid down by their Lordships in M/s. Hind Construction (supra) would not at all be attracted to the question involved in this case, inasmuch as, M/s. Hind Construction (supra) related to a works contract, and not a contract regarding sale of immoveable property. He has emphasized that contracts for the sale of immoveable property stand on a very different pedestal. So far as the question of time being of the essence is concerned, he submits that the other decision relied upon by the learned counsel for the defendant in Chand Rani (supra) is more than eloquent in itself, and by reference to other authority noticed there, it is apparently a well settled principle of law that in transactions of sale of immoveable property, time is not of the essence.

19. In order to appreciate the submissions on this question advanced by the learned counsel for parties, reference to the terms of the suit agreement are of prime importance. It has been noticed above that the covenant in the suit agreement, that has decisive bearing on the issue whether time is of essence, is encapsuled in the words that say, that the defendant agrees to execute a sale deed in favour of the plaintiff upto 02.02.1981 whenever the plaintiff has the whole money ready on him, and he conveys information to the defendant to this effect, written or verbal, whereupon the defendant as per convenience of the plaintiff, would execute the sale deed. If within the period of time agreed the plaintiff does not get a sale deed executed, the said agreement would stand avoided, and the defendant shall have the right to alienate the suit property in favour of any third party. The fact that the parties, indeed, had covenanted in the aforesaid terms is affirmed by the dock evidence of the plaintiff, who deposing as PW-1, has said that in case by 02.02.1981, sale deed was not got executed by him, it was agreed that the suit agreement would be deemed to be avoided. It, therefore, turns upon the true intention of parties to be gathered from a discernible construction to be placed upon the covenant regarding time in the suit agreement.

20. The decision in Chand Rani (supra) indicates that mere stipulation of a date, or the fixation of a period of time within which the contract must be performed would not make it the essence of contract, in cases governing contracts relating to immoveable property. At the same time, if the language employed is couched in such unmistakable and specific terms, that leave no doubt about the matter that completion of transaction should be done within the specified time, or within a reasonable time, that intention to make time the essence may be inferred. The decision in Chand Rani (supra) would further indicate that the Court quoted with approval the principle in an earlier decision of their Lordships in Govind Prasad Chaturvedi vs. Hari Dutt Shastri and another3 to the effect that even if not regarded as the essence of the contract, inference as to time for its performance within a reasonable time period may be drawn under conditions enumerated in paragraph 24 of the report in Chand Rani (supra): (1) the express terms of the contract; (2) the nature of the property; and (3) the surrounding circumstances, for example: the object of making the contract.

21. Here, time being essence of the contract falls to be examined under the category where the express terms of the contract make it so. The question about time being of the essence flows from Section 55 of the Indian Contract Contract Act. Section 55 of the Contract Act, reads thus:

"55. When a party to a contract promises to do a certain thing at or before a specified time, or certain things at or before specified times, and fails to do any such thing at or before the specified time, the contract, or so much of it as has not been performed, becomes voidable at the option of the promisee, if the intention of the parties was that time should be of the essence of the contract.

If it was not the intention of the parties that time should be of the essence of the contract, the contract does not become voidable by the failure to do such thing at or before the specified time; but the promisee is entitled to compensation from the promisor for any loss occasioned to him by such failure.

If, in case of a contract voidable on account of the promisor's failure to perform his promise at the time agreed, the promisee accepts performance of such promise at any time other than that agreed, the promisee cannot claim compensation for any loss occasioned by the non-performance of the promise at the time agreed, unless, at the time of such acceptance he gives notice to the promisor of his intention to do so."

22. What is relevant in the context of the question that arises here is the first part of Section 55 (supra). It embodies a statutory principle that where time is specified for certain acts or things to be done by one party, who is the promisor in relation to that part, failure to do that act or thing at or before the time specified, renders the obligation voidable at the option of the other party, that is to say, the promisee in relation to the act or thing to be done. This principle, however, is applicable in relation to the contract where it is the intention of parties that time should be of the essence. Now, Section 55 of the Contract Act is to be found in Chapter IV entitled 'OF THE PERFORMANCE OF CONTRACTS'; the Rule, therefore, embodied in Section 55 Part I belongs specifically to substantive law governing performance of contracts. If one were to go strictly by the terms of the statute, at least the one that is substantive law about it, violation of the time limit where the contracting parties have intended time to be of the essence, would render the contract voidable at the option of the party, who is the promisee. It is quite another thing that where under the second part of Section, parties did not intend time to be of the essence, different principles would apply. Likewise, under third part of Section 55 even in cases where time is of the essence, but the promisee accepts performance at a later time, the option to avoid the contract is not available. The Rule, however, that in cases of immovable property where a particular time is mentioned by parties for the performance of a contract, the presumption is strongly against time to be of the essence, appears to have origin in the conditions prevailing in England at the time when Courts of Equity there evolved this principle. Mention about the origins of this principle or Rule of presumption against time being of the essence in contracts relating to immovable property, is to be found in the celebrated treatise, Indian Contract and Specific Performance Act (Tenth Edition) by Pollock and Mulla, where the Learned Authors have described the origin of the Rule, thus:

"In England accidental delays in the completion of contracts for the sale of land within the time named are frequent by reason of unexpected difficulties in verifying the seller's title under the very peculiar system of English real property law. Sharp practice would be unduly favoured by strict enforcement of clauses limiting the time of completion, and accordingly Courts of Equity have introduced a presumption, chiefly, if not wholly, applied in cases between vendors and purchasers of land, that time is not of the essence of the contract. But this presumption will give way to proof of a contrary intention by express words or by the nature of the transaction."

23. The aforesaid principle, that was evolved by the Courts of Equity in England in the historical background of problems of the time relating to ascertainment about good title of the vendor made its way to a statutory provision in India by virtue of Explanation (I) appended to Section 10 of the Specific Relief Act, 1963. Section 10 of the Act last mentioned reads thus:

"10. [12(b) & 12(c)] Except as otherwise provided in this Chapter, the specific performance of any contract may, in the discretion of the court, be enforced-

(a) when there exists no standard for ascertaining actual damage caused by the non-performance of the act agreed to be done; or

(b) when the act agreed to be done in such that compensation in money for its non-performance would not afford adequate relief.

Explanation.-Unless and until the contrary is proved, the court shall presume--

(i) that the breach of a contract to transfer immovable property cannot be adequately relieved by compensation in money; and

(ii) that the breach of a contract to transfer movable property can be so relieved except in the following cases:-

(a) where the property is not an ordinary article of commerce, or is of special value or interest to the plaintiff, or consists of goods which are not easily obtainable in the market;

(b) where the property is held by the defendant as the agent or trustee of the plaintiff."

(Emphasis by Court)

24. It was on this account that the consistent position of law governing contracts of sale of immovable property is that in these cases mere stipulation of a time limit or the fixation of a period within which a contract must be performed, would not make it the essence of contract. This as already referred to hereinbefore in Chand Rani (supra), has been reiterated by their Lordships of the Supreme Court consistently in subsequent decisions. However, the rule that time is not of the essence in contracts relating to sale of immovable property is subject to the three exceptions, also enumerated in Chand Rani (supra). Since the words employed in the contract have been mooted to be express terms, that make time essence of the contract, it would be profitable in the matter of construction of terms of the contract here to do a comparison with some authorities, where terms limiting time in the contract were not regarded of the essence.

25. A sound guide about the construction of a term limiting performance in point of time is to be found in the decision of the Supreme court in Govind Prasad Chaturvedi vs. Hari Dutt Shastri (supra). In this connection paragraphs 5 & 6 of the Report, which carries salient terms of the contract as well as construction placed on it by their Lordships is apposite:

"5. The first question that arises for consideration is whether time is of the essence of the contract. In order to determine this question it is necessary to set out the suit agreement which is marked as Ex. 23 at page 137 of the papers. It runs as follows :-

"Dear Pandit Govind Prasad Ji Chaturvedi,

Sir.

A litigation has been going on between you and us with respect to the Kothi of Bima Nagar, of which you are a tenant on behalf of us. The said dispute has been decided today through the mediation of Sri Chand Doneriya, on the terms and conditions given below which shall be fully binding on you as well as us.

1. That you are agreeable to purchase our Kothi of which you are a tenant and a transaction between you and us has been finally settled today; at Rs. 24,000 (rupees twenty four thousand), with respect to the said Kothi.

2. That you are paying us, at present, a sum of Rs. 4000 in cash, as earnest money, the receipt whereof has been acknowledged by us by affixing a revenue stamp at the foot of this letter, and that the remaining sum of Rs. 20,000 shall be paid by you to us at the time of registration.

3. That the expenses relating registration and cost of stamps etc. shall be borne by you and we shall be entitled to get a sum of Rupees 24,000 (rupees twenty four thousand) net.

4. That you must get the sale deed executed within two months i. e. upto 24th May, 1964, and in case you do not get the sale-deed registered within two months then the earnest money amounting to rupees four thousand, paid by you shall stand forfeited without serving any notice.* But in case we in some way evade the execution of the sale deed, then you will be entitled to compel us to execute the sale deed legally and we shall be liable to pay the costs and damages incurred by you.

5. That we shall furnish you a guarantee of good title in respect of the property which is free and immune from all sorts of disputes.

6. That you shall be liable to pay the rent till the date you get the sale-deed registered and you shall clear off all amount due to us before registration.

7. That both the parties shall withdraw their respective cases or get the same dismissed and shall bear their own costs.

8. That neither party shall take any fresh legal steps during this period of two months by which any hindrance may be caused in execution of our sale deed.

In confirmation of the agreement which has been made between you and me through this letter, you too have affixed your signature on this letter.

Yours,

The relevant clause is clause 4 which provides that the appellant must get the sale deed executed within two months i. e. upto 24th May, 1964, and in case the appellant did not get the sale deed registered within two months then the earnest money amounting to Rs. 4000 paid by the appellant shall stand forfeited without serving any notice. The clause further provides that in case the respondents in some way evade the execution of the sale deed then the appellant will be entitled to compel them to execute the sale deed legally and the respondents shall be liable to pay the costs and damages incurred by the appellant. It is settled law that the fixation of the period within which the contract has to be performed does not make the stipulation as to time the essence of the contract. When a contract relates to sale of immovable property it will normally be presumed that the time is not the essence of the contract.(Vide Gomathinaya-gam Pillai v. Palaniswami Nadar, 1967-1 SCR 227 at page 233 = (AIR 1967 SC 868 at p. 871).

It may also be mentioned that the language used in the agreement is not such as to indicate in unmistakable terms that the time is of the essence of the contract. The intention to treat time as the essence of the contract may be evidenced by circumstances which are sufficiently strong to displace the normal presumption that in a contract of sale of land stipulation as to time is not the essence of the contract.

6. Apart from the normal presumption that in the case of an agreement of sale of immovable property time is not the essence of the contract and the fact that the terms of the agreement do not unmistakably state that the time was understood to be the essence of the contract neither in the pleadings nor during the trial the respondents contended that time was of the essence of the contract. In the plaint the allegation was that the appellant has always been ready and willing to perform his part of the contract and he did all that he was bound to do under the agreement while the respondents committed breach of the contract. The respondents did not set up the plea that the time was of the essence of the contract. In paragraph 32 of the Written Statement all that was stated was that the appellant did not perform his part of the contract within the stipulated time and that the contract thereafter did not subsist and the suit is consequently misconceived. The parties did not go to trial on the basis that time was of the essence of the contract for no issue was framed regarding time being the essence of the contract. Neither is there any discussion in the judgment of the trial Court regarding this point. The trial court after considering the evidence came to the conclusion that the appellant was always ready and willing to perform his part of the contract while the respondents were not. In the circumstances therefore the High Court was in error in setting as one of the points for determination whether time was of the essence of the contract. The High Court after referring to the agreement was of the view that the agreement was entered into between the parties during the course of a litigation between the appellant and the respondents and in pursuance of the agreement the parties were directed to withdraw their cases and were directed further not to take fresh legal steps during the period of the two months within which the sale deed was to be executed. On taking into account the circumstances of the case and the conduct of the parties of serving on each other notices, counter notices and telegrams the High Court inferred an intention on the part of the parties to treat the time as of essence of the contract. We will refer to the terms of the contract and the correspondence between the parties in due course but at this stage it is sufficient to state that neither the terms of the agreement nor the correspondence would indicate that the parties treated time as of essence of the contract. In fact, according to the agreement the sale deed ought to have been executed by the 24th May but it is the admitted case that both the parties consented to have the document registered on the 25th May. On the question whether the time is of the essence of the contract or not we are satisfied that the High court was in error in allowing the respondents to raise this question in the absence of specific pleadings or issues raided before the trial Court and when the case of time being the essence of the contract was not put forward by the respondents in the trial Court. Apart from the absence of pleadings we do not find any basis for the plea of the respondents that the time was of the essence of the contract.

26. Again, a question of construction of a covenant in the agreement limiting the obligation in time fell for consideration of this Court in Govind Lal Chawla vs. C.K. Sharma and others4, where the Court was called upon to gather from the terms of the contract involved there, whether time was of the essence. The third and fourth paragraphs of the contract involved in the said decision carried clauses limiting obligation of parties in time, for the performance of it. This Court in Govind Lal Chawla (supra) also did not find it to be a case where time was of the essence. In paragraph 7 of the report (which also embodies the relevant terms of the compromise) reads thus:

"7. I now proceed to examine whether the time was of the essence of the contract under the agreement in question. The vendors in this case had executed an agreement in favour of one Madanlal on 10-1-1966. The terms of the agreement Ex. B-20 have to be construed. The agreement was executed by Mrs. M. Lucas and Mrs. C. Gordon who claim to be the owners of 20, Muir Road. The agreement was executed in favour of Madanlal. According to the agreement the sale deed was to be executed in favour of Madanlal and/or his nominee or nominees. The consideration for sale was to be Rupees 16,000/-. The sum of Rs.

500/- was paid as earnest money. The stipulations in the deed of agreement were as below :-

"1. That in pursuance of the said agreement and in consideration of the said sum of Rs. 16,000 (Rupees sixteen thousand only), to be paid by the second party and/or the nominee or nominees of the second party, the first party shall transfer by way of absolute sale, the said premises No. 20, Muir Road, Allahabad, together with all the rights of the First Party in the land, and constructions to the Second Party and/or the nominee or nominees of the Second Party free of encumbrances."

2. That, out of the said sum of Rupees 16,000/- the First Party has this day been paid a sum of Rs. 500/- (Rupees five hundred only) by way of earnest money, and the balance of Rs. 15,500/- (Rupees fifteen thousandand five hundred only) shall be paid to the First Party onthe execution of the sale-deed, before the Sub-Registrar, Allahabad.

3. That the said property is subject to a mortgage in favour of Mr. G. Alphanzo and thedues of the mortgagee will be cleared and paid by the First Party before the execution of the sale-deed.

4. That the First Party shall execute the sale deed within a period of six weeks from this date and in case of failureon his part to do so, the Second Party may adopt legal proceedings for specific performance or refund of his earnest money, as he may choose.

5. That in case the second party commits a default, the earnest money shall be forfeited."

Conditions 3 and 4 are quite important. According to Condition 3, the mortgage deed in favour of Sri G. Alphanzo was to be cleared and paid by the vendors before the execution of the sale-deed. According to Condition 4, the vendors were to execute the sale deed within a period of six weeks from the date of the agreement and in case of his failure to do so, the Second Party was to adopt legal proceedings, and, according to the fifth condition in case of default of the vendees, the earnest money was to be forfeited. These stipulations show that before the sale deed could be executed the mortgage of Sri G. Alphanzo was to be satisfied and the sale deed was to be executed by the vendors within six weeks. Thus, in a case like the one before me the time could not be the essence of the contract. So far as the vendee in this case is concerned, he had to be satisfied about the fact that mortgage was cleared. It is also stated that before the sale deed could be executed the vendors had to get their names mutated over the property. These conditions had therefore to be satisfied, and, till they were satisfied the sale deed could not be executed. In Govind Prasad v. Hari Dutt (AIR 1977 SC 1005) following Gomathinayagam Pillai v. Palaniswami Nadar (AIR 1967 SC 868) it was held that, it is settled law that, " the fixation of the period within which the contract has to be performed does not make the stipulation as to time of the essence of the contract. If the contract relates to sale of immoveable property it would normally be presumed that time is not of the essence of the contract. The intention to treat time as the essence of the contract may be evidenced by circumstances which should be sufficiently strong to displace the normal presumption that in a contract of sale of land stipulation as to time is not the essence of the contract." The lower appellate court has committed a grievous error by ignoring the basic rule laid down in these two cases, about presumption that in cases of immovable property time is not the essence of the contract. It has therefore to be inferred from the terms of the agreement and circumstances whether the time was the essence of the contract or not. So far as this case is concerned, as I have observed above, the time could not be the essence of the contract."

27. Now, the terms of contract limiting obligations of parties in time that were involved in the decision of their Lordships in Govind Prasad Chaturvedi (supra) obliged the vendee to get the sale deed executed within two months and also indicate the date by which execution of the sale deed was to be secured by the vendee. This time limiting clause was attended with a consequence that in case of the vendee's failure to get the contracted sale deed registered within two months, the earnest money would stand forfeited without service of any notice. This kind of language employed in the contract was not construed by their Lordships to indicate in unmistakable terms that time was of the essence. Of course, the intention of parties to make time the essence of the contract was also examined, where their Lordships noticed that neither was a plea taken in the written statement that time as of the essence or was there any discussion on the point in the judgment of the Trial Court. The Supreme Court concluded that apart from absence of pleadings to raise a plea regarding time being of the essence, there was no basis for the respondent to raise that kind of a plea. The latter part would refer to the employment of language in the contract, that was not found by their Lordships to be in unmistakable terms that parties intended time to be of the essence.

28. Again, the decision of this Court in Govind Lal Chawla (supra) had a term in the contract which said that a sale deed was to be executed within a period of six weeks from the date of the agreement, and that in case of the vendor's failure to do so, the vendee could sue for specific performance, or refund of his earnest money according to his election. The Court in construing the terms of paragraphs 3 and 4 of the contract concluded that clause (3) of the contract envisaged mortgage of the suit property in favour of a certain Alphanzo to be redeemed first by the vendors, before execution of the sale deed. Clause (3) was then read together with time limiting clause (4), that obliged the vendor to execute a sale deed within a period of six weeks from the date of the suit agreement. This Court concluded that the stipulations in the contract that required the prior discharge of a mortgage before performance, could not lead to an inference that the time was of the essence of contract.

29. In the present case, what is of prime importance is the fact that the parties have just not covenanted to the effect that the obligations under the suit agreement are to be performed by 02.02.1981, but have further provided that in the event the plaintiff within the agreed time does not get the sale deed executed, the contract shall be deemed to be repudiated and the defendant shall be free to sell the suit property in favour of any third party. The consequences stipulated in the suit agreement in the contingency of a sale deed not being executed within the specified time being repudiation of the contract, coupled with an express release of the defendant's right to sell the suit property in favour of any third party, is all that makes the difference about the suit agreement. It is these conditions ensuing upon a failure of the plaintiff to secure execution of the sale deed by the date as covenanted, that makes time essence of the contract in this case. It, thus, has to be held that time is essence of the contract, so far as the suit agreement is concerned. It must also be held, therefore, that time being essence of the suit agreement, non-compliance with terms of the same as to date of performance by the plaintiff would entitle the defendant to repudiate the contract at his option, so far as the terms of the suit agreement go. Substantial question no.(1) is, therefore, answered in the affirmative.

30. Time being held to be the essence of the contract, the next question that arises is to determine rights of parties on the foundation of this premise, whether the plaintiff did all that was within his power, within time limited by the suit agreement, to secure execution of a sale deed in his favour. It is pointed out by learned counsel for the defendant that the earliest that the plaintiff caused a notice to be issued to the defendant to come forward and execute a sale deed, in accordance with the latter's obligation under the suit agreement, was on 24.01.1982. According to learned counsel for the defendant, two further notices that are said to be issued are those, dated 30.03.1981 and 19.04.1982. It is urged that in terms of the suit agreement, sale deed was to be executed at any time, before 02.02.1981. The subsequent notices dated 30.03.1981 and 19.04.1982, according to the learned counsel for the defendant, do not count as these were admittedly issued after 02.02.1981, when obligations of the defendant contracted under the suit agreement, stood open to be avoided by lapse of time. So far as the notice dated 24.01.1982 is concerned, it is also pointed out by Sri Garg, learned counsel for the defendant that the plaintiff failed to perform his part of the contract that required him to appear on 02.02.1981 before the office of the Sub Registrar, Karchchana that was on the construction placed upon the covenant in the suit agreement about time, was the last date by which obligation could be enforced, time being the essence of it.

31. Learned counsel for the appellant submits that this notice that was issued allegedly during time when obligations under suit agreement were intact and binding was never served upon the defendant. It is argued by Shri Garg that the plaintiff has failed to prove by his pleadings and evidence that the notice dated 24.01.1982 was served upon the defendant at all. In this regard, learned counsel has invited the attention of the Court to paragraph 12 of the written statement where denial of receipt of this notice is pleaded, besides the others said to be issued later. In paragraph 12 of the written statement, the denial figures in the following words (in Hindi vernacular):

"12. यह कि प्रतिवादी मुजीब की वादी की कोई नोटिस दि0 24.1.1981 ई0 दि0 30.3.1981 ई0व 19.4.1982 की नहीं प्राप्त हुई।"

32. Learned counsel for the appellant submits that the said stand taken in the pleadings of the defendant is corroborated by an admission of the plaintiff in his dock evidence, recorded on 08.01.1985, where in his cross examination he has said thus about service of the notice dated 24.01.1981

(which also mentions the other two notices). The relevant part of the plaintiffs evidence where he testified as PW-1 is recorded by the Trial Court as follows:-

".....मैंने 2-2-81 के पहले नोटिस मैंने दे चुका था। 24-1-81 को और 30-3-81 को 19-4-82 को नोटिस दिया था। और हर बार मैं प्रयास करता रहा

24-1-81 की नोटिस का मुझे कोई Acknowledgment नहीं मिला था।

यह मुझे नहीं मालूम कि 24-1-81 की नोटिस राम निहोर को प्राप्त हुई कि नहीं। जो नोटिस मैंने 30-3-81 व 19-4-82 को राम निहोर के पास भेजी थी उसका Acknowledgment मुझे मिला था उसे मैंने अदालत में दाखिल किया है।"

33. Learned counsel for the appellant has urged that there being a clear admission by the plaintiff that he did not know whether the notice dated 24.01.1981 was served upon the defendant or not, coupled with the fact that he did not admittedly receive an acknowledgment, would lead to an inference that the said notice was not served upon the defendant at all. About the presumption of service in ordinary course of post to be raised by virtue of Section 27 of the General Clauses Act, learned Counsel for the defendant has relied upon the decision of the Supreme Court in M/s. Madan & Co. vs. Wazir Jaivir Chand5. He has relied upon paragraph 6 of the report in M/s Madan & Co. (Supra) to submit that presumption of good service can only be raised if it is pleaded and proved that the registered cover bears the correct address; and, also that there was prepayment of the requisite postal charges by affixation of stamps. Their Lordships of the Supreme Court in M/s Madan & Co. (Supra) on which learned counsel for the defendant relied have held thus:-

"6. .....All that a landlord can do to comply with this provision is to post a prepaid registered letter (acknowledgment due or otherwise) containing the tenant's correct address. Once he does this and the letter is delivered to the post office, he has no control over it. It is then presumed to have been delivered to the addressee under Section 27 of the General Clauses Act. Under the rules of the post office, the letter is to be delivered to the addressee or a person authorised by him. Such a person may either accept the letter or decline to accept it. In either case, there is no difficulty, for the acceptance or refusal can be treated as a service on, and receipt by, the addressee. The difficulty is where the postman calls at the address mentioned and is unable to contact the addressee or a person authorised to receive the letter. All that he can then do is to return it to the sender. The Indian Post Office Rules do not prescribe any detailed procedure regarding the delivery of such registered letters. When the postman is unable to deliver it on his first visit, the general practice is for the postman to attempt to deliver it on the next one or two days also before returning it to the sender. However, he has neither the power nor the time to make enquiries regarding the whereabouts of the addressee; he is not expected to detain the letter until the addressee chooses to return and accept it; and he is not authorised to affix the letter on the premises because of the assessee's absence. His responsibilities cannot, therefore, be equated to those of a process server entrusted with the responsibilities of serving the summons of a court under Order V of the CPC. The statutory provision has to be interpreted in the context of this difficulty and in the light of the very limited role that the post office can play in such a task. If we interpret provision as requiring that the letter must have been actually delivered to the addressee, we would be virtually rendering it a dead letter. The letter cannot be served where, as in this case, the tenant is away from the premises for some considerable time. Also, an addressee can easily avoid receiving the letter addressed to him without specifically refusing to receive it. He can so manipulate matters that it gets returned to the sender with vague endorsements such as "not found", "not in station", "addressee has left" and so on. It is suggested that a landlord, knowing that the tenant is away from station for some reasons, could go through the motions of posting a letter to him which he knows will not be served. Such a possibility cannot be excluded. But, as against this, if a registered letter addressed to a person at his residential address does not get served in the normal course and is returned, it can only be attributed to the addressee's own conduct. If he is staying in the premises, there is no reason why it should not be served on him. If he is compelled to be away for some time, all that he has to do is to leave necessary instructions with the postal authorities either to detain the letters addressed to him for some time until he returns or to forward them to the address where he has gone or to deliver them to some other person authorised by him. In this situation, we have to choose the more reasonable, effective, equitable and practical interpretation and that would be to read the word "served" as "sent by post", correctly and properly addressed to the tenant, and the word "receipt" as the tender of the letter by the postal peon at the address mentioned in the letter. No other interpretation, we think, will fit the situation as it is simply not possible for a landlord to ensure that a registered letter sent by him gets served on, or is received by, the tenant."

34. Learned counsel for the plaintiff on the other hand has argued that it is admitted by the defendant that he met the plaintiff two days ahead of 02.02.1981. It is urged that this came about as a result of service of registered notice dated 24.01.1981 that had been sent on the correct address of the defendant and would, therefore, be deemed to have been served. It is urged that the fact about the notice being sent to the correct postal address by the plaintiff, burden was on the defendants to show that the said notice was not served. In this connection, learned counsel for the respondent has placed reliance upon the decision of the Supreme Court in Basant Singh and another vs. Roman Catholic Mission6, where regarding presumption of good service of communications sent by the registered post (in the case before their Lordship there was service of summons) it has been held thus in paragraph 9, 10,11 and 12 of the report:-

"9. Order 5, proviso to sub-rule (2) of Rule 19-A CPC provides that where the summons are properly addressed, prepaid and duly sent by registered post with acknowledgment due, notwithstanding the fact that the acknowledgment having been lost or mislaid, or for any other reason, has not been received by the court within thirty days from the date of the issue of the summons, the court shall presume that notice is duly served. Further, Section 27 of the General Clauses Act, 1897 (in short "the Act") provides similar provision. The presumptions are rebuttable. It is always open to the defendants to rebut the presumption by leading convincing and cogent evidence.

10. It is nobody's case that the postal addresses of the defendants are not properly addressed and, therefore, the registered summons could not be served. It is also nobody's case that the registered summons are not prepaid and not duly sent. In fact the registered summons, bearing Receipts Nos. 875 and 876 dated 24-4-1986, were issued is borne out from the record.

11. Once it is proved that summons were sent by registered post to a correct and given address, the defendants' own conduct becomes important. Before the trial court, the appellants were allowed to lead evidence in support of their contentions. An order to this effect was passed by the trial court on 11-1-1991. The premises in question are occupied by two defendants jointly -- Hari Singh and Basant Singh. Hari Singh appeared and examined himself stating that he did not receive the registered letter. However, the defendant Basant Singh did not appear and no evidence whatsoever, on his behalf, has been led to rebut the presumption in regard to service of summons sent to him under registered post with acknowledgment due. His own conduct shows that the registered summons had been duly served on him. As already noticed, Hari Singh appeared and save and except the bald statement that registered letter was not tendered to him, no evidence whatsoever was led to rebut the presumption. He could have examined the postman, who would have been the material witness and whose evidence would have bearing for proper adjudication. He has failed to discharge the onus cast upon him by the statute. This apart, it is inherently improbable that the registered summons were duly served on Basant Singh but not on Hari Singh when they occupied the tenanted premises jointly.

12. As noticed above, the registered summons were sent to Basant Singh and Hari Singh vide Postal Receipts Nos. 875 and 876 dated 24-4-1986 on the correct and given address, is borne out from the record. Ex parte proceedings were ordered on 22-8-1986 and ex parte decree was passed on 30-9-1986."

35. So far as service of notice dated 24.01.1981 is concerned, no doubt no acknowledgment relating to the same being served upon the defendant has been filed in evidence by the plaintiff, but on the principles stated, as urged by the learned counsel for the defendant, it is not a case where presumption of service may be displaced due to failure by the plaintiff to establish that it was not properly addressed or not pre-paid and duly sent by registered post, acknowledgment due. In fact, the two other notices dated 30.01.1981 and 19.04.1982 were, likewise, sent by registered post on the same address as that mentioned on the notice dated 24.01.1981, and the service of those notices upon the defendant is established by acknowledgment cards filed in evidence. There is no good reason to believe that when the subsequent notices sent by the plaintiff at the same address by registered post, were delivered to the defendant proven by acknowledgment cards, the notice dated 24.01.1981 would also not be likewise served. But, in the case of this notice since there is no acknowledgment card, indicating the date of service on record, the issue would certainly be as to when the notice dated 24.01.1981 was served. Since the date of actual service of this notice is not proven by evidence aliunde, like the acknowledgment card relative to the said notice, or a certificate from the Post Office affirming the fact of delivery of this notice on a particular date, service has to be presumed under Section 27 of the General Clauses Act, 1897. Section 27 of the General Clauses Act is to the following effect:

"Meaning of service by post.--Where any [Central Act] or Regulation made after the commencement of this Act authorizes or requires any document to be served by post, whether the expression "serve" or either of the expression "give" or "send" or any other expression is used, then, unless a different intention appears, the service shall be deemed to be effected by properly addressing, pre-paying and posting by registered post, a letter containing the document, and unless the contrary is proved, to have been effected at the time at which the letter would be delivered in the ordinary course of post."
(Emphasis by Court)

36. It would be noticed that under Section 27 of the General Clauses Act, the presumption is not only about service in the case any document served by post, even in the absence of evidence of its actual service, but the presumption is also about the time during which the document so sent would have been served. In the present case, what is of relevance is time when the notice dated 24.01.1981 would have been served upon the defendant. This issue of time when the said notice was served, or more specifically saying it, deemed to be served assumes special significance in view of the fact that this notice was sent by the plaintiff to the defendant on the margin of time, when the period limited by the contract to a specified date over the covenanted performance of the suit agreement was running out. In fact, going by what has been held hereinabove on the issue of time being essence of the contract, 02.02.1981 was a watershed beyond which obligations of the defendant would stand determined, vis-a-vis, the plaintiff by efflux of time. The question, therefore, would be whether the notice dated 24.01.1981 sent by registered post to the defendant can be presumed to be served before 02.02.1981, or it can be presumed to be served, but beyond 02.02.1981. And if beyond that date, how much beyond it, working out on the basis of presumption in Section 27 of the General Clauses Act.

37. There is no guide about the period of time that the expression 'ordinary course of post' occurring in Section 27 of the Act last mentioned would mean. The best answer to it is to be found in the provisions of Order V, Rule 19-A [since omitted by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999 (46 of 1999) w.e.f. 01.07.2000]. The said provision has now ceased to exist on the statute book, but during time to which the transaction as well as the impugned judgments by the Courts below relate, it was firmly there. The provisions of Rule 19-A of Order V of the Act (as it stood before its repeal) read as under:

"19-A. Simultaneous issue of summons for service by post in addition to personal service.--(1) The Court shall, in addition to, and simultaneously with, the issue of summons for service in the manner provided in Rules 9 to 19 (both inclusive), also direct the summons to be served by registered post, acknowledgment due, addressed to the defendant, or his agent empowered to accept the service, at the place where the defendant, or his agent, actually and voluntarily resides or carries on business or personally works for gain:

Provided that nothing in this sub-rule shall require the Court to issue a summons for service by registered post, where, in the circumstances of the case, the Court considers it unnecessary.

(2) When an acknowledgment purporting to be signed by the defendant or his agent is received by the Court or the postal article containing the summons is received back by the Court with an endorsement purporting to have been made by a postal employee to the effect that the defendant or his agent had refused to take delivery of the postal article containing the summons, when tendered to him, the Court issuing the summons shall declare that the summons had been duly served on the defendant:

Provided that where the summons was properly addressed, prepaid and duly sent by registered post, acknowledgment due, the declaration referred to in this sub-rule shall be made notwithstanding the fact that the acknowledgment having been lost or mislaid, or for any other reason, has not been received by the Court within thirty days from the date of the issue of the summons."
(Emphasis by Court)

38. Rule 19-A of Order V was about simultaneous issue of summons for service by posts, in addition to personal service. Though the Rule was applicable in the specific context of additional service of summons by registered post upon the defendant to a suit, it clearly provided for the period of time at the end of which presumption of service by registered post would arise in cases where the acknowledgment was lost or not available for any other reason. It fixed the period of time for this presumption to arise at 30 days. The period of time envisaged by the legislature based upon the conditions of the time is certainly a good guide about what period of time would constitute 'ordinary course of post', also under Section 27 of the General Clauses Act. Even in a case to which Rule 19-A of Order V did not apply, the period of time mentioned there may be taken as a rough estimate about what 'ordinary course of post' would imply in relation to a case like the present one. It could lead to the presumption being raised with a few days of variation, on either side of 30 days. In this case, the time between the date of the registered notice dated 24.01.1981 and the outer date for covenanted performance in the suit agreement i.e. 02.02.1981 is a short period of 10 days (inclusive of the terminal days), that reckons to be one-third of the period of time which was stipulated by the proviso to sub-rule (2) of Rule 19-A aforesaid. It was, indeed, too short a period of time during which presumption of good service could be drawn by the Court.

39. In fact, the Trial Court has dealt with this issue punctiliously recording the following finding about it (in Hindi vernacular):

"इस सम्बन्ध में यह स्पष्ट है कि वादी ने क्रमश: दिनांक 24-1-81, 30-3-81, तथा 19-4-82 को नोटिस देने का कथन किया है तथा कथित नोटिस से संबंधित रसीद एवं नकल नोटिस क्रमश: कागजात संख्या 24(क), 25(ग), 20(क), 27(क), 28(क), 29(क) तथा 30(ग) दाखिल किया है, जिससे यह स्पष्ट होता है कि वास्तव में वादी ने प्रतिवादी संख्या-1 को विक्रय निष्पादित करने हेतु अपने आशय की सूचना दिया था। प्रथम नोटिस दिनांक 2-2-81 के पूर्व दिनांक 24-1-81 को देना स्पष्ट की गयी हैए इस संबंध में कागज संख्या-24(क) का अवलोकन किया जाय, तो यह संबंधित डाकखाने की रसीद है जो प्रतिवादी संख्या-1 रामनिहोर के नाम दिनांक 24-1-81 को भेजी गयी थी, जिसके जरिये नोटिस कागज सं0-25(ग) का भेजना स्पष्ट किया गया है, कागज सं0 25(ग) में भी दिनांक 24-1-81 डाली गयी है अत: इससे इतना स्पष्ट होता है कि एक नोटिस वादी ने दिनांक 24-1-81 को प्रतिवादी रामनिहोर को भेजा था, लेकिन यह भी स्पष्ट है कि यह तथ्य साबित नहीं होता कि वास्तव में यह पत्र प्रतिवादी रामनिहोर को कब मिलाए अनुबन्ध के निष्पादन का अन्तिम दिनांक 2-2-81 नियत किया गया था और 24-1-81 एक ऐसा दिनांक हैए जिससे यह निष्कर्ष निकाला जा सकता है कि इतने अल्प समय में दी गयी वह पत्र प्रतिवादी के प्राप्त न हुआ होगा यह एक ऐसा प्रश्न है कि जिसके बावत कोई साक्ष्य पत्रावली पर उपलब्ध नहीं है। अतरू यह कहा जा सकता है कि वादी की ओर जो भी पत्र दि0 24-1-81 को भेजा गया उसमें समय की इतनी कमी रखी गयी जिससे इसका लाभ प्रतिवादी को ही मिलेगा।"

40. While it is true that it is not proved that the notice dated 24.01.1981 sent by registered post calling upon the defendant to appear before the Sub-Registrar, is not proved to be served in accordance with law before the date fixed in the notice, that is 02.02.1981, there is a categorical finding by the lower Appellate Court on the issue that on 02.02.1981, both the plaintiff and the defendant, remained present at the office of the Sub-Registrar, where the plaintiff got his attendance marked, but the defendant did not. The defendant has been noticed to have said in his evidence that the plaintiff had asked him to see him at the Sub-Registrar's office. It is further recorded by the lower Appellate Court that the defendant, indeed, remained present at the Sub-Registrar's office and waited for the plaintiff, sitting with one Balram Munshi. The lower Appellate Court has held from all this evidence of parties that once the defendant has acknowledged that the plaintiff had asked the defendant to see him at the Sub-Registrar's office, there is no ostensible reason for the defendant to have gone to the Sub-Registrar's office, but waited there for the plaintiff at the seat of Balram Munshi. The lower Appellate Court has inferred from this finding that the defendant did not deliberately appear at the Sub-Registrar's office to execute the sale deed. This finding has been recorded by the lower Appellate Court in the context of answering the issue of readiness and willingness, and not with reference to the question whether time being of the essence, the plaintiff was entitled to exercise his option to avoid the contract under Section 55 of the Contract Act. This Court, however, finds that the lower Appellate Court has drawn a reasonable conclusion from the evidence on record that the defendant was aware, through oral information conveyed to him, that he is to appear before the Sub-Registrar on 02.02.1981 to execute the sale deed in favour of the plaintiff. According to the defendant's version, he did go to the Sub-Registrar's office, but perched himself in some corner of the precincts where Balram Munshi has his seat for the discharge of his professional duties. As to the question involved here, it is not relevant whether the plaintiff did go to the Sub-Registrar's office, or he did not; what is relevant is that through an oral communication he was called upon by the plaintiff to visit the Sub-Registrar's office, which the defendant acknowledges. The fact that he did not or could not meet the plaintiff, because he spent time there at an unseemly location, or that he did not get his attendance marked with the Sub-Registrar, as held by the lower Appellate Court, go to show that the plaintiff had invoked the contract within the date specified, that is to say, 02.02.1981, asking the defendant to come forward and execute a sale deed in its terms on the said date i.e. 02.02.1981. The fact that service of the written notice that was sent calling upon the defendant, may not have been proved to have been effected before the date fixed, but on findings of fact recorded by the lower Appellate Court, in relation to the issue of readiness and willingness, it is firmly established that the plaintiff on admission of the defendant, called him over to the Sub-Registrar's office on 02.02.1981, clearly for the purpose of execution of a sale deed. Thus, time though essence of the contract, it must be held that the contract was invoked before the time limited thereunder, if not by proof of service of the notice said to have been issued on 24.01.1981, that is before 02.02.1981, it was certainly invoked by an oral communication which the defendant has acknowledged. Under the terms of the agreement extracted hereinabove, the contract could be invoked at any time before the last date fixed i.e. 02.02.1981 by the plaintiff calling upon the defendant to execute a sale deed, either through a written information, or oral communication. The fact of an oral communication being made by the plaintiff invoking the contract before 02.02.1981, that required the defendant to appear before the Sub-Registrar's office on 02.02.1981, the outer limit fixed for performance, otherwise found to be of essence, is well established on record and concluded by a finding of fact recorded by the lower Appellate Court based on a plausible view of the evidence on record. Thus, notwithstanding the fact, that time is held to be essence of the contract, it cannot be said that the contract was not invoked before the outer time limit expired. As such, it must be held a fortiori that the defendant is not entitled to exercise his option under the first part of Section 55 of the Contract Act to avoid the same. Substantial question no.(2) is, therefore, answered in the negative.

41. It next falls for consideration whether the lower Appellate Court has recorded a reasonable finding regarding readiness and willingness of the plaintiff to perform his part of the contract, that is sine qua non of a party's right to successfully establish his claim to a decree for specific performance. The obligations to establish that the plaintiff has always been ready and willing, and remained ready and willing, all through to get a sale deed executed in terms of the contract ever since the performance fell due and throughout the course of the suit until decree was passed is the requirement of Section 16(c) of the Specific Relief Act, 1963. Section 16(c) of the Specific Relief Act, as it stood before its amendment by Amending Act 18 of 2018, reads as under:

"16. Personal bars to relief.--Specific performance of a contract cannot be enforced in favour of a person--

(a) xxxxxx
(b) xxxxx or

42. It is submitted by the learned counsel for the defendant that the lower Appellate Court has not said by as much as a whisper anything regarding proof by the plaintiff of his case under Section 16(c) (supra) by saying that he remained always ready and willing to perform his part of the suit agreement. It is to the contrary submitted that post execution of the suit agreement, there was total inaction on the plaintiff's part for two and a half years. He points out that the date of the suit agreement is 02.07.1980, where there was a covenant to get a sale deed executed in terms thereof by the plaintiff by 02.02.1981. The earliest that the defendant acted is when he got a notice issued to the plaintiff to execute a sale deed on 24.01.1981. It was just ten days before the date by which parties had agreed that the contract must be performed or not at all. Learned counsel points out that the plaintiff, after the notice dated 24.01.1981 was issued followed it up by two further notices, dated 30.01.1981 and 19.04.1982. But, he did not bring any action until 10.08.1983, when the present suit was filed. This suit was filed after the defendant had sold the suit property by way of a registered sale deed in favour of the purchasers on 03.08.1983. Learned counsel submits that the suit was filed within a week of the defendant transferring the suit property in favour of the purchasers, but two and a half years after the suit agreement was executed on 02.07.1980. It is urged by the learned counsel for the defendant that the uneventful two and a half years, after execution of the suit agreement, without any action taken except for issue of a notice through registered post on the fringes of time before the stipulated date after which in terms of the covenant carried in the suit agreement, the defendant would be free to transfer the suit property in favour of any third party, clearly shows that the plaintiff has not at all proved his readiness and willingness to get a sale deed executed.

43. In support of his contention about the obligation of the plaintiff to demonstrate continuous readiness and willingness from the date of agreement till a decree is passed, as a condition precedent to the grant of relief of specific performance, learned counsel for the defendant has relied on the decision of the Supreme Court in N.P. Thirugnanam v. R. Jagan Mohan Rao (Dr)7, and has in the context of his submission referred to what their Lordships have held in paragraph 5 of the report. It reads thus:

"5. It is settled law that remedy for specific performance is an equitable remedy and is in the discretion of the court, which discretion requires to be exercised according to settled principles of law and not arbitrarily as adumbrated under Section 20 of the Specific Relief Act, 1963 (for short "the Act"). Under Section 20, the court is not bound to grant the relief just because there was a valid agreement of sale. Section 16(c) of the Act envisages that plaintiff must plead and prove that he had performed or has always been ready and willing to perform the essential terms of the contract which are to be performed by him, other than those terms the performance of which has been prevented or waived by the defendant. The continuous readiness and willingness on the part of the plaintiff is a condition precedent to grant the relief of specific performance. This circumstance is material and relevant and is required to be considered by the court while granting or refusing to grant the relief. If the plaintiff fails to either aver or prove the same, he must fail. To adjudge whether the plaintiff is ready and willing to perform his part of the contract, the court must take into consideration the conduct of the plaintiff prior and subsequent to the filing of the suit along with other attending circumstances. The amount of consideration which he has to pay to the defendant must of necessity be proved to be available. Right from the date of the execution till date of the decree he must prove that he is ready and has always been willing to perform his part of the contract. As stated, the factum of his readiness and willingness to perform his part of the contract is to be adjudged with reference to the conduct of the party and the attending circumstances. The court may infer from the facts and circumstances whether the plaintiff was ready and was always ready and willing to perform his part of the contract."

44. Learned counsel for the defendant further placed reliance on the decision of the Supreme Court in Azhar Sultana vs. B. Rajamani and others8 to submit that the relief of specific performance not only requires proof of a continuous readiness and willingness on part of the plaintiff, but also enjoins the Court to exercise its discretion in the matter of grant of that relief. Learned counsel for the defendant has also placed reliance on paragraphs 28, 29, 30 & 32 of the report in Azhar Sultana (supra), where their Lordships have held:

"28. Section 16(c) of the Specific Relief Act, 1963 postulates continuous readiness and willingness on the part of the plaintiff. It is a condition precedent for obtaining a relief of grant of specific performance of contract. The court, keeping in view the fact that it exercises a discretionary jurisdiction, would be entitled to take into consideration as to whether the suit had been filed within a reasonable time. What would be a reasonable time would, however, depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. No hard-and-fast law can be laid down therefor. The conduct of the parties in this behalf would also assume significance.

29. In Veerayee Ammal v. Seeni Ammal [(2002) 1 SCC 134] it was observed: (SCC p. 140, para 11)

"11. When, concededly, the time was not of the essence of the contract, the appellant-plaintiff was required to approach the court of law within a reasonable time. A Constitution Bench of this Hon'ble Court in Chand Rani v. Kamal Rani [(1993) 1 SCC 519] held that in case of sale of immovable property there is no presumption as to time being of the essence of the contract. Even if it is not of the essence of contract, the court may infer that it is to be performed in a reasonable time if the conditions are (i) from the express terms of the contract; (ii) from the nature of the property; and (iii) from the surrounding circumstances, for example, the object of making the contract. For the purposes of granting relief, the reasonable time has to be ascertained from all the facts and circumstances of the case."

It was furthermore observed: (Veerayee Ammal case [(2002) 1 SCC 134], SCC pp. 140-41, para 13)

"13. The word "reasonable' has in law prima facie meaning of reasonable in regard to those circumstances of which the person concerned is called upon to act reasonably knows or ought to know as to what was reasonable. It may be unreasonable to give an exact definition of the word "reasonable'. The reason varies in its conclusion according to idiosyncrasy of the individual and the time and circumstances in which he thinks. The dictionary meaning of "reasonable time' is to be so much time as is necessary, under the circumstances, to do conveniently what the contract or duty requires should be done in a particular case. In other words it means, as soon as circumstances permit. In P. Ramanatha Aiyar's Law Lexicon it is defined to mean:

"A reasonable time, looking at all the circumstances of the case; a reasonable time under ordinary circumstances; as soon as circumstances will permit; so much time as is necessary under the circumstances, conveniently to do what the contract requires should be done; some more protracted space than "directly"; such length of time as may fairly, and properly, and reasonably be allowed or required, having regard to the nature of the act or duty and to the attending circumstances; all these convey more or less the same idea.' "

30. It is also a well-settled principle of law that not only the original vendor but also a subsequent purchaser would be entitled to raise a contention that the plaintiff was not ready and willing to perform his part of contract. (See Ram Awadh v. Achhaibar Dubey [(2000) 2 SCC 428], SCC p. 431 para 6.)

32. Furthermore, grant of decree for specific performance of contract is discretionary. The contesting respondents herein are living in the property since 1981 in their own right. There is absolutely no reason as to why they should be forced to vacate the said property at this juncture."

45. Learned counsel for the plaintiff on the other hand submits that the plaintiff has clearly averred in the plaint, and proved to the hilt that he has been ready and willing to perform his part of the suit agreement. At complete variance to what learned counsel for the defendant has submitted that the lower Appellate Court has not recorded any finding as to readiness and willingness, mandatorily required under Section 16(c) of the Specific Relief Act, learned counsel for the plaintiff submits that the lower Appellate Court has recorded a clear finding as to readiness and willingness, being established by the plaintiff. He has, in particular, invited the attention of the Court to averments in the plaint, in this regard. He has relied upon paragraphs 4 & 5 of the plaint, in particular, that read thus:

"4. यह कि वादी हमेशा - हमेशा मुताविक माहिदा विवादित भूमि का बैनामा प्रतिवादी नं० 1 वकिया जर समन लिखाने को तैयार रहे और अब भी हैं परन्तु प्रतिवादी नं० 1 कोई न कोई बहाना करके टालता चला आ रहा है।

5. यह कि मजबूरन वादी ने जरिए वकील प्रतिवादी नं० 1 को नोटिस दिनांक 24-1-81 को तथा वादहू दिनांक 30-3-81 तथा दिनांक 19-4-82 को भेजी और प्रतिवादी नं० 1 को मुताविक माहिदा बय दिनांक 2-2-81 को सब रजिस्ट्रार कार्यालय में हाजिर आकर

बैनामा लिखाने की इत्तला दी परन्तु प्रतिवादी नं० 1 उक्त तिथि पर हाजिर नहीं आया जब कि वादी हाजिर रहे।"

46. Learned counsel for the plaintiff has also referred to the following part of the finding recorded by the lower Appellate Court, which reads:

"प्रतिवादी का कथन प्रथम दृष्टया विश्वसनीय नहीं हैए क्योंकि वादी ने दि० 2.2.81 को उप निबन्धक करछना के समक्ष अपनी उपस्थिति का शपथ पूर्वक कथन के अतिरिक्त अभिलेखीय साक्ष्य भी प्रस्तुत किया है। इसके विपरीत प्रतिवादी सं० 1 का उपरोक्त तिथि को अपनी उपस्थिति अंकित कराने का कोई अभिलेखीय साक्ष्य प्रस्तुत नहीं किया गया है। स्वाभाविक रूप से प्रतिवादी सं० 1 यदि उप निबन्धक करछना के कार्यालय में उपस्थित था तब वह अपनी उपस्थिति अंकित कराने हेतु प्रार्थनापत्र दे सकता था। इस संबंध में राम निहोर ने अपने बयान में कथन किया है कि दि० 2ण्2ण्81 को रजिस्ट्री आफिस में आने से दो दिन पूर्व वादी से मिला था तथा तय हुआ था कि रजिस्ट्री आफिस में आ जाये। यह तथ्य भी वादी के कथन के समर्थन करता है कि वादी दि० 2.2.81 को बैनामा कराने के लिए तैयार था तथा नोटिस देकर दि० 2.2.81 को बैनामा करने के आग्रह किया था। प्रतिवादी का कथन है कि वह उस दिन बलराम मुंशी के पास बैठकर इन्तजार करता रहा। प्रतिवादी स्वयं यह कथन करता है कि वादी ने सब रजिस्ट्रार आफिस में मिलने के लिए कहा थाए तब ऐसी दशा में प्रतिवादी को रजिस्ट्री आफिस में मिलना चाहिए था तथा बलराम मुंशी के पास बैठने का कोई कारण नहीं था। यह तथ्य इस बात का परिचायक है कि प्रतिवादी जानबूझ कर उप निबन्धक के कार्यालय में बैनामा करने हेतु उपस्थित नहीं हुआ तथा वादी विक्रय अनुबन्ध की शर्तों के अनुपालन में सदैव तत्पर, इच्छुक व तैयार रहा था तथा इसी आशय से दि० 2.2.81 को उप निबन्धक के कार्यालय में पहुँचा था।"

47. Learned counsel for the plaintiff has placed reliance on the decision of the Supreme Court in V. Pechimuthu v. Gowrammal9, where it has been held:

"20. Coming to the facts of the case, there is no dispute that the appellant sent a legal notice to the respondent offering to pay the entire amount of Rs 19,990 to the respondent well within the period specified in the agreement. The suit was also filed before 3-5-1979. Nothing further remained to be done by the appellant under the agreement. As far as the deposit of the balance consideration was concerned under Explanation (i) to Section 16(c) [Explanation.--For the purposes of clause (c),--(i) where a contract involves the payment of money, it is not essential for the plaintiff to actually tender to the defendant or to deposit in court any money except when so directed by the court;] of the Specific Relief Act, 1963 the appellant could wait for an order of the court to do so. That is what he did. Both the trial court and the first appellate court on a consideration of all the evidence therefore rightly came to the conclusion that the appellant was ready and willing to perform his obligations under the agreement and was entitled to specific performance of it."

48. He has further placed reliance on the decision of the Supreme Court in Jiwan Lal (Dr) v. Brij Mohan Mehra10. He has invited the attention of the Court to paragraph 13 of the report in Jiwan Lal (Dr.) (supra), which reads thus:

"13. In his written statement Brij Mohan Mehra pleaded only waiver and not also that he would be prejudiced by specific performance. There was considerable correspondence between the parties between February 11, and April 27, 1960. In their letters the prospective vendees repeatedly asked Brij Mohan Mehra to execute a sale-deed in accordance with the agreement. They also said that they were ready and willing to pay the sale consideration stipulated in the agreement. But Brij Mohan Mehra persisted in his refusal to execute the sale-deed. Eventually on April 17, 1960 one Sardari Lal Sachdev, Advocate, gave notice on behalf of the prospective vendees to Shri Hans Raj Mittal, Advocate, for Brij Mohan Mehra. It is said in that notice that the prospective vendees would attend the office of the Sub-Registrar, Amritsar on April 30, 1960 between 10 a.m. and 12 noon and that Brij Mohan Mehra should reach there to get the sale-deed registered. As April 30, 1960 was a holiday, the prospective vendees later sent a telegram to Brij Mohan Mehra to appear before the Sub-Registrar and produced before him a sum of Rs 1,12,500. The money was counted by the clerk of the Sub-Registrar. Brij Mohan Mehra did not appear before the Sub-Registrar o की नहीं प्राप्त हुई n that date. The Sub-Registrar has supported this version of the plaintiffs. Dr Jiwan Lal, one of the plaintiffs, has deposed that even after April 29, 1960, he had been asking Brij Mohan Mehra to execute a registered sale-deed but he had been evading. One Mr Ranbir Mehta went along with him to Brij Mohan Mehra for the same purpose. But Brij Mohan Mehra told him that as the premises had been attached by the Rani of Kashmir he should wait for some time. Dr Jiwan Lal then added: "Thereafter I went and asked him to complete the same but he continued to evade." There appears to be no cross-examination on this part of his statement on behalf of Brij Mohan Mehra. Dr Jiwan Lal denied in his cross-examination that the plaintiffs had abandoned their claim. It is not possible to believe that the plaintiffs, who were so insistent on the execution of the sale-deed in their favour and who had actually appeared before the Sub-Registrar with the requisite amount of money for payment to the vendor, would abandon their claim after April 29 or August 1, 1960. There is no reason to disbelieve Dr Jiwan Lal's statement that even after April 29, 1960, he had been pressing upon Brij Mohan Mehra to execute a registered sale-deed. In our opinion the plaintiffs did not abandon their rights under the agreement. The institution of the suit after two years does not appear to have caused any disadvantage to Brij Mohan Mehra. As already stated earlier, there is no such allegation in his written statement nor is there any evidence to that effect. Brij Mohan Mehra has admitted in his cross-examination that the prices of properties started depreciating in or about October, 1962 when there was Chinese aggression on India. The suit was instituted after the Chinese aggression. So it cannot be said that the specific performance of the agreement was likely to cause any prejudice to Brij Mohan Mehra on the date of the institution of the suit. The suit cannot accordingly be dismissed on account of delay. In view of our earlier findings, it is not necessary to decide whether the requisitioning of the premises was a manoeuvre of Brij Mohan Mehra to slide back from the agreement."

49. It is urged on the basis of the aforesaid decision that mere delay in filing the suit, without proof of prejudice occasioned to the defendant is no ground to refuse specific performance.

50. This Court has considered the rival submissions advanced by the learned counsel on both sides. So far as this Court is concerned, it would settle down to a consideration whether in principle the lower Appellate Court has dealt with the issue of the plaintiff's establishing his readiness and willingness as mandated by Section 16(c) of the Specific Relief Act, and if the answer be in the affirmative, whether the lower Appellate Court has drawn conclusions about it on facts, evidence and the law applicable, that may be termed as perverse. The finding recorded by the lower Appellate Court regarding readiness and willingness, that has been extracted hereinabove, indeed, shows that the lower Appellate Court has considered the matter with reference to the pleadings and the law. It has recorded a definitive finding in the judgment that the plaintiff has been always ready and willing to perform his part of the suit agreement. It is not a case where the lower Appellate Court has not touched the issue of readiness and willingness at all, as urged by the learned counsel for the defendant.

51. Turning to the question as to whether the conclusions drawn by the lower Appellate Court on the question of readiness and willingness are perverse bearing in mind the facts of the case, the evidence on record and the law applicable, this Court must take due note of the fact that the question of readiness and willingness has recently engaged the attention of the Supreme Court in R. Lakshmikantham vs. Devaraji11, wherein it has been held:

"10. The High Court order is not correct in stating that readiness and willingness cannot be inferred because the letters dated 18.12.2002 and 19.12.2002 had not been sent to the defendant. The High Court also erred in holding that despite having the necessary funds, the plaintiff could not be said to be ready and willing. In the aforesaid circumstances, the High Court was also incorrect in putting a short delay in filing the Suit against the plaintiff to state that he was not ready and willing. In India, it is well settled that the rule of equity that exists in England, does not apply, and so long as a Suit for specific performance is filed within the period of limitation, delay cannot be put against the plaintiff - See Mademsetty Satyanarayana v. G. Yelloji Rao AIR 1965 Supreme Court 1405 (paragraph 7) which reads as under:

"(7) Mr. Lakshmaiah cited a long catena of English decisions to define the scope of a Court's discretion. Before referring to them, it is necessary to know the fundamental difference between the two systems-English and Indian-qua the relief of specific performance. In England the relief of specific performance pertains to the domain of equity; in India, to that of statutory law. In England there is no period of limitation for instituting a suit for the said relief and, therefore, mere delay - the time lag depending upon circumstances - may itself be sufficient to refuse the relief; but, in India mere delay cannot be a ground for refusing the said relief, for the statute prescribes the period of limitation. If the suit is in time, delay is sanctioned by law; if it is beyond time, the suit will be dismissed as barred by time; in either case, no question of equity arises." "

(Emphasis by Court)

52. The question fell more recently for consideration of their Lordships of the Supreme Court in Madhukar Nivrutti

Jagtap and Others vs. Smt. Pramilabai Chandulal Parandekar and Others12, where considering the decisions, inter allia, in Azhar Sultana (supra), and the very recent decision in R. Lakshmikantham (supra), it has been held by their Lordships, thus:

"44. So far the period between the year 1966 to the year 1968 is concerned, when the plaintiffs had the limitation of three years for filing the suit for specific performance, it cannot be said that during the aforesaid period, the plaintiffs were required to show overt act by them in furtherance of the agreement in question. The principles stated in the decisions in Azhar Sultana, Veerayee Ammal and Pushparani S. Sundaram (supra), as relied upon by the learned counsel for the appellants, are not of any doubt or debate but each of the said cases had proceeded on its own facts. We may also observe that in the case of Azhar Sultana, the Court found that as against the agreement dated 04.12.1978, the suit for specific performance was filed on 07.12.1981, after the property was sold on 31.10.1981; and that the plaintiff failed to show that she was not having notice of the subsequent sale. However, in the said case, the Court directed monetary payment to the tune of twice the amount advanced by the plaintiff. In Veerayee Ammal, this Court pointed out that the expression "reasonable time' for performance on the part of plaintiff would depend on the circumstances of the case, including the terms of contract. In Pushparani S. Sundaram,the basic requirements of Section 16 of the Act of 1963 were reiterated. In contrast to what is suggested on behalf of the appellants, we may point out that recently, in the case of R Lakshmikantham v. Devaraji : Civil Appeal No. 2420 of 2018, decided on 10.07.2019, this Court has again explained that when the suit for specific performance is filed within the period of limitation, delay cannot be put against the plaintiff. This Court has said:--

"....In the aforesaid circumstances, the High Court was also incorrect in putting a short delay in filing the Suit against the plaintiff to state that he was not ready and willing. In India, it is well settled that the rule of equity that exists in England, does not apply, and so long as a Suit for specific performance is filed within the period of limitation, delay cannot be put against the plaintiff - See Mademsetty Satyanarayana v. G. Yelloji Rao AIR 1965 Supreme Court 1405(paragraph 7) which reads as under:--

"(7) Mr. Lakshamaihan cited a long catena of English decisions to define the scope of a Court's discretion. Before referring to them, it is necessary to know the fundamental difference between the two systems-English and Indian-qua the relief of specific performance. In England the relief of specific performance pertains to the domain of equity; in India, to that of statutory law. In England there is no period of limitation for instituting a suit for the said relief and, therefore, mere delay - the time lag depending upon circumstances - may itself be sufficient to refuse the relief; but, in India mere delay cannot be a ground for refusing the said relief, for the statute prescribes the period of limitation. If the suit is in time, delay is sanctioned by law; if it is beyond time, the suit will be dismissed as barred by time; in either case, no question of equity arises.""

45. In the present case too, when the plaintiffs had the limitation of three years for filing the suit and have indeed filed the suit well within limitation; and looking to the overall circumstances of the case, no aspect of delay operates against them."

53. It must be remarked that though time has been found to be of the essence on a construction of the terms of the suit agreement here, it has been found also that within the time limited by the agreement, the plaintiff invoked the agreement requiring the defendant's presence at the office of the Sub-Registrar on 02.02.1981 to execute the sale deed. The fact that after 02.02.1981, the plaintiff brought the present suit on 10.08.1983, post lapse of two years and six months of the date on which the cause of action had accrued would not ipso facto lead to the inference that the plaintiff was not ready and willing to perform his part of the contract. It has figured in evidence that apart from the notice dated 24.01.1982 through which the defendant along with a verbal communication had invoked performance of the contract before the date agreed between parties, the plaintiff also sent two further notices dated 30.03.1981 and 19.04.1982, calling upon the defendant to discharge his obligations by executing a conveyance in his favour. While service of notice dated 24.01.1982 before the date fixed in the contract as the limiting event of obligations has not been proved, invocation of the contract has been held proved on the basis of oral evidence on admission of parties before the due date; service of two subsequent notices, dated 30.03.1981 and 19.04.1982 is established by sterling evidence. The service of these two subsequent notices is established by postal acknowledgments filed by the plaintiff that have been marked as evidence at the trial. In these circumstances, it is evident that the plaintiff's readiness and willingness during the period of limitation prescribed by law of filing a suit cannot be doubted. There is no such evidence by which either readiness or willingness may be inferred out. The fact that he waited for a period of two years and six months to institute a suit after he had invoked the contract, has been held by the decision of the Supreme Court in R. Lakshmikantham (supra) as a circumstance wherefrom an inference about lack of readiness or willingness could not be drawn; at least that inference could not be drawn in the absence of any evidence aliunde to show that the plaintiff during the period of limitation was not ready and willing. Though, in their Lordship's decision in R. Lakshmikantham (supra), the delay in filing the suit is described as a short one, it has been laid down as a rule that in India, the rule of equity that obtains in England against delay in bringing an action, does not apply in seeking specific performance so long as a suit for specific performance is filed within limitation. The finding of the Lower Appellate Court regarding readiness and willingness is based on a plausible view of the evidence which the law does not disapprove. This being so, the view of the Lower Appellate Court that the plaintiff has been ready and willing throughout cannot be said to be perverse. The finding of the Lower Appellate Court, on the question of readiness and willingness is, therefore, affirmed.

54. But, a finding that on the evidence available on record and the standards of law laid down, the plaintiff has been ready and willing throughout is a matter that may have no bearing at all on the question whether the Lower Appellate Court has exercised discretion to grant specific performance on reasoning that may not be found flawed for its perversity.

55. In the present case, notwithstanding the finding that the plaintiff throughout the period of limitation was rightly found by the last Court of fact to be ready and willing throughout, the standards regarding exercise of discretion to grant specific performance as spelt out by Section 20 of the Specific Relief Act too have been reasonably adhered to, requires scrutiny. The law about it generally is that specific performance is not to be granted merely because it is lawful to do so. Various factors that emerge from the facts of the case and evidence on record would go into a valid decision being arrived at, whether to grant specific performance or refuse the same by opting for some alternative relief to remedy the breach of contract, otherwise found in favour of the plaintiff. Again, so far as this Court is concerned, so long as the discretion that has been exercised by the last Court of fact, that is to say, the Lower Appellate Court, is not perverse, in the sense that no reasonable person under the circumstances could have taken the view under challenge, it is not for this Court to interfere with the exercise of that discretion.

56. It would again be profitable to look into the authority guiding exercise of discretion under Section 20 of the Specific Relief Act. Learned counsel for the plaintiff has drawn the Court's attention in this regard to the decision of the Supreme Court again in V. Pechimuthu (Supra), where dealing with the issue of rise in prices of land and holding it to be a relevant factor in denying relief of specific performance by Courts of fact, it was held by their Lordship's thus:

25. Counsel for the respondent finally urged that specific performance should not be granted to the appellant now because the price of land had risen astronomically in the last few years and it would do injustice to the respondent to compel her to reconvey property at prices fixed in 1978.

26. The argument is specious. Where the court is considering whether or not to grant a decree for specific performance for the first time, the rise in the price of the land agreed to be conveyed may be a relevant factor in denying the relief of specific performance. (See K.S. Vidyanadam v. Vairavan [(1997) 3 SCC 1].) But in this case, the decree for specific performance has already been passed by the trial court and affirmed by the first appellate court. The only question before us is whether the High Court in second appeal was correct in reversing the decree. Consequently the principle enunciated in K.S. Vidyanadam [(1997) 3 SCC 1] will not apply.

57. Reliance has further been placed by the learned counsel for the plaintiff on the same point on a decision of the Supreme Court in Ramathal vs. Maruthathal & Ors.,13, which again was a case where the issue of escalating prices of property was considered in the context of exercise of discretion under Section 20 of the Specific Relief Act. In this case, the consideration was outrightly rejected to be relevant by the their Lordship's holding thus:

23. The buyer has taken prompt steps to file a suit for specific performance as soon as the execution of the sale was stalled by the seller. From this discussion, it is clear that the buyer has always been ready and willing to perform his part of the contract at all stages. Moreover it is the seller who had always been trying to wriggle out of the contract. Now the seller cannot take advantage of their own wrong and then plead that the grant of decree of specific performance would be inequitable. Escalation of prices cannot be a ground for denying the relief of specific performance. Specific performance is an equitable relief and granting the relief is the discretion of the court. The discretion has to be exercised by the court judicially and within the settled principles of law. Absolutely there is no illegality or infirmity in the judgments of the courts below which has judicially exercised its discretion and the High Court ought not to have interfered with the same.

58. Learned counsel for the plaintiff has relied on another authority of their Lordship's of the Supreme Court in Dr. Jivanlal and others vs. Brij Mohan Mehra and another14. In that case, considering the exercise of discretion to grant or refuse specific performance, their Lordship's considered the prejudice that would be involved in granting that relief on account of the delay by the plaintiff in instituting the suit. In the case before their Lordship's, the suit had been instituted two years after performance fell due. The evidence and the circumstances obtaining in the case were very minutely considered to hold that by mere delay in instituting the suit, no prejudice was caused to the defendant. The suit for specific performance was, therefore, decreed by their Lordship's, which had been decreed by the Trial Court but reversed on appeal by the High Court. The reasoning in Dr. Jivanlal (supra) to hold in favour of specific performance by discounting delay of two years is enmeshed in the facts there that serve as a guiding light to the exercise of discretion under Section 20. It has been held in paragraph 12 and 13 of the report in Dr. Jivanlal (supra) thus:-

12. The agreement was made on December 9, 1959. The premises were requisitioned by an order, dated January 23, 1960. Brij Mohan Mehra filed an appeal against the order of requisition. It was dismissed on August 1, 1960. The suit was instituted on November 5, 1962. As the appeal was pending, the plaintiffs could reasonably wait until August 1, 1960 in the hope that the order of requisition might be set aside in appeal. So no legitimate objection can be taken on the score of delay until August 1, 1960. The suit was instituted within two years, three months and four days of the dismissal of appeal on August 1, 1960. It is now to be seen whether this delay is such as would disentitle the plaintiffs to the relief of specific performance of the contract. InLindsay Petroleum Co.v.Hurd[(1874) LR 5 PC 221 at 239] . Lord Selborne said:

"The doctrine of laches in courts of equity is not an arbitrary or technical doctrine. Where it would be practically unjust to give a remedy either because the party has by his conduct done that which might fairly be regarded as an equivalent to a waiver of it, or where by his conduct and neglect he has, though perhaps not waiving that remedy put the other party in a situation in which it would not be reasonable to place him if the remedy were afterwards to be asserted, in either of these cases lapse of time and delay are most material."

13. In his written statement Brij Mohan Mehra pleaded only waiver and not also that he would be prejudiced by specific performance. There was considerable correspondence between the parties between February 11, and April 27, 1960. In their letters the prospective vendees repeatedly asked Brij Mohan Mehra to execute a sale-deed in accordance with the agreement. They also said that they were ready and willing to pay the sale consideration stipulated in the agreement. But Brij Mohan Mehra persisted in his refusal to execute the sale-deed. Eventually on April 17, 1960 one Sardari Lal Sachdev, Advocate, gave notice on behalf of the prospective vendees to Shri Hans Raj Mittal, Advocate, for Brij Mohan Mehra. It is said in that notice that the prospective vendees would attend the office of the Sub-Registrar, Amritsar on April 30, 1960 between 10 a.m. and 12 noon and that Brij Mohan Mehra should reach there to get the sale-deed registered. As April 30, 1960 was a holiday, the prospective vendees later sent a telegram to Brij Mohan Mehra to appear before the Sub-Registrar and produced before him a sum of Rs 1,12,500. The money was counted by the clerk of the Sub-Registrar. Brij Mohan Mehra did not appear before the Sub-Registrar on that date. The Sub-Registrar has supported this version of the plaintiffs. Dr Jiwan Lal, one of the plaintiffs, has deposed that even after April 29, 1960, he had been asking Brij Mohan Mehra to execute a registered sale-deed but he had been evading. One Mr Ranbir Mehta went along with him to Brij Mohan Mehra for the same purpose. But Brij Mohan Mehra told him that as the premises had been attached by the Rani of Kashmir he should wait for some time. Dr Jiwan Lal then added: "Thereafter I went and asked him to complete the same but he continued to evade." There appears to be no cross-examination on this part of his statement on behalf of Brij Mohan Mehra. Dr Jiwan Lal denied in his cross-examination that the plaintiffs had abandoned their claim. It is not possible to believe that the plaintiffs, who were so insistent on the execution of the sale-deed in their favour and who had actually appeared before the Sub-Registrar with the requisite amount of money for payment to the vendor, would abandon their claim after April 29 or August 1, 1960. There is no reason to disbelieve Dr Jiwan Lal's statement that even after April 29, 1960, he had been pressing upon Brij Mohan Mehra to execute a registered sale-deed. In our opinion the plaintiffs did not abandon their rights under the agreement. The institution of the suit after two years does not appear to have caused any disadvantage to Brij Mohan Mehra. As already stated earlier, there is no such allegation in his written statement nor is there any evidence to that effect. Brij Mohan Mehra has admitted in his cross-examination that the prices of properties started depreciating in or about October, 1962 when there was Chinese aggression on India. The suit was instituted after the Chinese aggression. So it cannot be said that the specific performance of the agreement was likely to cause any prejudice to Brij Mohan Mehra on the date of the institution of the suit. The suit cannot accordingly be dismissed on account of delay. In view of our earlier findings, it is not necessary to decide whether the requisitioning of the premises was a manoeuvre of Brij Mohan Mehra to slide back from the agreement.

59. Learned counsel for the defendant on the other hand relied upon the decision of the Supreme Court in Parakunnan Veetill Joseph's son Mathew vs. Nedumbara Kuruvila's Son15, in support of the proposition that where conduct or neglect of the plaintiff induces the defendant to change his position to his prejudice, it would be a relevant factor to refuse relief. The said part of the reasoning is to be found in the decision of their Lordship's in Parakunnan Veetill Joseph's Son Mathew (supra) by way of a quotation with approval to an earlier authority of the Supreme Court in Satyanarayana v. Yellogi Rao16. It has been further held that the discretion to exercise specific performance should be exercised after meticulous consideration of all facts and circumstances. Specific performance is not to be granted merely because it is lawful to do so. It has also been held that the court should take care to see as to what is the motive behind the litigation. Paragraphs 13 and 14 of the report in Parakunnan Veetill Joseph's Son Mathew (supra) are enlightening, where it held:

13. In Satyanarayana v. G Yellogi Rao [AIR 1965 SC 1405 : (1965) 2 SCR 221, 230] this Court observed:

"But as in England so in India, proof of abandonment or waiver of a right is not a precondition necessary to disentitle the plaintiff to the said relief, for if abandonment or waiver is established, no question of discretion on the part of the court would arise. We have used the expression "waiver' in its legally accepted sense, namely, "waiver is contractual, and may constitute a cause of action: it is an agreement to release or not to assert a right': see Dawson's Bank Ltd. v. Nippon Menkwa Kabushiki Kaisha [1935 LR 62 IA 100, 108] . It is not possible or desirable to lay down the circumstances under which a court can exercise its discretion against the plaintiff. But they must be such that the representation by or the conduct or neglect of the plaintiff is directly responsible in inducing the defendant to change his position to his prejudice or such as to bring about a situation when it would be inequitable to give him such a relief."

14. Section 20 of the Specific Relief Act, 1963 preserves judicial discretion of courts as to decreeing specific performance. The court should meticulously consider all facts and circumstances of the case. The court is not bound to grant specific performance merely because it is lawful to do so. The motive behind the litigation should also enter into the judicial verdict. The court should take care to see that it is not used as an instrument of oppression to have an unfair advantage to the plaintiff. The High Court has failed to consider the motive with which Varghese instituted the suit. It was instituted because Kuruvila could not get the estate and Mathew was not prepared to part with it. The sheet anchor of the suit by Varghese is the agreement for sale Exhibit A-1. Since Chettiar had waived his rights thereunder, Varghese as an assignee could not get a better right to enforce that agreement. He is, therefore, not entitled to a decree for specific performance.

60. Learned counsel for the defendant has in support of his contention that inaction for a long period of time on the part of the plaintiff in bringing the suit and substantial rise in prices of properties, would be a relevant factor to refuse specific performance has placed reliance on the decision of the Supreme Court in K.S. Vidyanadam vs. Vairavan17. In the said case, notice through counsel was issued by the plaintiff, two and a half years after performance fell due and during this time no action was taken by the plaintiff. In the aforesaid context, it has been held in K.S. Vidyanadam (supra) by their lordship's thus:

*13. In the case before us, it is not mere delay. It is a case of total inaction on the part of the plaintiff for 2 1/2 years in clear violation of the terms of agreement which required him to pay the balance, purchase the stamp papers and then ask for execution of sale deed within six months. Further, the delay is coupled with substantial rise in prices -- according to the defendants, three times -- between the date of agreement and the date of suit notice. The delay has brought about a situation where it would be inequitable to give the relief of specific performance to the plaintiff.

*14. Shri Sivasubramaniam then relied upon the decision in Jiwan Lal (Dr) v. Brij Mohan Mehra [(1972) 2 SCC 757 : (1973) 2 SCR 230] to show that the delay of two years is not a ground to deny specific performance. But a perusal of the judgment shows that there were good reasons for the plaintiff to wait in that case because of the pendency of an appeal against the order of requisition of the suit property. We may reiterate that the true principle is the one stated by the Constitution Bench in Chand Rani [(1993) 1 SCC 519] . Even where time is not of the essence of the contract, the plaintiffs must perform his part of the contract within a reasonable time and reasonable time should be determined by looking at all the surrounding circumstances including the express terms of the contract and the nature of the property.

(Emphasis by Court)*

61. The principles that emerge from the above decisions are well settled but at the same time there is no straight-jacket formula that may serve as a ready reckoner to answer the issue whether discretion to exercise specific performance has been rightly exercised. Moreover, when the Court is seized of the matter not as a Court of fact but one hearing an appeal from an appellate decree, it is not an open question for the Court to decide whether on facts and evidence on record, the law has been correctly applied regarding exercise of discretion to grant specific performance; or for that matter to refuse it. This Court is limited in its appraisal of the issue to see whether the discretion under Section 20 has been perversely exercised. This is particularly true of the consideration about rise in prices of land subject matter of the suit as a relevant factor in guiding the discretion under Section 20. There the difference in scale of appraisal or the freedom to decide on all facts and evidence have been noticed by their Lordship's of the Supreme Court in V. Pechimuthu (supra).

62. Turning to the facts of the present case, this Court finds that proceeding on the premise that the defendant was asked by the plaintiff to appear before the Sub-Registrar's Office on 02.02.1981 that was the limiting date to perform his part of the contract and that the defendant despite being aware of the demand avoided performing his obligations under the suit agreement, there is no plausible explanation forthcoming in evidence as to why the suit that should have been filed shortly after 02.02.1981, came to be filed as late as on 10.08.1983, with a delay of two years and six months. During this period of time, the defendant executed a sale deed conveying the suit property in favour of the purchasers on 03.08.1983. It is indeed reflective of conduct certainly not bona fide on the plaintiff's part that he brought this suit within seven days of the aforesaid sale deed being executed by the defendant in favour of the purchasers. The plaintiff waited from 02.02.1981 when the defendant did not appear to execute a sale deed and get it registered before the Sub-Registrar for all the time of two years and six months, but moved to bring the suit within a week of the sale deed last mentioned, being executed in favour of the purchasers. This conduct of the plaintiff in the considered opinion of this Court is such that no other view of the matter can be taken but one that dis-entitles the plaintiff to relief of specific performance. The fact that by his utter inaction to bring a suit during all the long period of time of two years and six months and doing that when rights in favour of the purchasers were created under a sale deed executed for valuable consideration by the defendant, most certainly makes equity work against the plaintiff and in favour of the defendant; more strongly, in favour of the purchasers who are also parties to the suit, and, of course, this appeal. The equity works more strongly so far as the purchasers are concerned as they have contested the suit.

63. In this view of the matter this Court finds that the Lower Appellate Court went so wrong in granting specific performance that its view about the exercise of discretion under Section 20 of the Specific Relief Act is clearly perverse. Substantial question no.(3) is, thus, answered in the negative in so far as it relates to Section 20 of the Specific Relief Act; with regard to Sections 10 and 16 it is answered in the affirmative.

64. It requires mention that the added substantial question of law that was framed by this Court during the course of hearing on 11.03.2019 was based on a decision of the Supreme Court in B.Vijaya Bharathi vs. P. Savitri and others18, where Sri K.M. Garg, learned counsel for the appellant relying on the remarks in paragraph 70 of the report, had pressed that the said question be framed. Now, that this Court has concluded that relief of specific performance is not to be granted, there is no good reason to go into the aforesaid substantial question of law and decide the same. The said substantial question of law is, therefore, not required to be answered. The plaintiff has asked for the alternative relief of earnest money advanced, that is to say, Rs. 1800/- with interest @ 2% per mensem. There is no relief claimed by way of compensation, in terms of Section 21 of the Specific Relief Act.

65. In the present case, breach of contract has been found established, as also readiness and willingness on the plaintiff's part. It is another matter that for reasons assigned, it has been held that the relief of specific performance is one that is ruled out. In this view of the matter, the decree of specific performance is liable to be set aside and substituted by a decree for refund of the earnest money together with interest @ 14% per annum, past and pendentelite; future interest would be payable @ 6% per annum in accordance with the provisions of Section 34 C.P.C. Looking to the circumstances that parties have met with partial success, it is a case where costs should go easy.

66. In the result, the appeal succeeds and is allowed in part. The impugned decree passed by the Lower Appellate Court is set aside and substituted by a decree in terms that the defendant shall refund to the plaintiff the earnest money of Rs. 1800/-, together with interest @ 14% per annum past and pendentelite; and future interest @ 6% per annum. Parties shall bear their own cost throughout.

67. Let a decree be drawn up, accordingly.

(Delivered by Hon'ble J.J. Munir, J.)

1. This is a plaintiffs' second appeal from a judgment and decree of Sri K.N. Pandey, the then Third Additional District Judge, Jaunpur, dated 21.01.1992, dismissing Civil Appeal no.236 of 1982 with costs, and affirming an original decree of Sri Ashok Kumar Tiwari, the then Third Additional Munsif, Jaunpur, dated 17.09.1982, passed in Original Suit no.517 of 1980, dismissing the said suit for reliefs of permanent prohibitory injunction and cancellation. This appeal was admitted to hearing on the substantial question of law, whether the suit is barred under Section 331 of the U.P. Z.A. & L.R. Act.

2. This Appeal was heard on the said question of law on 27.02.2019 and judgment was reserved. This Court felt that some other questions of law, relative to the question last mentioned, but framed in more specific terms, that would enable parties to better address the Court on their respective case, were required to be framed. Accordingly, this Appeal was posted for further hearing on 01.05.2019. On the said date, the following substantial questions of law were framed:

"(i) Whether a suit held barred by the provisions of Section 331 of the U.P. Z.A. & L.R. Act would entail a decree of dismissal of the suit, or an order for return of the plaint to be presented to a Court of competent jurisdiction?

(ii) Whether the rights and title of parties to land concluded in terms of an order passed by the Consolidation Authorities and recorded as such in the Revenue Records can be re-agitated by the said parties in a suit before the Civil Court notwithstanding the provisions of Section 49 of the U.P. Consolidation of Land Holdings Act?

(iii) Whether an order of the Consolidation Courts deciding rights of parties in terms of a compromise, not set aside on ground of fraud or otherwise within the prescribed period of limitation is relevant evidence in a subsequent suit inter partes relating to the same land litigating under the same title under Section 44 of the Indian Evidence Act?"

3. The first question of law as rephrased takes in its fold the substantial question law, on which this Appeal was admitted to hearing. Question nos.2 & 3 are added questions with reference to different issues. The learned counsel for the parties were, accordingly, heard afresh on 01.05.2019, and judgment was reserved.

4. Heard Sri Anmol Ranjan, holding brief of Sri M.N. Singh, learned counsel for the appellants and Sri V. Singh along with Sri Manoj Singh, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the defendant-respondent.

5. It may be indicated at the outset that the suit was filed by the two plaintiffs, Heera and Jawahir, both sons of Vishwanath Kushwaha against four defendants, to wit, Moti, Rambali, Nandlal and Ram Palat. Pending appeal before the lower Appellate Court, of the two plaintiffs, Heera died and was substituted by his heirs and legal representatives, to wit, Bansraj and Hansraj. Before this Court, the Appeal was filed by Bansraj and Hansraj, and the then surviving one of the two original plaintiffs, Jawahir. Pending this Appeal, Jawahir, plaintiff/ appellant no.3 has passed away, and is represented by his heirs and legal representatives, numbering five. Likewise, amongst the original defendants, defendant/ respondent no.1, Moti and defendant/ respondent no.2, Nandlal, have died pending this Appeal and are represented on record by their respective heirs and legal representatives. The appellants in this Appeal, shall hereinafter be referred to as the plaintiffs whereas the respondents shall be called the defendants, except where they are individually referred to.

6. The suit in this case was instituted on 06.12.1980 seeking reliefs of permanent prohibitory injunction to the effect that the defendants be restrained from interfering with the plaintiffs' possession in the suit property as detailed in Schedule-A to the plaint, and to refrain in any manner from interfering with their possession or disturbing the same. By a separate relief, a decree was sought claiming cancellation of sale deed dated 11.11.1980 A.D. executed by defendant no.1 in favour of defendant nos.2 & 3, in so far as it relates to half of the area of land detailed in Schedule-A to the plaint.

7. A reference to some facts that have given rise to the present appeal is necessary. The first to be mentioned, are the two pedigrees, one being of the plaintiffs, and, the second, being of defendant no.1, Moti as propounded by the plaintiffs through an amendment to the plaint, permitted by the Court vide order dated 01.04.1981.

The pedigree of the plaintiff:
Dhannu Mallah
Kanhai
Vishwanath

Heera
Jawahir
(plaintiff no.1)
(plaintiff no.2)
The pedigree of defendant no.1:
Gannu Mallah
Mittu - Mst. Biranji @ Viyau
Natthu (Tarayal son)
Moti

8. It must be noticed here that the plaint as originally drawn had set out a pedigree very different from that brought through the amendment referred above. The pedigree prior to its amendment has shown the plaintiffs and the defendants to be descendants of a common ancestor, Gannu Mallah. Through the amendment brought, however, the plaintiffs and the defendants, have been claimed to be strangers, with Gannu Mallah being the predecessor-in-title of the defendants and Dhannu Mallah to be that of the plaintiffs. The pre-amended pedigree of parties, of which both Courts below have taken due note, is depicted below:

Gannu Mallah
Kanhai Mittu - Biranji

Vishwanath Natthu (Tarayal)

Moti
Heera Jawahir

Chandra Shekhar Subhash

9. The case of the plaintiffs is that they are the descendants of one Dhannu Mallah, who had one son Kanhai and no other. It has been emphasized that Kanhai had no brother. Kanhai too had one son, Vishwanath. The two original plaintiffs, Heera and Jawahir are sons of Vishwanath. It has further been pleaded that the defendants' ancestor was Gannu Mallah, whose son was Mittu. Mittu was unmarried. He settled with a widow named Biranji in some kind of a relationship (may be recognised by custom, but did not marry her). Biranji had brought along her son, Natthu, begotten of her deceased husband. Natthu last mentioned is described in his relationship to Mittu, or the family that his mother became part of, as "Tarayal', which is a word of local usage. According to the plaintiffs, the property detailed in Schedule A to the plaint was in the agricultural tenure of Kanhai, the plaintiffs' grandfather whereas property detailed in Schedule B to the plaint, was holding of Mittu, the predecessor-in-title of the defendant. It is the plaintiffs' case that Mittu did not beget a son from the relationship that he had with Biranji, and he died in the lifetime of Biranji, issuless. Biranji came to be recorded as the tenure holder of land detailed in Schedule B as Mittu's widow, after his decease. After some passage of time, Smt. Biranji passed away. It is pleaded by the plaintiffs that their grandfather, Kanhai had passed away before Smt. Biranji's death. In consequence, the tenure that was holding of Kanhai, detailed in Schedule A, devolved upon his son, Vishwanath. At the time when Biranji passed away, Vishwanath, the plaintiffs' father, in addition to the property detailed in Schedule A, that had devolved upon him from Kanhai, also took possession of the property shown in Schedule B to the plaint. All this happened before the abolition of Zamindari, as it appears from the pleadings of parties (though not specifically said so in the plaint). The Zamindar acknowledged rights of Vishwanath, vis-à-vis land detailed in Schedule B to the plaint and admitted him as a tenant/ kashtkar of land last mentioned, also. In consequence, the plaintiffs' father, Vishwanath was admitted by the Zamindar to be the tenant of both plots of lands comprising Schedule A and Schedule B to the plaint, and in possession of the same. It is also pleaded that the plaintiffs' grandfather, Vishwanath's name came to be recorded over land detailed both in Schedule A and Schedule B to the plaint. Lands comprising all that is in Schedule A and Schedule B, thereupon was registered as one Khata with the plaintiffs' grandfather as the recorded tenant.

10. It is further pleaded by the plaintiffs that Vishwanath passed away when the plaintiffs were children/ minors, whereupon the two original plaintiffs, Heera and Jawahir, sons of Vishwanath became tenure holders in possession of all property that is shown in Schedule A and Schedule B to the plaint. After Vishwanath's decease, Natthu who had no connection with the earlier recorded tenure holder, Mittu's family, laid his claim to land comprising Schedule B to the plaint. It is pleaded that in connivance with the local Patwari, Natthu last mentioned in a clandestine manner got his name recorded by falsely portraying himself to be the son of Mittu, not only over the land comprised of Schedule B, but the entire suit property detailed at the foot of the plaint, along side the plaintiffs as a co-sharer. This fraud came to light when the plaintiffs' mother went to deposit ten times the land revenue in order to enlarge the plaintiffs' right into bhumidhari (as they were minors at that time) under the provisions of The United Provinces Agricultural Tenants (Acquisition of Privileges) Act, 1949. The plaintiffs' mother discovered the collusive entry in Natthu' name at that time, insofar as the plaintiffs' rights over land comprising Schedule A to the plaint are concerned. The aforesaid dispute was resolved with the intervention of Zamindar, and it is the plaintiffs' case that a compromise was entered into, by which the plaintiffs were acknowledged to be bhumidhars of plot no.2788, admeasuring 54 decimals, and Natthu became the bhumidhar of the land comprising Schedule B to the plaint. It is also pleaded that in accordance with the aforesaid compromise, both parties, that is to say, the plaintiffs' mother acting on their behalf and Natthu for himself deposited ten times the land revenue and a bhumidhari sanad each was issued in favour of the plaintiffs and Natthu, respectively. By the said bhumidhari sanad, the plaintiffs became the exclusive bhumidhars of all that land comprised in Schedule A to the plaint whereas Natthu became bhumidhar of all land, comprising Schedule B to the plaint.

11. At this juncture, it would be profitable to describe all that land, that is comprised in Schedule A and Schedule B to the plaint. Schedule A to the plaint bears khasra no.2788, admeasuring 54 decimals whereas land comprising Schedule B to the plaint bears khasra no.2787, admeasuring 20 decimals. The new number of khasra no.2787 (20 decimals) is 2695, and that of khasra no.2788 (54 decimals) is 2696. Though much is said about the rights of parties in property detailed in both Schedules A and B to the plaint, that is all part of the transaction giving rise to the present cause of action, as would be seen hereinafter, there is no issue in the suit about the land detailed in Schedule B to the plaint, which has been given to detail the entire background of facts and the transaction that has led to the suit. The property in dispute in the present suit is confined to that detailed in Schedule A to the plaint alone. So much for the description of the property and its detail that is the subject matter of action between parties.

12. Reverting back to the manner in which the rights of parties came to be asserted in conflict over time leading to the present suit, it was an event in that direction when Natthu passed away and his son, Moti became the sole bhumidhar of khasra no.2787, admeasuring 20 decimals (Schedule B to the plaint). Moti, unknown to the plaintiffs, sold a claimed half share of land comprised of khasra no.2788 (54 decimals) to defendants nos.2 & 3 to the suit, Rajbali and Nandlal vide registered sale deed dated 11.11.1980. The said sale deed in favour of defendants nos.2 & 3 was executed through their father, defendant no.4, Ram Palat, as defendants nos.2 & 3 to the suit last mentioned, at the time of execution of the sale deed, were minors. No sooner than the sale deed was executed by Moti in favour of the then two minor defendants, which was effectively in favour of their father, Ram Palat, that Ram Palat made a show of his right and title towards the end of November, 1980. He asserted title to a half share in property comprised of Schedule A to the plaint, and threatened to interfere with the plaintiffs' exclusive possession of the same. It is then that the plaintiffs came to know for the first time ever, as they allege, about the sale deed dated 11.11.1980 executed by defendant no.1 in favour of defendants nos.2 & 3. It is the plaintiffs' further case that defendant no.1, Moti had no interest in land comprising Schedule A to the property as that was exclusively in their bhumidhari whereas the rights of defendant no.1 were confined to land comprised in Schedule B. This clear delineation of rights came about in terms of a compromise before the Zamindar already mentioned, and in accordance with that compromise, the plaintiffs and the defendants, each had paid ten times the land revenue, in order to secure bhumidhari sanad relating to the lands comprised in Schedules A and B, respectively. It asserted, therefore, that there was no case for the first defendant to have staked claim to a half share in the property comprised in Schedule A, and on that basis, execute a sale deed in favour of defendants nos.2 & 3, then minors, through their father, defendant no.4. It is asserted in the plaint that the plaintiffs are sole owners, or more properly bhumidhars of land detailed in Schedule A to the plaint, and are in exclusive possession of the same as asserted in the plaint. It was on that basis that a relief of permanent injunction restraining the defendants from interfering in the peaceful possession and use of khasra no.2788 (now renumbered as 2696) admeasuring 54 decimals, was claimed. In addition, a further relief for cancellation of the sale deed dated 11.11.1980, executed by the defendant no.1 in favour of defendants nos.2 & 3 was also sought.

13. The written statement filed by Moti denies the plaint case, and comes up with a version that he was co-sharer in the entire property mentioned at the foot of the plaint, both Schedule A and Schedule B. He was in service in Kolkata since childhood. The property in suit, comprising both Schedules, was joint Hindu family property, of which the plaintiffs and defendant no.1, both were a part since the time of their predecessor-in-title. The plaintiffs and the party's predecessors-in-title were managing the family and its property. As such, it was not known to the first defendant, Moti about all those proceedings through which bhumidhari sanad was secured by the plaintiffs regarding Schedule A property exclusive to their names. It is also asserted that the land detailed in Schedules A and B to the plaint, is located quite far off from the defendants' house, abadi and chak, which had made it rather unviable for the first defendant to cultivate the said land. At the same time, the first defendant got a good bargain of land in the adjoining chak of another native of the village, Chandra Dev Singh, that he had purchased through a sale deed. The first defendant required funds to pay off some balance sale consideration due to Chandra Dev Singh, on account of which he sold his half share in the property described in Schedule A to the plaint in favour of defendants nos.2 & 3 vide registered sale deed dated 11.11.1980. The aforesaid sale deed was executed for a total sale consideration of Rs.7000/-. Contemporaneously, the first defendant bargained sale of his half share in land comprising Schedule B to the plaint in favour of the plaintiffs, and both sale deeds relating to the half share of defendant no.1, that is to say, the first defendant's half share in land shown in Schedule A and Schedule B to the plaint, were executed on 11.11.1980; the half share in Schedule A being sold in favour of defendants nos.2 & 3 whereas the half share comprising property detailed in Schedule B, being sold in favour of the plaintiffs. It has been further asserted in the written statement of the first defendant that both sale deeds dated 11.11.1980 were drafted under instructions of the respective vendees, including the plaintiffs, and he does not know if any manipulation in the recitals there, to suit his case have been scripted in the sale deed executed in the plaintiffs' favour. It has further been specifically averred in the written statement, in affirmation of the stand taken throughout that it is incorrectly asserted by the plaintiffs that the first defendant is bhumidhar of the entire land comprised of property in Schedule B to the plaint. Rather, the first defendant had a half share in the property described in both Schedules, both of which he has sold; one to the plaintiffs vide registered sale deed dated 11.11.1980, as detailed hereinbefore.

14. Defendant no.4, Ram Palat too filed a written statement and more or less affirmed the case of his vendor, defendant no.1. Amongst others, two pleas were raised: one about the transaction being entered into in good faith and for valuable consideration, that he contracted after making necessary inquiries in the Revenue Records, where he found defendant no.1 recorded with a half share over land detailed in Schedule A; and, the second on behalf of both defendants, a plea taken that the objections raised by the plaintiffs to impeach the title of defendant no.1 is barred by Section 49 of the U.P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (for short the Consolidation Act), inasmuch as, chakbandi operation had intervened and during that time, the name of defendant no.1, that was recorded over land detailed in Schedule A to the plaint to the extent half share was not objected to. Pleas of bar under Section 115 of the Indian Evidence Act, besides Sections 38 and 41 of the Specific Relief Act, were also raised, saying that no relief could be granted.

15. The aforesaid pleadings of parties led the Trial Court to frame the following nine issues:

"1. Whether the plaintiffs were the sole owner in possession of the land in suit?

2. Whether the sale deed dated 11.11.80 is liable to be cancelled?

3. Whether the suit is barred by Section 49 of U.P. C.H. Act?

4. Whether the suit is barred by Section 115 of Indian Evidence Act?

5. To what relief, if any, the plaintiffs are entitled?

6. Is the suit barred by Section 38 and 39 of Specific Relief Act?

7. Is the suit is barred by time?

8. Had the Civil Courts no jurisdiction?

9. Are defendants 2 to 4 are entitled to the benefit of section 41 of Transfer of Property Act?"

16. The Trial Court dealt with issues nos.1, 2 & 9 together and returned findings on evaluation of evidence, in the manner that in answer to issue no.1, it was held that defendant no.1, Moti and the plaintiffs, each had a half share in land comprising both khasra plot numbers shown in Schedules A and B to the plaint. On the second issue, it was held that since the first defendant, Moti had a half share in land comprising khasra no.2596 (54 decimals), the said defendant had a right to execute the impugned sale deed dated 11.11.1980 in favour of defendants nos.2 & 3. In consequence, it was further held that the sale deed was not liable to be cancelled. During the course of these findings on issues nos.1, 2 & 9, amongst many facts noticed and relevant facts decided, besides the facts in issue, the Trial Court held that Kanhai and Mittu were brothers, that is to say, sons of the same father. In reaching this finding, the Trial Court has taken due note of the fact that the pedigree propounded in the plaint as originally framed, clearly showed Mittu to be a brother of Kanhai and the parties descended of a common ancestor. Lateron, the plaintiffs projected the first defendant as a stranger, and then a rank trespasser through an amendment to the plaint made specifically. The Trial Court in conclusion finding for the defendant on issues nos.1, 2 & 9, dismissed the suit. It must be remarked, however, that issue no.8, that is, whether the Civil Court has jurisdiction to try the suit, was decided in the affirmative and in favour of the plaintiffs, holding that the Civil Court had jurisdiction.

17. The lower Appellate Court went into a very detailed analysis of evidence on merits concurring with the Trial Court, holding for added reasons that the plaintiffs and the defendants, each had a half share in both khasra nos.2787 (20 decimals) and 2788 (54 decimals), which the first defendant was competent to transfer. It is not the jurisdiction of this Court to look into the validity of those findings of fact, that have been recorded for good and sufficient reason based on evidence, from which conclusions drawn by the lower Appellate Court are quite plausible. The matter would have ended at that, in case the lower Appellate Court, like the Trial Court, had not gone into the issue of the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to try the suit. However, the lower Appellate Court did that and came to a conclusion contrary to that of the Trial Court. It was held by the lower Appellate Court that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit, which would be exclusively cognizable by the Revenue Court.

18. Concerning the issue of jurisdiction, the lower Appellate Court has done a commendable job of marshalling facts and evidence, and drawing conclusions tested on well supported propositions of law to conclude on the issue of jurisdiction in favour of ouster of the Civil Courts. The relevant part of the findings recorded by the lower Appellate Court would be best expressed in the words of that Court as they occur in the impugned judgment, which read thus:

"The fact of the present case is some what dissimilar as the plaintiff is seeking cancellation of the sale deed on the ground that the vendor has got no right to transfer the land as the plaintiffs are exclusive owner of the land in suit. Whereas, the name of defendant's vendor have been recorded in revenue records from 1347F up till now and even in consolidation operation no protest was made by the plaintiff nor any protest application was made in revenue court after consolidation operation for correction of records. Therefore in the garb of cancellation of sale deed plaintiffs are seeking declaration that they are exclusive owner of the land in suit. It is not possible to cancel the sale deed before finding that the defendant no.1 has been wrongly entered as co-sharer with the plaintiff on the land in suit and the plaintiffs are exclusive owner in possession of the land in suit. This act is within the jurisdiction of revenue court, under Section 229B of the Z.A. & L.R. Act.

Learned counsel for the appellant has cited 1991 Supreme Court page 2234 and argues that the compromise decree signed by counsel and not by parties in person is binding, executable and operates as resjudicata, even if it extends beyond subject matter of suit. But this ruling is not applicable in the present case because no compromise was entered into between the plaintiffs and defendant-1 in consolidation operation and the compromise entered into by the mother of the plaintiffs and Motii has been challenged and after attaining the age of majority of plaintiffs their mother had got no right to enter into compromise. Learned counsel for the appellant has cited 1984 A.L.J. page 1132 and argues that the suit for cancellation of a sale deed would lie in Civil court and the court can go into the question of title. But this ruling is applicable where some fraud had been committed to deprive real owner of his property. He has also cited 1976 A.W.C. page 585 and argues that it is open to a person to show that the entries in the record of rights prepared in accordance with sec.27(1) of C.H. Act showing some other person as Bhumidhar were not true. In the same ruling it has been held that the decision of Consolidation Authority that a person was Bhumidhar became final and such Bhumidhar transferred the land. Suit for cancellation of such deed is not barred by section 49 if the plaintiff alleges that she was in actual possession of the land in suit in lieu of maintenance. But here the fact is different where there is continuous entries in the revenue records of the name of Natththu and after his death his son Moti. In consolidation operation no protest petition was moved by the plaintiff and finally Moti was recorded as co-bhumidhar with the plaintiffs. Learned counsel for the appellant has cited AIR 1974 Supreme Court page 1657 and argues that the bar of section 49 of C.H. Act is only where the question arises out of the consolidation proceedings, but where the question is whether ''B' was the heir of ''A' which was involved in the suit such case is not barred by Section 49.

In the above circumstances seeing the fact of the present case, the pith and substance of the suit is to declare that Moti and Naththu were never Sah Khatedar co-Bhumidhar with the plaintiffs of old plot no.2788 which is nothing but declaration of title and barred by Section 331 Z.A. & L.R. Act and 49 of C.H. Act."

19. So far as this Court is concerned, this appeal was admitted to hearing primarily on the substantial question of law concerning ouster of jurisdiction of the Civil Court, which if ousted, the appropriate course to follow for the Court in accord with the law. There is also a question about the jurisdiction of the Civil Court being barred by Section 49 of the Consolidation Act.

20. This Court may remark at once that the lower Appellate Court in returning its findings about the issue of jurisdiction of the Civil Court being barred, has held it barred, both under Section 331 of the U.P. Z.A. & L.R. Act and Section 49 of the Consolidation Act. In case it were to be held that the Civil Court has no jurisdiction to try the suit in view of the bar under Section 331 of the U.P. Z.A. & L.R. Act, this Court is of opinion that there would be no further necessity for the lower Appellate Court to opine about the bar under Section 49 of the Consolidation Act. This is for more than one reason. In the event, the suit is held barred under Section 331 of the U.P. Z.A. & L.R. Act, the moment the Civil Court has reached that conclusion, it should have laid its hands off from opining about the suit being barred under Section 49 of the Consolidation Act. The Civil Court, once it holds its jurisdiction ousted, recording any other finding about the bar to that suit under some other provision of law, would be of no consequence. The Civil Court having found itself to be a Court, not competent to try the suit, all its findings on any other or further issues, would also be without jurisdiction. It is not that, that the Civil Court would on the one hand hold that it has no jurisdiction to try the suit vis-à-vis its subject matter and at the same time pronounce upon other issues of fact and law. The issue whether the plaintiffs' claim is barred under Section 49 of the Consolidation Act, is a question of law affecting the rights of the plaintiffs. It can be decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction alone; not by a Court that holds itself out of jurisdiction.

21. There is a more fundamental reason why the lower Appellate Court ought not to have decided the issue of the declaration sought by the plaintiffs being barred by Section 49 of the Consolidation Act. That reason is this. The bar under Section 331, that has been upheld by the lower Appellate Court, is a bar properly so called one as to jurisdiction of the Civil Court to try the suit. It is about the forum that would be competent, but in no way does it bar the plaintiffs' right. Once the plea of bar of the Civil Court's jurisdiction is accepted, all that happens is that instead of the Civil Court, it is the competent Revenue Court that has jurisdiction. That finding does not defeat the plaintiffs' claim, but only sends them to another forum. The bar under Section 331, therefore, is properly speaking a bar as to subject matter, which in no way defeats the plaintiffs' claim. The bar of Section 49 of the Consolidation Act that the lower Appellate Court has held attracted to the plaintiffs' suit is not a bar to the jurisdiction of the Court regarding subject matter, pecuniary or territorial. It is a bar in its nature to the plaintiffs' claim itself; it is a bar if held to apply would prevent the plaintiffs from enforcing their claim before any other Court or forum. The bar under Section 49 of the Consolidation Act destroys the plaintiffs' right and the remedy both, to enforce their claim. It is not a bar to the jurisdiction of the Court, like that under Section 331 of the U.P. Z.A. & L.R. Act. The lower Appellate Court, having found that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction, ought not have pronounced upon the bar pleaded under Section 49 of the Consolidation Act, that has the effect of destroying the plaintiffs' right and remedy. In this appeal also, by extension of the principle that a Court that holds against its jurisdiction to decide, ought not to decide anything more, this Court would refrain from answering substantial question of law no. (ii), but with the remark that the Court in a suit where it holds no jurisdiction in itself to decide, ought not to decide the question about the bar under Section 49 of the Consolidation Act. It must also be said here that the conclusions and the answer to question no. (ii) is in keeping with the conclusions and answer rendered by this Court, in reference to substantial question of law no. (i) recorded during the course of this judgment, a little later.

22. Now, turning to the issue whether the Civil Court's jurisdiction is, indeed, barred under Section 331 of the Consolidation Act, it must be remarked that the thin line of distinction between the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to cancel a document, which power alone the Civil Court enjoys, and a case where behind the façade of cancellation what is substantially claimed, is a declaration of title to agricultural land by one of the parties, is all that would make a difference about the forum. This has always been a tricky ground for Courts to tread in individual cases, but the law about it is well settled. It would be profitable to do a survey of authority about the issue that has classically engaged the attention of Courts over a long period of time, including this Court and their Lordships of the Supreme Court. The controversy about the proposition as to circumstances in which a given suit styled as cancellation would be cognizable by the Civil Court, and where notwithstanding the form of relief, the Civil Court's jurisdiction would be ousted under Section 331 of the U.P. Z.A. & L.R. Act in favour of the Revenue Court, came up before a Full Bench of this Court in Ram Padarath and Ors. vs. Second Addl. District Judge and Ors1. Their Lordships of the Full Bench after an extensive review of authority held:

"41. We are of the view that the case of Indra Deo v. Smt. Ram Piari 1982 (8) ALR 517 has been correctly decided and the said, decision requires no consideration, while the Division Bench case, Dr. Ayodhya Prasad v. Gangotri, 1981 AWC 469 is regarding the jurisdiction of consolidation authorities, but so far as it holds that suit in respect of void document will lie in the revenue court it does not lay down a good law. Suit or action for cancellation of void document will generally lie in the civil court and a party cannot be deprived of his right getting (his relief permissible under law except when a declaration of right or status of a tenure-holder is necessarily needed in which event relief for cancellation will be surplusage and redundant. A recorded tenure-holder having prima facie title in his favour can hardly be directed to approach the revenue court in respect of seeking relief for cancellation of a void document which made him to approach the court of law and in such case he can also claim ancillary relief even though the same can be granted by the revenue court."

23. The issue fell for consideration of the Supreme Court in Smt. Bismillah vs. Janeshwar Prasad and others2, where it was held thus:

"7. It is settled law that the exclusion of the jurisdiction of the civil court is not to be readily inferred, but that such exclusion must either be explicitly expressed or clearly implied. The provisions of a law which seek to oust the jurisdiction of civil court need to be strictly construed. Section 331 of the Act has been the subject of series of pronouncements of the High Court as to the circumstances and the nature of the suits in which its exclusionary effect operates. Distinction was sought to be drawn between the class of cases where the binding effect of a deed had had to be got rid of by an appropriate adjudication on the one hand and the class of cases in which a transaction could be said to be void in law where what the law holds to be void, there is nothing to cancel or set aside on the other. In the former case, it was held, a suit was cognisable by the civil court while in the latter, it was not, it being open to the statutory authority to take note of the legal incidents of what was non est.

8. In the instant case, the High Court has construed, in our opinion not quite correctly, appellant's pleadings to amount to a plea of nullity of the sales and has held that the prayer for cancellation of the sale deeds was "simply illusory' and that such a relief was neither necessary nor appropriate in the context of a plea of nullity. The High Court has further held that the relief of possession, though appearing to be a consequential relief, was really the main relief and would fall within the statutory jurisdiction.

9. It is true that the question of jurisdiction depends upon the allegations in the plaint and not the merits or the result of the suit. However, in order to determine the precise nature of the action, the pleadings should be taken as a whole. If as, indeed, is done by the High Court the expression "void' occurring in the plaint as descriptive of the legal status of the sales is made the constant and determinate and what is implicit in the need for cancellation as the variable and as inappropriate to a plea of nullity, equally, converse could be the position. The real point is not the stray or loose expressions which abound in inartistically drafted plaints, but the real substance of the case gathered by construing pleadings as a whole. It is said "Parties do not have the farsight of prophets and their lawyers the draftsmanship of a Chalmers".

11. The assumption underlying the reasoning of the High Court is that if the action had really been one based on the need for the cancellation of the deeds, without which possession could not be granted, the civil court would have had jurisdiction. The cause of action in the appellant's suit does admit of being brought within this class of cases.

12. The common law defence of non est factum to actions on specialities in its origin was available where an illiterate person, to whom the contents of a deed had been wrongly read, executed it under a mistake as to its nature and contents, he could say that it was not his deed at all. In its modern application, the doctrine has been extended to cases other than those of illiteracy and to other contracts in writing. In most of the cases in which this defence was pleaded the mistake was induced by fraud; but that was not, perhaps, a necessary factor, as the transaction is "invalid not merely on the ground of fraud, where fraud exists, but on the ground that the mind of the signor did not accompany the signature; in other words, that he never intended to sign, and therefore, in contemplation of law never did sign, the contract to which his name is appended" [Chitty on Contracts, 25th edn., p. 341].

13. Authorities drew a distinction between fraudulent misrepresentation as to the character of the document and fraudulent misrepresentation as to the contents thereof. It was held that the defence was available only if the mistake was as to the very nature or character of the transaction.

14. In Foster v. Mackinnon [(1869) LR 4 CP 704 : 38 LJCP 310], Mackinnon, the defendant was induced to endorse a bill of exchange on the false representation that it was a guarantee similar to one he had signed on a previous occasion. He was held not liable when sued even by an innocent endorsee of the bill. Byles, J. said:

"... The defendant never intended to sign that contract or any such contract. He never intended to put his name to any instrument that then was or thereafter might become negotiable. He was deceived, not merely as to the legal effect, but as to the "actual contents' of the instrument."

15. This decision was referred to with approval by this Court in Ningawwa v. Byrappa [(1968) 2 SCR 797 : AIR 1968 SC 956]. It was observed: (SCR pp. 800-01)

"It is well established that a contract or other transaction induced or tainted by fraud is not void, but only voidable at the option of the party defrauded. Until it is avoided, the transaction is valid, so that third parties without notice of the fraud may in the meantime acquire rights and interests in the matter which they may enforce against the party defrauded."

This would be a voidable transaction. But the position was held to be different if the fraud or misrepresentation related to the character of the document. This court held: (SCR p. 801)

"The legal position will be different if there is a fraudulent misrepresentation not merely as to the contents of the document but as to its character. The authorities make a clear distinction between fraudulent misrepresentation as to the character of the document and fraudulent misrepresentation as to the contents thereof. With reference to the former, it has been held that the transaction is void, while in the case of the latter, it is merely voidable."

However the House of Lords in Saunders v. Anglia Building Society [1971 AC 1004 : (1970) 3 All ER 961] reviewed the law and held that the essential features of the doctrine, as expressed by Byles, J. in Foster v. Mackinnon [Chitty on Contracts, 25th edn., p. 341] , had been correctly stated. Lord Reid, however, observed: (AC headnote at p. 1005)

"The plea of non est factum could not be available to anyone who signed without taking the trouble to find out at least the general effect of the document. Nor could it be available to a person whose mistake was really a mistake as to the legal effect of the document. There must be a radical or fundamental difference between what he signed and what he thought he was signing."

16. However the distinction based on the character of the document and the contents of the document was considered unsatisfactory. The distinction based on the character and contents of a document is not without its difficulties in its practical application; for, in conceivable cases the "character' of the document may itself depend on its contents. The difficulty is to be resolved on a case by case basis on the facts of each case and not by appealing to any principle of general validity applicable to all cases. Chitty on Contracts ["General Principles" 25th edn, para 343, page 194] has this observation to make onSaunders decision [(1968) 2 SCR 797 : AIR 1968 SC 956] :

"....It was stressed that the defence of non est factum was not lightly to be allowed where a person of full age and capacity had signed a written document embodying contractual terms. But it was nevertheless held that in exceptional circumstances the plea was available so long as the person signing the document had made a fundamental mistake as to the character or effect of the document. Their Lordships appear to have concentrated on the disparity between the effect of the document actually signed, and the document as it was believed to be (rather than on the nature of the mistake) stressing that the disparity must be "radical", "essential", "fundamental", or "very substantial."

In the instant case, prima facie appellant seems to proceed on the premises that she cannot ignore the sales but that the sales require to be set aside before she is entitled to possession and other consequential reliefs."

24. In Smt. Bismillah (supra), their Lordships of the Supreme Court approved the decision of the Full Bench of this Court in Ram Padarath (supra) though with the remark that "In any view of the matter, the present action would be covered by the pronouncement of the Full Bench. It is not necessary to go into the correctness of the view of the Full Bench as its correctness was not assailed before us."

25. The point involved here is well illustrated on the facts involved in the decision of their Lordships of the Supreme Court in Shri Ram another vs. Ist Addl. Distt. Judge and others3, where the dispute was to the effect that the plaintiff had filed a suit for cancellation of the sale deed involved there before the Civil Court to the extent of half share claimed by the plaintiff, together with recovery of possession of that half share. In that context, which is more or less similar to the context on facts here, it was held thus:

"6. The said decision is distinguishable and is of no help to the case of the respondents. The observation quoted above has to be understood in the context of the fact of the case. In the case, the plaintiff had filed a suit for cancellation of the sale deed to the extent of half-share claimed by the plaintiff and also an award of possession of the plaintiff's share. In the suit, it was alleged that the vendor had no title to the extent of half-share in the land and, therefore, the sale deed to that extent is void. In the said case there was no prima facie title in favour of the plaintiff and his title to the land and delivery of possession was required to be adjudicated.

7. On analysis of the decisions cited above, we are of the opinion that where a recorded tenure-holder having a prima facie title and in possession files suit in the civil court for cancellation of sale deed having been obtained on the ground of fraud or impersonation cannot be directed to file a suit for declaration in the Revenue Court, the reason being that in such a case, prima facie, the title of the recorded tenure-holder is not under cloud. He does not require declaration of his title to the land. The position would be different where a person not being a recorded tenure-holder seeks cancellation of sale deed by filing a suit in the civil court on the ground of fraud or impersonation. There necessarily the plaintiff is required to seek a declaration of his title and, therefore, he may be directed to approach the Revenue Court, as the sale deed being void has to be ignored for giving him relief for declaration and possession."

26. From the aforesaid decisions what emerges is that where a tenure holder is in recorded possession of the property relating to which a conveyance or instrument executed is sought to be cancelled on grounds like fraud, coercion or undue influence - anything that would vitiate a contract rendering the same voidable or even void, a suit in the Civil Court would be maintainable. But, in a case where in order to seek the relief of cancellation, the plaintiff has to establish his right or title to the suit property, as in the present case, where the plaintiffs claim to be the owners of the whole of the suit property detailed in Schedule A to the plaint, whereas the defendants claim a half share there and are recorded to that extent, the jurisdiction of the Civil Court would certainly be ousted in favour of the statutory jurisdiction of the Revenue Court under Section 331. In a case like the one in hand where on facts the defendants have been found recorded to the extent of a half share over the suit property detailed in Schedule A, along with the plaintiffs, the principal relief that the plaintiffs seek is to establish that they are owners of the whole of it, and not just half of Schedule A property, as the defendants assert. This is essentially a declaration of rights and title to the said property to the complete exclusion of the defendants, which the Revenue Court alone can grant. The relief of cancellation sought in the suit would be a necessary incident of an appropriate declaration in tune with the substance of the relief which the plaintiffs seek. Once relief in accordance with the substance of the plaintiffs' claim is sought before the competent Court of revenue jurisdiction, the relief of cancellation would be incidental and may be just a surplusage. In this view of the matter, this Court is in agreement with the lower Appellate Court that the suit is not maintainable before the Civil Court.

27. This takes the matter directly to the issue that where the Civil Court holds the suit barred by Section 331 of the U.P. Z.A. & L.R. Act, what would be the proper disposition of the suit. Would it lead to a decree dismissing the suit on merits, while answering other issues referable to the merits of the plaintiffs' claim, or the Civil Court ought just return the plaint under Order VII Rule 10 CPC for presentation to the competent Court?

28. Proceeding on the well settled principle that a Court which has no jurisdiction to determine a suit ought not decide it, there is no difficulty to hold that once it is found that the Court has no jurisdiction to decide the suit, it ought not to dismiss for that reason; the plaint should instead be ordered to be returned for presentation to the competent Court. It is also not that this course is open to the Trial Court alone, or that it is confined to early stages of the Trial. The words of Order VII Rule 10 CPC express with great felicity the clear intent of the legislature that the power to return a plaint can be exercised at any stage of the suit. The explanation added to Rule 10 of Order VII CPC vide CPC Amendment Act no.104 of 1996 has made the position explicit that a Court of appeal or revision, may also direct return of the plaint after setting aside the decree passed in a suit, in the exercise of powers under the said Rule. In this connection, the provisions of Order VII Rule 10 CPC may be quoted:

"10. Return of plaint.--(1) Subject to the provisions of Rule 10-A, the plaint shall] at any stage of the suit be returned to be presented to the Court in which the suit should have been instituted.

Explanation.--For the removal of doubts, it is hereby declared that a court of appeal or revision may direct, after setting aside the decree passed in a suit, the return of the plaint under this sub-rule.

(2) Procedure on returning plaint.--On returning a plaint the Judge shall endorse thereon the date of its presentation and return, the name of the party presenting it, and a brief statement of the reasons for returning it."

29. There is, thus, apparently no difficulty to conclude that at whatever stage of the suit, be it in appeal from the original decree, or in appeal from the appellate decree, or in revision at an interlocutory stage, wherever the Court in seisin of those proceedings finds that the suit is not cognizable by the Court, it can and must at once set aside the decree or order, and direct return of the plaint. This is most true in cases where any Court finds lack of jurisdiction with reference to subject matter of the suit. There could be some different principles in case of objection as to territorial or pecuniary jurisdiction, particularly, territorial, if it be not raised at the earliest stage, but with regard to subject matter of the suit if the Court at any stage of the proceeding, or a higher Court in appeal or revision finds that the suit is not cognizable by the Court which has determined it on merits, the determination of a Court sans jurisdiction must be nullified with an order for return of the plaint to the Court of competent jurisdiction

30. This view of the law has been preponderant except for a few decisions where the view expressed has classified cases into those where objection is taken at the earliest or considered at the earliest, and those where the entire trial of the suit has gone through. In the former class of cases, there is no discordant view expressed in any decision that a suit held to be not cognizable by the Court, must lead to a return of the plaint provided that there is a Court competent to entertain the suit. In the other class of cases where the entire trial has gone through, and may be the matter is in appeal or second appeal where all issues of law and fact have been decided, it is also found that the Court had no jurisdiction over the subject matter of the suit, the view expressed in certain authorities is that in such a case, the suit must fail. However, this line of decisions are in marginal minority, and not certainly in accord with the view of their Lordships of the Supreme Court. It would be profitable to do a survey of authorities on the point.

31. One of the earliest decisions about this issue is of a Division Bench of this Court in Ram Jas Singh vs. Babu Nandan Singh4, where the question was that the suit that was instituted by the plaintiff/ appellant in that case before the Assistant Collector, was styled as a suit under Section 160 of the Agra Tenancy Act. The Assistant Collector trying the suit, however, found it to be a suit for contribution by one judgment-debtor against others for the excess share which he had paid to the creditors. The Assistant Collector held that he had no jurisdiction to decide that suit and dismissed it. It figures in the judgment of this Court there that no evidence was recorded. The decree was affirmed by the District Judge, where the ground urged was that if the Deputy Collector found that he had no jurisdiction, he ought to have ordered return of the plaint instead of dismissing the suit. The same ground was urged before this Court, where it was held by Ryves and Stuart, JJ.:

"..... In second appeal the plaintiff presses the third ground taken in his memorandum of appeal namely that the court should have returned the plaint for presentation to the proper proper court. It seems to us that the trial court could certainly have returned the plaint to the plaintiff on finding that it had no jurisdiction to try the suit but did not do so. In the same way the appellate court we think could have done what the trial court could have done and we think under the circumstances that this was the proper procedure for the court to have adopted. Under the circumstances we allow the appeal and direct the learned District judge to order the plaint to be returned to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper court. ....."

32. The same view was expressed by another Division Bench of this Court in

Kallu vs. Phundan5, where a suit for partition of a grove was dismissed by the Munsif, but on appeal by the plaintiff, the decree of dismissal was set aside with an order of remand to the Trial Court. The said order of remand was challenged in appeal to this Court by the defendant. Here, it was the defendant's case that the plaintiff had no right or title to the grove, and therefore, the Munsif held that he had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. It was noticed that despite holding that he had no jurisdiction, the Munsif went on to record a finding on merits that the plaintiff had no title to the grove. It was also recorded by this Court that the learned Judge in appeal rightly held that the Munsif having held that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction, ought not to have determined other issues on merits. The learned Judge in appeal, however, differed from the finding of the learned Munsif that the suit was not cognizable by the Civil Court. He, therefore, remanded the suit to the Munsif to try it afresh on merits regarding question of title etc. Before this Court, the Appellate Judge's view that the suit was cognizable by the Civil Court was assailed. It was contended that the plaintiffs were not grove holders, but mere tenants according to the plaint case. This Court on consideration of the plaintiffs' case and evidence found that the parties cannot be held to be grove-holders. Their status can only be that of a tenant. It was held that the suit was one for the division of a tenant's holding, which was under the fourth Schedule to the Tenancy Act, cognizable by the specified Court. It was, therefore, not cognizable by the Civil Court. It was maintainable in the Revenue Court. The order of the lower Appellate Court remanding the case to the learned Munsif was, therefore, set aside, but agreement was expressed with the learned Judge by their Lordships of the Division Bench that the learned Munsif having held the suit not cognizable by the Civil Court should not have tried issues on merits. This Court in the circumstances held that the proper order to make was one for return of the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. The relevant part of the decision in Kallu vs. Phundan (supra) reads thus:

"6. It is not denied that a suit for the division of a tenant holding is a suit of the nature specified in sch. 4, Tenancy Act. That being so, the civil Court cannot take cognisance of such a suit. Thus the present suit, if it is maintainable (a question on which we express no opinion), can be only in the revenue Court. We are, therefore, unable to uphold the finding of the lower appellate Court that the suit was cognisable by the civil Court. We agree with the learned Judge, however, -- as we have already stated-- that the Munsif should not have recorded any finding on issue No. 2 which related to the title of the plaintiff. We also agree with him that, instead of dismissing the suit, the Munsif should have returned the plaint to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper Court. ....."

33. The question again figured before the Nagpur High Court in Dr. Purshottam Vithal vs. Dr. G.V. Pandit6, where the issue was whether an Election Petition under Section 20-A of the C.P. and Berar Municipalities Act, 1922, that was cognizable by the Civil Judge (Class I), but had been filed in the Court of the First Additional District Judge, could be dismissed by that Court. It was held by the High Court that the proper order to make was one for return of the petition to be presented to the Court that had jurisdiction. The order of dismissal passed by the Additional District Judge was not approved. The relevant part of the decision in Dr. Purshottam Vithal (supra) reads thus:

"9. Both the petitions under consideration were presented in the Court of the First Additional District Judge and the deposits were also made in the same Court. But the Civil Judge (Class I) alone was empowered to deal with the petitions. The petitioners expressly invoked the jurisdiction of the Court of the First Additional District Judge and the petitions presented by them were received by the Judge quathe First Additional District Judge, Yeotmal. In fact the learned Civil Judge could not have dealt with the petitions which were originally on the file of the Court of the First Additional District Judge as Civil Judge (Class I) from 18th December 1947. The procedure in the Court below went wrong from that date. The corrections in the order sheets were presumably made on that date. The petitions were never presented to the Civil Judge (Class I), the original petitions were not amended and the petitioners never invoked his jurisdiction. The ptitions should first have been disposed of in the same capacity in which they were received before they could be dealt with in another capacity. So the proper order which the learned Judge could have passed on the petitions was not one of dismissal. The learned Judge felt some difficulty on the ground that there is no provision for returning the petitions to be presented to the Judge with jurisdiction to deal with them. Though O. 7, R. 10 of the CPC, does not in terms apply, that rule has to be read with S. 141 of the Code. Where a Court finds that it has no jurisdiction to deal with an application in circumstances like those present here, the order should be not one of dismissal but of returning the application for presentation to the Judge having jurisdiction to deal with the matter: see Ram Jas Singh v. Babu Nandan Singh, 44 ALL. 686 : (A.I.R. (9) 1922 ALL. 424) and Secretary of State v. Natabar Mangraj, 6 Pat. 358 : (A.I.R. (14) 1927 Pat. 254)."

34. Echoing the same principle that where the Court does not find itself possessed of jurisdiction, the proper course is not to dismiss the suit, but to make an order for return of the plaint, a Division Bench of the Madras High Court in T. Krishnaveni Ammal vs. The Corporation of Madras7, held:

"As observed by the learned Judges in Immandi Appalasami v. Rajah of Vizianagaram, 25 M.L.J. 50, the definition of rent in S. 3, Cl. 11 of the Madras Estates Land Act does not require that the raiyat in possession should actually use the land for the purpose of agriculture. We agree with the learned Judge on a reading of the plaint that the suit should be treated as one for recovery of rent due from ryoti land. The suit should have been filed in a revenue Court and not in a civil Court. As we have found that the civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, the proper course is to direct the return of the plaint to the plaintiff for presentation in the proper Court. We allow the appeal, set aside the decree of dismissal passed by the learned Judge, and direct that the plaint be presented to the proper Court, namely, the revenue Court. There will be no order as to costs in this appeal. Costs of the suit will abide the result. The court fee paid on the memorandum of appeal will be refunded to the appellant."

35. Similarly, in Chittaruvu Radhakrishna Murty vs. Bollapalli Chandrasekhara Rao8, a learned Judge of the Andhra Pradesh High Court held in the context of the Court finding lack of territorial jurisdiction, thus:

"10. The lower Court therefore was obviously wrong in stating that Section-20 C.P.C. has no application to the facts of this case. Section 20(c), as stated above, applies. In the view which I have taken, it is not necessary to consider in this case whether the common law principle that the debtor must seek the creditor applies to a negotiable document or not. Consequently, the case cited in the judgment of the court below, S. Eshwarayya v. Devi Singh[1953 Hyd. 289.] need not be considered. That case decides that the principle that the debtor must seek the creditor does not apply to a negotiable document. Since I have held that a part of the cause of action, because of transfer arose at Vijayawada, it is unnecessary to consider that principle in this case. In any case the lower Court was wrong in dismissing the suit. Even assuming that the court at Vijayawada had no jurisdiction, the court ought to have returned the plaint for its presentation to the proper Court. The suit could not be dismissed on that ground."

36. The most authoritative pronouncement on the issue is by a three Judge Bench of their Lordships of the Supreme Court in Sri Athmanathaswami Devasthanam vs. K. Gopalaswami Ayyangar, where their Lordships were concerned with a suit for recovery of rent and ejectment filed against a ryot by a landholder under the Madras Estates Land Act, that was triable by the Collector, but had been wrongly filed before the Civil Court. The Trial Court on the issues arisen between parties had determined the suit on merits and dismissed it. The High Court, however, also held that the suit could be instituted only in the Revenue Court, and therefore, set aside the decree with an order for return of the plaint to the plaintiff/ appellant for presentation to the proper Court. At the same time, however, the High Court proceeded to decide the cross-objection on merits and dismissed it. It was in the context of the aforesaid facts and lack of jurisdiction in the Civil Court vis-à-vis subject matter of the suit found by the High Court in appeal that their Lordships of the Supreme Court approved the order of the High Court ordering return of the plaint ruling out dismissal of the suit on merits. However, the order deciding the cross-objection on merits was set aside. It was held, thus, by their Lordships in Sri Athmanathaswami Devasthanam (supra):

"14. The last point urged is that when the civil court had no jurisdiction over the suit, the High Court could not have dealt with the cross-objection filed by the appellant with respect to the adjustment of certain amount paid by the respondent. This contention is correct. When the Court had no jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the suit it cannot decide any question on merits. It can simply decide on the question of jurisdiction and coming to the conclusion that it had no jurisdiction over the matter had to return the plaint."
(Emphasis by Court)

37. This question again arose before a Judge of this Court in Kailash Chandra Agarwal vs. Subhash Chand Satish Chand Viyopari10, where in a most eloquent statement of the law, it was held by this Court on facts in that case the question of jurisdiction could alone be decided at the end of the trial, but at the conclusion of trial, the Court having found it had no jurisdiction, could not have proceeded to dismiss the suit. It should have ordered return of the plaint. It was held by this Court, thus, in Kailash Chandra Agarwal (supra):

"3. I must also observe that this was one of those cases where the question of jurisdiction could not be decided as a preliminary issue in view of the fact that it could be decided only after recording the oral evidence of the parties, and evidence cannot be recorded piecemeal. The question of jurisdiction could thus be decided only after the entire trial had been gone through and the fact that it was thus decided along with the decision of the other issues, could not be a ground for dismissing the suit instead of ordering the return of the plaint on arriving at the finding that the court had no jurisdiction to try the suit. Under the circumstances, the only just and proper order to pass was to direct the return of the plaint for presentation to the proper court having jurisdiction to entertain the suit. For the fault of bringing the suit in wrong court the plaintiff could be penalised by making him liable to pay the defendants' costs in the trial court."

38. The aforesaid issue again came up before this Court in Gulab and others vs. Jaggan Ram Singh and others11, where this Court held that an old Full Bench Decision reported in Mst. Ananti vs. Channu12 (to which reference has been made in the context of the authority next considered in this judgment) is no longer good law in view of the authority of the Supreme Court in Sri Athmanatha-swami Devasthanam (supra). It was held by this Court in Gulab and others (supra) that the jurisdiction can be challenged anywhere, at any stage, and once it is held that the Court has no jurisdiction, it could neither decree the suit or dismiss it. It was held by this Court in Gulab and others (supra) thus:

"4. I am of the opinion that in view of Athmanathaswami Devasthanam's case (supra) decided by the Supreme Court, the Full Bench case of Mst. Ananti was no more good law. It has been held in AIR 1954 SC 340Kiran Singh v. Chaman Paswan where an order was passed without jurisdiction it could be challenged anywhere at any stage. As the Courts below have given a finding that they have no jurisdiction to entertain the suit any further finding or decision given by them would be without jurisdiction. They could neither decree the suit nor dismiss it.

5. Under the circumstances I am bound to follow the law laid down by AIR 1965 SC 338 in case of Athmanathaswami (supra).

6. The learned counsel for the respondent argued that the case of that Athmanathaswami (supra) was considered by the learned single Judge in the case of Devi Dutt Sharma (1979 All LJ 1086) (supra). From the judgment it appears that the learned single Judge referred to that case in para 3 of the judgment but how that case was not applicable is not indicated in the judgment. Consequently I hold that the Courts below were not justified in dismissing the suit."

39. This Court, however, in Lal Bahadur Singh and another vs.

Bagesara and others13, went into the distinction between cases where the question as to lack of jurisdiction is raised and decided at the earliest, and those cases where parties go to trial completing the entire course, or may be in appeal where it is found that the Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit. This distinction appears to have its genesis in the Full Bench decision of this Court in Mst. Ananti vs. Channu (supra), where it was held that in cases where after trial of the suit on all issues, the Court also holds that it had no jurisdiction, the suit must be dismissed and the plaint not returned. In Lal Bahadur Singh and another (supra), the case arose out of an order of the Appellate Court where the Trial Court framed as many as eight issues in a suit for declaration that the plaintiffs were bhumidhars of the land, and the revenue entry in favour of the defendants was wrong. The Trial Court decided all issues and also held that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit. The suit was dismissed. In appeal, the lower Appellate Court did not examine the findings on other issues, but merely dealt with the issue of jurisdiction. Expressing agreement that the suit was not triable by the Civil Court, the Appellate Court set aside the decree of dismissal, and substituted it by an order for the return of plaint for presentation to the proper Court. Two appeals, both by the plaintiffs and the defendants, were carried to this Court from the order for return of the plaint. It was in the context of the said facts that this Court in Lal Bahadur Singh and another (supra) held thus:

"6. The question that has been canvassed before me is about the form of the order that ought to be passed by the Court in such cases. No difficulty arises when an order for return of the plaint under Order 7, Rule 10, C.P.C., or of rejection of the plaint under Rule 11, is passed. The real difficulty arises in the other cases. According to Sri R.N. Singh, when once the Court enters upon adjudication of all the controversies of merit, the Court has no option left but to finally determine all these issues and if it finds that it has no jurisdiction in the matter, it must dismiss the suit instead of ordering return of the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. Sri Sankatha Rai, on the other hand, contended that once the Civil Court finds that it had no jurisdiction, it must stay its hands at once and should order return of the plaint without further venturing to decide any other issue or to express its opinion on merits. According to the following rule laid down in Athmanath Swami Devasthanam v. K. Gopalaswami Ayyangar, AIR 1965 SC 338:--

"When the Court had no jurisdiction over the subject matter of the suit, it cannot decide any question on merits. It can simply decide on the question of jurisdiction and coming to the conclusion that it had no jurisdiction over the matter had to return the plaint." He contended that return of the plaint was the only proper course for the Court.

7. This case was referred to by the learned single Judge who decided the case of Devi Datt Sharma (1979 All LJ 1086) (supra) also. According to the learned Judge where the Court, as a matter of caution, records all findings on issues touching merits of the controversy in addition to the issue of jurisdiction, the order has to be of return of plaint because the other findings in such a case have no legal effect. These are recorded only for facilitating the higher Courts and avoidance of a remand in case they come to a different conclusion on the question of jurisdiction. After briefly referring to the above Supreme Court decision, the learned Judge proceeded to consider an earlier Full Bench decision of this Court in Smt. Ananti v. Chhannu AIR 1930 All 193 and held that if after going to the trial of the suit on all the issues the Court ultimately holds that it had no jurisdiction in the matter, it must result in an order of dismissal of the suit. It may, however, be mentioned here that in Smt. Ananti's case, the controversy was raised in an altogether different manner and the facts were also quite different. There a suit had been filed in the Civil Court and after the written statement had been filed, the Munsif entertained a serious doubt as to whether the Civil Court could take cognizance of the suit. He, therefore, framed two questions and made a reference to the High Court. It was while answering the reference that the Full Bench had made the following observations which are also quoted by the learned Judge in his decision (1979 All LJ 1086).

"The plaintiff chooses his forum and files his suit. If he establishes the correctness of his facts, he will get his relief from the forum chosen. If he framed his suit in a manner not warranted by facts and goes for his relief to a Court which cannot grant him relief, on the true facts, he will have his suit dismissed. Then there will be no question of returning the plaint for presentation to the proper Court, for the plaint, as framed, would not justify the other kind of Court to grant him the relief. But we are told that although the plaintiff has chosen his forum rightly, the defendant, if he so wishes, may, merely by saying something in his defence-something the correctness of which he need not take the trouble to establish, oust the jurisdiction of the Court and compel the plaintiff to go to another Court."

8. What has been decided by the Supreme Court in Devasthanam's case (AIR 1965 SC 338) (supra) is that while holding that the Court had no jurisdiction to decide the particular suit, no decision on merit on any point involved therein should be made. It, however, does not lay down that if the Court has no jurisdiction then it had no right to dismiss the suit and must necessarily direct return of the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. The view taken to the contrary in 1983 Rev. Dec. 185 : (AIR 1983 All 145), therefore, does not appear to be wholly correct. In every case, it has to be seen whether on the allegations made in the plaint the suit was not maintainable in the Civil Court if so, the plaint had to be returned. But if the question of jurisdiction depends on decision of other questions on merit, then it is not necessary that the Court should always return the plaint. The Court has a discretion either to dismiss the suit after recording a finding that it had no jurisdiction and may in appropriate cases also direct return of the plaint without dismissing the same. It will depend upon the facts of each case and the broad principles have been rightly laid down in the Full Bench decision inSmt. Ananti's case(supra). Applying the principles laid down therein to the facts of the present case, I find that the order passed by the Court below was eminently justified and it was not incumbent on the Court to have dismissed the suit. The lower appellate Court has rightly directed that the plaint should be returned for presentation to the proper Court after recording a finding that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction in the matter."

40. The point again arose before their Lordships of the Supreme Court in R.S.D.V. Finance Co. Pvt. Ltd. vs. Shree Vallabh Glass Works Ltd14. The said decision arose on an Appeal by Special Leave from a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court in a summary suit brought for recovery of money on the original side. Dealing with the defendant's plea as to lack of territorial jurisdiction with the Court at Bombay, the learned Single Judge held that the suit was maintainable at Bombay on reasoning given in the learned Judge's judgment. On Letters Patent Appeal to the Division Bench, an Application seeking to amend the plaint appears to have been brought in order to give up some part of the cause of action, that was beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the Court at Bombay. The said Application was rejected and the appeal allowed dismissing the suit. On the plaintiff's Appeal by Special Leave, it was held, thus, by their Lordships:

"7. ..... Even if there was any doubt in the mind of the Division Bench, the learned counsel for the plaintiff had made a request for allowing him to amend the plaint but such request was wrongly refused by the learned Division Bench. The Division Bench was totally wrong in passing an order of dismissal of suit itself when it had arrived to the conclusion that the Bombay Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit. The only course to be adopted in such circumstances was to return the plaint for presentation to the proper court and not to dismiss the suit. ....."
(Emphasis by Court)

41. There is still another decision of this Court in Mattukki and Ors. vs. Rajwanti15, where again classification of cases into two categories was approved; one where the suit has been tried on all issues the entire way, one of these being about jurisdiction, which is not found with the Court, and the other category being of cases where the issue about jurisdiction is considered at the earliest stage, looking to the allegations in the plaint. This Court held falling back on the Full Bench decision in Mst. Ananti vs. Channu (supra) and distinguishing the decision of their Lordships in Sri Athmanatha-swami Devasthanam (supra), that suits where the entire course of trial has gone through, it would not be the proper course to order return of the plaint, but to dismiss the suit as done by the first Appellate Court. Of course, to those conclusions, has been added a further dimension that this categorization of cases would be applicable to those causes where the plea is based on lack of jurisdiction as to subject matter, and not where it relates to territorial or pecuniary jurisdiction. It was held in Mattukki and Ors. vs. Rajwanti (supra) thus:

"15. The present case falls in the second category where the first appellate court upon deciding an issue between the parties about their status which question had a direct bearing on the question of jurisdiction has found that the class of Courts in the civil court would not have Jurisdiction to entertain the suit. It was not the case where the territorial limits or the pecuniary limits or the class of the Court within civil court was involved. It was a case where cancellation of the Will deed at the instance of a plaintiff who was not recorded in the revenue records and had not filed any evidence or substantial evidence to prove an interest in the property that the civil court held that the class of civil courts had no jurisdiction because the plaintiffs interest and title was under a cloud and it required a declaration from the competent court. Therefore, under these circumstances the discretion was exercised by the civil court when the first appellate court dismissed the suit of the plaintiff on the issue of lack of jurisdiction and did not return the plaint for presentation before the competent court because even the plaint as it stood for cancellation of a Will deed could not be entertained by the revenue court.

16. The decision cited by Sri R. N. Singh in the case of Athmanathaswami Devasthanam (supra) relates to a case where the suit was filed for recovery of damages for use and occupation of the land. The respondent therein was given possession of the land by the previous trustees of the Devasthanam trust and he started claiming acquisition of the status of ryot under Section 3(15) of the Madras Estates Land Act and acquired permanent rights of occupancy under Section 6 of the said Act. In appeal the High Court disagreed with the trial court and found that the suit as presented could be instituted only in the revenue court and civil court had no jurisdiction to entertain the same and, therefore, it ordered the return of the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. The Hon'ble Supreme Court was considering such a dispute and held that when the Court has no jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the suit it cannot decide any question on merits. The question that can be decided is only a question of jurisdiction and if it comes a conclusion that it had no jurisdiction over the matter it had to return the plaint which was on the plain averments made therein cognizable by another Court competent to entertain the suit.

17. The decisions cited on behalf of the respondents is with respect to the two circumstances when the Court has to return a plaint for presentation or exercise its discretion to dismiss the suit on the ground of having no jurisdiction. The present case is one of the second category where the question of jurisdiction depends upon the averments in the plaint and other questions on merit and the Court proceeded to decide the other issue relating to the claim of the plaintiff as not maintainable before the civil court due to reasons given therein and when the plaint as such could not be maintainable before the revenue court.

18. Once having decided the locus of the plaintiff Phekani in relation to the property and relationship of Gajadhar and Smt. Sugani it found that the suit for cancellation of the Will filed by the plaintiff was not maintainable before the civil court because the plaintiff first required a declaration of her interest which was possible only by the revenue courts. The first appellate court dismissed the suit in toto and did not order return of the plaint. It has, therefore, to be seen whether the plaint ought to have been returned under Order VII, Rule 10 of C.P.C. in the facts and circumstances or the discretion exercised by the first appellate court by dismissing the suit in toto without directing return of plaint is proper or not.

19. As has already been indicated above there are two categories of cases when a jurisdictional issue is involved and the Courts have to decide the same on the facts averred in the plaint. The discretion is only in the second category and in case the plaint allegations are such as falls in the second category where no issue of territorial limits or pecuniary limits or class of Courts within the civil courts is concerned the Court is free to exercise its discretion. Therefore when in the present case there was no issue of territorial limits or pecuniary limits or the class of Courts in the hierarchy of civil courts where the plaint could be maintainable the issue falls squarely where the Court has to consider the question of its jurisdiction on the averments in the plaint only after deciding the competence of the plaintiff to maintain the suit. This was a suit for cancellation of the Will deed by the plaintiff who was not recorded in the revenue records nor had filed any substantial evidence to indicate any interest in the property in question. Therefore, the plaintiff required to get a declaration of her title and remove the cloud over her relating to any right title or interest in the property in question. Hence, the plaint as it stood could not be returned since it would not be cognizable by the revenue court."

42. The question has also been the subject matter of a decision by the Chhattisgarh High Court in Suryakant Gupta vs. B.L. Saraf and another16, where in unequivocal terms, the learned Judge has held that at any stage of the proceeding once it is held that the Court had no jurisdiction, the proper course is to make an order for return of the plaint. In the aforesaid decision, N.K. Agarwal, J. relied upon a Full Bench decision of the Himachal Pradesh High Court in Prithvi Raj Jhingta vs. Gopal Singh17. The decision of the Supreme Court in R.S.D.V. Finance Co. Pvt. Ltd. (supra) was also relied on by His Lordship. It was held in Suryakant Gupta (supra) thus:

"10. The Full Bench of the High Court of Himachal Pradesh in case of Prithvi Raj Jhingta v. Gopal Singh, [AIR 2007 Himachal Pradesh 11.] considering the amended provision of Order XIV has held, to eliminate delay and to ensure expeditious disposal of the suits, both at the stage of trial as well as at the appeal stage, the legislature decided to provide for a mechanism whereby, subject to all exception created under sub-rule (2), all issues, both of law and fact were required to be decided together and the suit had to be disposed of as a whole, of course based upon the findings of the Trial Court on all the issues, both of law and fact.

11. Order XTV of C.P.C. has to be read along with Order VII, Rule 10 of C.P.C. As per explanation of Order VII, Rule 10(I), the Court of Appeal or Revision may direct, after setting aside the decree passed in a suit, return of the plaint. Even if the Court had recorded findings on all issues including the issue of jurisdiction, proper course open for the Court is to return the plaint for its presentation to proper Court. Therefore, ratio of law laid down by the High Court of Himachal Pradesh inPrithvi Raj Jhingta's (supra) case is of no help to the respondents in the facts and circumstances of the present case. For the reasons mentioned hereinabove, in the considered opinion of this Court, the judgment and decree of the Trial Court is not sustainable in law. Therefore, the appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree impugned is set aside. The matter is remitted back to the Trial Court for return of plaint to the plaintiff in terms of provisions contained in Order VII, Rule 10 of C.P.C. Parties are directed to appear before the Trial Court on 2.5.2011. Record of the Trial Court shall be sent back forthwith."

43. A consideration of all the authorities on this seemingly debatable point are preponderant that in a case where the Court at any stage of the proceeding finds that the suit is not triable by it, the proper order to make is one for return of the plaint under Order VII Rule 10 CPC, and not one of dismissal of the suit, or any kind of a decision on merits. The guidance of their Lordships of the Supreme Court, and as already said preponderant authority, certainly not in consensus, is that it does not matter whether the suit has gone through trial the whole way, or has reached the stage of appeal or second appeal. What is relevant is that lack of jurisdiction once determined at any stage, ought to lead to an order for return of the plaint with no determination on merits made. The other view which seems to be not largely subscribed is based on the Full Bench decision in Mst. Ananti vs. Channu (supra). It would be well to remember that the statutory context in which the Full Bench in Mst. Ananti vs. Channu (supra), decided way-back in 1930, was a differently phrased provision of the Code of Civil Procedure, much different from the way it is now worded after the Amendment Act of 1976. The most significant change that the 1976 Amendment has brought about is the addition of the explanation. The added explanation makes it explicit that the power to return can be exercised by virtue of the added explanation by the Court of appeal or revision, after setting aside the decree passed in the suit and by substituting it with an order for return of the plaint. The addition of the explanation brought about by CPC Amendment Act 104 of 1976 is of great significance. The purpose of an explanation is clarificatory. It is expressive of the legislative intent, where doubt has arisen in the application of a statute.

44. Amongst the various purposes that an explanation serves, one that is relevant to the context here has been referred to in Principles of Statutory Interpretation, by Justice G.P. Singh, 13th Edition (page 214) as follows:

"It is also possible that an Explanation may have been added in a declaratory form to retrospectively clarify a doubtful point in law and to serve as a proviso to the main section or ex abundanti cautela to allay groundless apprehensions."
(Note: The aforesaid statements of principle is based on the decisions of the Privy Council in Abdul Latif Khan vs. Abadi Begum (Mrs.), AIR 1934 PC 188 and the Supreme Court in Keshavji Raoji and Co. vs. Commissioner of Income-tax, AIR 1991 SC 1806).

45. A reading of the phraseology of Rule 10 which speaks about the exercise of power to return a plaint at any stage of the suit, and then the explanation clarifying that it can be exercised also by a Court of appeal or revision, in the opinion of this Court postulates that there is absolutely no class of cases or stage of proceeding where the power to return a plaint ought not to be exercised, once the Court finds that it has no jurisdiction. The fact that the power can be exercised by the Court of appeal or revision, that has been clarified through an explanation, logically takes within its fold those cases where trial has gone through the whole way. The principle that where a plaintiff moves a wrong Court that does not have jurisdiction to try the action that he has brought, must be penalized with a dismissal of his suit does not seem to fit into the scheme of things. The question of jurisdiction at times may be quite debatable, or jurisdictional facts may depend upon determination of the Court to be made during trial subject to evidence, or at times upon an application of the law which the parties did not understand to be that what the Court has concluded. If any of these contingencies where the Court finds itself to be without jurisdiction, there is simply no reason to penalize a litigant with the dismissal of his suit. Looked at from another angle, a Court that opines not to have any jurisdiction over the subject matter of the suit does not have jurisdiction to decide anything about it; a fortiori it has no jurisdiction to dismiss the suit.

46. In this view of the matter, this Court is of considered opinion that where a suit is held barred by the provisions of Section 331 of the UP ZA & LR Act at any stage of the proceedings, be it in appeal or revision, the suit cannot be dismissed but has to be dealt with by an order directing return of the plaint to be presented to the proper Court. Substantial question of law no.(i) is answered accordingly. Substantial questions of law no.(ii) has already been answered hereinabove. In view of the answers to questions nos. (i) and (ii), question no.(iii) is not required to be answered.

47. In the result, this appeal succeeds partly and allowed to the extent that the decree of dismissal of the suit passed by the lower Appellate Court is set aside, and shall stand substituted by an order directing return of the plaint for presentation in accordance with law to the proper Court. The Trial Court shal0.79 "l carry out the aforesaid order immediately upon receipt of records. The defendants shall be entitled to their costs from the plaintiffs throughout.

48. It is, accordingly, ordered.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Siddhartha Varma, J.)

1. This second appeal has been filed against the judgement and decree dated 23.11.2012 passed by the Additional District Judge Court No.1 Muzzaffar Nagar in Civil Appeal No. 52 of 2011. It has been prayed that after the judgement and decree dated 23.11.2012 is set aside, the judgement and decree dated 18.5.2011 passed by the Additional Civil Judge (S.D.) Court No. 3 Muzzaffar Nagar in Petition No. 872 of 2005 be restored.

2. A petition under Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, was filed by the appellant Upendra Kumar, the husband. It was stated in the petition that after the appellant i.e. Upendra Kumar had got married to the respondent Smt. Sangeeta on 10.4.1994 the latter came to her husband's house at Alavalpur, Mazra, where her two sons who were aged about 8 years and 6 years at the time of the filing of the petition were born. It was contended in the Divorce petition that there was no compatibility between the husband and the wife as their intellectual levels did not match. The wife, it was stated, did not like her husband and she always wanted to stay with her mother in Village - Johra. The wife, it was stated in the petition, never agreed with anything the husband desired to do. At the time of marriage, the husband was doing a private job in Delhi. For some time, he had also worked privately in Faridabad. It was stated that the wife never wanted stay in the rented accommodation where the husband was staying and she always wanted to stay with her mother at Johra. There were always fights between the two of them and the neighbours used to witness the fights. There were times when for days together the wife never used to prepare food for the plaintiff-husband and he had to cook for himself.

3. It has further been stated in the plaint that when in 1997, the plaintiff husband became a Junior Engineer in the Railways and was posted in Bhusawal, District - Jalgaon, Maharashtra then the defendant-wife stayed with him for a very short period of time and in September 1998 when she entered into a fight with him she came back to her Mayaka. When she did not come back to him, he filed an Application for the restitution of conjugal rights. However, with the intervention of some known and respected people of the area, namely, Sri Tilak Ram, Sri Veersain and Sri Ram Swaroop, a compromise was entered into and the couple began to live together. This, however, did not restore normalcy. When the husband came to know that the wife was all the time asking his friends as to whether if the husband died would she be getting a job in his place and when the plaintiff husband suspected the character of his wife things again reverted to the original state. The wife again left the house of her husband and went to her mother's house.

4. It has still further been stated in the plaint that on 15.4.2004, the plaintiff-husband went to the maternal home of the wife but she refused to come along with him. On 1.5.2004, the plaintiff husband went back to Bhusawal. In the plaint, it has been stated, that on 18.7.2004 the defendant wife alongwith her brother Mintu and her two sons reached Bhusawal and left her two sons behind and came to her mother's house. On 3.12.2004, the plaintiff-husband came back to Delhi and started living with his children over there. In the plaint he has narrated an incident which occurred on 31.8.2005 whereby according to him, he was criminally intimidated at the instance of his wife. With regard to this criminal intimidation, he had also got a complaint lodged at Thana - Nazafgarh. He further stated that on 8.9.2005 even his father was threatened.

5. However, the wife in reply to the petition for divorce filed by the husband/plaintiff had denied the allegations made therein. She also stated that she had filed an application under Section 9 of the Hindu Marriage Act being Suit No. 779 of 1999 for the restitution of conjugal rights. She denied the fact that she had left the children with the husband and stated that, in fact, he had taken away the children forcibly and had forsaken the wife i.e. the defendant. The defendant wife had also denied any kind of adulterous living and she had stated that only to malign her reputation, the plaintiff-husband was stating that she was living with other men. She has stated that no other person had been arrayed as a party in the Divorce Petition by name. The suit for divorce was decreed on 18.5.2011. However, the First Appeal which was filed by the wife (the respondent here) was allowed and the suit was dismissed. The point for determination before the First Appellate Court was as to whether the conduct of the wife could be termed as being cruel towards the husband and because of the cruelty was it not possible for the two to live together as husband and wife.

6. A perusal of the judgement of the First Appellate Court shows that while deciding the point which it had determined for decision, the Court also decided as to whether there was desertion from the side of the wife. It also appears that the First Appellate Court looked into the fact as to whether the wife was responsible for the irretrievable breakdown of the marriage. The First Appellate Court while deciding the Appeal found that there was no desertion from the side of the wife and it was also found that there was no cruelty from her side and, thereafter, allowed the first appeal.

7. The instant second appeal was initially admitted on 20.10.2016. On various occasions i.e. on 20.10.2016, and thereafter efforts were made for re-conciliation. When no re-conciliation appeared possible, this Court on 22.5.2019 framed two questions of law which are being reproduced here as under:-

I. Whether the allegations made in the plaint amount to cruelty?

II. Whether the acts alleged would mean desertion?

8. The further question of law which was argued by the parties, though was not formulated, was whether divorce could be granted on the ground of irretrievable breakdown of marriage because of the fact that the parties were not living together for a very long time.

9. Learned counsel for the appellant submitted that the defendant wife was not staying with the plaintiff-appellant ever since May, 2004, and, therefore, there was no chance of them living together as husband and wife. He reiterated the various grounds which he had taken in the plaint for divorce. He also took the Court through the various evidence which could make the Court believe that the wife i.e. the defendant had forsaken the plaintiff and, therefore, there was a desertion. He also submitted that acts which were committed by the wife, the defendant, amounted to cruelty. He still further submitted that her staying with other men amounted to adulterous living. Therefore, he prayed that ths second appeal be allowed. The judgement and decree of the first appellate court be set aside and the decree of divorce as was passed by the Trial Court be restored.

10. Learned counsel relied upon the testimony of the plaintiff-appellant and one Sri Virendra Singh to substantiate his case.

11. Learned counsel for the appellant also relied upon certain decisions, namely, 2008 (7) SCC 734 : (Statish Sitole vs. Ganga (Smt.), 2013 (5) SCC 226 : (K. Srinivas Rao vs. D.A. Deepa), 2009 (5) ADJ 516 (DB) : (Mamta Dubey vs. Rajesh Dubey), 2009 (6) ADJ 189 : (Sandhya Singh vs. Major Sandeep Singh) and submitted that separate living for a very long time amounted to an irretrievable break down of marriage and a decree of divorce be granted.

12. Learned counsel for the plaintiff-appellant also submitted that divorce could be granted if there was only a single act of cruelty and relied upon 2010 (4) SCC 339 : (Manisha Tyagi vs. Deepak Kumar), 2012 (10) ADJ 619 (DB) : (Arti Pandey vs. Vishnu Kant Tiwari), AIR 2010 Punjab and Haryana 72 : (Rattan Singh vs. Manjit Kaur).

13. Learned counsel for the respondent Sri Diwarkar Rai Sharma, in reply, however, submitted that the First Appellate Court had after looking into the evidence as was available on record had definitely come to a conclusion that there was no desertion from the side of the defendant wife and, in fact, had arrived at a definite conclusion that it was the plaintiff-husband who had managed things in such a manner that the separation of the two had resulted.

14. Learned counsel for the respondent took the Court through the various evidence and also the judgement of the First Appellate Court and stated that so far as any adulterous living was concerned, no finding could be arrived at as per the Hindu Marriage and Divorce Rules, 1956, as no name had been provided of anyone with whom the wife might have tried to live an adulterous life. In fact, the learned counsel of the respondent-wife drew the attention of the Court to the various findings which had been arrived at by the First Appellate Court and tried to convince the Court that the abandoning of the children, the fighting between husband and the wife and the criminal intimidation from the side of the wife were a figment of the imagination of the husband. Learned counsel also drew the attention of the Court to the evidence led by the wife regard to the case she had filed for the restitution of conjugal right. He also drew the attention of the Court to the application which the wife had filed for custody of the children.

15. In the end learned counsel for the respondents vehemently argued that when the husband himself was responsible for the irretrievable breakdown of the marriage then he could not seek divorce on that ground. Learned counsel for the respondent relied upon 2006 (1) AWC 183 : Ram Babu Babeley vs. Smt. Sandhya, and stated that the appellant-plaintiff could not take advantage of his own fault and say that the marriage had irretrievably brokendown and that a decree of divorce be granted. Learned counsel relying upon 2009 (7) JT 5 : Vishnu Dutt Sharma vs. Manju Sharma argued that irretrievable breakdown was not a ground provided in Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.

16. The counsel for the respondents relied upon the maxim of law 'NULLUS COMMODUM CAPERE POTEST DE INJURIA SUA PROPRIA' and submitted that no man can take advantage of his own wrong. He submitted that the husband who had filed the petition himself, as per the evidence on record and as per the findings arrived at by the First Appellate Court, was responsible for the breakdown in the marriage. Learned counsel, therefore, submitted that the findings of fact as had been arrived at by the First Appellate Court could not be interfered with and the Second Appeal may be dismissed as such. He submitted that the substantial questions of law as were framed could not be called substantial questions of law which arose in this case and the findings were crystal clear in the judgement of the First Appellate Court. Regarding the question that separation would amount to irretrievable break down of marriage, learned counsel for the respondents submitted that the husband himself was responsible for the separation of the husband and the wife and this ground was not available to the appellant-plaintiff.

17. Having heard the learned counsel for the appellant and the learned counsel for the respondents, this Court is of the view that the findings as have been arrived at by the First Appellate Court had definitely found that there was not even an iota of evidence to show that the wife was responsible for any desertion or cruelty. From the findings as have been arrived at by the First Appellate Court it is clear that the plaintiff himself was responsible for the separate living of the husband and the wife and, therefore, irretrievable breakdown of marriage had occurred because of the plaintiff/husband himself. He himself was responsible for the breakdown and therefore could not take advantage of his own wrong. The principle enunciated in the maxim 'NULLUS COMMODUM CAPERE POTEST wholly applies in this case. The plaintiff-appellant could not take advantage of his own wrong.

18. Under such circumstances, the appeal is dismissed. The substantial questions of law as were framed by this Court need not any further be answered.

A. Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 - Section 96 and Section 104 read with Order XLIII - Partition Suit - Appeal lies only against final decree and not against partition scheme - Appeal not maintainable against order merely disposing of Amin report

Held:-In a partition suit, unless a partition scheme is finalized and final decree is prepared, no appeal lies as appeal lies only against final decree and not against partition scheme – Order of disposal of Amin report and Commissioner report is not an order which may be termed as decree and no appeal against such order is legally maintainable under Section 96 or 104 or order XLIII of Code of Civil Procedure. (Para 4)

Appeal dismissed (E-5)

Civil Misc. (Delay Condonation) Application No.7 of 2019, Civil Misc. Application No.8 of 2019 & Civil Misc. (Substitution) Application No.9 of 2019

1. Heard Shri Dinesh Rai, Advocate, holding brief of Shri Mukesh Kumar, learned counsel for appellant and Shri S.K. Misra, learned counsel for respondent.

2. In reply to abatement application no.172533 of 2015 filed by respondent on 14.5.2015, applications have been moved by appellant for condonation of delay, setting aside abatement and substitution of legal representatives of deceased-respondent nos.2 & 5 to which counter affidavit has been filed on 30.7.2019.

3. At the very outset, it was pointed out that present second appeal has been filed against impugned judgment and decree dated 23.1.1998 in First Appeal No.695 of 1987, passed by IVth Additional District Judge, Farrukhabad against the order dated 25.8.1987 passed by IInd Additional Civil Judge, Farrukhabad in proceedings of execution i.e. for preparation of partition scheme in a partition suit, disposing of the report and map of Amin as well as report of commissioner and objections thereto arising out of Civil Suit No.152 of 1982. By above order dated 25.8.1987, the learned trial Court has disposed of the objections and amended/modified the report Amin against which, First Appeal No.695 of 1987 was preferred by defendants/judgment debtors which has been dismissed by impugned order. Hence the defendants have preferred this second appeal, which has been admitted without framing any substantial question of law, which is mandatory under provisions of Section 100 (5) C.P.C.

4. Undisputedly, the order dated 25.8.1987 passed by trial Court is in order of disposal of report Amin and Commissioner which is not an order which may be termed as decree and no appeal against such order is legally maintainable under Section 96 or 104 or order XLIII of Code of Civil Procedure. In a partition suit, unless a partition scheme is finalized and final decree is prepared, no appeal lies as appeal lies only against final decree and not against partition scheme. This legal position could not be disputed either by learned counsel for appellant.

5. My above view is supported by the judgment passed by this Court in the case of "Phanindra Nath Banerji Versus Labanya Mayee Banerji 1950 Allahabad Weekly Reporter 280" wherein it was held that-

"mere order giving directions for preparation of final decree is not appealable. A decree for partition, to be operative, must be engrossed on stamped paper required by Stamp Act, and until the judge signs the decree so engrossed it cannot be said that the suit has terminated".

6. In view of above facts and legal position, the final appeal no.695 of 1987, though decided on merits, was legally not maintainable and against the impugned order dated 23.1.1998 passed in above mentioned final appeal (which is not a decree), no second appeal is legally maintainable. Accordingly, the second appeal is also not maintainable irrespective of the fact that it has been admitted on 20.2.1998 without framing any substantial questions of law in contravention of provision of Section 100 (5) of Code of Civil Procedure.

7. In the circumstances, the appeal itself is not maintainable and is liable to be dismissed.

8. The appeal is dismissed accordingly with no order as to costs.

9. Substitution applications are disposed off accordingly without prejudice to the rights of parties who may seek remedy as available to them.

10. Interim order, if any, stands vacated.

11. Let the lower Court record, if any, has been received be sent back forthwith to court below alongwith a copy of this order.

A. Banking Law Regulation Act, 1949 - Section 45ZA of - Indian Contract Act, 1872 - Section 45 - Rights of 'Survivor' in view of mandate of 'Former or Survivor' mentioned over the Fixed Deposit Receipts (FDRs), as mode of payment - held - survivor gets limited rights to receive money as trustee of heirs - like a nominee nominated by "Former".

Mandate "Either or Survivor" or "Former or Survivor" with regard to mode of payment deals only with valid discharge of Banks and has nothing to do with the law of succession or right of successors/legal heirs/legatee of deceased-depositor - If Bank makes full payment to nominee or survivor, it gets a valid discharge of dues and has no obligation to seek discharge from other legal heirs of deceased - Survivor or nominee, has only a limited right to receive the amount as a trustee of the legal heirs of deceased-depositor and such payment to survivor/nominee, does not affect the rights or claims, which any person may have against survivor or nominee to whom the payment has been made - On Such payment survivor/nominee would not become absolute owner of the amount so received by her - rather would be only a trustee of the legal heirs of deceased - depositor including her legatee. (Para 33, 34)

B. Indian Succession Act - Section 372 - Application for Succession certificate - Mere availability of remedy of an application (miscellaneous proceedings) under Section 372 of Indian Succession Act, does not bar jurisdiction of Civil Courts to entertain regular civil suit for declaration.

Lower Appellate Court illegally dismissed the suit of plaintiff on the ground that suit for declaration is not maintainable in view of provisions of Section 42 of Specific Relief Act or in view of provisions of Sections 372 or 213 of Indian Succession Act. (Para 19)

Held:-Sahodara Bibi brought up plaintiff, as his mother, died during his infancy - Sahodara Bibi held four fixed deposit receipts and also got name of defendant no.1 Gurpyari Devi added in the fixed deposit receipts with the remark "Payable to the former or Survivor" - Sahodara executed her last will in favour of plaintiff in respect of impugned fixed deposit receipts - After death of Sahodara -- defendant no.1 disputed the rights of plaintiff – Plaintiff instituted suit for a decree of declaration to the effect that he is entitled to the amount due under the four fixed deposit receipts – Trial decreed the suit – Lower Appellate Court dismissed suit of plaintiff

(Delivered by Hon'ble Harsh Kumar, J.)

1. The instant appeal has been filed against judgment and decree dated 18.1.2002 passed by Additional District Judge, Kanpur Nagar in Civil Appeal No.264 of 2001 arising out of judgment and decree dated 4.9.2001 passed by Additional Civil Judge (Senior Division), Kanpur Nagar in Civil Suit No.193 of 1986.

2. The brief facts relating to the case are that Shri Ram Krishna Puri filed Civil Suit No.193 of 1986 in the Court of Civil Judge, Kanpur Nagar against Smt. Gurpyari Devi, Sri Kashi Nath Khatri and Allahabad Bank for a decree of declaration to the effect that plaintiff is entitled to the amount due under the four fixed deposit receipts each for Rs.10,000/- dated 16.1.1981 for a period of 63 months and plaintiff be awarded cost of suit against defendant-respondent nos.1 and 2, with the averments that Smt. Sahodara @

Sahodara Bibi had brought up plaintiff as his mother had died during his infancy and that she held four fixed deposit receipts each for Rs.10,000/- dated 16.1.1981 for a period of 63 months and was sole owner of the amount and had got name of defendant no.1 Gurpyari Devi added along with her in the fixed deposit receipts with the remark "Payable to the former or Survivor"; and since Smt. Sahodara died on 30.1.1985 after executing her last will dated 18.1.1983 in favour of plaintiff in respect of impugned fixed deposit receipts and defendant no.1 is disputing the rights of plaintiff, hence suit.

3. The defendant no.1 filed a written statement denying the allegations of plaint and claiming herself to be entitled to full and final payment of maturity amount under the impugned fixed deposit receipts and that the suit is barred by provisions of Section 213 of Indian Succession Act.

4. Defendant no.2 also filed separate written statement denying the allegations of plaint.

5. On parties pleadings the trial court framed as many as six issues viz.,

(i) Whether Smt. Sahodara executed a will deed dated 18.1.1983?

(ii) What if any is the effect of entries of the name of Smt. Gurpyari Devi and Smt. Sahodara over the fixed deposit receipts?

(iii) Whether Smt. Sahodara had a right to execute will deed in respect of fixed deposit receipts?

(iv) Whether the suit is barred by provisions of Section 213 of Indian Succession Act?

(v) Whether suit is under valued and court fee paid is insufficient?

(vi) To what relief if any, is the plaintiff entitled?

6. After recording parties evidence and hearing arguments, the learned trial court held that plaintiff has succeeded in proving execution of will deed dated 18.1.1983 by Smt. Sahodara and decided issue no.1 in favour of plaintiff. On issue nos.2 and 3 trial court gave a finding in favour of plaintiff against the defendant and also decided issue no.4 in favour of plaintiff and against defendant while issue no.5 had been previously decided on 10.9.1991 against defendant. In view of above findings on issue no.6 trial court held that plaintiff has succeeded in proving his case and decreed the suit vide judgment and decree dated 4.9.2001.

7. Feeling aggrieved defendant no.1 Smt. Gurpyari Devi preferred Civil Appeal No.264 of 2001 before District Judge, Kanpur Nagar which was transferred for disposal to the court of Additional District Judge, Court No.8, Kanpur Nagar. The lower appellate court vide impugned judgment and decree dated 18.1.2002 allowed appeal and set aside the judgment and decree passed by trial court in Civil Suit No.193 of 1986 dismissing the suit of plaintiff.

8. Feeling aggrieved the plaintiff has preferred instant second appeal.

9. The instant second appeal has been admitted vide order dated 8.2.2002 on following two substantial questions of law :-

(1) Whether the first appellate court has erred in dismissing the suit on the ground that the suit for declaration is not maintainable?

(2) Whether the first appellate court has erred in carving out a new case itself regarding the maintainability of the suit?

10. Heard Shri Some Narayan Mishra, learned counsel for plaintiff-appellant hereinafter referred as plaintiff and Shri Abhijeet Mukherji, learned counsel for defendant-respondent no.1 hereinafter referred as defendant and perused the record as well as lower court record summoned in this second appeal.

11. Learned counsel for plaintiff contends that judgment and decree passed by lower appellate court is bad on facts and law; that lower appellate court acted wrongly in allowing the appeal without displacing the findings recorded by trial court in favour of plaintiff- appellant; that trial court acted wrongly in holding that suit was barred by provisions of Section 213 of Indian Succession Act; that impugned fixed deposit receipts were obtained by Smt. Sahodara which were issued in the name of Smt. Sahodara and Smt. Gurpyari Devi with the endorsement by bank on top of it mentioning "Payable to Former or Survivor"; that undisputedly Smt. Sahodara died on 30.1.1985; that since Smt. Sahodara had executed a registered will dated 18.1.1983 in favour of plaintiff-appellant, in respect of the fixed deposit receipts in question, the plaintiff-appellant has a right to get the maturity amount mentioned in the fixed deposit receipts; that survivor Smt. Gurpyari Devi has no right or title over the amount mentioned in fixed deposit receipts and her position will be that of nominee only; that nominee can only receive payment from bank but may not change the rights of successors rather will be bound to make payment of amount so received to the successors of deceased; that since the plaintiff-appellant was legatee of the will deed executed by Smt. Sahodara she was rightful owner of maturity amount under the impugned fixed deposit receipts; that the findings of trial court on issue no.1 with regard to execution of registered will dated 18.1.1983 by Smt. Sahodara in favour of plaintiff-appellant has not been set aside by lower appellate court and without setting aside the findings of trial court, the impugned judgment and decree allowing the appeal and setting aside the judgment and decree of trial court is absolutely wrong, illegal and against law; that lower appellate court has erred in dismissing the suit on the ground that suit for declaration is not maintainable; that lower appellate court had no jurisdiction in carving out a new case itself regarding maintainability of suit while there was no such plea taken by defendant-respondent; that the impugned judgment and decree are liable to be set aside and the judgment and decree passed by trial court are liable to be restored.

12. Per contra learned counsel for defendant-respondent no.1 supported the impugned judgment and decree passed by lower appellate court and contended that learned trial court acted wrongly and illegally in decreeing the suit of plaintiff-appellant and lower appellate court very rightly held the suit to be barred by provisions of Section 213 of Indian Succession Act and in the alternative by provisions of Section 372 of Indian Succession Act; that the suit for seeking a declaratory decree for declaration of his rights to receive the payment under the disputed fixed deposit receipts is virtually a relief for seeking mandatory injunction, directing the bank to make payment of maturity amount under the impugned fixed deposit receipts; that upon death of Smt. Sahodara, her niece defendant-respondent no.1 Smt. Gurpyare Devi becme exclusive and rightful owner and to get payment under the impugned fixed deposit receipts being mentioned as survivor in the fixed deposit receipts; that no substantial question of law is involved in this appeal and appeal is liable to be dismissed with costs.

13. Upon hearing parties counsel and perusal of record as well as record of lower court summoned in appeal, I find that undisputedly Smt. Sahodara Bibi obtained four fixed deposit receipts (hereinafter referred to as 'FDRs') for Rs.10,000/- each on 16.1.1981 from Allahabad Bank for a period of 63 months, which were issued by Allahabad Bank in the name of Smt. Sahodara and Smt. Gurpyari Devi (hereinafter referred to as "S' & "G', respectively) with mandate of mode of payment as "Payable to Former or Survivor". "S' died on 30.1.1985 and Ram Krishna Puri (hereinafter referred to as "R') filed Civil Suit No.193 of 1986 claiming to be a legatee under the last Will executed and registered by "S' in his favour on 18.1.1983 and sought a declaratory decree, seeking declaration that he is entitled to get the amount due under four FDRs detailed in prayer clause, impleading Allahabad Bank as Defendant No.3, who did not file any written statement and did not contest the suit. The Trial Court holding that plaintiff has succeeded in proving the Will as well as his case, decreed the suit, against which Civil Appeal No.264 of 2001 filed by defendant "G' was allowed by lower Appellate Court and plaintiff 'R' has preferred instant second appeal.

14. The lower Appellate Court has framed two points for determination of appeal (i) who is legally entitled to get amount under the impugned FDRs and whether in view of the mandate mentioned over the FDRs "S' had a right to execute Will in respect of the amount mentioned in FDRs and (ii) whether suit was barred by provisions of Section 213 of Indian Succession Act.

15. On point no.1, the lower Appellate Court held that in view of the mandate of "Payable to Former or Survivor", upon death of "S' only "G' was entitled to operate the account or receive the amount payable under the impugned FDRs and the Trial Court has committed mistake of facts and law in not considering the wordings of mandate mentioned over all the impugned FDRs. It further held that in the circumstances, question of execution and proof of Will deed dated 18.1.1983 lost its relevance, because the survivor "G' was exclusively entitled to get the amount under impugned FDRs and legal heirs or the legatee of "S', under impugned Will deed dated 18.1.1983 may not be getting any legal right to receive the amount of impugned FDRs. On point no.2 it held that though "R' claims execution of Will by "S' in his favour, but since he did not obtain Probate or Succession Certificate, the suit was barred by provisions of Section 213 of Indian Succession Act and in view of mandate mentioned over FDRs as well as provisions of Section 42 of Specific Relief Act, the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to try suit and pass declaratory decree in respect of money under impugned FDRs.

16. Substantial question of law No.1 is as under :-

17. The substantial question of law No.1 relating to maintainability of suit for declaration has been dealt with by lower Appellate Court under point No.2 framed by it. It is pertinent to mention that Section 42 of Specific Relief Act, 1963 has no application to the case and suits for declaration. Specific Relief Act, 1877 was replaced by new Specific Relief Act, 1963, which came into force w.e.f. 13th January, 1964, Section 42 of which deals with provisions relating to "Injunction to perform negative agreement". Section 34 of Specific Relief Act, 1963 which is equivalent to Section 42 of old Specific Relief Act, 1877 with certain changes, contains provisions with regard to Declaratory decrees and discretion of Court, as to declaration of status or right. In the instant case, undisputedly the amount under the impugned FDRs has not been paid by Bank to "G', the survivor, and suit seeking decree for declaration about his entitlement only, was competent without seeking any further relief. Hence the Court finds that lower Appellate Court acted wrongly and illegally in holding the suit to be barred by provisions of Section 42 of Specific Relief Act, without even considering the repeal of old Act of 1877 and provisions of Sections 34 and 42 of new Act.

18. As far as provisions of Sections 213 and 372 of Indian Successions Act with regard to Probate and Succession certificate are concerned, in view of the law laid down by Division Bench of this Court in the case of Smt. Bimla Gaindhar Vs. Smt. Usha Gaindhar and another, AIR 2004 Ald 329, and provisions of Section 57 of the Act, plaintiff 'R' was not at all required to obtain a Probate on the basis of Will deed dated 18.1.1983 executed by "S'.

19. In above case, it was also held that though probate will not be required in such cases, but an application under Section 372 of the Act would be maintainable. It is noteworthy that mere availability of remedy of an application (miscellaneous proceedings) under Section 372 of Indian Succession Act, does not bar jurisdiction of Civil Courts to entertain regular civil suit for declaration.

20. In view of discussions made above, this Court is of considered view that lower Appellate Court committed manifest error of law and acted wrongly and illegally in allowing appeal and dismissing the suit of plaintiff on the ground of non maintainability of suit in view of provisions of Section 42 of Specific Relief Act or in view of provisions of Sections 372 or 213 of Indian Succession Act. Substantial question of law No.1 is accordingly decided in affirmative in favour of plaintiff against the appellant.

21. The substantial question of law no.2 is as under:-

22. The matter relating to this substantial question of law has been discussed by lower Appellate Court under point no.1 framed by it and in paras 7 to 11 of the impugned judgment observing that on all impugned FDRs, mandate "Payable to Former or Survivor" is mentioned. Considering the meaning and effect of above mandate regarding mode of payment, by giving an example, it held that where an account is in the names of "A' and "B' with mandate of Former or Survivor, "A' holds right to operate the account throughout his life time and after his death, right to operate account goes to "B' but "B' has no right to operate the account during life time of "A', and in case 'B' dies in life time of "A', the legal heirs of "B' will not be entitled to operate the account or receive the amount and so only upon death of "A', "B' may be entitled to operate the account and receive the amount in which case legal heirs or legatee of "A', will not have any legal right to operate the account or receive the amount.

23. It was contended by plaintiff that lower Appellate Court acted wrongly and illegally in ignoring the duly proved Will deed and in dismissing suit of plaintiff without displacing the findings of Trial Court on issue no.1 in favour of plaintiff 'R' regarding execution of Will deed dated 18.1.1983 by "S' and committed manifest error in holding that in view of mandate "Payable to Former or Survivor", the survivor "G' acquired absolute rights of receiving the maturity amount to the exclusion of legal heirs or legatee of "S'. It was contended that being survivor, position of "G' was only that of a nominee, who had a limited right, only to receive the amount under the impugned FDRs, as trustee of legal heirs of former "S' deceased.

24. Now the main point to be considered is that, as to what will be the rights of 'Survivor' defendant 'G', in view of mandate of 'Former or Survivor' mentioned over the impugned FDRs, as mode of payment and whether the survivor will get absolute rights to get maturity value as claimed by defendant 'G' and held by lower Appellate Court, OR will get only limited rights to receive money as trustee of heirs of Former, like a nominee nominated by Former as claimed by plaintiff 'R', the legatee and legal heir of Former 'S'.

25. Before proceeding on this question, I find it expedient to reproduce the provisions of Section 45 of Indian Contract Act, 1872 and Section 45ZA of The Banking Law Regulation Act, 1949, which are as under:-

*"Section 45 of Indian Contract Act, 1872.

45. Devolution of joint right. -When a person has made a promise to two or more persons jointly, then, unless a contrary intention appears from the contract, the right to claim performance rests, as between him and them, with them during their joint lives, and, after the death of any of them, with the representative of such deceased person jointly with the survivor or survivors, and, after the death of the last survivor, with representatives of all jointly.*

Illustration

A, in consideration of 5,000 rupees lent to him by B and C, promises B and C jointly to repay them that sum with interest on a day specified. B dies. The right to claim performance rests with B's representatives jointly with C during C's life, and after the death of C, with the representatives of B and C jointly.

Section 45ZA of The Banking Law Regulation Act, 1949.

45ZA. Nomination for payment of depositors' money.-

(1) Where a deposit is held by a banking company to the credit of one or more persons, the depositor or, as the case may be, all the depositors together, may nominate, in the prescribed manner, one person to whom in the event of the death of the sole depositor or the death of all the depositors, the amount of deposit may be returned by the banking company.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force or in any disposition, whether testamentary or otherwise, in respect of such deposit, where a nomination made in the prescribed manner purports to confer on any person the right to receive the amount of deposit from the banking company, the nominee shall, on the death of the sole depositor or, as the case may be, on the death of all the depositors, become entitled to all the rights of the sole depositor or, as the case may be, of the depositors, in relation to such deposit to the exclusion of all other persons, unless the nomination is varied or cancelled in the prescribed manner.

(3) Where the nominee is a minor, it shall be lawful for the depositor making the nomination to appoint in the prescribed manner any person to receive the amount of deposit in the event of his death during the minority of the nominee.

(4) Payment by a banking company in accordance with the provisions of this section shall constitute a full discharge to the banking company of its liability in respect of the deposit:

Provided that nothing contained in this sub-section shall affect the right or claim which any person may have against the person to whom any payment is made under this section."

26. In the case of Ram Chander Talwar Vs. Devendra Kumar Talwar and others, 2010 (10) SCC 671, the Apex Court held that Section 45ZA(2) merely puts the nominee in the shoes of the depositor after his death and clothes him with the exclusive right to receive the money lying in the account. It gives him all the rights of the depositor so far as the depositor's account is concerned. But it by no stretch of imagination makes the nominee the owner of the money lying in the account. It needs to be remembered that the Banking Regulation Act is enacted to consolidate and amend the law relating to banking. It is in no way concerned with the question of succession. All the monies receivable by the nominee by virtue of Section 45ZA(2) would, therefore, form part of the estate of the deceased depositor and devolve according to the rule of succession to which the depositor may be governed."

27. In the case of Smt. Sarabati Devi and another Vs. Smt. Usha Devi, 1984 SCC (1) 424, the Apex Court interpreting the provisions of Section 39 of Insurance Act held that :-

"1.1 A mere nomination made under Section 39 of the Insurance Act, 1938 does not have the effect of conferring on the nominee any beneficial interest in the amount payable under the life insurance policy on the death of the accused. The nomination only indicates the hand which is authorised to receive the amount, on the payment of which the insurer gets a valid discharge of its liability under the policy. The amount, however, can be claimed by the heirs of the assured in accordance with the law of succession governing them.

1.2 An analysis of the provisions of Section 39 of the Act clearly established that the policy holder continues to hold interest in the policy during his life time and the nominee acquires no sort of interest in the policy during the life time of the holder. If that is so, on the death of the policy holder the amount payable under the policy becomes part of his estate which is governed by the law of succession applicable to him, such succession may be testamentary or intestate. The tenuous character of the right of a nominee becomes more pronounced when one contrasts the provisions of Section 39 with that of Section 38.

Section 39 of the Act was not intended to act as a third mode of succession provided by the stature and incorrectly styled as "statutory testament" by the Delhi High Court.

1.3 The language of Section 39 of the Act is neither capable of altering the course of succession under law nor can be said to have equated a nominee to an heir or legatee."

"Modern Law Publications" published an exhaustive commentary on Banking Law with new developing areas like MICR technology etc. under the name of "Banking Law and Practice by R.K. Gupta", Joint Legal Advisor, Reserve Bank of India, Legal Department, Central Office, Mumbai, with a foreword by Hon'ble Mr. Justice G.P. Mathur, Judge Supreme Court in two volumes. In above commentary on "Banking Law and Practice", Volume I published in the year 2012 in Chapter 7 at page 1.513 rights of survivor regarding joint accounts have been described as under :-

"Joint Account payable to former or survivor. - When the fixed deposit is payable to Former or Survivor, the deposit is payable to the former so long he is alive and after his death, the deposit is payable to the survivor. The survivor cannot claim the amount on maturity, if the former is alive. In such cases, the legal representatives of the account holder who had died have no claim against the bank.

The survivor does not become absolute owner of the maturity proceeds. He holds the said amount in trust for the legal heirs of the account holder who has died. In Guran Ditta V. Ram Ditta (AIR 1928 Privy Council 172), where the deposit was held by a person with his wife on the terms that it is payable to either or survivor, the court held that on the death of the husband, it does not constitute a gift by him to his wife and there is a resulting trust in her favour in the absence of proof and contrary intention, there being no presumption in India of an intended advancement in favour of his wife."

28. The Vth Edition of 2010 of The Banking Law - in Theory and Practice, by S.N. Gupta, Advocate, narrates the consequences on death of one of the joint holder, at page 237 as under :-

"'Former or Survivor' or 'Either or Survivor' accounts are opened which are operated by the 'Former or Survivor' or 'Either or Survivor'.

What will happen if there is death of one of the joint account holders whether the bank can get the proper discharge by paying in account of survivor. Another question will arise as to what is the liability of the survivor and whether he has to make some payments to the heirs and legal representatives of the deceased joint holder.

In such cases so far as the bank is concerned we can say that the bank will get a proper discharge by paying to the survivor. However, the survivor will be accountable to the heirs of the deceased joint holder. In the absence of a proof of the intention of the deceased to make the survivor the owner."

BC.95/09.07.005/2004-05

To
The Chairman/CEOs of All the Scheduled Commercial Banks
(Excluding RRBs)

Dear Sir,

Settlement of claims in respect of deceased depositors - Simplification of Procedure

Pursuant to the announcement in the Mid-Term Review of the Annual Policy of the RBI on November 3, 2003, the Committee on Procedure and Performance Audit on Public Services (CPPAPS) was constituted by the RBI with a view to improving the quality of public services to the common person. The Committee in its Report No.3 on 'Banking Operations : Deposit Accounts and other Facilities Relating to Individuals (Non-Business)', observed that the tortuous procedures, particularly those applicable to the family of a deceased depositor, caused considerable distress to such family members. While the instruction regarding settlement of claims of the deceased depositors had been issued to the banks vide our circular No.DBOD.BC.148/09.07.007/99-2000 dated March 14, 2000 and BC.56/09.07.007/2000-01 dated December 6, 2000, the present dispensation has been reviewed in the light of the recommendations of the CPPAPS and the following instructions are being issued, in supersession of all the earlier instructions on the subject, to facilitate expeditious and hassle-free settlement of claims on the death of a depositor.

2. ACCESS TO BALANCE IN DEPOSIT ACCOUNT

(A) Accounts with survivor/nominee clause

2.1 As you are aware, in the case of deposit accounts where the depositor had utilized the nomination facility and made a valid nomination or where the account was opened with the survivorship clause ("either or survivor", or "anyone or survivor", or "former or survivor" or "latter or survivor"), the payment of the balance in the deposit account to the survivor(s)/nominee of a deceased deposit account holder represents a valid discharge of the bank's liability provided :

(a) the bank has exercised due care and caution in establishing the identity of the survivor(s)/nominee and the fact of death of the account holder, through appropriate documentary evidence;

(b) there is no order from the competent court restraining the bank from making the payment from the account of the deceased; and

(c) it has been made clear to the survivor(s)/nominee that he would be receiving the payment from the bank as a trustee of the legal heirs of the deceased depositor, i.e., such payment to him shall not affect the right or claim which any person may have against the survivor(s)/nominee to whom the payment is made.

2.2 It may be noted that since payment made to the survivor (s)/nominee, subject to the foregoing conditions, would constitute a full discharge of the bank's liability, insistence on production of legal representation is superfluous and unwarranted and only serves to cause entirely avoidable inconvenience to the survivor(s)/nominee and would, therefore, invite serious supervisory disapproval. In such case, therefore, while making payment to the survivor(s)/nominee of the deceased depositor, the banks are advised to desist from insisting on production of succession certificate, letter of administration or probate, etc., or obtain any bond of indemnity or surety from the survivor(s)/nominee, irrespective of the amount standing to the credit of the deceased account holder.

3. Premature Termination of term deposit accounts .....

4. Treatment of flows in the name of the deceased depositor .....

5. Access to the safe deposit lockers/safe custody articles .....

6. Time limit for settlement of claims .....

7. Provisions of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949 .....

8. Simplified operational systems/procedures .....

9. Customer Guidance and Publicity .....

10. These instructions should be viewed as very critical element for bringing about significant improvement in the quality of customer service provided to survivor(s)/nominee(s) of deceased depositors.

11. Please acknowledge receipt.

Yours faithfully,
(Anand Sinha)

30. A photo copy of the Circular letter dated 9th June, 2005 of Reserve Bank of India is being placed on record as part of record.

"In the case of Dalavayi Nagarajamma Vs. State Bank of India AIR 1961 Andhra Pradesh 320, the High Court of Andhra Pradesh held that

"Where A deposits his own money in the joint names of himself and B (who may be his wife, daughter or any other person) on the terms that it is payable to either or survivor, the deposit on A's death does not constitute a gift by him to B. The burden of proof lies upon B in whose name the deposit is jointly taken to prove that a gift was intended or made. The mere fact that it is taken in the joint names does not lead to the conclusion that a gift was made to the other person."

31. In the case of Padmanabhan Bhavani Vs. Govindan AIR 1975 Ker 83, considering above mentioned decision of Andhra Pradesh High Court in case of Dalavayi Nagarajamma (supra) wherein "one Ramaswamy deposited Rs.10,000/- in the joint names of himself and his concubine, who was the appellant, payable to either or survivor and after Ramaswamy's death, the appellant claimed the balance at the credit of the account on the ground that he had intended to make a gift of the amount of Rs.10,000/- to her, it was held that the appellant had not discharged the onus which was on her of proving the gift and that the mere fact that the deposit was made in the joint names does not lead to the conclusion that Ramaswamy gifted the amount to her", the High Court of Kerala formulated following propositions in para 6 of judgment :-

"(i) A deposit made by a Hindu of his money in the joint names of himself and his wife or any other person, on the terms that it is payable to either or survivor, does not on his death constitute a gift by him to the other person.

(ii) In such a case without any declaration of trust, there is a resulting trust in favour of the depositor in the absence of any contrary intention or unless it can be proved that an actual gift of the amount was intended.

(iii) The principle of English Law that a gift to a wife is presumed, where money belonging to the husband is deposited at a Bank in her name or where a deposit is made, in the joint names of both husband and wife has no application in India. In other words, there is no presumption in India of an intended advancement as there is in England.

(iv) The burden of proving a contrary intention or gift is on the person who seeks to rebut the resulting trust in favour of the person, who makes the deposit.

(v) This burden could be discharged either by proving that there was a specific gift or that the owner of the money had a general intention to benefit the claimant and that it was in pursuance of that intention that he made the deposit in the claimant's name or transferred the deposit to the joint names of himself and the claimant.

(vi) In the absence of such proof the amount under the deposit will form part of the owner's estate on his death and will be partible among the heirs."

32. Admittedly 'S' died issue-less and plaintiff 'R' and defendant 'G' both claims that she was their 'Bua'. Undisputedly, there is absolutely no iota of evidence on record to show that Former 'S' had any intention to gift the amount of impugned FDRs in favour of Survivor 'G'.

33. It can be safely held that mandate "Either or Survivor" or "Former or Survivor" with regard to mode of payment deals only with valid discharge of Banks and has nothing to do with the law of succession or right of successors/legal heirs/legatee of deceased-depositor. In such case, if the Bank makes full payment of amount due to nominee or survivor, it gets a valid discharge of dues and has no obligation to seek discharge from other legal heirs of deceased, before making such payment. As per clear instructions mentioned in circular of R.B.I. Dated June 9th, 2005, issued to all the Commercial Banks (reproduced hereinabove), and also in view of various decisions discussed earlier, the survivor or nominee, has only a limited right to receive the amount as a trustee of the legal heirs of deceased-depositor and such payment to survivor/nominee, does not affect the rights or claims, which any person may have against survivor or nominee to whom the payment has been made. No doubt above Circular Letter has been issued by Reserve Bank of India in the year 2005, subsequent in time to the dispute, which arose between the parties on death of 'S' on 30.1.1985, but it contains only instructions or guidelines to Commercial Banks for improvement in quality of customer service and clarifies the legal position, hence is equally relevant in instant case.

34. In view of discussions made above, the Court is of the considered view that position of survivor "G' upon death of depositor/former "S' is only that of a nominee, to whom even if the payment of amount due had been made by Bank (though admittedly has not been made as yet), would have been only in due discharge of bank obligation and on such payment defendant would not have become absolute owner of the amount so received by her, as survivor/nominee, rather would have been only a trustee of the legal heirs of "S' including her legatee "R' the plaintiff. Issue no.1 was decided by Trail Court in affirmative holding due execution of registered Will deed of her all movable/immovable properties including impugned FDRs by 'S' in favour of her nephew plaintiff 'R'. The lower Appellate Court did neither disagree with, nor displaced above findings. The contention of learned counsel for defendant that Former 'S' had no right to execute Will in respect of impugned FDRs, is bogus having no force and the findings of lower Appellate Court about Will being ineffective, in view of mandate mentioned over impugned FDRs, is wrong, illegal and perverse, as the lower Appellate Court failed to consider that survivor does not acquire absolute rights, rather his/her rights are that of a nominee or trustee of legal heirs of Former.

35. The Court is of the considered view that lower Appellate Court has committed grave and manifest error and acted wrongly and illegally in carving out a new case itself with regard to Will being ineffective in view of mandate mentioned over impugned FDRs as well as non maintainability of suit on this Count. The substantial question of law no.2 is, therefore, decided in affirmative in favour of plaintiff against the appellant.

36. In view of discussions made above, the Court has come to the conclusion that learned lower Appellate Court has committed grave and manifest error of law and acted wrongly and illegally in allowing the first appeal by setting aside judgment and decree passed by Trial Court, without displacing the findings recorded by Trial Court. The impugned judgment and decree do not deserve to stand and are liable to be set aside and appeal is liable to be allowed.

37. The appeal is allowed accordingly. The impugned judgment and decree dated 18.1.2002 passed by Additional District Judge, Kanpur Nagar, the lower Appellate Court in Civil Appeal No.264 of 2001, Smt. Gurpyari Devi Vs. Ram Krishna Puri and others are set aside and the judgment and decree dated 4.9.2001 passed by Additional Civil Judge (Senior Division), Kanpur Nagar, the Trial Court decreeing the Civil Suit No.193 of 1986 are restored.

38. In the circumstances of the case, parties shall bear own costs of the litigation throughout.

39. Interim order, if any, stands vacated.

40. Let the lower court record be transmitted back to Court below along with a copy of this judgment for necessary action, if any, after preparation of decree.

4.Harmndeep Singh Vs Swaran Singh 2009 Law Suit (P&H) 640

(Delivered by Hon'ble Ajay Bhanot, J.)

1. This second appeal, arises out of the judgment and decree dated 10.05.2005, rendered by the learned Additional District Judge, Anupshahar, District Bulandshahar in Civil Appeal no. 2 of 2004 (Jageshwar Dayal and others Vs Rajjan Lal), which affirms the judgment and decree dated 04.12.2003, entered by the learned Civil Judge (Junior Division), Bulandshahar, in Original Suit no. 231 of 2001, Jageshwar Dayal and others Vs Rajjan Lal.

2. This second appeal is instituted by the plaintiffs in the Original Suit no. 231 of 2001, Jageshwar Dayal and others Vs Rajjan Lal.

3. The following genealogical table, depicts the respective positions of parties, to the litigation:

Nannamal (deceased)
Shyo Prasad Gulab Dei Rajjanmal Shanti Devi
(deceased) (deceased) (defendant-respondent)
Suman Kumari Manorama Devi Gayatri Jageshwar Dayal
(deceased)

4. The plaintiffs-appellants brought civil action, against the defendant-respondent, by instituting a suit for declaration and injunction. The suit was registered as Original Suit No. 231 of 2001, Jageshwar Dayal and others Vs Rajjan Lal before the learned Civil Judge (Junior Division), Bulandshahar. The plaintiffs-appellants in the suit claimed to be true owners in possession of the property in dispute and sought a declaration to that effect. It was further prayed, that the defendant-respondent be injuncted, from interfering with the peaceful possession, of the plaintiffs-appellants, over the property in dispute. The third relief, sought by the plaintiffs-appellants, was to restrain the defendant-respondent, from alienating the disputed property in favour, of a third party.

5. Before the issues were framed, a written compromise, purportedly executed between the parties on 30.05.2001, was filed in the learned trial court. The defendant-respondent, by application 27Ga-2, denied the compromise.

6. The learned trial court vide order dated 24.09.2002 rejected the application 27Ga-2 of the defendant-respondent. The order dated 24.09.2002, found that the compromise is only a document in the record, and till the court passes appropriate orders, the compromise is ineffective and cannot be acted upon.

7. The trial court framed the following issues;

"(i) Whether the plaintiff is the owner of the entire property in dispute?

(ii) Whether the plaint was under valued and there was a deficiency in court fee?

(iii) Whether disputed property is a joint property of the parties in which all parties are entitled to an equal share?

(iv) Whether the plaintiff is entitled to any relief?

8. The issues were framed i.e. on 07.08.2003, and the issue no. 2 was decided, on date. By order dated 07.08.2003, the learned trial court, found that the valuation of the property in dispute was Rs. 10,000/-. The learned trial court, by the said order, directed the plaintiffs-appellants, to amend the valuation of the plaint and deposit the deficient court fee, within a period of one week. Additional time was granted by the court, since the defects were not rectified in time.

9. However, the plaintiffs-appellants did not carry out the necessary amendment, nor did they deposit the deficient court fee. On 28.10.2003, an application registered as Paper No. 34-A/1 was moved by the plaintiffs-appellants, for enlargement of time to cure the deficiencies.

10. The ordersheet of the learned trial court goes silent thereafter, on whether the amendment was carried out or not, and whether the plaintiffs-appellants had deposited the deficient court fees.

11. The original records, of the learned trial court, are before this Court.

Learned counsel for both the parties perused the record. The learned counsels for both the parties, confirm that the plaintiffs-appellants did not carry out the amendment in the plaint, and failed to deposit the deficient court fees. No orders were passed on application marked as Paper No. 34A/1. These undisputed facts, lie at the core of the controversy, in this appeal.

12. An application, numbered as Application no. 35-A/2 was filed, by the defendant-respondent, before the learned trial court on 04.12.2003, to decree the suit, in light of the compromise agreement, dated 30.05.2001. The application, bears an endorsement of the counsel of the plaintiffs-appellants, seeking time to file an objection, to the said application.

13. The learned trial court decided the Application no. 35-A/2 and the suit on the foot of the compromise dated 30.05.2001 and entered a judgment and decree on 04.12.2003. The judgement dated 04.12.2003, passed by the learned trial court, records that a compromise agreement, was executed between the parties on 30.05.2001, and the same is in the record of the court. The learned trial court, in the judgement dated 04.12.2003, thereafter finds that "by the compromise agreement (Paper No. 22-A/1) the parties are ready to compromise". The judgement dated 04.12.2003, finally decreed the suit, in terms of the compromise deed and the compromise was made part of the decree. The judgment of the learned trial court did not consider the objection of the plaintiff-appellant to the application no. 35A-2, tendered by the defendant-respondent.

14. The plaintiffs-appellants carried in appeal, the judgment and decree, of the learned trial court dated 04.12.2003, before the learned Additional District Judge, Bulandshahar. The appeal was registered, as Appeal No. 2 of 2004, Jageshwar Dayal and others Vs Rajjan Lal. Various grounds, against the judgment and decree of the learned trial court, were stated in the memo of appeal. The grounds relevant at this stage, specifically emphasized the objection taken by the plaintiffs-appellants on 04.12.2003, and endorsed on the application no. 35-A/2, submitted by the defendant-respondent, to decree the suit in terms of the compromise. The omission of the trial court to consider the said objection, was also a ground in the memo of appeal.

15. The learned Appellate Court framed one issue for determination, "Whether the learned trial court while entering its judgment and decree dated 04.12.2003, over looked the material in the record, and misdirected itself in law, by passing an arbitrary order?"

16. The learned appellate court in its judgment dated 10.05.2005, found that the compromise dated 30.05.2001, was filed by both the parties in the court. The judgment of the learned appellate court, thereafter records, that no objection was tendered by the plaintiffs-appellants, in regard to the compromise. The only objection to the compromise came from the defendant-respondent which was rejected by the learned trial court.

17. The learned appellate court thus concurred with the learned trial court, that no objection had been tendered by the plaintiffs-appellants to the compromise. In its narration of facts, though, the appellate court noticed the objection made by the plaintiffs-appellants before the trial court seeking time to enter its opposition, to the application No. 35-A submitted by the defendant-respondent. However, no finding in that regard was returned by the learned appellate court. The appellate court was in agreement, with the trial court, to decree the suit on the foot of the compromise.

18. The appellate court in its judgment dated 10.05.2005, also dealt with the issue, regarding deficiency in payment of court fees, and failure of the plaintiffs-appellants, to make the amendments to the plaint. The appellate court judgment, held that in view of the compromise between the parties, issue of deficiency in court fee was irrelevant.

19. In this manner, the learned appellate court, as well as the learned trial court, abstained from deciding the objection of plaintiffs-appellants to the compromise. The learned courts also opined that deficiency in court fees and failure to amend the plaint on merits, had lost relevance, in light of the compromise between the parties.

20. In the wake of such findings, the appeal filed by the plaintiffs-appellants, came to be dismissed and the judgment & decree of the learned trial court was affirmed, by the learned appellate court, in its judgment and decree dated 10.05.2005.

21. Sri B. Dayal, learned counsel for the appellants, submits that the judgments and decrees of the learned trial court, as well as learned appellate court, respectively decreeing the suit in terms of the compromise, was in the teeth of Section 6(2) of the Court Fees Act, 1870. The judgments of both the learned courts, are in excess of jurisdiction. The courts could not enter into the consideration of the compromise, in the face of admitted deficiency in the court fee.

22. Learned counsel for the plaintiffs-appellants, further submits, that the impugned judgements, completely over looked the objection by the plaintiffs-appellants to the application, filed by the defendant-respondent, to decree the suit, in terms of the compromise. The judgments & decrees impugned are in violation of Order XXIII Rule 3 CPC.

23. In opposition, Mrs. Rajni Ojha, learned counsel for the defendant-respondent, submits that the appeal before the learned appellate court, as well as the instant second appeal, are not maintainable in view of the bar in Section 96(3) CPC. Elaborating her submissions, she contends, that findings of fact, had been returned by the learned courts of earlier instance, that the compromise was duly arrived at, and hence the bar in Section 96 (3) CPC read with Order XXIII Rule 3 CPC, will apply in full force to the facts of this case. Secondly, the issue of court fees ceases to be relevant, after the parties arrived at a compromise.

24. The parties agreed during the arguments, that following substantial questions of law arise for determination in this second appeal.

(i) Whether the learned appellate court and the learned trial court erred in law by proceeding with the suit and decreeing it in terms of the compromise, even in the admitted presence of deficiency of court fees, and lack of incorporation of amendment to the plaint in regard to valuation of the suit?

(ii) Whether the judgment of the learned trial court as well as learned appellate court are rendered perverse and illegal, on account of omission on the part of the learned both courts, to return independent findings on the objection endorsed by the plaintiffs-appellants on the application no. 35A filed by the defendant-respondent?.

(iii) Whether the learned appellate court erred in law by affirming the judgment of the learned trial court, without finding the compliance of Order XXIII Rule 3 C.P.C.?

(iv) Whether the appeals before the learned first appellate court as well as this Court are maintainable?

25. The levy of court fee, is governed and regulated by the Court Fees Act, 1870 (hereinafter referred to as "Act of 1870"). The Act of 1870 is a complete code. The consequences of short payment of court fee, and failure to rectify the defect by making good the deficiency in court fee, are provided in Section 6(2) of Court Fees Act, 1870. The provision bears relevance to the instant controversy, and it would be apposite to extract the same before proceeding further;

"6. Fees on documents filed, etc in Mufassil Courts or in Public Offices- (1).....

(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of sub-section (1), a Court, may receive plaint or memorandum of appeal in respect of which an insufficient fee has been paid, but no such plaint or memorandum of appeal shall be acted upon unless the plaintiff or the appellant, as the case may be, makes good the deficiency in court-fee within such time as may from time to time be fixed by the Court."

26. Answers to two of the substantial questions of law, framed herein above, will turn largely, on the interpretation, of the above said provision.

27. A perusal of Section 6(2) of the Act of 1870, discloses that even on insufficient payment of fee, the court may receive a plaint or a memorandum of appeal. The second part of Section 6(2), creates an embargo on further action, to be taken on a plaint or memorandum of appeal, which is deficient in court fee. However the disability imposed is not permanent, and shall stand removed, once the plaintiff or the appellant, as the case may, be makes good the deficiency in court fee, within the time fixed by the court. The defect is curable and can be rectified by payment of court fee in full.

28. Section 6(2) of the Act of 1870 and in particular the phrase therein "shall be acted upon" fell for consideration, on more than one occasion, before this Court.

29. The consequences of the deficiency in payment of court fee, on the suit action, were determined by this Court in Mt. Asghari Begum Vs Fasihuddin reported at AIR 1934 Allahabad 989, wherein it was ruled:

"There would be no proper suit before the Court till the deficiency in court-fee had been paid. The only order that could be passed by the learned Subordinate Judge was one rejecting the plaint. No order permitting the plaintiff to withdraw the suit and to bring a fresh suit could have been made on the basis of an insufficiently stamped plaint, which was liable to be rejected. In this view of the case, the plaintiff has paid what was due by her, and she is not entitled to get back the money. The application in revision is accordingly dismissed with costs."

30. In Pradeep Kumar and another Vs Vishnu Kumar and others, reported at 2018 All. C.J. 2560, this Court, interpreted the expression "no such plaint or memorandum of appeal shall be acted upon" as occurring in Section 6(2) of the Court Fees Act, 1870. This Court in Pradeep Kumar (supra) held:

"In so far as sub-section (3) of section 6 is concerned, it restricts the right of the court to proceed further with the suit or appeal, if a question of deficiency in court-fee in respect of any plaint or memorandum of appeal has been raised by an officer mentioned in Section 24-A. Proceeding further in a suit or an appeal would mean proceeding further on the claim made in the suit or in the appeal or on the applications seeking interim relief to serve that claim. It does not take away the right of the plaintiff to abandon any part of his claim. When a plaintiff abandons part of his claim, he does not proceed further with his claim made in the suit. The process /act of abandonment of a part of the claim made in a suit does not amount to proceeding further in the suit."

31. The consequences of deficiency of court fees and the scope of expression "proceeding with the suit" in Section 6(3) of the Court Fees Act, 1870 were also considered in Hamid Hussain Khan Vs Masood Hussain Khan and others reported at AIR (39) 1952 Allahabad 279. The determination of this Court of the aforesaid legal question is as follows;

"29. Under Section 6(3) Court-fees Act, as amended in U. P. when a question of deficiency in court-fee is raised by the Inspector of Stamps, the Court is directed, before proceeding further with the suit or appeal, to record a finding whether the court fee paid is sufficient or not. If the Court finds that the court-fee paid is insufficient, it shall call upon the plaintiff to make good the deficiency within such time as it may fix and in case of default shall reject the plaint; provided that the Court may, for sufficient reasons to be recorded proceed with the suit, if the plaintiff gives security to the satisfaction of the Court for payment of the deficiency in court-fee within such further time as the Court may allow.

30. As stated above, the Court does not appear to have decided the question of court-fee before proceeding with the receivership application. The question is whether proceeding with the receivership application amounts to "proceeding with the suit" I thick that it does. A application for the appointment of a receiver is made in the suit and is part of the proceedings of the suit. It is true that it does not raise a question upon the merits of the suit itself but it is certainly an interim matter connected with the suit. The words 'proceeding with the suit', as mentioned in Section 6(a) must be read in the context of Section 28 Court fees Act which provides that no document shall be of any validity unless and until it is properly stamped. If the plaint is not properly stamped, the Court ought not to take any action upon it so as to give relief to the plaintiff by way of an interim injunction or an order of appointment of a receiver, or otherwise.

31. The fact that the defendant's application in revision against the order of the lower Court directing the hearing of the receivership application before the issue of court-fee was decided was dismissed by this Court does not debar this Court from considering in this appeal the question whether in the circumstances the Courts below bad jurisdiction to proceed with the hearing of the receivership application. The reason is that the revision was dismissed not on the merits, but on a preliminary point that the revision was not maintainable."

32. The preceding findings of facts, the case law in point, and the bare words of the statute, will enable us to distill the import of Section 6(2) of the Act of 1870, and its impact on this case.

33. The words "no plaint or memorandum of appeal shall be acted upon" essentially places a jurisdictional fetter on the court. Jurisdiction, is the authority conferred by law upon a court, to try a lis. Before proceeding to try any lis, or pronouncing any judgment on the claim or part thereof, courts have to see that all jurisdictional pre-requisites, are satisfied.

34. A court can enter into the merits of a controversy, and/or proceed with any aspect of the claim, only after full court fee as determined by the court, is paid. The suit proceedings become dormant, when deficiency in court fee is found. But the jurisdiction of the court to process the claim revives, once the deficiency is removed. Failure to remove the deficiency after opportunity, may entail dismissal of the suit. In any case, the adjudication of the claim or part thereof, which is subject of the suit, cannot be proceeded with, in the wake of deficient court fee.

35. The plaintiff had not amended the plaint, and there was deficiency in payment of court fee, despite orders of the trial court.

36. In these facts, the learned trial court as well as the learned appellate court, did not have the jurisdiction, to enter into an exercise under Order XXIII Rule 3 CPC, return any findings in regard to the compromise, and pass a judgment and decree on the foot of such compromise. The learned trial court as well as learned appellate court, exceeded their jurisdiction, and acted contrary to a statutory embargo created by Section 6(2) of the Court Fee Act, by acting upon the compromise dated 30.05.2001, and entering their respective judgments and decrees, on the foot thereof, in the face of admitted deficiency in payment of court fee and failure of the plaintiff-appellant to amend the plaint.

37. The first question of law is accordingly answered as follows:

"The learned appellate court and the learned trial court erred in law by proceeding with the suit and decreeing it in terms of the compromise, even in the admitted presence of deficiency of court fees, and lack of incorporation of amendment to the plaint in regard to valuation of the suit".

38. Compromise, between the parties to a lis, is an act of litigative repose, which terminates the litigation. Compromise is an act of which parties to a lis, to settle the dispute on acceptable terms with mutual consent . Legislature has accorded sanctity, to act of the parties to settle their dispute, by compromise agreements. The procedure for effecting a valid compromise, provided in Order XXIII Rule 3 CPC, is summary in detail but substantive in content.

39. Order XXIII Rule 3 CPC. is reproduced here under, for ready reference:

3. Compromise of suit - Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that a suit has been adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise [in writing and signed by the parties] or where the defendant satisfied the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the suit, the Court shall order such agreement, compromise satisfaction to be recorded, and shall pass a decree in accordance therewith [so far as it relates to the parties to the suit, whether or not the subject-matter of the agreement, compromise or satisfaction in the same as the subject-matter of the suit:]

[Provided that where it is alleged by one party and denied by the other that an adjustment or satisfaction has been arrived at, the Court shall decide the question; but not adjournment shall be granted for the purpose of deciding the question, unless the Court, for reasons to be recorded, thinks fit to grant such adjournment.]

40. Compromise not only brings the parties to a litigative terminus, but also bars further litigation, by prohibiting any appeal against a compromise decree. The parties are barred from agitating the matter any further, after the compromise decree is passed. The parties cannot be rushed into a compromise. The essence of a compromise, is in a voluntary agreement, between the parties, to settle the matter by mutual consent. The procedure prescribed under Order XXIII Rule 3 CPC, rules out all elements of fraud, misrepresentation, coercion and anything which makes a compromise non voluntary.

41. Hence, there has to be strict compliance of the procedure prescribed in Order XXIII Rule 3 CPC. The provision is mandatory, and has to be scrupulously adhered to. The satisfaction of the Court, should be duly recorded, in regard to the willingness of the parties to compromise the suit, and lawful nature of the agreement. The identities of the parties, either in person, or through their counsel as well as their signatures should be fully established before the court with full material particulars. Satisfaction of these conditions precedent to a valid compromise should be reflected in clear findings of the court.

42. In the instant case, the findings of the trial court and the appellate court, on the identities of parties, identification of signatures and the respective counsels, lack material particulars and are vague.

43. The learned trial court as well as learned appellate court under the judgments dated 10.05.2005 and 04.12.2003 respectively, have not recorded their satisfaction on the basis of the material in the record, in regard to the willingness of the parties to the compromise and the lawful nature of the agreement.

44. The mandate of Order XXIII Rule 3 CPC, as stated in the preceding paragraphs, was not observed by the learned trial court, as well as the first appellate court. The compromise decree was passed by the trial court in violation of the provisions of Order XXIII Rule 3 CPC.

45. This requirement assumes greater importance, in this case, in view of some peculiar facts. The plaintiffs-appellants had endorsed an objection to the compromise on the application, filed by the defendant-respondent, dated 04.12.2003, registered as Paper No. 35A-2. The learned trial court took no account of the aforesaid objection. The learned trial court did not return a finding on the said objection made by the plaintiff-appellant. This omission by the learned trial court was a ground in the memo of appeal before the first appellate court. The learned appellate court, noticed the objection of the plaintiffs-appellants, to the compromise, but neglected to make a finding on the same.

46. True it is, that the plaintiffs-appellants had on earlier occasion, affirmed the compromise, in response to the application dated 04.07.2001 by the defendant-respondent, denying the compromise. On different occasions, both parties had reversed their stands on the compromise before the trial court. In such situation, it was imperative to determine the nature of the objection. The judgments assailed in this second appeal have been rendered in violation of Order XXIII Rule 3 CPC.

47. The findings of the learned trial court, and the learned appellate court, that the appellant did not object to the compromise are perverse and contrary to the record.

The second and third questions of law are accordingly answered as follows;

(2) The judgment of learned appellate court was rendered perverse and illegal, by its agreement with the learned trial court that the plaintiffs-appellants had no objection to the compromise, since it overlooked the admitted fact in the record, that the plaintiffs-appellants had endorsed an objection to the application 35-A, before the learned trial court and duly reiterated the same in the memo of appeal.

(3) The learned appellate court erred in law, by affirming the judgment and decree of the learned trial court, which was passed in violation of Order XXIII Rule 3 CPC.

48. The legislature has vested sanctity in a mutual settlement by according finality to a compromise agreement. Of course the compromise has to be entered into lawfully before a court of law. The Courts acknowledge, the quietus to the controversy, brought about by such compromise. Appeals, against a judgment and decree, passed on the foot of a compromise are barred. Section 96(3) of CPC prohibits any appeal, against a decree passed on a compromise, between the parties. The intent of the legislature is not far to seek. Creating successive avenues of appeal, against a judgment and decree passed on the foot of a compromise, would defeat the purpose of settlement by compromise. Successive avenues of appeal, would draw the parties, into an endless orbit of litigation, which they seek to end by the compromise.

49. Considering the issue of maintainability of an appeal and a second appeal, arising out of a judgment and decree passed on a compromise the Hon'ble Punjab & Haryana High Court in

Harmndeep Singh Vs Swaran Singh reported at 2009 Law Suit (P&H) 640, answered the aforesaid question as under:

"24. The judgment and decree passed by the learned lower appellate Court was on the basis of compromise, which is again not appealable. The prerequisite for permitting the assignee to file an appeal in this Court, the judgment/decree should be appealable to the High Court. Once it is proved, that the decree is not appealable, the application or the appeal filed by the applicant-appellant cannot be entertained."

50. The argument of Smt. Rajini Ojha, learned counsel for the respondent regarding non maintainability of the appeals, before the first appellate court as well as this Court, seems attractive at first sight, and settled both by statute and authority. However, in light of the established facts of this case and legal narrative rendered in the earlier part of the judgment, the arguments do not stand up to judicial scrutiny.

51. Admittedly, there is a legislative bar, against taking a judgment and decree, passed on the foot of a compromise, in appeal. Such bar is however, is premissed on two facts. Firstly, the trial court, had the jurisdiction to render the judgment and decree on the foot of a compromise. Secondly such judgment and decree had been rendered in strict adherence to the provisions of Order XXIII Rule 3 CPC. In case, the trial court was not vested with the jurisdiction, to enter a judgment on the foot of a compromise, the bar of Section 96(3) CPC will not apply. There can be no two ways about it. In the event, any other interpretation is adopted, an absurdity would be a sure consequence. In that case, a judgment passed by a court, without jurisdiction, would become final. The aggrieved party, would not have any legal recourse, even against a judgment, which was beyond the jurisdiction of the court. Consent of parties cannot confer jurisdiction on courts.

52. It has already been found, in the earlier part of the judgment, that the learned trial court had exceeded its jurisdiction and its judgment violated Order XXIII Rule 3 C.P.C. The appeal before the first appellate court, was maintainable to determine among other issues, the issue of excess of jurisdiction and compliance of Order XXIII Rule 3 C.P.C. The instant second appeal is maintainable on like grounds.

53. Smt. Rajini Ojha, learned counsel for the respondents has relied upon various judgments, relating to estoppels created against the parties, on account of compromise, and a consent decree passed on the basis thereof. However, the judgments are not applicable, to the facts of the instant case, in view of the findings the preceding part of this judgement.

54. The second question of law is answered as follows;

"The appeal before the first appellate court as well as the second appeal before this court are maintainable, since the trial court acted in violation of Order XXIII rule 3 CPC did not have the jurisdiction to pass the judgment and decree assailed before the first appellate court and this Court."

55. The judgment and decree dated 04.12.2003, passed by the learned Civil Judge

(Junior Division), Bulandshahar, in Original Suit no. 231 of 2001, Jageshwar Dayal and others Vs Rajjan Lal, and the judgment and decree dated 10.05.2005, passed by Additional District Judge, Anupshahar, District Bulandshahar in Civil Appeal no. 2 of 2004 (Jageshwar Dayal and others Vs Rajjan Lal), are illegal and unsustainable.

56. The judgment and decree dated 04.12.2003, passed by the learned Civil Judge (Junior Division), Bulandshahar, in Original Suit no. 231 of 2001, Jageshwar Dayal and others Vs Rajjan Lal, and the judgment and decree dated 10.05.2005, passed by Additional District Judge, Anupshahar, District Bulandshahar in Civil Appeal no. 2 of 2004 (Jageshwar Dayal and others Vs Rajjan Lal), are set aside.

57. The matter is remitted to the learned trial court.

58. The suit proceedings commence forthwith before the learned trial court upon receipt of a certified copy of this order. The learned trial court shall grant one month and no more time to the plaintiffs-appellants to amend the plaint and make good the deficiency in the court fee. The learned trial court shall decide the suit within a period of six months thereafter. The learned trial court shall proceed on day to day basis, if necessary to adhere to the stipulated time line. The learned trial court shall not grant any adjournment to the parties. The learned trial court shall finally decide the suit, in accordance with law and consistent with the observations made in this judgment.

59. In case an appeal is filed against the judgment & decree of the trial court, the appellate court shall decide the appeal within two months.

60. Second appeal is allowed to the extent indicated above.

A. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - Market Value - Determination of market value has to be made as per market rate, prevailing on the date of publication of notification under section 4 (1) of Act, 1894. (Para 33)

B. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - Market Value vis-à-visCircle rates - For the purposes of determining market value, under Section 23 of Act, 1894 - circle rate fixed by Collector for the purposes of stamp duty, under Stamp Act, 1899 - would not be a relevant material unless such determination is under a statutory obligation and after following the prescribed procedure. (Para 36 & 38)

C. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - Market Value - 'comparable sales method of valuation' - Exemplar sale deed - Sale deeds, if any, executed in the close proximity of the relevant date which is genuine and shows a voluntary and open transaction between the parties - Sale must be a genuine transaction - sale deed must have been executed at the time, proximate to the date of issue of notification under Section 4- land covered by the sale must be in the vicinity of acquired land – land covered by the sales must be similar to acquired land - size of plot of the land covered by the sales be comparable to the land acquired - Where land subject matter of exemplar sale deed is smaller or larger suitable adjustment by applying plus and minus factors and also appropriate deduction can be made by the Court. (Para 39 & 67)

D. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - Market Value - Number of Exemplar Sale deed- It is not the number of exemplars which is important but it is the genuity, authenticity and creditworthiness of the documents - If the document is found most suitable and appropriate for determining compensation in respect of acquired land, even a single instance/exemplar cited by Land Owner may be relied and it can be said that Claimant-Land Owner has succeeded in discharging his burden. (Para 48)

E. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - Market Value - Size of land & Deduction - Small size plot attract a large number of persons being within their reach - which will not be possible in respect of large block of land wherein incumbent will have to incur extra liability in preparing a lay out and carving out roads, etc - In such matters, factors can be discounted by making deduction by way of an allowance at an appropriate rate ranging between 20% to 75%, to account for land, required to be set apart for carving out road etc. and for plotting out small plots. (Para 41)

F. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - Market Value – Potentiality - "Potentiality" means, capacity or possibility for changing or developing into state of actuality - Potentiality of land should be on the date of acquisition i.e. existing potentiality - Further, potentiality has to be directly relatable to capacity of acquired land to produce agricultural products, or its market value relatable to method of compensation. If there exist crops, trees or fruit bearing trees, the same can be taken into consideration, but extent of benefit cannot go to the extent that fruits grown in agricultural land would be converted into processed food like jam or any other eatable products. (Para 59 & 67)

G. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - Deductions - Generally a deduction is given taking into consideration the expenses required for development of the larger tract to make smaller plots within that area in order to compare with the small plots dealt with under the sale transaction - Deduction can be made where the land is acquired for residential and commercial purpose with regard to roads and civic amenities, expenses of development of the sites by laying out roads, drains, sewers, water and electricity lines, and the interest on the outlays for the period of deferment of the realization of the price, the profits on the venture etc. (Para 44 & 54)

H. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - Deductions - Quantum of deduction towards development is on account of two components - "first component", may conveniently be referred to as deductions for keeping aside area/space for providing developmental infrastructure - "second component" may conveniently be referred to as deductions for developmental expenditure /expense under the head of "development", the applied deduction should not exceed 67 percent. That should be treated as the upper benchmark. (Para 73)

I. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - No Deduction case – Where the acquired land itself is fully developed and has all essential amenities, before acquisition, for the purpose for which it is acquired requiring no additional expenditure for its development, falls under the purview of cases of `no deduction' – exemplar lands have all the features comparable to the proposed acquired land, including that of size, is another category of cases where principle of `no deduction' may be applied. (Para 93)

J. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - Belting system - When a large extent of land under acquisition comprises of lands of several persons and some lands are abutting the main road and some lands are in the interior, the same would not have the uniform rate of market value - Reasonable demarcation/classification should be made before determination of the compensation - i.e. where nature, extent, size, surrounding and location of acquired land greatly varies, Courts have applied "belting system" for determination of market rate of acquired land - It is applied in appropriate cases when different parcels of land with different survey numbers belong to different owners and having different locations are acquired – Such chunk cannot be taken as a compact block – In Belting System, acquired land is usually divided in two or three belts. (Para 88 & 94)

K. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - Market Value- Valuation of immovable property - Factors - Factors such as the nature and position of land to be acquired, purpose for which the land can be used, its potential value, locality, situation, size and shape of the land, rise of depression in the value of land in the locality consequent to acquisition etc., are relevant factors to be considered - Other factor - Existing geographical situation of land, Existing use of land, Already available advantages, like proximity to National or State Highway or road and/ or developed area, Market value of other land situated in the same locality/ village/ area or adjacent or very near the acquired land. (Para 68 & 79)

L. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - Fair Market Value - Burden - Burden to establish as to what is the reasonable and adequate market value and that the offer made by Collector is inadequate, is on the Land Owners/ claimanats at whose instance Reference has been made to District Judge under Section 18 of Act, 1894 - If initial burden in that behalf is discharged, the burden would shift to State to justify the compensation offered by SLAO. It is for Claimants to ascertain as a matter of fact - location, potential and quality of land for establishing its fair market value. (Para 49 & 59)

M. Land Acquisition Act, 1894 - Section 18 (Reference) - Reference Court does not sit in appeal over the Award of Land Acquisition Officer – Material used by Land Acquisition Officer is not open to be used by Court suo motu unless such material is produced by the parties and proved independently before Reference Court. (Delivered by Hon'ble Sudhir Agarwal, J.
Hon'ble Rajeev Misra, J.)

1. Sri B. Dayal, Advocate for appellant in both these appeals and Sri M.C. Singh, Advocate, for respondents in First Appeal No. 3 of 2016.

2. In First Appeal No. 264 of 2012, names of three counsel appear for respondents as shown in the cause list, one of whom namely Sri D.K. Mishra has sought adjournment on the ground of illness, but no reason has been assigned as to why other counsel are not present despite the case having been called in revised. In such circumstances, we find no justification to adjourn this matter and proceed to decide present appeals after hearing above mentioned learned counsel appearing for respective parties. .

3. Both these appeals arise from two similar but seperate Awards of Reference Courts under Section 18 of Land Acquisition Act, 1894 (hereinafter referred to as "Act 1894"), and have been filed under section 54 of the said Act. Since they involve common and similar questions of facts and law, therefore, have been heard together and are being decided by this common judgement.

4. Appeal No. 264 of 2012 (hereinafter referred to as 'Appeal-1') is a defendant's appeal arising from judgement and Award dated 10.5.2010 and decree dated 31.5.2010, passed by Sri Sushil Kumar, Additional District and Sessions Judge, Court No.9, Bulandshahr (hereinafter referred to as the 'Reference Court') adjudicating Land Acquisition Reference (hereinafter referred to as 'LAR') No. 184 of 2001 (Smt. Amir kuwar Vs. State of U.P.), determining market value of the acquired land for the purpose of payment of compensation at the rate of Rs. 8,50,000/- per Pakka Bigha (Rs. 281/- per sq-yard) and Rs. 3,54,783/- towards cost of the trees. Reference Court has also awarded other statutory dues like 12% additional compensation, 30% soletium and interest at the rate of 9% for one year from the date of possession and for subsequent period at the rate of 15%.

5. Appeal No. 3 of 2016 (hereinafter referred to as "Appeal-2") is also a defendant's appeal arising from judgement and Award dated 24.9.2015 and decree dated 6.10.2015, passed by Sri Rajat Singh Jain, Additional District Judge, Court No.2, Bulandshahr in LAR No. 1 of 2006, determining market value for the payment of compensation at the rate of Rs. 8,50,000/- per Pakka Bigha (Rs. 281/- per sq-yards) besides other dues like 30% solatium, 12% additional compensation and interest as per various provisions of the Statute. This Award has been delivered following earlier Award dated 10.5.2010, passed in LAR No. 184 of 2001, which is subject of Appeal-1.

6. Facts in brief giving rise to this appeal are, that, Bulandshahr Khurja Development Authority (hereinafter referred to as "BKDA") is a statutory body constituted under the provisions of U.P. Urban and Planning Development Act, 1973 (hereinafter referred to as "Act 1973") for undertaking development in the area notified under Act 1973 of District Bulandshahr at Khurja. For the purpose of construction of residential and commercial building, BKDA proposed acquisition of land in village Akbarpur. The proposed scheme was named as 'Yamunapuram Avasiya Yojna, first phase'. It proposed acquisition of 61.801 acres (299116.84 sq-yard or 98.88 Bigha) land.

7. A notification dated 20.12.1988 under Section 4 of Act 1894 was published in U.P. Gazette on 20.12.1988. Notification dated 18.1.1989 making declaration under section 6 of Act 1894 was published in U.P. Gazette dated 18.1.1989. Possession of land was taken on 19.5.1989 and Award was published by Special Land Acquisition Officer (hereinafter referred to as "SLAO") on 4.4.1991. The said Award, however, did not include Gatas No. 363 area 5-0-11; 385 area 10-0-11; 375 area 0-4-0 i.e. 3 plots of total area 18-5-2 for the reason that तमेचवदकमदज Smt. Amir Kunwar Devi in appeal-1 had filed Writ Petition No. 3317 of 1989, challenging acquisition Notifications and therein, an interim order was passed on 21.2.1989. The said writ petition was dismissed on 4.9.2000. Thereafter, aforesaid land of respondent Smt. Amir Kuwar Devi in Appeal-1 was taken in possession by State and transferred to BKDA on 22.9.2000. S.L.A.O published a supplementary Award dated 10.5.2001, offering compensation to respondents in First Appeals by determining market value for the purpose of compensation of acquired land, at the rate of Rs. 88,000/- per Bigha (i.e. Rs. 29.09 sq-yard).

8. In the award dated 4.4.1991, SLAO found that the part of land which was sold in small area plots to various sale-deeds, shows rates between Rs. 100/- per sq-yard to 420/- per sq-yard. There are some sale-deeds which show rates of Rs. 70/- to 100/- per sq-yard. SLAO ultimately, relied on sale-deeds No. 84 dated 25.11.1987, which relates to Plot No. 386, area 200 sq-yard (167.22 sq-meter) land was sold for consideration of Rs. 2000/- i.e. Rs. 100/- per sq-yard. Since the area of acquired land was much bigger, therefore he applied 25% deduction and determined market value of Rs. 75/- per sq-yard. Then it applied belting system, divided the said rate into two i.e. Rs. 75/- per sq-yard land which is nearer to Highway/G.T. Road and land which was 50 meter and more deep, at Rs. 50/- per sq-yard. In respect of other land which he found was agricultural land applying circle rate, he determined market value of Rs. 88,000/- per Pakka Bigha i.e. Rs. 29.09 per sq-yard for Jungle Auwal Abi and Rs. 56981/- for Jungle Auwal Khaki. In the supplementary award dated 10.5.2001, SLAO has followed earlier award by applying rate of Rs. 88,000 per Pakka Bigha i.e. Rs. 29.09 per sq-yard, which was determined for Jungle Auwal Abi.

9. Respondent in Appeal-1, filed Writ Petition No. 13729 of 2001 (Smt. Amir Kunwar Devi Vs. B.K.D.A. and Others), which was disposed of vide judgement dated 13.4.2001, directing Authority concerned to decide her representation. The order reads as under:

"The present writ petition is disposed of with the direction that it is open to the petitioner to approach the authority concerned for deciding the representation which is said to be pending before him. It is hereby directed that if the representation has not yet been decided, it may be decided in accordance with law very expeditiously.

The writ petition is disposed of with the observations. "

10. The representation was rejected by Vice Chairman, BKDA vide order dated 6.7.2001. Aggrieved by supplementary Award dated 10.5.2001, Smt. Amir kunwar Devi, respondent in Appeal-1, made an application to Collector under Section 18 of Act 1894 requesting to make Reference to District Judge for determination of market value for the purpose of compensation, under section 23 of Act 1894. She claimed compensation at the rate of Rs. 10,000/- per sq-meter and Rs. 75,00,000/- as the cost of 400 mango trees and Rs. 50,000/- compensation in respect of tubewell installed at the acquired land.

11. The appellant contested Reference by filing written statement, raising an objection that there was already a settlement between parties, wherein claimant-respondent, Smt. Amir kunwar Devi, had accepted compensation at the rate of Rs. 49.35 sq-meter. In this regard, agreement was executed on 16.4.2003 and sale-deed was executed on 16.4.2003 for 3001.84 sq-yard land, hence Reference is not maintainable. Reference Court in Appeal-1 formulated five issues, as under :

''1– क्या भूमि अध्याप्ति अधिकारी द्वारा दिनांक 10–05–2001 को दिया गया एवार्ड नगण्य है तथा वाद पत्र की धारा–8 के अनुसार बाजारू कीमत व सर्किल रेट के कई गुना कम है ?

2– क्या याचना पत्र की धारा–7 के अनुसार अधिग्रहण व्यवसायिक उद्देश्य से किया गया था, यदि हॉ तो प्रभाव ?

3– क्या वाद पत्र की धारा–9 के अनुसार अर्जित भूमि में पौधों की कीमत तथा अन्य टयूववैल व क्षतिपूर्ति की प्रतिकर आदि एवार्ड में नही दिया गया है, यदि हॉ तो प्रभाव ?

4– क्या प्रतिवाद पत्र 28क की धारा–27 के अनुसार याचिनी का वादपत्र पोषणीय न होने के कारण खारिज होने योग्य है ?

"1. Whether the Award dated 10.05.2001 passed by the Land Acquisition Officer is null & void; and is many times lesser than the market price and circle rate as alleged in para 8 to the plaint?

2. Whether the acquisition was done for commercial purpose as alleged in para 7 to the plaint? If so, its effect?

3. Whether compensation for the cost of planting, erection of tube-well, etc. in the acquired land has not been awarded as alleged in para 9 to the plaint? If so, its effect?

4. Whether the plaint of the petitioner is liable to be dismissed as being not maintainable as alleged in para 27 to the written statement being 28 Ka?

5. Relief?"

(English Tanslation by Court)

12. Claimant-respondent in Appeal-1, in support of her claim, examined Sri Virendra Singh P.W.1 and herself as P.W.2. Defendant's oral evidence comprised of Sri Hari Singh as D.W.1.

13. Besides oral evidence, claimant-respondent in Appeal-1 filed copy of Award in LAR No. 563 of 1991, Ashok Kumar Vs. State of U.P; 266 of 1992, Kamal Mustafa Vs. State of U.P; 68 of 1992, Tahir Khatoon Vs. State of U.P and also submitted 61 sale-deeds executed between year 1991 to 2003 through List, Paper No. 29-C. Vide List Paper No. 151- C, she filed copies of 6 sale deeds; and vide List Paper No. 163-C, copies of 6 more sale deeds were filed. She also filed copy of Award dated 29.4.1995 in LARs No. 100 of 92, 169 of 92, 195 of 92 and 67 of 1992; copy of judgement dated 7.4.2010, passed by this Court in First Appeal No. 102 of 2000 (BKDA Vs. Ajay Kumar) and First Appeal No. 103 of 2000 (BKDA Vs. Arvind Kumar).

14. Defendant-appellants filed copies of 19 sale-deeds executed between 13.4.1987 to 15.7.1987, Award dated 4.4.1991 given by SLAO and agreement dated 16.4.2003.

15. Reference Court found that SLAO has determined market rate for the purpose of compensation at Rs. 88,000/- per Pakka Bigha (Rs. 29.09 per Sq-yard) for agricultural land, and Rs. 49.35 per sq-yard for abadi land. While answering issue-1, it has held that sale exemplars relied by SLAO are 1 to 2 years earlier to the date of notification under Section 4 of Act 1894 and land in those exemplars situated more than 100 meters away from the main road, while land in dispute was appurtenant to G.T Road, therefore, those exemplars were not valid in respect of land in dispute. Reference Court also rejected three sale-deeds relied by Claimant- respondents, filed along with List Paper No.160-C, on the ground that the same relate to the land which is far away from disputed land and hence not relevant in the matter. Similarly, documents filed as Paper No. 30-C to 60-C were also rejected. Thereafter, Reference Court referred to Awards given in LARs No. 168 of 1992, 169 of 1992, 195 of 1992 and 67 of 1992.

16. In LAR No. 195 of 1992, Plot No. 85, area 68 sq-yrd, was acquired for the same scheme with which the present matter relates. Reference Court determined market value at Rs.400/- per sq-yard, while in other References i.e. LARs No. 168 of 1992, 169 of 1992 and 67 of 1992, market rate was determined at Rs. 350/- per sq-yard. First Appeals No. 102 and 103 of 2010 filed by BKDA, challenging aforesaid determination of market value were dismissed on 7.4.2010.

17. Reference Court also examined difference in aforesaid References and the present one, inasmuch as area of land involved in aforesaid References was very small while in the present case, total area was more than 15 Pakka Bigha, which is a very bigger plot. Consequently, it followed the principle of deduction towards largeness of area and found that in the Awards, wherein appeals were dismissed, land was about 5 Pakka bigha and more, and its value comes to Rs. 10,50,000/- per Bigha; since in the case in hand it is thrice bigger, it held appropriate to allow 10 % deduction per Bigha and therefore, deducting Rs. 2,00,000/- lump sum, it determined market value at Rs. 8,50,000/- per Bigha (i.e. Rs. 281/- per sq yard).

18. Reference Court has also stated that during course of argument, counsel for B.K.D.A. admitted that tenure holders have already been paid compensation at the rate of Rs. 300/- per sq-yard. Issue-1 was answered accordingly, determining market rate at the rate of Rs. 8,50,000/- per Pakka Bigha (i.e. Rs. 281 per sqr-yard).

19. Issue 2 was also answered in favour of Claimant-respondent. Issue-3, since in the Award dated 10.5.2001, no compensation was awarded in respect of trees and tubewell, hence it was answered in favour of Claimant-respondent holding that she was entitled for compensation in respect of standing trees and it determined compensation of Rs. 3,54,783/- on this count.

20. Answering issue-4, Reference Court found that alleged agreement was confined only in respect of 3001.83 sq-yard land and not the remaining one, therefore, for remaining land, said agreement was not relevant, particularly when it was clearly stated that Reference pending in Reference Court, only to the extent of area of land for which settlement was entered into, would not be pressed. Issue-5 was also answered in negative and thereafter Reference has been answered as stated above.

21. Appeal-2 also relates to the same acquisition proceedings arising from notifications dated 20.12.1988 issued under section 4 of Act 1894 and 18.1.1989 issued under section 6 of Act 1894.

22. Claimant-respondent, Sri Atul Chandra and Smt. Vibha Chand, are owners of Khata No. 132 Gata No. 358 area 3-9-0 and Gata No. 384 area 4-16-10. Possession of aforesaid land was also belated due to writ petition filed by Claimant-respondent before this Court and ultimately, possession was taken on 22.5.2000. Award was made by SLAO on 7.7.2005, offering compensation at the rate of Rs.88,000/- per Bigha i.e. Rs. 29.09 per sq-yard. Aggrieved thereby, Claimant-respondents made application under section 18 for Reference to District Judge for determining market value under section 25 of Act, 1894, claiming compensation at the rate of Rs. 5,000/- per sqr. mtr. Here also Reference Court formulated five issues, as under:

"1. Whether the compensation, awarded to the petitioners for their acquired land is insufficient?

2. Whether the acquired land is of residential and commercial potentiality?"

3. Whether the petition is barred by principles of estoppels and acquiescence?

4. Whether the reference is time barred?

5. Relief?

23. Issue -3 and 4 were answered in negative. Answering issue-1, Reference Court also followed the same reasonings as were followed by Reference Court in its Award dated 10.5.2010, passed in LAR. No. 184 of 2001 and determined market value at the rate of Rs. 8,50,000/- per Pakka Bigha (i.e. Rs. 281/- per sqr yard) for the purpose of compensation.

Contentions in these Appeals

24. Learned counsel appearing for appellants has confined his challenge to the awards in question only to the extent of market value of acquired land determined at the rate of Rs. 8,50,000/- Bigha (i.e. Rs. 281/- per sq-yard). He submits that determination of market value by Reference Court is imaginary, highly excessive, unreal and beyond the rates prevailing in the area at the time of issue of notification under Section 4 of Act 1894. He also contended that relevant exemplars have been ignored, findings are based on exemplars, which pertained to very small land and should not have been treated to be a valid exemplars; percentage of deduction applied towards largeness of area is almost negligible, and deduction ought to have been applied to a larger extent, and thus the awards are liable to be set aside.

25. Per contra, learned counsel appearing for claimant-respondents submitted that acquired land is in highly developed area, appurtenant to Highway i.e. G.T. Road and had great potential of development; mere fact that it was used for agricultural purpose has no relevance for the reason that near-by area was already developed as Abadi, having all amenities and facilities; land was being sold in small plots at a much higher rates than what has been Awarded by Reference Court, therefore, no interference is called for. Lastly, he submitted that poor farmers have lost their source of livelihood i.e. agricultural land pursuant to acquisition in question as long back as in December, 1988 and after more than 31 years, are still engaged in litigation and that too only to get appropriate consideration of land, which has been snatched away forcibly by acquisition by State without paying compensation at market value and still they are reeling in hope of getting appropriate market value which for all practical purposes has already lost much substance for the reason that whatever amount now they will get, would not be sufficient to enable them to purchase another land, since cost of land has multiplied several hundred times, particularly, due to extraordinary development in the vicinity of BKDA area and sky rocketing prices of land. Now alternative land to respondents has become a dream, which cannot be achieved. Therefore, State on the one hand had taken away their land and on the other has failed to pay adequate compensation at par with the market value and lastly by engaging claimant-respondent in litigation for last three decades, it has virtually rendered respondents totally landless and also without any source of earning livelihood. It is also said that how and in what manner respondents had met their expenses and managed litigation expenses, is something which only respondents know and even if payment is now made to respondents as per rates determined by Reference Court, it would be virtually negligible part of actual market value of the land acquired by BKDA, which it can fetch now. He, therefore, submitted that it is not a fit case in which Court should interfere, particularly when substantial justice has been done and Reference Court has made its Award on the basis of relevant material placed before it.

26. It is not in dispute that determination of market value is to be made with reference to date when notification under Section 4 of Act 1894 was issued and in the present case, the relevant date would be 20.12.1988.

27. From the rival submissions advanced on behalf of both the sides, in our opinion, following points for determination have arisen:

(i) Whether Reference Court has rightly determined market rate of Rs. 8,50,000.- i.e. Rs. 281/- per square meter of entire acquired land irrespective of area of individual plots of Land Owners, their location and other relevant factors?

(ii) Whether Reference Court ought to have considered the question of determination of market value, with reference to entire area of acquired land, its location/situation and other developmental advantages/ disadvantage vis-a-vis relevant exemplars or it should be vis-a-vis different plots of different Land Owners?

(iii) Where area of acquired land is very large and from main G.T. Road land goes in deep to the extent of more than 500 meters, whether 'Belting System' ought to have been applied and Court below has erred in law by not applying 'Belting System'.

(iv) Whether Court below has rightly followed exemplar sale-deed and awards in other LARs, relating to same acquisition proceedings has erred in law in rejecting exemplar sale-deeds, relied by appellants and placed in evidence?

(v) Whether Reference Court has considered/ rejected relevant exemplars or has followed exemplar(s), which was/were not valid and inapplicable in the case in hand and its findings is based on irrelevant material?

28. All the aforesaid issues are interrelated, therefore, we are considering the same together.

29. Before examining the aforesaid issues on merits, it would be appropriate to have a bird eye view of relevant legal principles settled in last several decades, which are to be applied when market value of a land acquired, forcibly, under the provisions of Act, 1894 has to be determined by Court in a Reference made under Section 18 of the said Act.

30. In the light of rival submissions, as noticed above, we have now to examine the only point for determination, "whether market value determined by Reference Court is just, adequate and actual or it is excessive and on a higher side which requires reduction".

31. Before examining the aforesaid issue on merits, it would be appropriate to have a bird's eye view of relevant legal principles settled in last several decades, which are to be applied when 'market value' of a land acquired forcibly under the provisions of Act, 1894 has to be determined by Court in a Reference made under Section 18 of the said Act.

32. In Chimanlal Hargovinddas vs. Special Land Acquisition Officer (1988) 3 SCC 751, Court has said that a reference is like a suit which is to be treated as an original proceeding. Claimant is in the position of a plaintiff who has to show that price offered for his land in the Award is inadequate.

However, for the said purpose, Court would not consider the material, relied upon by Land Acquisition Officer in Award, unless some material is produced and proved before Court.

33. Thus, Reference Court does not sit in appeal over the Award of Land Acquisition Officer. Material used by Land Acquisition Officer is not open to be used by Court suo motu unless such material is produced by the parties and proved independently before Reference Court. Determination of market value has to be made as per market rate, prevailing on the date of publication of notification under section 4 (1) of Act, 1894.

Circle Rate- Relevance:

34. As we have noticed that circle rates were also relied before Reference Court. In law circle rates are irrelevant and ought not to have been considered. In the matters where circle rates are relied and referred such an approach has been castigated, condemned and disapproved by Courts time and again.

35. In Jawajee Nagnatham v. Revenue Divisional Officer, (1994) 4 SCC 595, this question came up for consideration in the matter arisen from State of Andhra Pradesh. The landowners appealed against order of Reference Court before Andhra Pradesh High Court claiming higher compensation on the basis of "Basic Valuation Register" maintained by Revenue authorities under Stamp Act, 1899. The claim of Land-Owners failed in High Court, which held that such Register had no evidenciary value on statutory basis. In appeal, Supreme Court held that Basic Valuation Register was maintained for the purpose of collecting stamp duty under Section 47-A of Stamp Act, 1899 as amended in State of Andhra Pradesh. It did not confer, expressly, any power upon Government to determine market value of land prevailing in a particular area, i.e., village, block, district or region. It also did not provide a statutory obligation upon Revenue authorities to maintain Basic Valuation Register for levy of stamp duty in regard to instruments presented for registration. Therefore, there existed no statutory provision or rule providing for maintaining such valuation register. In the circumstances, such register prepared and maintained for the purpose of collecting stamp duty had no statutory force or basis and cannot form a valid criteria to determine market value of land acquired under Act, 1894. This decision was followed in Land Acquisition Officer Vs. Jasti Rohini, 1995 (1) SCC 717.

36. Another matter from State of U.P. came up for consideration involving same issue in U.P. Jal Nigam Vs. M/s Kalra Properties (P) Ltd., (1996) 3 SCC 124. Landowners' demanded compensation in regard to land acquired under Act, 1894 on the basis of market value assessed as per circle rate determined by Collector. It was accepted by High Court, but in appeal, judgment was reversed by Supreme Court following its earlier decision in Jawajee Nagnatham (supra). Court held that market value under Section 23 of Act, 1894 cannot be determined on circle rates determined by Collector for the purpose of stamp duty under Stamp Act, 1899. This view was reiterated in Krishi Utpadan Mandi Samiti Vs. Bipin Kumar, (2004) 2 SCC 283.

37. The issue was again considered by a larger Bench in Lal Chand Vs. Union of India and another (2009) 15

SCC 769 wherein two Judgments of Apex Court taking a view that circle rates may be considered, as prima facie basis, for the purpose of ascertaining market value, were examined. These decisions are Ramesh Chand Bansal v. District Magistrate/Collector, (1999) 5 SCC 62 and R Sai Ram Bharathi v. J Jayalalitha, (2004) 2 SCC 9. Court resolved controversy, holding, if in a particular case, guidelines for market values are determined by an Expert Committee constituted under State Stamp Law, following a detailed procedure laid down under the relevant rules and are published in State Gazette, same may be considered as a relevant material to determine 'market value'. Court said, when guidelines of market value, i.e., minimum rates for registration of properties, are so evaluated and determined by Expert Committees, as per statutory procedure, there is no reason why such rates should not be a relevant piece of evidence for determination of market value. Having said so, in para 44, Court further said:-

"44. One of the recognised methods for determination of market value is with reference to the opinion of experts. The estimation of market value by such statutorily constituted Expert Committees, as expert evidence can, therefore, form the basis for determining the market value in land acquisition cases, as a relevant piece of evidence. It will be however open to either party to place evidence to dislodge the presumption that may flow from such guideline market value. We, however, hasten to add that the guideline market value can be a relevant piece of evidence only if they are assessed by statutorily appointed Expert Committees, in accordance with the prescribed assessment procedure (either streetwise, or roadwise, or areawise, or villagewise) and finalized after inviting objections and published in the gazette*. Be that as it may."*
(emphasis added)

38. It is thus evident that for the purposes of determining market value circle rate fixed by Collector for the purposes of stamp duty would not be a relevant material unless such determination is under a statutory obligation and after following the prescribed procedure.

Other Principles relevant for determining market value:

39. For determining market value of acquired land, in the last several decades, Courts have considered the matter time and again and laid down certain principles which includes; (i) Court should proceed as hypothetical purchaser willing to purchase land from open market and prepared to pay a reasonable price on the scheduled date, i.e., the date of publication of notification under Section 4 of Act 1894, (ii) willingness of Vendor to sell the land on reasonable price shall be presumed, (iii) relevant material, which may help the Court to find out reasonable price would include sale deeds, if any, executed in the close proximity of the relevant date which is genuine and shows a voluntary and open transaction between the parties. Where land subject matter of exemplar sale deed is smaller or larger but the document otherwise is credible and genuine, suitable adjustment by applying plus and minus factors and also appropriate deduction can be made by the Court.

40. A burden, however, to establish as to what is the reasonable and adequate market value and that the offer made by Collector is inadequate, is on the Land Owners at whose instance Reference has been made to District Judge under Section 18 of Act, 1894.

41. The size of land would constitute an important factor to determine market value. It cannot be doubted that small size plot may attract a large number of persons being within their reach which will not be possible in respect of large block of land wherein incumbent will have to incur extra liability in preparing a lay out and carving out roads, leaving open space, plotting out smaller plots, waiting for purchasers etc. Courts have said that in such matters, factors can be discounted by making deduction by way of an allowance at an appropriate rate ranging between 20% to 75%, to account for land, required to be set apart for carving out road etc. and for plotting out small plots.

42. The concept of smaller and larger plots should be looked into not only from the angle as to what area has been acquired, but also the number of land holders and size of their plots. When we talk of concept of prudent seller and prudent buyer, we cannot ignore the fact that in the category of prudent seller, the individual land holder will come. It is the area of his holding which will be relevant for him and not that of actual, total and collective large area, which is sought to be acquired.

43. In Kausalya Devi Bogra and others v. Land Acquisition Officer, Aurangabad and another, (1984) 2 SCC 324, about 150 acres of land was acquired. Owners of acquired land were in two groups, i.e. Kaushalya Devi Bogra and Syed Yusufuddin Syed Ziauddin. First group, i.e. Kaushalya Devi Bogra owned 74 acres, while Yusuffuddin owned about 15 acres of land. In these facts of the case, where almost 60% of total acquired land was owned by two sets of owners and exemplar of smaller property was relied, Court said that "when large tracts are acquired, the transaction in respect of small properties do not offer a proper guideline. In certain other cases, for determining market value of a large property on the basis of a sale transaction for smaller property, a deduction should be given.

44. In Bhagwathula Samnna and others v. Special Tehsildar and Land Acquisition Officer, Visakhapatnam Municipality (1991) 4 SCC 506, High Court applied deduction of 33.3% observing, when large extent of land was acquired under housing scheme and exemplar is of small land, reasonable deduction can be made. Following the decision in Tribeni Devi v. Collector, Ranchi, AIR 1972 SC 1417, it was argued that High Court wrongly applied deduction; acquired land was fully developed and eminently suitable for being used as house sites and, therefore, there was no justification for making any deduction. The land was acquired for formation of road, High Court applied deduction on the ground that expenses have to be incurred for development, which was not justified. Aforesaid submission was considered by Supreme Court in the light of facts of that case. In para 7 and 11, Court said: -

"7. In awarding compensation in acquisition proceedings, the Court has necessarily to determine the market value of the land as on the date of the relevant notification. It is useful to consider the value paid for similar land at the material time under genuine transactions. The market value envisages the price which a willing purchaser may pay under bona fide transfer to a willing seller. The land value can differ depending upon the extent and nature of the land sold. A fully developed small plot in an important locality may fetch a higher value than a larger area in an undeveloped condition and situated in a remote locality. *By comparing the price shown in the transactions all variables have to be taken into consideration. T*he transaction in regard to smaller property cannot, therefore, be taken as a real basis for fixing the compensation for larger tracts of property. In fixing the market value of a large property on the basis of a sale transaction for smaller property, generally a deduction is given taking into consideration the expenses required for development of the larger tract to make smaller plots within that area in order to compare with the small plots dealt with under the sale transaction.

11. The principle of deduction in the land value covered by the comparable sale is thus adopted in order to arrive at the market value of the acquired land. In applying the principle it is necessary to consider all relevant facts. It is not the extent of the area covered under the acquisition, the only relevant factor. Even in the vast area there may be land which is fully developed having all amenities and situated in an advantageous position. If smaller area within the large tract is already and suitable for building purposes and have in its vicinity roads, drainage, electricity, communications etc. then the principle of deduction simply for the reasons that it is part of the large tract acquired, may not be justified."

45. Court further held that proposition that large area of land cannot possibly fetch a price at the same rate at which small plots are sold is not absolute proposition and in given circumstances it would be permissible to take into account price fetched by small plots of land. If larger tract of land, because of advantageous position, is capable of being used for the purpose for which smaller plots are used and is also situated in a developed area with little or no requirement of further development, the principle of deduction of value for the purposes of comparison is not warranted. Having said so, Court in para 13 held as under: -

"13. With regard to the nature of the plots involved in these two cases, it has been satisfactorily shown on the evidence on record that the land has facilities of road and other amenities and is adjacent to a developed colony and in such circumstances it is possible to utilize the entire area in question as house sites. In respect of the land acquired for the road, the same advantages are available and it did not require any further development. We are, therefore, of the view that the High Court has erred in applying the principle of deduction and reducing the fair market value of land from Rs.10/- pr square yard to Rs.6.50 paise pr square yard. In our opinion, no such deduction is justified in the facts and circumstances of these cases." (emphasis added)

46. In V.M. Salgoacar & brother Ltd. vs. Union of India (1995) 2 S.C.C 302, land acquired by notification dated 06.07.1970 in village Chicalim near Goa Airport belonged to a single owner. Court observed, when land is sold out in smaller plots, there may be a rising trend in the market, of fetching higher price in comparison to the plot which are much higher in size. Having said so Court further said:

" though the small plots ipso facto may not form the basis per se to determine the compensation, they would provide foundation for determining the market value. On its basis, giving proper deduction, the market value ought to be determined".

47. Again in Shakuntalabai (Smt.) and others vs. State of Maharashtra, 1996 (2) S.C.C 152, 20 acres of land in Akola town was sought to be acquired by notification published on 11.08.1965 under section 4(1) of Act, 1894 which was also owned by a single person. It is in this context, Court said:

"the Reference Court committed manifest error in determining compensation on the basis of sq. ft. when land of an extent of 20 acres is offered for sale in an open market, no willing and prudent purchaser would come forward to purchase that vast extent of land on sq. ft. basis. Therefore, the Reference Court has to consider valuation sitting on the armchair of a willing prudent hypothetical vendee and to put a question to itself whether in given circumstances, he would agree to purchase the land on sq. ft. basis. No feat of imagination is necessary to reach the conclusion. The answer is obviously "no".

48. In order to determine market value when exemplars are adduced, normally it is found that exemplars of small land, and that too, in developed area after plotting and development are relied. Sometimes a single exemplar is available and sometimes more than that. It is not the number of exemplars which is important and would determine the question whether burden has been discharged by Claimants that offer of compensation made by Collector is inadequate and he is entitled to higher compensation but it is the genuity, authenticity and creditworthiness of the documents. If the document is found most suitable and appropriate for determining compensation in respect of acquired land, even a single instance/exemplar cited by Land Owner may be relied and it can be said that Claimant-Land Owner has succeeded in discharging his burden.

49. In Gafar vs. Moradabad Development Authority, 2007 (7) SCC 614, Court observed that burden is on Claimants to establish that amount awarded to them by Collector is inadequate. That burden has to be discharged by Claimants and only if initial burden in that behalf is discharged, the burden would shift to State to justify the compensation offered by SLAO.

50. Further, when there are more than one exemplar, one, which provides highest rate, has to be followed. In Satish Vs. State of U.P., 2009 (14) SCC 758, Court after relying on its earlier decision in Viluben Jhalenjar Contractor (Dead) by Lrs. Vs. State of Gujarat, 2005 (4) SCC 789, said :

"...when comparable exemplars are brought on record, the one carrying the highest market value amongst them may be followed."

(emphasis added)

Deductions:

51. Whenever the area of acquired land is larger than the area of land which is subject matter of the exemplar and smaller in size, Courts have held the same admissible subject to appropriate deduction.

52. In Basavva (Smt.) and others Vs. Special Land Acquisition Officer and others, (1996) 9 SCC 640, notification under Section 4(1) of Act, 1894 proposing to acquire 194 acres of land for industrial development near Dharwad was published on 30.10.1981. Collector made award dated 22.8.1985 offering compensation at the rate between Rs. 8,000/- to Rs.8,080/-, which was enhanced by Reference Court vide award dated 11.10.1988 to Rs.1.72/- per square foot (Rs.74,953/- per acre). On appeal High Court reduced compensation to Rs.56,000/- per acre. The appeal preferred by State Government against High Court's judgment was dismissed. In the appeals preferred by landowners, it was contended on behalf of landowners that deduction towards development upto 53% was reasonable but High Court in applying 65% deduction has erred in law. Court observed, while determining compensation, at first instance, it has to be seen whether sales relating to smaller pieces of land are genuine and reliable; and, whether they are in respect of comparable land. If it is found that sales are genuine and reliable and lands have comparable features, sufficient deduction should be made to arrive at a just and fair market value of large tracts of land. The time lag for real development and waiting period for development are also relevant for determination of just and comparable compensation. For deduction of development charges, nature of development, conditions and nature of land, the land required to be set apart under building rules for roads, sewerage, electricity, parks, water etc. and all other relevant circumstances involved are to be considered.

53. The above principles were also laid down in D. Vasundara Devi Vs. Revenue Divisional Officer, (1995) 5 SCC 426 which was relied by Court in Basavva (Smt.) & Others Vs. Special Land Acquisition Officer and others (supra). It then found that exemplar sale deed was dependable but in respect of a small plot of land situated at a distance of more than 1 k.m; land in area is not developed and there is no development towards that area and it would take years for development in those land though land was capable of user for non-agricultural purpose. It is in this background, Court applied 53% deduction for development. It further held that since long time would be taken for development and for that purpose additional 12% deduction was allowed making total deduction as 65%.

54. In Land Acquisition Officer, Kammarapally Village Vs. Nookala Rajamallu and others, AIR 2004 SC 1031, Court said as under :

"It has been held that the deduction can be made where the land is acquired for residential and commercial purpose with regard to roads and civic amenities, expenses of development of the sites by laying out roads, drains, sewers, water and electricity lines, and the interest on the outlays for the period of deferment of the realization of the price, the profits on the venture etc. So far as this Court is concerned, it has discarded the deduction policy on various grounds. One of the grounds is that if the State or its authority acquires the land for the purpose of selling it to the ultimate purchasers upon making available facilities, they normally recover the price inclusive of common facilities, therefore, a Government or its authority cannot be doubly benefited either by deductions from the payment of compensation in one hand and by collections of price of such development from the ultimate purchasers on the other hand. It also to be seen that no law prescribes deduction in paying compensation. It is to be remembered that deduction is an exception not the rule."

55. In Udho Dass Vs. State of Haryana and Ors. 2010 (12) SCC 51, by notification dated 17.5.1990, 162.5 acres of land in village Patti Musalmanan was sought to be acquired for the purposes of housing project in Sonepat (Haryana). Collector determined compensation at the rate of Rs.Two Lacs per acre, but it was enhanced by Additional District Judge on reference under Section 18 of Act, 1894 to Rs.125/- per square yard for the land behind E.C.E. Factory, situated away, and on the left side of the Sonepat Bahalgarh road, and Rs.150/- per square yard on the right side abutting the road. Reference Court held that land on the left side did not abut the road and it had therefore less potential value vis-a-vis land on the right side, which touched the road. In appeal High Court enhanced compensation from Rs.125/- to Rs.135/- and from Rs.150/- to Rs.160/-. Land owner came in appeal before Supreme Court claiming compensation at Rs.200/- per square yard. Court, as a matter of fact, found that even compensation, which was determined by Collector or Reference Court was not paid to Land-Owners immediately, but payment spread over for two decades. Court said if compensation payment continued over a period of almost 20 years, potential of land acquired from Land-Owners must also be adjudged keeping in view development in the area, spread over the period of 20 years if evidence so permits and cannot be limited to near future alone. Court observed that this broad principle would be applicable where possession of land has been taken pursuant to proceedings under an acquiring Act and not to those cases where land is already in possession of Government and is subsequently acquired. Court also observed that in case where compensation is based exclusively on sale instances, it creates some time a disadvantageous position to Land-Owners, whose land is forcibly acquired. There is wide spread tendency to undervalue sale prices. Circle rates determined by Collector only marginally corrected the anomaly, as these rates are also abnormally low and do not reflect true value. These things cause serious disadvantage to Land-Owners, since they have no control over price on which some other Land-Owners sell their property, which is often the basis for compensation payable to Land-Owners, whose land are forcibly acquired. Court also held that there cannot be application of belting system in that case. Normally, land along side the road has more value vis-à-vis the land away from, but that would have been the case where agricultural land, which have no potential for urbanization or commercialization had been acquired and in such a case, belting system is permissible.

56. In Udho Dass (supra) Court held that land was acquired in 1990. It had great potential and had been completely urbanized as huge residential complexes, industrial area and estates, huge education city have come up in the last 10 or 15 years. It further held as under: -

"Moreover, insofar as land which is to be used for residential purposes is concerned, a plot away from the main road is often of more value as the noise and the air pollution alongside the arterial roads is almost unbearable. It also significant that the land of Jamalpur Kalan was touching the rear side of the ECE factory and the High Court had granted compensation of Rs.250/- per square yard for the acquisition of the year 1992. We have also seen the site plan to satisfy ourselves and find that the land acquired from Jamalpur Kalan and the present land share a common boundary behind the ECE factory. The belting system in the facts of the present case would thus not be permissible."

57. In Anjani Molu Desai v. State of Goa and another, (2010) 13 SCC 710, a very large tract comprising 3,65,375 square meter of land in Balli village, Quepem Taulak, Goa was acquired for the purposes of Konkan Railway for laying down broad gauge line. Acquisition notification was issued on 30.7.1991. Appellant Anjani Molu Desai owned 60,343 square meter of land in Survey No.45/1, 45/5, 45/6, 51/1 and 51/2. Collector awarded compensation at the rate of Rs.12/- per square meters for orchard lands and Rs.6/- per square meter for paddy lands. Reference Court and High Court affirmed said valuation by rejecting Reference and Appeal. Collector determined market value relying upon two exemplars and taking an average thereof. First exemplar sale deed dated 30.8.1989 relates to 2055 square meters of land situated at the distance of 200 meter away from acquired land and sold at the rate of Rs.43.80 per square meters. Collector deducted 45% from sale price towards "development cost" i.e. for providing approach road and open spaces, expenses relating to development work, conversion charge etc. This reduced price to Rs.24/- per square meter. Since sale deed was of August, 1989 and acquisition commenced in 1991, thus there being gap of 20 months, Collector provided an increase at the rate of 14.5% per annum and thus, arrived at Rs.32.24 per square meter. Exemplar sale deed dated 30.1.1990 relates to sale of 7600 square meters of land at a distance of one kilometer from acquired land sold at Rs.3/- per square meter. Here also, there was a gap was of 18 months, thus 14.5% increase was allowed, which made sale price to Rs.3.82 per square meter. Collector then averaged two rates derived from two sale deeds and determined Rs.18/- per square meter (Rs.32.24 + Rs.3.82÷2). This method adopted by Collector was not approved by Supreme Court. It was held, where there are more than one exemplar, which could be considered for determining market value, the one providing higher rate should be accepted and followed. It is only in exceptional cases where there are several sales of similar land, whose prices range in a narrow bandwidth, the average can be taken as representing market value. But where values disclosed in respect of two sales are markedly different, it can only lead to an inference that they are with reference to dissimilar land or that lower value sale is on account of under valuation or other price depressing reasons. In respect of orchard land, therefore, Court followed exemplar sale deed dated 30.8.1989 providing sale price at Rs.43.80 per square meter and applying appreciation of 14.5% and odd per annum, Court determined market value at Rs.57.50 and to that extent claim of appellant Anjani Molu Dessai was upheld. Here also proposition laid down by Apex Court is not exceptional but on the facts of the case.

58. In Nelson Fernandes and others v. Special Land Acquisition Officer, South Goa and others, AIR 2007 SC 1414, land was acquired for new broad gauge line of Konkan Railway. Acquisition notification under Section 4 Act, 1894 was issued in August, 1994. SLAO made award of Rs.4/- per square meter. In Reference, District and Sessions Judge relying on two sale deeds dated 13.12.1993 enhanced compensation at the rate of Rs.192/- per square meter. Sale price in exemplar sale deed was Rs.449/- per square meter. Land-Owners as well as acquiring body both preferred appeals. Land owner's appeal was rejected while acquiring body's appeal was allowed to the extent that market value was reduced to Rs.38/- per square meter. Supreme Court found that compensation awarded by High Court by rejecting valuer report is not based on cogent material and not supported by cogent reasons. The injury, which land owner, was likely to sustain due to loss of his future earning from selling land as also damage already suffered due to diminution of profit of land between time of publication of notice and time taken by Collector in possession was not considered. Since land was acquired for the purposes of laying down railway line, no development was to be done. There existed civil amenities like, school, police station, water supply, bank, electricity, highway, transport, petrol pump, industries, telecommunication and other business. Hence it determined compensation at the rate of Rs.250/- per square meter, but then applied 20% deduction, which brings rate at Rs.200/- per square meter.

59. In Special Land Acquisition Office v. Karigowdo and others, 2010 (5) SCC 708, total acquired land was 146 acres and 7 guntas. It was owned by 419 Claimants-land owners, whose area varied from 2 to 48 guntas. Acquired land situated in village Sanaba, Chinakavali Hobli, Pandavapura. These land got submerged in 1993 under backwaters of Tonnur tank due to construction of Hemavathi Dam. Physical possession of land was taken between October, 1996 to December, 1999, while acquisition notification under Section 4 (1) of Act, 1894 was issued on 4.4.2002. Crops standing on land were damaged. SLAO determined market value at Rs.90,460/- per acre for wet land and Rs.37,200/- per acre for dry land. On Reference, compensation was enhanced to Rs.2,92,500/- per acre for wet land (garden land), Rs.1,46,250/- for dry land (lightly irrigated) and Rs.1,20,000/- for dry land (without mulberry crop). In appeal by Land-Owners, High Court enhanced compensation to Rs.5,00,000/- per acre for wet/garden land and Rs.2,53,750/- per acre for dry land. State, therefore, came in appeal before Supreme Court. Dispute arose before Court was for computation of compensation payable to Claimants and quantum thereof. Argument advanced by State was that method adopted by Reference Court as well as High Court was impermissible in law. Court cannot take into consideration commercial activity, which may result from, and be indirectly incidental to agricultural activity, particularly, when both of them are carried on independent of each other. In that case there were no sale instances from village Sanaba prior to 2002. The exemplars of adjoining villages were produced before Court. After looking into statutory provisions of Act, 1894, Court said (1) provision of Section 23 are mandatory; and (2) it is for Claimants to ascertain as a matter of fact - location, potential and quality of land for establishing its fair market value. It is for Claimant to show that, what is contemplated under conditions attached thereto has been satisfied. It is also for Claimants to show that to award compensation payable under statutory provisions, they have brought on record evidence to satisfy criterion and conditions required to be fulfilled for such a claim. Court has to determine compensation strictly in accordance with the provisions of Sections 23 and 24 of Act, 1894. Potentiality of land should be on the date of acquisition i.e. existing potentiality. Further, potentiality has to be directly relatable to capacity of acquired land to produce agricultural products, or its market value relatable to method of compensation. If there exist crops, trees or fruit bearing trees, the same can be taken into consideration, but extent of benefit cannot go to the extent that fruits grown in agricultural land would be converted into processed food like jam or any other eatable products. This extension of loss of benefits amounts to remote factors, which is not permitted to take into consideration. Court thus held that compensation determined by Reference Court and High Court was not justified. State appeal was partly allowed and Court provided for compensation at Rs.2,30,000/- per acre for wet/garden land and Rs.1,53,400/- per acre for dry land.

60. In Mohinder Singh and others v. State of Haryana, (2014) 8 SCC 897, by notification dated 2.12.1982, 327.52 acres in village Patti Jhambra, Shahabad in District Kurushetra (State of Haryana) was acquired for development and utilization of land for residential, commercial, industrial purposes etc. Notification under Section 6 was issued on 4.7.1984 in relation to 178.62 acres, and ultimate possession of only 90.07 acres was taken. Collector made award at different rates per acre depending upon quality of soil/land. Reference Court awarded uniform compensation at Rs.2,66,400/- per acre. State preferred appeal whereupon High Court reduced compensation to Rs.1,83,080/- per acre. Land Owner preferred intra court appeal and Division Bench determined market value at Rs.2,19,696/- per acre. Land-Owners further went in appeal before Supreme Court, which set aside judgment of High Court and restored award passed by Reference Court determining Rs.2,66,400/- per acre as market value. While restoring award of Reference Court, Supreme Court observed that 40% deduction applied by High Court was not justified. Since land was within developed Municipal limit, therefore, deduction of 25% applied by Reference Court was justified.

61. In Union of India v. Raj Kumar Baghal Singh (dead) through legal representatives and others, (2014) 10 SCC 422, 72.9375 acres of land in village Bir Kheri Gujran, District Patiala in State of Punjab was acquired vide notification dated 14.3.1989. Collector made award of Rs.Two Lacs per acre. Reference Court enhanced amount of compensation to Rs.9,05,000/- per acre. In appeal, a Single Judge of High Court reduced compensation to Rs.105.80 per square yard and it was confirmed by Division Bench also. Union of India preferred appeal, which was dismissed. Court held that there is no rule of thumb for deduction at a particular rate. It varies and depends on individual case. In para 11 Court said "the extent of cut depends on individual fact situation".

62. Deduction for development is different than deduction permissible in respect of largeness of area vis-a-vis exemplar of small piece of land. Many times, Land Owners rely on the rates on which development authorities offer allotment of developed plots carved out by them in residential or industrial area. Such rates apparently cannot form basis for compensation for acquisition of undeveloped lands for reasons more than one. The market value in respect of large tract of undeveloped agricultural land in a rural area has to be determined in the context of a land similarly situated whereas allotment rates of development authorities are with reference to small plots and in a developed lay out falling within urban or semi-urban area. Statutory authorities including development authorities used to offer rates with reference to economic capacity of buyers like economic Weaker Sections, Low Income Group, Middle Income Group, Higher Income Group etc. Therefore, rates determined by such authorities are not uniform. The market value of acquired land cannot depend upon economic status of land loser and conversely on the economic status of the body at whose instance, land is acquired. Further, normally, land acquired is a freehold land whereas allotment rates determined by development authorities etc. constitute initial premium payable on allotment of plots on leasehold basis. However, where an exemplar of small piece of land is relied, in absence of any other relevant material, Court may determine market value in the light of evidence relating to sale price of small developed plots. In such cases, deduction varying from 20% to 75% is liable to apply depending upon nature of development of lay out in which exemplar plot is situated.

63. In Shaji Kuriakose and another Vs. Indian Oil Corporation Ltd. and others, (2001) 7 SCC 650, a large tract of land in village Manakunnam, District Cochin was proposed to be acquired for setting up a bottling plant by Indian Oil Corporation and notification under Section 4 (1) was issued on 23.08.1990. Acquired land included 7.13 acres of land of Claimant/Land Owner-Shaji Kuriakose. Collector vide award dated 05.05.1992 offered compensation at Rs. 1,225/- per acre i.e. Rs. 500 per cent which was enhanced to Rs.7,000/- per Cent by Reference Court. High Court reduced compensation to Rs.4,000/- per Cent for wet land and Rs.6,500/- for dry land. Appeal preferred by Claimants before Supreme Court failed. Court found that land which was sold vide exemplar sale deed was not similarly placed with acquired land inasmuch as there was no access to acquired land, there existed only an internal mud road which belonged to one of the Claimants, whose land was acquired, the land covered by exemplar sale deed was a dry land, whereas acquired land was mostly wet land. After acquisition, acquired land has to be reclaimed and a lot of amount would be spent for filling it. The exemplar sale deed related to a small piece of land while acquired land was quite large. Sale for smaller plot fetches more consideration than larger or bigger piece of land. Considering all these facts, Court found that determination made by High Court was justified and dismissed appeal.

64. In Kasturi and others Vs. State of Haryana, (2003) 1 SCC 354, 84.31 acres of land in State of Haryana was proposed to be acquired for development of residential and commercial area at Sector 13 and 23, Bhiwani, by publishing notification under Section 4 on 04.04.1986. Collector made award dated 10.11.1987 and 31.03.1988 determining compensation at Rs.57,500/- per acre and Rs.55,200/- per acre which comes to around Rs. 11.81 per square yard. Reference Court enhanced compensation to Rs.125/- per square yard. Land Owners as well as State, both preferred appeal in High Court. Landowners sought compensation at Rs.500/- per square yard while State appealed for restoration of Collector's award. High Court reduced compensation to Rs.79.98 per square yard applying 20% deduction towards development charges. It partly allowed appeal of State but dismissed appeals preferred by Claimants/Land-Owners. Division Bench confirmed judgment of Single Judge hence matter was taken to Supreme Court by Claimants/ Land-Owners. It was contended that High Court erred in applying deduction of 20% towards development charges and also by not enhancing compensation to Rs.500/- per square yard as claimed by landowners. Supreme Court found that land acquired comprised a large area and was not developed though has potential for residential and commercial purposes. For its development roads were to be laid, provision for drainage was to be made and certain area was to be earmarked for other civic amenities. The acquired land is not a small plot located in such a way that no other development was required at all and it could be utilized as it is, being a developed building site. In respect of agricultural land or undeveloped land which has potential value for housing or commercial purposes, normally 33% amount was processed for deduction subject to variations depending upon nature of land, location, extent of expenditure involved for development and area required for roads and other civic amenities to develop land so as to make plots for residential or commercial purposes. Whether land is plain or uneven, soil of land is soft or hard having bearing on foundation for the purpose of making construction; whether land is situated in the midst of a developed area all around or may have a hillock or may be low lying or may be having deep ditches, are all relevant considerations since that would have consequences in the amount to be spent for development. Court relied on various decisions and thereafter upheld deduction of 20% towards development and dismissed appeal of Land Owners.

65. In Lal Chand Vs. Union of India (supra), Court noticed that deduction for development constitutes two components- one is with reference to area required to be utilized for development work and second is the cost of development work. It further held that deduction for development in respect of residential plot may be higher while not so where it is an industrial plot. Similarly, if acquired land is in a semi-developed urban area or in any undeveloped rural area, then deduction for development may be much less and vary from 25 to 40 percent since some basic infrastructure will already be available. The percentage is only indicative and may vary depending upon relevant factors. With reference to exemplars of transfer of land between private parties, Court would also look into intrinsic evidence, i.e., the exemplar sale deed where it recites financial difficulties of vendor and urgent need to find money as a reason for sale or other similar factors, like litigation or existence of some other dispute. These are all factors constituting intrinsic evidence of a distress sale.

66. In Lal Chand Vs. Union of India (supra), Court also observed, if acquisition is in regard to a large area of agricultural land in a village and exemplar sale deed is also in respect of an agricultural land in the same village, i.e. it may be possible to rely upon the sale deed as prima facie evidence of prevailing market value even if such land is at the other end of village, i.e. at a distance of one or two kilometers. But, the same may not be appropriate where acquisition relates to plots in a town or city where every locality or road has a different value. A distance of about a kilometer may not make a difference for the purpose of market value in a rural area but even a distance of 50 meters may make a huge difference in market value in urban properties. Thus, distance between two properties, the nature and situation of property, proximity to the village or a road and several other factors may all be relevant in determining market value.

67. In Valliyammal & others Vs. Special Land Acquisition, 2011 (8) JT 442, Court has looked into various earlier judgments laying down guiding principles for determination of market value of acquired land. Court has observed that comparable sales method of valuation is preferred since it furnishes evidence for determination of market value of acquired land at which a willing purchaser would pay for acquired land if it had been sold in open market at the time of acquisition. However, this method is not always conclusive and there are certain factors, which are required to be fulfilled and on fulfillment of those factors, compensation can be determined. Such factors are (a) sale must be a genuine transaction; (b) sale deed must have been executed at the time, proximate to the date of issue of notification under Section 4; (c) land covered by the sale must be in the vicinity of acquired land; (d) land covered by the sales must be similar to acquired land; and (e) size of plot of the land covered by the sales be comparable to the land acquired. If there is dissimilarity in regard to locality, shape and size or nature of land, court can proportionately reduce compensation depending upon disadvantages attached with the acquired land. Further, for determining market value, potentiality of acquired land should also be taken into consideration. The "potentiality" means, capacity or possibility for changing or developing into state of actuality. It is well settled that market value of property has to be determined having due regard to its existing condition, with all its existing advantages and its potential possibility when let out in its most advantageous manner. Court also said, when undeveloped or underdeveloped land is acquired and the exemplar is in respect to developed land, detection towards deduction can be made. Normally, such deduction is 1/3, but it is not a hard and fast rule.

68. In Bhule Ram v. Union of India and another, JT 2014 (5) SC 110, Court in para 7 has observed that valuation of immovable property is not an exact science, nor it can be determined like algebraic problem, as it bounds in uncertainties and no strait-jacket formula can be laid down for arriving at exact market value of the land. There is always a room for conjecture, and thus court must act reluctantly to venture too far in this direction. The factors such as the nature and position of land to be acquired, adaptability and advantages, the purpose for which the land can be used in the most lucrative way, injurious affect resulting in damages to other properties, its potential value, the locality, situation, size and shape of the land, the rise of depression in the value of land in the locality consequent to acquisition etc., are relevant factors to be considered. It further said that value, which has to be assessed, is the value to the owner, who parts with his property, and not the value to the new owner, who takes it over. Fair and reasonable compensation means the price of a willing buyer, which is to be paid to the willing seller. Though Act does not provide for "just terms" or "just compensation", but 'market value' is to be assessed taking into consideration the use to which it is being put on acquisition and whether the land has unusual or unique features or potentialities. Court then also considered as to what is the concept of "guess work" and observed that it is not unknown to various fields of law as it applies in the cases relating to insurance, taxation, compensation under the Motor Vehicle Act as well as under Labour Laws. Having said so, Court further said: -

"The court has a discretion applying the guess work to the facts of the given case but is is not unfettered and has to be reasonable having connection to the facts on record adduced by the parties by way of evidence. The court further held as under: -

"'Guess' as understood in its common parlance is an estimate without any specific information while "calculations" are always made with reference to specific data. "Guesstimate" is an estimate based on a mixture of guesswork and calculations and it is a process in itself. At the same time "guess" cannot be treated synonymous to "conjecture". "Guess" by itself may be a statement or result based on unknown factors while "conjecture" is made with a very slight amount of knowledge, which is just sufficient to incline the scale of probability. "Guesstimate" is with higher certainty than more "guess" or a "conjecture" per se." (para 8) (emphasis added)

69. In Bhupal Singh and others v. State of Haryana, (2015) 5 SCC 801, while above principles laid down in various cases were reiterated, Court in para 18 of judgment, said: -

"Law on the question as to how the court is required to determine the fair market value of the acquired land is fairly well settled by several decisions of this Court and remains no more res integra. This Court has, inter alia, held that when the acquired land is a large chunk of undeveloped land having potential and was acquired for residential purpose then while determining the fair market value of the lands on the date of acquisition, the appropriate deductions are also required to be made."
(emphasis added)

70. It is also reaffirmed that when an exemplar relates to small piece of developed land and is sought to be relied to determine market value of large tract of undeveloped acquired land, deduction can be applied ranging between 20% to 75%. Court in para 20 of judgment relied upon its decision in Chandrashekhar Vs. L.A. Officer, (2012) 1 SCC 390 stating that deduction has two components, one is "development" and another with respect to the "size of the area". Percentage of deduction was restricted in Subh Ram v. State of Haryana, (2010) 1 SCC 444 stating that deduction of both components should be around 1/3 each in its entirety, which would roughly come to 67% of component of sale consideration of exemplar sale transaction.

71. With respect to escalation of price where relied on exemplar is of much earlier in point of time, Court in K. Devakimma and others v. Tirumala Tirupati Devasthanam and another, 2015 (111) ALR 241 said that recourse can be taken in appropriate cases to the mode of determining market value by providing appropriate escalation over the proved market value of nearby land in previous years where there is no evidence of any contemporaneous sale transaction or acquisition of comparable lands in neighbourhood. The percentage of escalation may vary from case to case so also the extent of years to determine the rates.

72. In Chandrashekhar Versus Land Acquisition Officer (supra), for residential layout issued by Gulbarga Development Authority, acquisition proceedings were initiated by publishing Notification dated 13.5.1982 under Section 4 of Act, 1894, proposing to acquire 144 acres of land in villages Rajapur (71 acres) and Badepur (73 acres). The land of Claimants-appellants measured 8 acres, 4 guntas in village Badepur and in connected appeal it measured 7 acres, 7 guntas. Collector made award determining compensation at Rs.4100/- per acre for land in village Badepur and Rs.13,500/- for land in village Rajapur. Reference Court enhanced compensation to Rs.1,46,000/- per acre in place of Rs.4100/- per acre for land in village Badepur. On appeal, High Court remanded matter, whereafter Reference Court determined compensation at Rs.1,45,000/- per acre vide order dated 21.12.2002. High Court reduced compensation in appeal at Rs. 65,000/-. The view taken by High Court was upheld by Supreme Court by dismissing appeal of Land Owners. The issue raised before Court was the extent of deduction to be applied while determining market. It would be interesting to notice review of various cases by Supreme Court demonstrating that deduction applied has varied in all cases.

(a) In Brig. Sahib Singh Kalha Vs. Amritsar Improvement Trust, (1982) 1 SCC 419, Court said where a large area of undeveloped land is acquired, provision has to be made for providing minimum amenities of town-life. Accordingly, deduction of 20 percent of total acquired land should be made for land over which infrastructure has to be made (space for roads etc.). Besides, cause of raising infrastructure like roads, electricity, water, underground drainage, etc. is also to be considered and for this purposes deduction would range from 20% to 33%. Thus, in all Court upheld deductions between 40% and 53%.

(b) In Administrator General of West Bengal Vs. Collector, Varanasi, (1988) 2 SCC 150, Court upheld deduction of 40%.

(c) In Chimanlal Hargovinddas Vs. Special Land Acquisition Officer, Poona and another (supra), Court upheld deduction between 20% to 50%.

(d) In Land Acquisition Officer Revenue Divisional Officer, Chottor vs. L. Kamalamma (Smt.) Dead by and others, (1998) 2 SCC 385, Court upheld deduction of 40% as development cost.

(e) In Kasturi and others vs. State of Haryana (supra), 1/3rd deduction was upheld on development, clarifying that deduction can be more or less of 1/3rd depending upon facts of the case.

(f) In Land Acquisition Officer vs. Nookala Rajamallu and others, (2003) 12 SCC 334, Court upheld 53% deduction.

(g) In V. Hanumantha Reddy (Dead) Versus Land Acquisition Officer, (2003) 12 SCC 642, Court upheld 37% deduction towards development.

(h) In Viluben Jhalejar Contractor Versus State of Gujarat, (2005) 4 SCC 789, Court observed that deduction of 20 to 50% towards development is permissible.

(i) In Atma Singh Versus State of Haryana and another, (2008)2 SCC 568, 20% deduction towards largeness of area was applied.

(j) In Subh Ram and others Vs. State of Haryana and others, (supra), Court observed that where valuation of a large area of agricultural or undeveloped land has to be determined on the basis of sale price of a small developed plot, standard deductions would be 1/3rd towards infrastructural space and 1/3 towards infrastructural developmental cost, i.e. 2/3rd % i.e. 67%.

(k) In Andhra Pradesh Housing Board Versus K. Manohar Reddy and others, (2010) 12 SCC 707, it was observed that deductions on account of development could vary between 20% to 75%.

(l) In Special Land Acquisition Officer and another Versus M.K. Rafiq Sahib, (2011) 7 SCC 714, Court was upheld 60% deduction.

73. In this background of authorities, Court in Chandrashekhar Versus Land Acquisition Officer (supra), observed that quantum of deduction towards development is on account of two components. In this regard it said in para 19.1 and 19.2 as under :

*" 19.1. Firstly, space/area which would have to be left out, for providing indispensable amenities like formation of roads and adjoining pavements, laying of sewers and rain/flood water drains, overhead water tanks and water lines, water and effluent treatment plants, electricity sub-stations, electricity lines and street lights, telecommunication towers etc. Besides the aforesaid, land has also to be kept apart for parks, gardens and playgrounds. Additionally, development includes provision of civic amenities like educational institutions, dispensaries and hospitals, police stations, petrol pumps etc. This "first component", may conveniently be referred to as deductions for keeping aside area/space for providing developmental infrastructure.

19.2 Secondly, deduction has to be made for the expenditure/expense which is likely to be incurred in providing and raising the infrastructure and civic amenities referred to above, including costs for levelling hillocks and filling up low lying lands and ditches, plotting out smaller plots and the like. This "second component" may conveniently be referred to as deductions for developmental expenditure /expense."

74. Having said so Court in para 23 said:-

"23. Having given our thoughtful consideration to the analysis of the legal position referred to in the foregoing two paragraphs, we are of the view that there is no discrepancy on the issue, in the recent judgments of this Court. In our view, for the "first component" under the head of "development", deduction of 33-1/3 percent can be made. Likewise, for the "second component" under the head of "development" a further deduction of 33-1/3 percent can additionally be made. The facts and circumstances of each case would determine the actual component of deduction, for each of the two components. Yet under the head of "development", the applied deduction should not exceed 67 percent. That should be treated as the upper benchmark. This would mean, that even if deduction under one or the other of the two components exceeds 33-1/3 percent, the two components under the head of "development" put together, should not exceed the upper benchmark."
(emphasis added)

75. The above principles have further been followed and reiterated in Atma Singh Versus State of Haryana and another (supra), Nirmal Singh Vs. State of Haryana, (2015) 2 SCC 160 and Major General Kapil Mehra and others Vs. Union Of India and another (2015) 2 SCC 262.

76. Decision of this Court in Power Grid Corporation Vs. State of U.P. and Others, (2019) 1 ADJ 753 also reiterates the said principles.

77. In Sabhia Mohammed Yusuf Abdul Hamid Mulla (d) by LRS and others vs. Special Land Acquisition Officer and others (2012) 7 SCC 595 Reference Court, while determining market value observed that though land was agricultural but had non-agricultural potential and determined market value. High Court made a deduction of 15% towards development charges.

78. Referring to an earlier decision in Viluben Jhalejar Contractor vs. State of Gujrat, (2005) 4 SCC 789, Court in Sabhia Mohammed Yusuf Abdul Hamid Mulla (supra) said that development charges may range between 20% to 50% of the total price. Court further observed:

"in fixing market value of the acquired land which is undeveloped and under-developed the courts have generally approved deduction of 1/3rd of the market value towards development cost except when no development is required to be made for implementation of the public purpose for which land is acquired." (emphasis added)

79. Above authorities and several others have been considered in Major General Kapil Mehra Vs. Union of India and another (supra), and Court has observed that while fixing market value of acquired land, Land Acquisition Collector is required to keep in mind the following factors:-

(i) Existing geographical situation of land.

(ii) Existing use of land.

(iii) Already available advantages, like proximity to National or State Highway or road and/ or developed area,

(iv) Market value of other land situated in the same locality/ village/ area or adjacent or very near the acquired land.

80. Court has further said that market value is determined with reference to the market sale of comparable land in the neighbourhood by a willing seller to a willing buyer on or before the date of preliminary notification i.e. under Section 4(1) of 1894 Act, as that would give a fair indication of market value.

81. With respect to factors of comparable sales, Court in Major General Kapil Mehra Vs. Union of India and another (supra) has referred to its earlier decision in Urban Water Supply and Drainage Board and Others Versus K.S. Gangadharappa and another, (2009) 11 SCC 164, and has observed that element of speculation is reduced to minimum if underlying principles of fixation of market value with reference to comparable sales are satisfied, i.e.,(i) when sale is within a reasonable time of the date of notification under Section 4(1); (ii) it should be a bona fide transaction; (iii)) it should be of the land acquired or of the land adjacent to the land acquired; and (iv) It should possess similar advantages.

82. Where there are several exemplars showing different rates, it has been said that averaging is not permissible, if land acquired are of different types and situated in different locations. But where there are several sales of similar land, more or less, at the same time, prices whereof have marginal variation, averaging thereof is permissible. It is further held that for the purpose of fixation of fair and reasonable market value of any type of land, abnormally highvalue or abnormally low value sales should be carefully discarded. If number of sale deeds of the same locality and of same period with short intervals are available, average price of available number of sale deeds shall be considered as a fair and reasonable market price. Ultimately, it is in the interest of justice that land losers are awarded fair compensation. All attempts should be made to award fair compensation to the extent possible on the basis of accessibility to different kinds of roads, locational advantages etc.

83. "Freehold land' and "leasehold land', both these terms are conceptually different. If a property, subject to lease and in possession of a lessee, is offered for sale by an owner to a prospective private purchaser, the purchaser being aware that on purchase he will get only title and not possession and that the sale in his favour will be subject to encumbrance namely, the lease, he will offer a price taking note of the encumbrances. Naturally, such a price would be less than the price of a property without any encumbrance. But when a land is acquired free from encumbrances, market value of the same will certainly be higher.

84. In Urban Water Supply and Drainage Board (supra), Court also considered deductions towards competitive bidding and development. In paragraph no. 39, Court said :

"We have referred to various decisions of this Court on deduction towards development to stress upon the point that deduction towards development depends upon the nature and location of the acquired land. The deduction includes components of land required to be set apart under the building rules for roads, sewage, electricity, parks and other common facilities and also deduction towards development charges like laying of roads, construction of sewerage."

85. Thus, having gone through the aforesaid decisions, we find that no absolute principle or Rule of Thumb has been laid down in any of the authorities as to how much deduction should be made. The substance of all the decisions is that deduction should be applied where undeveloped and under-developed land is acquired and it can vary from 10% to 70%, depending upon various factors of each case. Similarly, if area of land exemplar is very small, appropriate deduction can be made.

86. Normally, Courts have held that exemplars should be such which are before the date of notification under Section 4(1) of Act, 1894 but an exemplar sale deed of a subsequent period of date of acquisition notification is not completely ruled out to be relevant document provided circumstances to justify the same are available.

87. In State of U.P. Vs. Major Jitendra Kumar and others, AIR 1982 SC 876, notification under Section 4 was published on 6.1.1948. Court determined rate of compensation relying on a sale deed dated 11.7.1951, i.e., a document executed after almost three and half years after the date of acquisition notification. Court upheld reliance on such document, observing, if there is no material to show that there was any fluctuation in market rate between the date of acquisition and the date of concerned sale deed, such document may be considered as a relevant material in absence of any other apt evidence. This view was followed in a subsequent decision, i.e., Administrator General of West Bengal Vs. Collector, Varanasi, AIR 1998 SC 943, where it is held:

"Such subsequent transactions which are not proximate in point of time to the acquisition can be taken into account for purposes of determining whether as on the date of acquisition there was an upward trend in the prices of land in the area. Further under certain circumstances where it is shown that the market was stable and there were no fluctuations in the prices between the date of the preliminary notification and the date of such subsequent transaction, the transaction could also be relied upon to ascertain the market value."

88. In certain cases, where nature, extent, size, surrounding and location of acquired land greatly varies, Courts have applied "belting system" for determination of market rate of acquired land. It is applied in appropriate cases when different parcels of land with different survey numbers belong to different owners and having different locations are acquired. Such chunk cannot be taken as a compact block. In Bijender and others Vs. State of Haryana and others (2018) 11 SCC 180, Court in para 34 of judgment said:

"The acquired land comprises of more than around 300 acres or so and is thus a very large in chunk. The acquired land belonged to several landowners and obviously so being so large in volume. One side of the acquired land is abutting the road. The land has surrounding with some kind of activities in nearby areas and this shows that the acquired land has some potential."

89. In Belting System, acquired land is usually divided in two or three belts depending upon the facts of each case. Appreciating this aspect in para 35 of judgment in Bijender and others Vs. State of Haryana and others (supra), Court said:

"The market value of the front belt abutting the main road is taken to fetch maximum value whereas the second belt fetches two third or so of the rate determined in relation to the first belt and the third belt, if considered proper to carve out, fetches half or so of the maximum. It is again depending upon facts of each case."

90. In para 49 of judgment, Court further said:

"49. It is also held that the value of the smaller plots, which is always on the higher side, is usually not taken into consideration for determining the large block of the land. One of the reasons being that the substantial area of the large block is used for development of sites like laying out the roads, drains sewers, water and electricity lines and several civic amenities and to provide these facilities, lot of time is consumed. The deduction is, therefore, made, which ranges from 20% to 50% or in appropriate cases even more."

91. In Trishala Jain and another Vs. State of Uttranchal and another, (2011) 6 SCC 47, for the purposes of construction of Government Polytechnic Institute at Dehradun, notification under Section 4 was published on 30th January, 1992, proposing to acquire 12.85 acres of land situated in village Sewala Kalan, Pargana Kendriya Doon, District Dehradun. The area of land belonging to Claimants-Land Owner, Trishala Jain and others, was 4.58 acres and 3.031 acres respectively. Collector offered compensation applying "belting system," for first belt at Rs.9,78,223.40 per acre, second belt at Rs. 6,52,482.27 per acre and third belt at Rs. 4,39,362.70 per acre. Reference Court held 'belting system' applied by Collector improper observing that entire land having been acquired for one purpose, there was no justification for application of 'belting system'. Relying on two exemplar sale deeds dated 26.11.1991 and 17.11.1991 it awarded compensation at Rs. 5,12,000/- per bigha after applying 20% deduction to gross market value of Rs.6,40,000/- per bigha. In appeal, High Court upheld view taken by Reference Court that there was no justification for applying "belting system" but raised deduction from 20% to 33.33% and hence determined market value at Rs. 4,26,667/- per bigha. The aforesaid deduction was applied on account of "development charges". Appeal was taken to Supreme Court by Claimants/Land-Owners. Four questions formulated by Supreme Court are as under:

"I. Whether or not the 'belting system' ought to have been applied for determination of fair market value of the acquired land?

II. What should be the just and fair market value of the acquired land on the date of issuance of notification under Section of the Act?

III. Whether in the facts and circumstances of the present case there ought to be any deduction after determining the fair market value of the land?

IV. What compensation and benefits are the claimants entitled to?"

92. Court upheld the view taken by courts below that application of "belting system" was unjustified since land as a whole was similarly placed and surrounded by developed areas and proposed to be used for one purpose, i.e., construction of Government Polytechnic Institute. Court then also held that deduction towards development is justified in certain circumstances but how much deduction is to be applied, will depend upon individual facts of the case. In para 39 of judgment, Court said:

"39. The law with regard to applying the principle of deduction to the determined market value of the acquired land is quite consistent, though, of course, the extent of deduction has varied very widely depending on the facts and circumstances of a given case. In other words, it is not possible to state precisely the exact deduction which could be made uniformly applicable to all the cases. Normally the rule stated by this Court consistently, in its different judgments, is that deduction is to be applied on account of carrying out development activities like providing roads or civic amenities such as electricity, water etc. when the land has been acquired for construction of residential, commercial or institutional projects. It shall also be applied where the sale instances (exemplars) relate to smaller pieces of land and in comparison the acquisition relates to a large tract of land." (emphasis added)

93. Further in paras 41 and 44 of judgment, Court said:

"41. The cases where the acquired land itself is fully developed and has all essential amenities, before acquisition, for the purpose for which it is acquired requiring no additional expenditure for its development, falls under the purview of cases of `no deduction'. Furthermore, where the evidence led by the parties is of such instances where the compensation paid is comparable, i.e. exemplar lands have all the features comparable to the proposed acquired land, including that of size, is another category of cases where principle of `no deduction' may be applied. These may be the cases where least or no deduction could be made. Such cases are exceptional and/or rare as normally the lands which are proposed to be acquired for development purposes would be agricultural lands and/or semi or haphazardly developed lands at the time of issuance of notification under Section 4(1) of the Act, which is the relevant time to be taken into consideration for all purposes and intents for determining the market value of the land in question."

"44. It is thus evident from the above enunciated principle that the acquired land has to be more or less developed land as its developed surrounding areas, with all amenities and facilities and is fit to be used for the purpose for which it is acquired without any further expenditure, before such land could be considered for no deduction. Similarly the sale instances even of smaller plots could be considered for determining the market value of a larger chunk of land with some deduction unless, there was comparability in potential, utilisation, amenities and infrastructure with hardly any distinction. On such principles each case would have to be considered on its own merits." (emphasis added)

94. In Union of India and others Vs. Mangatu Ram (1997) 6 SCC 59, a

Three-Judge Bench of Supreme Court considered the question, when 'belting system' should be applied and held that when a large extent of land under acquisition comprises of lands of several persons and some lands are abutting the main road and some lands are in the interior, the same would not have the uniform rate of market value. Reasonable demarcation/classification should be made before determination of the compensation. Upholding the 'belting system' to be applied in that case, Court said that lands situated around 500 yards from the main road should be classified as 'A' class land irrespective of the quality of the land and uniform rate of compensation should be applied to the same and remaining should be placed in category 'B' and applied another but lesser rate. Therein an argument was made that if different rates are applied, it will violate fundamental right of equality enshrined under Article 14. Rejecting it, Court said:

"It is equally settled law that Article 14 has no application vis-a-vis determination of the compensation for the obvious reason that it is hardly possible that all the lands are equal in all respects; they differ from one another and bear different features, e.g., nature, quality and character; therefore, all the lands do not command the same market value when they are sold to a willing purchaser by a willing vendor in the open market."

95. Court further held:

" ... the doctrine of equality in the matter of payment of compensation under Article 14 is inapplicable."

96. In Wazir and others State of Haryana, (2019) 3 SCJ 506 (SC), a very large chunk of land i.e. about 1500 acres spreading in several villages, namely, Kasan, Bas Kusla, Naharpur Kasan, Manesar, Bas Haria and Dhana, Tehsil and District Gurgaon was acquired by publishing Notifications under Section 4(1) of Act, 1894 on 06.03.2002, 07.03.2002 and 26.02.2002. Declarations under Section 6 were published on 15.11.2002, 25.11.2002 and 18.11.2002. Sub-Divisional Officer (Compensation)-cum-Land Acquisition Collector (hereinafter referred to as "LAO") found market value of land different in different villages and made award offering compensation on various rates ranging from Rs. 3,60,000/- per acre to 10 lakhs per acre. The land in village Manesar was offered highest rate of compensation of Rs.10 lakhs per acre while in Villages Kasan and Naharpur Kasan, Rs.7,50,000/- and 7,20,000/- per acre respectively were offered while in Villages Bas Kusla, Bas Haria and Dhana, market value was determined at Rs.3,60,000/- per acre. Dissatisfied with said award of LAO, Land-Owners sought Reference under Section 18 of Act, 1894. When matter was pending, in another matter where Notification under Section 4(1) was published on 15.11.1994 acquiring land in Villages Manesar, Naharpur Kasan, Khoh and Kasan, Supreme Court in Harayana State Industrial Development Corporation Vs. Pran Sukh and Ors., (2010) 11 SCC 175 determined market value at Rs.20 lakhs per acre. Relying thereon, Reference Court vide judgment and award dated 30.11.2010, determined market value at Rs.37,40,230/- per acre by allowing annual increase of 12 per cent per annum. High Court affirmed the aforesaid rate whereafter matter went in appeals to Supreme Court in Harayana State Industrial Development Corporation Vs. Udal and Another, (2013) 14 SCC 506. Supreme Court allowed appeals and remanded matter to High Court observing that flat enhancement of 12 per cent per annum was not justified. High Court in its turn vide judgment dated 06.10.2015 remanded matter to Reference Court for fresh disposal. In appeal, this judgment of High Court was set aside and matter was again remanded to High Court. Again it was decided by High Court by applying cumulative enhancement at the rate of 12 to 15 per cent per annum over base rate of Rs.20 lakhs per acre but thereafter applying an over all rate deduction of 10 to 20 per cent. Market rate determined by High Court in fact came to Rs.41.40 lakhs for land acquired in Villages Naharpur Kasan, Kasan, Bas Haria, Bas Kusla and Dhana. However, in respect of land acquired in Village Manesar, it applied 50 per cent enhancement and determined market value at the rate of Rs.62.10 lakhs per acre. This judgment when came up for consideration before Supreme Court in Wazir and others State of Haryana (supra), it was held that annual appreciation of rates depends on various factors. There is no hard and fast rule as to how much appreciation will apply and there cannot be any uniformity in this regard since it depends upon different factors. Court found that different appreciation was allowed from time to time in different cases as under:-

(i) 10 per cent per annum appreciation was allowed in Ranjit Singh Vs. Union Territory of Chandigarh, (1992) 4 SCC 659; Land Acquisition Officer and Revenue Divisional Officer Vs. Ramanjulu, (2005) 9 SCC 594.

(ii) 15 per cent per annum escalation was accepted in Krishi Utpadan Mandi Samiti Vs. Bipin Kumar, (2004) 2 SCC 283.

97. Considering above authorities, Supreme Court held that increase in land prices depends on four factors: (i) situation of land; (ii) nature of development in surrounding area; (iii) availability of land for development in area; and (iv) demand for land in area. In rural areas, unless there is any prospect of development in the vicinity, increase in prices would be slow, steady and gradual, without any sudden spurts or jumps. Contrary thereto, in urban and semi-urban areas, where development is faster, demand for land is high and construction activities are going on all around, escalation in market price would be at a much higher rate as comparing to rural areas. In some pockets in big cities, due to rapid development and high demand for land, escalations in prices had touched even 30 per cent to 50 per cent or more, per year, during nineties. Similarly, in remote rural areas, where there was no chance of any development and hardly any buyers, prices stagnated for years and rose marginally at a nominal rate of 1 or 2 per cent per annum. Thus there is a significant difference in increase of market value of land in urban/semi-urban areas vis-a-vis rural areas. Court said, if increase in market value in urban/semi-urban areas is about 10 to 15 per cent per annum, corresponding increases in rural areas would, at the best, be only around half of it, i.e. 5 to 7 per cent. If, there is any special reason for applying higher rate of increase that may be considered in the light of special facts and evidence brought before Court in this regard. Consequently, Supreme Court held that

7.5 per cent per annum appreciation would be sufficient and reasonable to determine market value of acquired land. Then, Court also considered that acquired land, though relates to common acquisition proceedings, but situate in different villages. It was also evident that valuation was different in different villages and it gives rise to another question "whether two sets of villages ought to be given different treatment or be clubbed and put at the same level for the purpose of payment of compensation for land acquired under Act, 1894". After considering sale exemplars and other evidence, Court held that market value of land acquired in Villages Bas Kusla, Bas Haria and Dhana, should be same i.e. Rs.28.77 lakhs per acre, for Villages Naharpur Kasan and Kasan, market value was determined at Rs.37.54 lakhs per acre and for Village Manesar, it was determined at Rs.56.31 lakhs per acre.

98. The market value determined by Reference Court in the case in hand, thus has to be examined in the light of aforesaid facts and exposition of law.

99. Now in the light of above exposition of law we proceed to examine question as to whether market value determined by Reference Court is just adequate and fair market value or excessive.

100. Apparently, area of land acquired vide notification dated 20.12.1988 issued under section 4 and 18.1.1989 issued under section 6 of Act 1894, is 61-801 acre of land (98-17-13 Bigha) i.e. 2,50,101.472 sq-metres. Entire area of land sought to be acquired, belong to more than 150 Tenure Holders/Land owners, having different plot numbers and areas and some of them are as under:

Serial No.	Plot Number	Area (in Sq-meter)	Name of Owner/Tenure Holder
1	352		Raghuraj Singh
2	352	4679.17	Smt. Raghuveer Kaur and Sri Shivraj Singh
3	372	11103.52	Smt. Tahira Khatoor
4	382	7113.60	Smt. Maya Devi
5	371	6177.74	Chandan Singh
6	376		Raghuraj Singh
7	367,368,369		Ajay Kumar
8	370	10913.85	Arvind Singh
9	383	8473.10	Anand Swarup
10	374	5690.89	Virendra Chandra, Gopal Chandra, Arvind Kumar, Ajay Kumar
11	384		Ram Kishan Gupta And Smt. Asha Gupta
12	382		Smt. Kamla Devi
13	358,384	5754.10 (358) and 8599.56 (384)	Salil Chandra, Praveen Chandra, Sarad Chandra
14	384	142287.97	Jaipal Chand
15	374		Gopal Chandra
16	210	12023.42	Mohd. Yusuf Ali
17	385	25362.38	Smt. Amir Kunwar
18	375	505.58	Smt. Amir Kunwar
19	363	13348.75	Smt. Amir Kunwar

101. Besides above, there is a Plot No. 386 in which there are 104 owners and area of land owned by them ranges from 550 to 2000 sq-yard. 15 owners owned 101 to 200 sq-yard; 15 from 201 to 300 sq-yard; 13 from 301 to 400 sq-yard and 11 from 401 to 500 sq-yard and so on. The fact is only one tenure holder has

2,000 sq-yard and rest have below 700 sq-yard.

102. From award dated 4.4.1991 at Paper No.144 (C-2), it is also evident that entire acquired land was not agricultural but some of it was declared 'Abadi' under section 143 of U.P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950 (hereinafter referred to as "Act 1950") or some was within Municipal Limit of Nagar Palika.

103. Plot No. 372, area 4-7-16 owned by Smt. Tahira Khatoon to the extent of 50% was within Municipal Limit. Similarly Plot No. 383 area 3-7-0, owned by Anand Swaroop was within Municipal Limit of Bulandshahr. Plot No. 374, area 2-5-0, owned by Virendra Chand and others was declared as Abadi under Section 143 of Act 1951. Plot No. 384, area 4-2-0 was declared Abadi under section 143 by the Competent Authority by order dated 20.12.1988. Plot No. 374, area 3 Bigha owned by Gopal Chandra was also declared Abadi under section 143 of Act 1951.

104. It is also evident from the aforesaid award that substantial land is within the municipal limit of Bulandshahr. With regard to development in the area and location of the land owned by claimant-respondent, D.W.1 Hari Singh has admitted that part of land is appurtenant to Delhi-Kanpur National Highway; Police Chauki is established in front of the said land and on another land adjacent, there is already construction where a motel is running. There is road crossing about 500 meters from acquired land where substation/city shops are existing. On the other side of acquired land, there is PWD Guest House at a distance of about 500 meters and after said guest house, there is a market and Nursing Home.

105. Grievance of appellant is that he had placed reliance on 19 sale-deeds before Reference Court but the same have been rejected and much higher market rate has been determined. These sale-deeds are paper No.77-C (1)/(2) to 142 (C-2) and details of these exemplars are given in the form of chart as hereunder:

106. The aforesaid sale exemplars are all of the period from 13.4.1987 to 15.7.1987. After plotting of Plots No. 386, 383 and 311, land was sold by respective owner to various persons. From description of boundaries given, it is evident that entire land shown in Plots was surrounded by plots of other persons and distance of plot sold from the Government Road was more than 100 meters. Thus at the time of sale of above plots, they had no excess directly since all the plots were surrounded by plots of private parties and distance of plots was more than 100 meters from the Government Road. Most land has been sold to Power of Attorney Holders and found part of share of owner. All these sale-deeds were executed about more than 1 and ½ years from the date of acquisition notification under section 4 of Act 1894, issued for acquisition of land which is subject matter of dispute in present appeals. In fact, as admitted by appellants even the proposal for acquisition was initiated on 10.6.1988, as is evident from Paper No. 143 (c) (2), which is part of paper book.

107. Moreover, sale deed exemplars relied by claimant respondent i.e. dated 6.9.1986, 29.12.1986 and 10.4.1988 have also been rejected by Reference Court, observing that they relate to land situate much far from acquired land and therefore, not relevant to determine market value in present case. In the sale-deed, [Paper Nos. 161 (c) and 163 (c), the land was situate at G.T. Road Bulandshahr and in third sale-deed i.e. Paper No. 162 (c)] land situated in Civil Lines, Bulandshahr, which is much far of old city. The claimant respondent also placed reliance on sale-deed Paper Nos. 32 (c) to 31 (c) which relate to the period subsequent to date of notification under section 4 (1) of Act 1894 and same has also been rejected by Reference Court. 108. Thereafter, Court below refers to market value already determined in respect of acquisition, subject matter of adjudication before Court earlier. Paper No. 30 (c)/1 is copy of judgement and award dated 26.11.1991, passed by Sri Vijay Singh, IV Additional District Judge, District, Bulandshahr deciding 38 LARs, collectively i.e. LAR Nos. 563 to 589 of 1991; 612 to 622 of 1991 which relate to land owners whose land fell in the category of first and second belting for which market rate was determined by SLAO vide award dated 4.4.1991, as Rs. 75 per sq-yard and Rs. 50 per sq-yard. The Reference Court therein determined market value at Rs. 400/- per sq-yard. Another award on record is Paper No. 31 (c)/1 dated 27.10.1995, passed by Sri V.K. Jain, District Judge, Bulandshahr in L.AR. Nos. 266 and 267 of 1992 but it was in respect of different acquisition proceedings, whereby land of Village Chandpur, Pargana Baran, District Bulandshahr was acquired for construction of Delhi Kanpur Road by U.P. Public Works Department. Notification therein under Section 4, was published on 11.3.1989 and declaration was made on 3.10.1989, possession was taken on 6.9.1990 and SLAO gave an award on 13.12.1991. Reference Court determined market value in that case at Rs. 390/- per sq-yard.

109. Reference Court instead of relying upon aforesaid awards, has placed reliance on the awards rendered in LARs No. 168 of 1992, 169 of 1992 and 195 of 1992 and 67 of 1992, wherein, Reference Court had determined two rates i.e. Rs. 400/- per sq-yard and 350/- per sq-yard. In LAR No. 195 of 1992, land owner whose land was acquired had purchased about 68 sq-yard of land for residential purposes and therefore, compensation for him was determined at Rs. 400/- per sq-yard while in respect of other land owners, it was determined at Rs. 350/- per sq-yard. Award in aforesaid LARs was challenged by BKDA in First Appeals No. 102 of 2000 and 103 of 2000, which were dismissed on 7.4.2010. Counsel for BKDA also admitted before Reference Court during the course of argument that land owners were already paid compensation at the rate of Rs. 300/- per sq-yard. This part of statement mentioned in award is reproduced as under:

" बहस के दौरान प्राधिकरण के विद्वान अधिवक्ता ने यह स्वीकार किया है कि अंकन तीन सौ रुपए प्रति वर्ग गज की दर से भुगतान भी काश्तवारों को किया गया है।"

"Learned counsel for the Authority, during the arguments, admitted that even payment has been made to the Kashkaars (cultivators) at the rate of three hundred rupees per square yard."

(English translation by Court)

110. Keeping the aforesaid awards as a guiding factor, Reference Court in the present case, found that market value determined was in respect of land which was less than 5 Bigha pukhta and per Bigha it comes to Rs. 50,000/- . Therefore, after deducting Rs. 1 lakh for every additional 5 Bigha, which comes to Rs. 2 Lakhs in the case in hand, market value was determined as Rs. 8,50,000 per Pakka Bigha (Rs. 281/- per sq-yard) and on that basis award has been given. Reference Court has followed earlier award and also statement of counsel for BKDA that compensation at the rate of Rs. 300/- per sq-yard has already been paid for the land, deeper from main road and belting system was also applied, inasmuch as for the land nearer to G.T. Road, rates of Rs. 75/- per sq-yard and for interior one Rs. 50- per sq-yard. For other land treating it as agricultural, different rates have been applied. Determination of market value and deduction as to the size of land has to be applied and has been applied as per the area of land of individual land owner and not entire chunk which was acquired and belong to large number of land owners.

111. We, therefore answer first question by holding that Reference Court has rightly determined market value by considering area of individual land owners, their location and other relevant factors and determination of market value at Rs. 8,50,000 per Bigha (Rs. 281/- sq-yard) is absolutely justified.

112. Question no.2 is answered by holding that determination of market value has to be considered taking into account area of concerned land owner and not the entire area of acquisition by State, otherwise, the consent of notional sale by individual vendor to prospective vendee will become illusory and meaningless.

113. In respect of question no.3 we find that belting system has already been applied by Reference Court in respect of distance of land from G.T.Road or National Highway, also keeping in view size and nature of land. Therefore, we do not find any infirmity in the manner rates have been determined. Therefore, principle of law about application of belting system wherever attracted cannot be disputed. Further in the present case, same has been applied and warrants no interference.

114. Question No.4 is answered by holding that Reference Court has rightly followed earlier awards in other LARs particularly when there was admission on the part of appellant's counsel that compensation was paid at the rate of Rs. 300/- per sq-yard to various land owners.

115. Question no.5 is answered by holding that Reference Court has rightly rejected various sale-deeds relied by appellants in the case in hand.

116. At this stage, we may also refer the alleged compromise Paper No. 76 (c) dated 16.4.2003 which is not a compromise for payment of compensation of acquired land. In fact it is a lease deed executed by BKDA in favour of Smt. Amir Kunwar Devi staing that her land in village Akbarpur i.e. Gata No. 363 area 5-0-11; 385 area 10-0-11 total 15.52 Bigha was acquired. The acquisition notification under section 4 of Act 1894 was published on 20.4.1988 under section 6 of Act 1894 was published on 18.8.1989 and compensation at the rate of Rs. 49.35 per sq-yard pursuant to the award of SLAO was deposited in the office of SLAO. Due to interim order passed by Court on 4.10.2001, in Writ Petition No. 32851 of 2001, BKDA was not able to proceed with the development work on the acquired land and therefore, from Gata No. 385 it agreed to lease out 3001.84 sq-yard land i.e. 2509.90 sq-meter. Therefore, on payment of Rs. 1,48,140 as compensation deposited by BKDA in SLAO's office, acquisition cost of Rs. 14814/- and further payment of Rs. 115/- per sq-meter towards development charges and further payment of free hold charges, land was allotted on lease to Smt. Amir Kunwar. Thus, it is not an agreement for the purpose of payment of compensation but a compromise executed by BKDA with Amir Kunwar in different circumstances since it was not able to proceed with development activities of acquired land. The aforesaid document therefore, is wholly irrelevant for the purpose of determining market value of acquired land in the case in hand and that has rightly been rejected by Reference Court.

117. In view of above discussions, we do not find any manifest error in both the judgements as well as awards of Reference Court. Since the points for determinations have rightly been answered against appellants, we do not find any merit in these appeals.

118. Both are accordingly dismissed with cost.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Rajeev Misra, J.)

1. This plaintiff's Appeal under Section 19 of Family Courts Act 1984 (hereinafter referred to as the Act of 1984) filed by Rajesh Kumar Chaudhary (husband) challenging judgement dated 27.03.2012 and decree dated 10.04.2012 passed by the Principal Judge (Family Court), Varanasi in Petition No. 360 of 2004 (Rajesh Kumar Chaudhary Vs. Savita) whereby aforesaid petition for divorce filed by the plaintiff-appellant under Section 13 (1) of Hindu Marriage Act 1955 (hereinafter referred to as the Act of 1955) has been dismissed.

2. We have heard Mr. Ashok Nath Tripathi, learned counsel for plaintiff-appellant and Mr. Sanjiv Singh, learned counsel representing defendant-respondent.

3. The plaint case set up by plaintiff-appellant is that marriage of plaintiff-appellant was solemnized with defendant-respondent on 03.06.1994 in accordance with Hindu Rites and Customs. Defendant-respondent came to the house of plaintiff once or twice and again back to her parental home. The defendant-respondent never established conjugal relationship with plaintiff-appellant at her marital home. According to plaintiff-appellant it was disclosed by defendant-respondent to him that her marriage has been solemnized with plaintiff-appellant, forceably, and contrary to her wishes, whereas she has already surrendered physically and mentally to another person. Whenever defendant-respondent came to her marital home, she never stayed for more than three or four days nor established conjugal relationship with plaintiff-appellant. In order to make married life happy plaintiff-appellant made many efforts to resolve deadlock but in vain. However, looking at the prestige of his family, plaintiff-appellant kept quiet. The defendant-respondent came to her marital home on 04.06.1994 and after staying about three days, went to her parental home on 07.04.1994 in the company of her brother and relatives. Thereafter, plaintiff-appellant and his family members made continuous efforts to bring her back. Ultimately, after expiry of a period of three years, defendant-respondent came to her marital home on 10.03.1997. After staying for about three or four days with the family of plaintiff-appellant, she again went to her parental home. All this time she did not discharge her obligations as wife of the plaintiff-appellant and while returning to her parental home, she took away all jewelry and stridhan. A letter was sent by father of defendant-respondent to father of plaintiff-appellant that a daughter has been born to defendant-respondent on 01.03.1998 who has been named as Vibhushita @ Prachi. On recipt of this information, plaintiff-appellant was astonished as no child could be born out of the wedlock of plaintiff-appellant with defendant-respondent as there was no conjugal relationship between the two. However, considering the prestige and grace of the family and himself, he did not raise voice and kept quiet. Plaintiff-appellant, inspite of the aforesaid, requested defendant-respondent to improve her conduct but she failed. The family of plaintiff-appellant did not want to leave defendant-respondent as defendant-respondent was blessed with a girl child who is loved by all. Plaintiff-appellant and his family members were unaware of the truth and inspite of the humiliation faced by them at the behest of defendant-respondent, they kept quiet. Ultimately, as per the wishes of his family members, plaintiff-appellant met defendant-respondent and her family members again on 02.07.2004 to bring her back to her marital home but she refused. She again stated that she has wrongly been married to the plaintiff-appellant. On account of aforesaid conduct of defendant-respondent, plaintiff has suffered physical and mental cruelty at the hands of the defendant-respondent and hence the suit for divorce.

4. The suit for divorce filed by plaintiff-appellant was contested by defendant-respondent. Accordingly, she filed a written statement (Paper No. 25 Ka.) whereby she not only denied plaint allegations but also raised additional pleas. According to defendant-respondent, the divorce petition was filed only to harass defendant-respondent and her family members and further to solemnize second marriage. As such the divorce petition was liable to be dismissed. The defendant-respondent further stated that after marriage, she came to her marital home and stayed at her marital home in a cordial atmosphere with the plaintiff-appellant and other family members. After sometime, defendant-respondent came to her parental home. However, plaintiff-appellant as well as his family members refused to bring back defendant-respondent on the ground that they want to take defendant-respondent to Bombay. However, as the Flat in Bombay was too small they were making every effort to purchase a new Flat for which there was a deficiency of Rs.5 lacs. As such, it was stated by plaintiff-appellant and his family members that either the parents of defendant-respondent should give a sum of Rs.5 lacs immediately or wait for such time till new Flat is purchased in Bombay. After expiry of a period of two and a half years no information regarding the purchase of a Flat in Bombay was given nor any attempt was made to bring back defendant-respondent to her marital home. In the aforesaid circumstances, parents of defendant-respondent started exerting pressure upon Mahendra Pratap Singh (the mediator of the marriage), Samar Bahadur Singh and other relatives to pressurize plaintiff-appellant and his family members to take back defendant respondent to her marital home. On this plaintiff-appellant and his father brought defendant-respondent to their home in Village Barahi Kalan, District-Varanasi and started exerting pressure upon the defendant-respondent for the payment of Rs. 5 Lacs by her father. The defendant-respondent spent a period of one month with plaintiff-appellant in a cordial atmosphere. Consequently, conjugal relationship between the parties was established. Out of the cohabitation of defendant-respondent and plaintiff-appellant, she came in family way. Ultimately, defendant-respondent gave birth to a daughter namely Vibhushita @ Prachi on 01.03.1998.

5. The entire family of plaintiff-appellant resides in Bombay. At Village Barahi Kalan only family of the uncle of plaintiff-appellant resides and looks after the house and agriculture fields of the plaintiff-appellant. The family of plaintiff-appellant comes to Village-Barahi Kalan twice or thrice in a year and after staying about a week or ten days they used to go back to Bombay. Whenever plaintiff-appellant used to come to Village-Barahi Kalan, he used to go to the house of defendant-respondent to meet her and also to look at his daughter. With the permission of father of defendant-respondent, plaintiff-appellant used to take defendant-respondent alongwith her daughter to Varanasi for a joyride and used to stay at Varanasi in a Hotel. In spite of the aforesaid cordial relations, plaintiff-appellant never agreed to take defendant-respondent to Bombay and the only reason assigned was shortage of space at Bombay. It was also stated that till a Flat is purchased in Bombay, defendant-respondent cannot be taken to Bombay. As defendant-respondent or her parents could not pay a sum of Rs. 5 Lakhs to plaintiff-appellant as such out of vengeance, they started levelling false and frivolous allegations against defendant-respondent and her family members. As the marriage of younger sister of defendant-respondent was scheduled to be held on 11.02.2005, therefore in order to create obstruction in the marriage and to tarnish image of the defendant-respondent and her family members, various uncalled for and baseless allegations were levelled. According to the defendant-respondent the plaintiff-appellant resides at Bombay where he has a laundary, Hotel and Beer Bar from which he has substantial income. Plaintiff-appellant wants to marry a fashionable girl and in pursuit of the aforesaid desire, he has filed divorce suit on unfounded and baseless allegations, which are wholly untruthfull. The defendant-respondent was always ready to reside with plaintiff-appellant and even on date she is ready to live with plaintiff-appellant. The defendant-respondent never refused to live with the plaintiff-appellant. Only because the demand of Rs. 5 Lakhs raised by plaintiff-appellant could not be satisfied by defendant-respondent or her parents, the plaintiff-appellant is not keeping defendant-respondent with him. The defendant-respondent was and is ready to reside with plaintiff-appellant alongwith her daughter and lead a happy married life. The defendant-respondent came to her parental home on five or six occasions and also went to her marital home, but ultimately came to her parental home in February 2005. Since then no effort has been made by the plaintiff-appellant to take her back and his daughter nor any proposal to that effect was made. Since no cause of action arises, the suit for divorce filed by the plaintiff-appellant is liable to be dismissed.

6. On the pleadings of the parties, Court below framed following issues for adjudication:

"i. Whether the defendant-respondent has not discharged her spousal obligations with the plaintiff-appellant, as averred in the plaint?

ii. Whether the defendant-respondent went to her father's place against the wishes of the plaintiff-appellant, as averred in the plaint?

iii. Whether the daughter born to the defendant-respondent is out of the wedlock of the parties and on account of cohabitation of the parties, as averred in the plaint?

iv. Whether the plaintiff-appellant demanded Rs. 5 Lakhs from the defendant-respondent to purchase a Flat and for that, subjected her to cruelty by harassing her, as stated in the written statement?

v. Whether the plaintiff-appellant subjected the defendant-respondent to cruelty by levelling false charges against her and by indulging in loose talks with her, with an intent to create hurdles in the marriage of her younger sister and to tarnish her social prestige?

vi. Whether the plaintiff-appellant is entitled to get any relief?"

7. After the issues were framed, parties led evidence in support of their respective case. Plaintiff-appellant in order to prove his case adduced himself as P.W.-1, one Hira Lal as P.W.-2 and Vindhyavasini as P.W.-3. While P.W.-2 Hira Lal is the father of plaintiff-appellant P.W.-3 Vindhyavasini is a resident of Village of plaintiff-appellant. The plaintiff-appellant also adduced documentary evidence as is evident from page 11 of the certified copy of impugned judgement.

8. Similarly defendant-respondent in order to prove her defence, adduced herself as D.W.-1, Bindu Kanaujiya as D.W.-2, Baljeet as D.W.-3, Samar Bahadur Singh as D.W.-4 and Om Prakash Lal Srivastava as D.W.-5. D.W-2 Bindu Kannaujia is the daughter of the Mausi of defendant-respondent (sister of the mother of defendant respondent). D.W.4 Samar Bahadur Singh is the mediator of the marriage. Defendant-respondent also adduced documentary evidence to establish her defence. The same is learly recorded at page 11 of the certified copy of impugned judgement.

9. Court below on the basis of pleadings of the parties and evidence adduced, decided the issues so framed. Issue no.1 relates to the failure on the part of the defendant-respondent in establishing marital relationship with the plaintiff-appellant. Issue no.2 was framed to the effect as to whether defendant-respondent has gone with her father to her parental home contrary to the wishes of the plaintiff-appellant. Both the issues were decided together. The said issues were essentially framed to find out whether defendant-respondent has committed physical and mental cruelty upon plaintiff-appellant by her conduct. Court below concluded that as per testimony of D.W.-1 Sarita, it has been categorically established that after her marriage on 03.06.1994, she came to her marital home on 04.06.1994. While residing at her marital home, she duly discharged her obligations as wife and while she stayed at her marital home, there was not only cohabitation of the plaintiff-appellant and the defendant-respondent but there also established conjugal relationship between the two. Defendant-respondent came to her parental home only when she was sent (Vidai) by her in-laws. The defendant-respondent never came to her parental home out of her free will. Defendant-respondent in her testimony has deposed before Court below in a very natural manner and there is no such element in her testimony on the basis of which it could be discarded or the witness himself could be disbelived on account of being incredible. The manner in which this witness has detailed the chain of events which occurred from 04.06.1994 do not leave any room, to doubt her testimony. Apart from above, D.W.-2, Bindu Kannaujia, who is the daughter of the sister of mother of defendant-respondent has also supported the testimony of D.W.-1, Smt. Sarita. None of the family members of plaintiff-appellant has come forward to support the case of plaintiff-appellant or deposed before Court below in his favour. Apart from the aforesaid, Court below further found that in case the conduct of defendant-respondent was so unnatural as alleged by plaintiff-appellant, then, in that event, suit for divorce would not have been filed after about ten years from the date of marriage. This circumstance also reamined unexplained before Court below. On the aforesaid premise Court below concluded that plaintiff-appellant has failed to establish that defendant-respondent failed to establish marital relationship with plaintiff-appellant and defendant-respondent went to her parental home contrary to the wishes of the plaintiff-appellant. Consequently, the said issues were decided against plaintiff-appellant.

10. Issue no.3 relating to the birth of the girl child from the conjugal relationship of the plaintiff-appellant and defendant-respondent was decided against plaintiff-appellant. The necessity to frame this issue arose since plaintiff-appellant filed an application (Paper No. 42 Ga) for getting D.N.A test of minor girl. This application filed by the plaintiff-appellant was contested by defendant-respondent and accordingly, she filed her objections (Paper No. 5. Ga). On this application, Court below passed an order dated 28.10.2006 whereby it directed that the application (Paper NO. 42-Ga) shall be decided after oral evidence of parties is over. Subsequently, plaintiff-appellant filed another application dated 20.3.2012 praying therein that the application (Paper No. 42 Ga) be decided in the light of the order 28.10.2006. At this stage plaintiff-appellant appears to have approached this Court and this Court directed that the applicaion (Paper No. 42 Ga) be decided within a period of one month. Consequently, the aforesaid application was decided alongwith the divorce petition.

11. The basis of the application (Paper No. 42 Ga) was the pathological reports filed by plaintiff-appellant before Court below namely (Paper No. 32 Ga) and (Paper No. 34 Ga) vide list of documents which is (Paper No. 31 Ga). The said pathological reports show that the blood group of the plaintiff-appellant is A positive, that of the defendant-respondent is also A positive but the blood group of minor child is B positive. Drawing legal support from Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, it was urged before Court below that the same is impossible. He has referred to Table-2 occurring under Chapter-VII (Examination of Biological Stains and Hair) of Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, 21st Edition at page 108, which is quoted hereunder:-

Phenotypes of parents	Phenotypes of Children
	Possible	Impossible
AxA	A and O	B, and AB
AxB	A,B, O and AB	None
AxAB	A, B, and AB	O
AxO	A and O	B and AB
BxB	B and O	A and AB
BxAB	A, B and AB	O
BxO	B and O	A and AB
ABxAB	A, B, and AB	O
ABxO	A and B	A, B, and O
OxO	O	A, B, and AB

12. Thus on the aforesaid premise, it was contended before Court below that the girl child has not been born out of the cohabitation and conjugal relationship of the parties and therefore, the necessity of getting a D.N.A. Test of the daughter namely Vibhushita @ Prachi.

13. The application Paper No. 42 Ga was objected to by defendant respondent. According to defendant-respondent, as per the provisions of Section 4 and 112 of Indian Evidence Act, the application (Paper No. 42 Ga) filed by plaintiff-appellant is liable to be rejected. There is no explanation by the plaintiff-appellant as to how the said pathological reports have been received by him when it is admitted case of plaintiff-appellant that the daughter was born on 01.03.1998 and prior to her birth plaintiff-appellant has not met defendant-respondent nor the defendant-respondent came to her marital home. Court below thus concluded that there is no such material on the basis of which D.N.A. Test of minor girl could be directed. Court below on the aforesaid factual premise, and coupled with the fact that the evidence on the record show that there was cohabitation of the parties and also establishment of conjugal relationship, the presumption arising out 112 of Indian Evidence Act was drawn against plaintiff-appellant. On facts, Court below further found that there is no such material on record to establish that after the marriage of parties, they were unable to meet each other and consequently, defendant-respondent could not have come in family way due to cohabitation of the plaintiff-appellant. Apart from the above, Court below further held that no D.N.A. Test can be directed to be held without the consent of the affected person who admittedly in this case was a minor and therefore, it was consent of the mother which was necessary. Court below further observed that plaintiff-appellant has not alleged any extra marital relationship of defendant-respondent, therefore, in the absence of any such allegation, application for getting D.N.A test of minor girl cannot be allowed. On the aforesaid premise, issue No.3 was decided against plaintiff-appellant.

14. Issue no.4 which was in respect of additional plea raised by defendant-respondent in her written statement alleging therein that the plaintiff-appellant demanded a sum of Rs. 5 lacs from defendant-respondent for purchase of Flat and the consequential cruel behavior on the part of plaintiff-appellant towards defendant-respondent. Issue no.5 related to the conduct of the plaintiff-appellant at the time of marriage of younger sister of defendant-respondent so as to malign her social status and thereby committing cruelty upon the defendant-respondent by making false and frivolous allegations against defendant-respondent. The said issues were decided in favour of plaintiff-appellant. Court below came to the conclusion that from the pleadings of parties, it is established that apart from the present litigation, a case under Sections 498A, 323, 504, 506 I.P.C. and Section ¾ Dowry Prohibition Act, P.S. Phoolpur, has come into existence pursuant to an F.I.R. Apart from the above, a case under Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act has also been initiated which is pending. No application under order 41 Rule 27 C.P.C. has been filed bringing on record the subsequent developments in the aforesaid cases nor any statement of fact regarding the same has been made in the affidavit filed in support of the stay application. However, Court below on account of the deficiency in evidence of defendant-respondent concluded that even though criminal proceedings are pending but upto this stage it is not established that the plaintiff-appellant demanded a sum of Rs. 5 Lakhs for purchasing a Flat and in pursuit thereof committed cruelty upon the defendant-respondent. Apart from the above Court below relied upon the testimony of D.W.-1 that in the marriage of her younger sister no obstruction was made by the brothers of the plaintiff-appellant. As such both the issues came to be decided against defendant-respondent.

15. Issue no.6 was in respect of the relief which can be granted to the plaintiff-appellant. Court below upon appreciation of pleadings, oral and documentary evidence on record, concluded that plaintiff-appellant is not entitled to any relief and consequently suit of plaintiff-appellant for a decree of divorce was dismissed.

16. Feeling aggrieved by the judgement dated 27.03.2012 and decree dated 10.04.2012 passed by Principal Judge, Family Court, Varanasi, plaintiff-appellant has now approached this Court by means of present Family Court Appeal.

17. Mr. Ashok Nath Tripathi, learned counsel for plaintiff-appellant, in support of appeal, has vehemently urged before us that cruelty on the part of defendant-respondent against plaintiff-appellant was duly established and therefore, Court below has erred in law and fact in dismissing suit for divorce filed by plaintiff-appellant. To buttress his submission he has relied upon the judgement in Samar Ghosh Vs. Jaya Ghosh, 2007 (4) SCC 511. He further contends that the findings recorded by Court below on issue no.3 which related to the birth of a female child from the alleged conjugal relationship and cohabitation of plaintiff-appellant and the defendant-respondent was wrongly decided as inspite of an specific application filed by plaintiff-appellant for DNA test of female child, the same has not been allowed by Court below. The procedure so adopted by Court below has resulted in miscarriage of justice. He further contends that as per Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, female child could not have been born out of the cohabitation of the plaintiff-appellant and defendant-respondent as the blood group of plaintiff-appellant is A positive and that of the defendant-respondent is also A positive whereas blood group of female child is B positive. According to learned counsel for plaintiff-appellant, D.N.A test alone could have decided parentage of minor daughter. To lend support his submission, he has relied upon the judgement in Dipanwita Roy Vs. Ronobroto Roy, 2015 (1) SCC 365. He lastly submits that the parties have been living separately since 02.07.2004 and therefore, the marriage has broken down irretrievably. He thus concludes that in view of the above the impugned judgement and decree passed by the Court below is liable to be set aside and the suit of the plaintiff-appellant for the grant of decree of divorce is liable to be decreed.

18. Sri Sanjiv Singh, learned counsel for respondent refuted above submissions and sought to support judgement of Court below on the findings recorded therein.

19. On the basis of the submissions urged by the learned counsel for the plaintiff-appellant, the following points of determination arise in the present appeal:

(a) Whether plaintiff-appellant has been able to establish cruelty on the part of defendant-respondent and therefore entitled to decree of divorce as prayed for in terms of Section 13 (1) (i-a) of the Act of 1955.

(b) Whether finding recorded by Court below on issue no.3 relating to the birth of the female child from the wedlock and cohabitation of the plaintiff-appellant and defendant-respondent is illegal perverse and erroneous.

(c) Whether there has been irretrievable break down of marriage as according to plaintiff-appellant, parties are living separately since 02.07.2004.

20. The term 'cruelty' has not been defined in Hindu Marriage Act 1955 (hereinafter referred to as "Act 1955"). Consequently, this term has been the subject matter of debate for long. However, recently a Division Bench of this Court in the case of Smt. Sarita Devi Vs. Sri Ashok Kumar Singh reported in 2018 (3) AWC 2328 has considered the question of cruelty in detail in paragraphs 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 27 and 29 which reads as under:-

suffering; delight in or indifference to another's pain; mercilessness; hard-heartedness'.

17. In Black's Law Dictionary, 8th Edition, 2004, term "mental cruelty" has been defined as, "a ground for divorce, one spouse's course of conduct (not involving actual violence) that creates such anguish that it endangers the life, physical health, or mental health of the other spouse."

18. The concept of cruelty has been summarized in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol.13, 4th Edition Para 1269, as under:

"The general rule in all cases of cruelty is that the entire matrimonial relationship must be considered, and that rule is of special value when the cruelty consists not of violent acts but of injurious reproaches, complaints, accusations or taunts. In cases where no violence is averred, it is undesirable to consider judicial pronouncements with a view to creating certain categories of acts or conduct as having or lacking the nature or quality which renders them capable or incapable in all circumstances of amounting to cruelty; for it is the effect of the conduct rather than its nature which is of paramount importance in assessing a complaint of cruelty. Whether one spouse has been guilty of cruelty to the other is essentially a question of fact and previously decided cases have little, if any, value. The court should bear in mind the physical and mental condition of the parties as well as their social status, and should consider the impact of the personality and conduct of one spouse on the mind of the other, weighing all incidents and quarrels between the spouses from that point of view; further, the conduct alleged must be examined in the light of the complainant's capacity for endurance and the extent to which that capacity is known to the other spouse. Malevolent intention is not essential to cruelty but it is an important element where it exits."

19. In 24 American Jurisprudence 2d, the term "mental cruelty" has been defined as under:

"Mental Cruelty as a course of unprovoked conduct toward one's spouse which causes embarrassment, humiliation, and anguish so as to render the spouse's life miserable and unendurable. The plaintiff must show a course of conduct on the part of the defendant which so endangers the physical or mental health of the plaintiff as to render continued cohabitation unsafe or improper, although the plaintiff need not establish actual instances of physical abuse. "

20. One of the earliest decision considering "mental cruelty" we find is, N.G. Dastane v. S. Dastane (1975) 2 SCC 326, wherein Court has said:

"The enquiry therefore has to be whether the conduct charges as cruelty is of such a character as to cause in the mind of the petitioner a reasonable apprehension that it will be harmful or injurious for him to live with the respondent. "

21. In Sirajmohmedkhan Janmohamadkhan v. Haizunnisa Yasinkhan and Anr. (1981) 4 SCC 250 Court said that a concept of legal cruelty changes according to the changes and advancement of social concept and standards of living. With the advancement of our social conceptions, this feature has obtained legislative recognition, that a second marriage is a sufficient ground for separate residence and maintenance. Moreover, to establish legal cruelty, it is not necessary that physical violence should be used. Continuous ill-treatment, cessation of marital intercourse, studied neglect, indifference on the part of the husband, and an assertion on the part of the husband that the wife is unchaste are all factors which lead to mental or legal cruelty.

22. In Shobha Rani v. Madhukar Reddi, (1988) 1 SCC 105, Court observed that word 'cruelty' has not been defined in Act, 1955 but legislature, making it a ground for divorce under Section 13(1)(i)(a) of Act, 1955, has made it clear that conduct of party in treatment of other if amounts to cruelty actual, physical or mental or legal is a just reason for grant of divorce. Cruelty may be mental or physical, intentional or unintentional. If it is physical, it is a question of fact about degree. If it is mental, the enquiry must begin as to the nature of cruel treatment and then as to the impact of such treatment on the mind of the spouse. Whether it caused reasonable apprehension that it would be harmful or injurious to live with the other, ultimately, is a matter of inference to be drawn by taking into account the nature of conduct and its effect on the complaining spouse. There may, however, be cases where conduct complained of itself is bad enough and per se unlawful or illegal. Then the impact or injurious effect on the other spouse need not be enquired into or considered. In such cases, cruelty will be established if conduct itself is proved or admitted. The absence of intention should not make any difference in the case, if by ordinary sense in human affairs, the act complained of could otherwise be regarded as cruelty.

23. In V. Bhagat v. D. Bhagat (Mrs.), (1994) 1 SCC 337 considering the concept of "mental cruelty" in the context of Section 13(1)(i)(a) of Act, 1984, Court said that it can be defined as conduct which inflicts upon the other party such mental pain and suffering as would make it not possible for that party to live with other. In other words, mental cruelty must be of such a nature that the parties cannot reasonably be expected to live together. The situation must be such that the wronged party cannot reasonably be asked to put up with such conduct and continue to live with other party. It is not necessary to prove that mental cruelty is such as to cause injury to the health of other party. While arriving at such conclusion, regard must be had to the social status, educational level of parties, the society they move in, the possibility or otherwise of the parties ever living together in case they are already living apart and all other relevant facts and circumstances which it is neither possible nor desirable to set out exhaustively. What is cruelty in one case may not amount to cruelty in another case. It is thus has to be determined in each case having regard to the facts and circumstances of each case.

24. In Chetan Dass v. Kamla Devi, (2001) 4 SCC 250, Court observed that matrimonial matters relates to delicate human and emotional relationship. It demands mutual trust, regard, respect, love and affection with sufficient play for reasonable adjustments with spouse. The relationship has to conform to the social norms as well. There is no scope of applying the concept of "irretrievably broken marriage" as a straitjacket formula for grant of relief of divorce but it has to be considered in the backdrop of facts and circumstances of the case concerned.

25. In Savitri Pandey v. Prem Chandra Panadey, (2002) 2 SCC 73, Court held that mental cruelty is the conduct of other spouse which causes mental suffering or fear to matrimonial life of other. Cruelty postulates a treatment of party to marriage with such conduct as to cause a reasonable apprehension in his or her mind that it would be harmful or injurious to live with other party. Cruelty has to be distinguished from ordinary wear and tear of family life.

27. In Vinita Saxena v. Pankaj Pandit, (2006) 3 SCC 778 Court held that complaints and reproaches, sometimes of ordinary nature, may not be termed as 'cruelty' but their continuance or persistence over a period of time may do so which would depends on the facts of each case and have to be considered carefully by the Court concerned.

29. In Samar Ghosh vs. Jaya Ghosh (supra) Court said that though no uniform standard can be laid down but there are some instances which may constitute mental cruelty and the same are illustrated as under:

"(i) On consideration of complete matrimonial life of the parties, acute mental pain, agony and suffering as would not make possible for the parties to live with each other could come within the broad parameters of mental cruelty.

(ii) On comprehensive appraisal of the entire matrimonial life of the parties, it becomes abundantly clear that situation is such that the wronged party cannot reasonably be asked to put up with such conduct and continue to live with other party.

(iii) Mere coldness or lack of affection cannot amount to cruelty, frequent rudeness of language, petulance of manner, indifference and neglect may reach such a degree that it makes the married life for the other spouse absolutely intolerable.

(iv) Mental cruelty is a state of mind. The feeling of deep anguish, disappointment, frustration in one spouse caused by the conduct of other for a long time may lead to mental cruelty.

(v) A sustained course of abusive and humiliating treatment calculated to torture, discommode or render miserable life of the spouse.

(vi) Sustained unjustifiable conduct and behavior of one spouse actually affecting physical and mental health of the other spouse. The treatment complained of and the resultant danger or apprehension must be very grave, substantial and weighty.

(vii) Sustained reprehensible conduct, studied neglect, indifference or total departure from the normal standard of conjugal kindness causing injury to mental health or deriving sadistic pleasure can also amount to mental cruelty.

(viii) The conduct must be much more than jealousy, selfishness, possessiveness, which causes unhappiness and dissatisfaction and emotional upset may not be a ground for grant of divorce on the ground of mental cruelty.

(ix) Mere trivial irritations, quarrels, normal wear and tear of the married life which happens in day to day life would not be adequate for grant of divorce on the ground of mental cruelty.

(x) The married life should be reviewed as a whole and a few isolated instances over a period of years will not amount to cruelty. The ill-conduct must be persistent for a fairly lengthy period, where the relationship has deteriorated to an extent that because of the acts and behavior of a spouse, the wronged party finds it extremely difficult to live with the other party any longer, may amount to mental cruelty.

(xi) If a husband submits himself for an operation of sterilization without medical reasons and without the consent or knowledge of his wife and similarly if the wife undergoes vasectomy or abortion without medical reason or without the consent or knowledge of her husband, such an act of the spouse may lead to mental cruelty.

(xii) Unilateral decision of refusal to have intercourse for considerable period without there being any physical incapacity or valid reason may amount to mental cruelty.

(xiii) Unilateral decision of either husband or wife after marriage not to have child from the marriage may amount to cruelty.

(xiv) Where there has been a long period of continuous separation, it may fairly be concluded that the matrimonial bond is beyond repair. The marriage becomes a fiction though supported by a legal tie. By refusing to sever that tie, the law in such cases, does not serve the sanctity of marriage; on the contrary, it shows scant regard for the feelings and emotions of the parties. In such like situations, it may lead to mental cruelty."

21. The aforesaid Division Bench judgement clearly explains different shades of 'cruelty' which by itself are sufficient enough to dissolve the marriage on the ground of cruelty. The aforesaid judgement also prescribes the mode as to how 'cruelty' has to be proved and in what decree it has to be proved so as to grant of decree of divorce on the ground of 'cruelty'.

22. With the aid of the aforesaid material, Court has now to examine, whether plaintiff-appellant was able to successfully establish cruelty on the part of defendant- respondent and therefore, entitled to the decree of divorce on the aforesaid ground.

23. As already noted above, the aforesaid issue is decided by Court below against plaintiff-appellant on the findings which have been reproduced in paragraph - 8 of this judgement. So unless counsel for plaintiff-appellant is able to show that the findings recorded by Court below in respect of the aforesaid issue are illegal, perverse or erroneous, the findings so recorded by Court below on the aforesaid issue cannot be reversed. The only submission urged by learned counsel for the appellant before us is that defendant-respondent did not stay at her matrimonial home nor did she discharge her marital obligations towards the plaintiff-appellant, causing physical and mental cruelty to the plaintiff-appellant. The submissions so made appeared to be attractive at the first flush. However, on deeper scrutiny we find that the case of plaintiff-appellant stood totally demolished in view of the testimony of D.W.-1 and D.W.-2. Even testimony of P.W. 2 Hira Lal who is the father of plaintiff-appellant, does not prove plaint allegations. His testimony is vague and therefore, not worthy of being relied upon. As such Court below disbelieved the case of plaintiff-appellant by recording findings, which we have already noted herein above. Since nothing substantial was placed before us to dislodge the findings on the aforesaid issue, the challenge laid to the aforesaid findings is an half hearted attempt which must fail. Accordingly, we reject the same.

24. Coming to the second point of determination, we find that the Court below rejected application (Paper NO. 42 Ga) filed by the plaintiff-appellant for getting D.N.A. Test of the girl child. Court below upon consideration of the entire material on record concluded that plaintiff-appellant has failed to establish as to how pathological reports relied upon by him were obtained by him when admittedly the daughter was born on 01.03.1998 and prior to her birth, plaintiff-appellant did not meet defendant-respondent nor defendant-respondent came to her marital home. On this factual premise, Court below concluded that there was no basis for allowing the application (Paper No. 42 Ga). Court below thus concluded that there is no such material on the basis of which D.N.A. Test of the minor girl could be directed. Court below on the aforesaid factual premise, and coupled with the fact that evidence on record show that there was cohabitation of the parties and also establishment of conjugal relationship, the presumption arising out 112 of Indian Evidence Act was drawn against plaintiff-appellant. On facts, Court below further found that there is no such material on record to establish that after the marriage of parties, they were unable to meet each other and consequently, defendant-respondent could not come in family way in cohabitation of the plaintiff-appellant. Apart from the above, Court below further held that no D.N.A. Test can be directed to be held without the consent of affected person who admittedly in this case was a minor and therefore, it was consent of mother which was necessary. Court below further observed that plaintiff-appellant has not alleged any extra marital relationship of defendant-respondent, therefore, in the absence of any such allegation, application for getting D.N.A test of minor girl cannot be allowed. On the aforesaid premise, issue No.3 was decided against the plaintiff-appellant. The Court below further concluded that D.N.A. Test cannot be got conducted as a matter of Court and without the consent of the affected party.

25. Mr. Ashok Nath Tripathi, learned counsel for the plaintiff-appellant, has referred to the judgment in Dipanwita Roy Vs. Romobroto Roy (Supra) and on the basis thereof, he submits that since wife objected to the application filed by plaintiff appellant for getting the D.NA. test of minor daughter conducted, an adverse presumption should be drawn against the defendant-respondent and on that basis suit of plaintiff-appellant for divorse is liable to be decreed.

26. Before proceeding to evaluate the submission urged by the learned counsel for the plaintiff-appellant, it shall be useful to refer to the provisions of section 4 and section 112 of Indian Evidence Act:

"Section-4

"May Presume".- Whenever it is provided by this Act that the Court may presume a fact, it may either regard such fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved, or may call for proof of it.

"Shall presume".- Whenever it is directed by this Act that the Court shall presume a fact, it shall regard such fact as proved, unless and until it is disproved.

"Conclusive proof".- When one fact is declared by this Act to be conclusive proof of another, the Court shall, on proof of the one fact, regard the other as proved, and shall not allow evidence to be given for the purpose of disproving it.

Section-112

Birth during marriage, conclusive proof of legitimacy.- The fact that any person was born during the continuance of a valid marriage between his mother and any man, or within two hundred and eight days after its dissolution, the mother remaining unmarried, shall be conclusive proof that he is the legitimate son of that man, unless it can be shown that the parties to the marriage had no access to each other at any time when he could have been begotten."

27. In Goutam Kundu Vs. State of West Bengal and another, 1993 (3) SCC 418, a two Judges Bench of Supreme Court considered the question regarding propriety of holding of blood group test to determine parentage of the child, and the following was observed in paragraphs 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24 and 25:

"15. In India there is no special statute governing this. Neither the Criminal Procedure Code nor the Evidence Act empowers the court to direct such a test to be made. In 1951 (1) Madras Law Journal p.58O Polavarapu Venkteswarlu, minor by guardian and mother Hanwnamma v. Polavarapu Subbayya in that case the application was preferred under section 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure invoking the inherent powers of the Court to direct a blood test. The learned judge was of the following view:-

Section 15 1, Civil Procedure Code, has been introduced in to the Statute book to give effect to the inherent powers. of Courts as expounded by Woodroffe, J., in Hukum Chand Boid v. Kamalan and Singh. Such powers can only be exercised ex debito justice and not on the mere invocation of parties or on the mere volition of courts. There is no procedure either in the Civil Procedure Code or in the Indian Evidence Act which provides for a test of the kind sought to be taken by the defendant in the present case. It is said by Mr. Ramakrishna for the respondent before m e that in England this sort of test is resorted to by Courts where the question of non-access in connection with an issue of legitimacy arises for consideration. My attention has been drawn by learned counsel to page 69 of Taylor's Principles and Practice of Medical Jurisprudence, Volume 2, where it is stated thus :

"In Wilson v. Wilson, Lancet [1942] 1. 570, evidence was given that the husband's group was OM, that the wife's was BM and that the child's was ABN. The Court held that the husband was not the father of child, and granted a decree for nullity."

"It is also pointed out by learned counsel that in the text books on Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology by Rai Bahadur Jaising P. Moi, (8th Edition), at page 94, reference is made to a case decided by a Criminal Court at Mercare in June, 194 1, in which the paternity and maternity of the child being under dispute, the Court resorted to the results of the blood grouping test."

That may be. But I am not in any event satisfied that if the parties are unwilling to offer their blood for a test of this kind this Court can force them to do so."

16. The same view was taken by the Kerala High Court in Vasu v. Santha 1975 Kerala Law Times p. 533 as "A special protection is given by the law to the status of legitimacy in India. The law is very strict regarding the type of the evidence which can be let in to rebut the presumption of legitimacy of a child. Even proof that the mother committed adultery with any number of men will not of itself suffice for proving the illegitimacy of the child. If she had access to her husband during the time the child could have been begotten the law will not countenance any attempt on the part of the husband to prove that the child is not actually his. The presumption of law of legitimacy of a child will not be lightly repelled. It will not be allowed to be broken or shaken by a mere balance of probability. The evidence of non-access for the purpose of repelling it must be strong, distinct, satisfactory and conclusive see Morris v. Davies, (1837) 5 Cl. & Fin. 163. The standard of proof in this regard is similar to the standard of proof of guilt in a criminal case. These rigours are justified by considerations of public policy for there are a variety of reasons why a child's status is not to be triffled with. The stigma of illegitimacy is very severe and we have not any of the protective legislations as in England t o protect illegitimate children. No doubt, this may in some cases require a husband to maintain children of whom he is probably not their father. But, the legislature alone can change the rigour of the law and not the court. The court cannot base a conclusion on evidence different from that required by the law or decide on a balance of probability which will be the result if blood test evidence is accepted.

There is an aspect of the matter also. Before a blood test of a person is ordered his consert is required. The reason is that this test is a constraint on his personal liberty and cannot be carried out without his consent. Whether even a legislature can compel a blood test is doubtful. Here no consent is given by any of the respondents. It is also doubtful whether a guardian ad litem can give this consent. Therefore, in these circumstances, the learned Munsiff was right in refusing the prayer for a blood test of the appellant and respondents 2 and 3. The learned Judge is also correct in holding that there was no illegality in refusing a blood test. The maximum that can be done where a party refuses to have a blood test is to draw an adverse inference (see in this connection Subayya Gounder v. Bhoopala, AIR 1959 Madras 396, and the earlier decision of the same court in Venkateswarlu v. Subbayya AIR 1951 Madras 910. Such an adverse inference which has only a very little relevance here will not advance the appellants case to any extent. He has to prove that he had no opportunity to have any sexual intercourse with the 1st respondent at a time when these children could have been begotten. That is the only proof that is permitted under S. II 2 to dislodge the conclusive presumption enjoined by the Section."

17. In Hargavind Soni v. Ramdulari AIR 1986 MP at 57 held as:-

"The blood grouping test is a perfect test to determine questions of disputed paternity of a child and can be relied upon by Courts as a circumstantial evidence. But no person can be compelled to give a sample of blood for blood grouping test against his will and no adverse inference can be drawn against him for this refusal."

18. Blood grouping test is a useful test to determine the question of disputed paternity. It can be relied upon by courts as a circumstantial evidence which ultimately excludes a certain invididual as a father of the child. However, it requires to be carefully noted no person can be compelled to give sample of blood for analysis against her will and no adverse inference can be drawn against her for this refusal.

19. In Raghunath v. Shardabai 1986 AIR Bombay 388, it was observed blood grouping test have their limitation, they cannot possibly establish paternity, they can only indicate its possibilities.

20. In Bhartiraj v. Sumesh Sachdeo & Ors., 1986 AIR Allahabad 2591 held as:-

"Discussing the evidentiary value of blood tests for determining paternity, Rayden on Divorce, (1983) Vol. 1) p. 1054 has this to say

"Medical Science is able to analyse the blood of individuals into definite groups: and by examining the blood of a given man and a child to determine whether the man could or could not be the father. Blood tests cannot show positively that any man is father, but they can show positively that a given man could or could not be the father. It is obviously the latter aspect the proves most valuable in determining paternity, that is, the exclusion aspect for once it is determined that a man could not be the father, he is thereby automatically excluded from considerations of paternity. When a man is not the father of a child, it has been said that there is at least a 70 per cent chance that if blood tests are taken they will show. positively he is not the father, and in some cases the chance is even higher: between two giver men who have had sexual intercourse with. the mother at the time of conception, both of whom undergo blood tests, it has likewise been said that there is a 80 per cent chance that the tests will show that one of them is not the father with the irresistible inference that the other is the father.'

The position which emerges on reference to these authoritative texts is that depending on the type of litigation, samples of blood, when subjected to skilled scientific examination, can sometimes supply helpful evidence on various issues, to exclude a particular parentage set up in the case. But the consideration remains that the party asserting the claim to have a child and the rival set of parents put to blood test must establish his right so to do. The court exercises protective jurisdiction on behalf of an infant. In my considered opinion it would be unjust and not fair either to direct a test for a collateral reason to assist a litigant in his or her claim. The child cannot be allowed to suffer because of his incapacity; the aim is to ensure that he gets his rights. If in a case the court has reason to believe that the application for blood test is of a fishing nature or designed for some ulterior motive, it would be justified in not acceding to such a prayer."

21. "The above is the dicta laid down by the various High Courts. In matters of this kind the court must have regard to section 112 of the Evidence Act. This section is based on the well known maxim pater est quem nuptioe demonstrant (he is the father whom the marriage indicates). The presumption of legitimacy is this, that a child born of a married woman is deemed to be legitimate, it throws on the person who is interested in making out the illegitimacy, the whole burden of proving it. The law presumes both that a marriage ceremony is valid, any that every person is legitimate. Marriage or filiation (parentage) may be presumed, the law in general presuming against vice and immoratility."

22. It is a rebuttable presumption of law that a child born. during the lawful wedlock is legitimate, and that access occurred between the parents. This presumption can only be displaced by a strong preponderannce of evidence, and not by a mere balance of probabilities.

23. In Smt. Dukhtar Jahan v. Mohammed Faroog AIR 1987 SC 1049 this court held.

"Section II 2 lays down that if a person was born during the continuance of a valid marriage between his mother and any man or within two hundren and eighty days after its dissolution and the mother remains unmarried, it shall be taken as conclusive proof that he is the legitimate son of that man, unless it can be shown that the parties to the marriage had no access to each other at anytime when he could have been begotten. This rule of law based on the dictates of justice has always made the courts incline towards upholding the legitimacy of a child unless the facts are so compulsive and clinching as to necessarily warrant a finding that the child could not at all have been begotten to the father and as such a legitimation of the child would result in rank injustice to the father. Courts have always desisted from lightly or hastily rendering a verdict and that too, on the basts of slender materials, which will have the effect of branding a child as a bastard and its mother an unchaste woman."

24. This section requires the party disputing the paternity to prove non-access in order to dispel the presumption. "Access" and "non-access" mean the existence or non- existence of opportunities for sexual intercourse; it does not mean actual cohabitation.

25. The effect of this section is this: there is a presumption and a very strong one though a reubttable one. Conclusive proof means as laid down under section 4 of the Evidence Act."

28. Subsequently, a three Judges Bench in Sharda Vs. Dharmpal 2003 (4) SCC 493 considered the question regarding holding of Blood Group test to ascertain paternity of the child. The following was observed by Court in paragraphs 38, 39, 54, 55, 56, 58, 59, 60, 76, 79 and 80:

"38. In Goutam Kundu v. State of West Bengal and Anr. this Court while dealing with a question about the paternity of a child noticed the provision of Section 112 of the Evidence Act and held that the presumption arising thereunder can only be displaced by a strong preponderance of evidence and not by a mere balance of probabilities. It was held (SCC p. 428, para 26):

"26. From the above discussion it emerges-

(1) that courts in India cannot order blood test as a matter of course;

(2) wherever applications are made for such prayers in order to having roving inquiry, the prayer for blood test cannot be entertained.

(3) There must be a strong prima facie case in that the husband must establish non-access in order to dispel the presumption arising under Section 112 of the Evidence Act.

(4) The court must carefully examine as to what would be the consequence of ordering the blood test, whether it will have the effect of branding a child as a bastard and the mother as an unchaste woman.

(5) No one can be compelled to give sample of blood for analysis".

39. Goutam Kundu (supra) is, therefore, not an authority for the proposition that under no circumstances the Court can direct that blood tests be conducted. It, having regard to the future of the child, has, of course, sounded a note of caution as regard mechanical passing of such order. In some other jurisdictions, it has been held that such directions should ordinarily be made if it is in the interest of the child.

54. The right to privacy has been developed by the Supreme Court over a period of time. A Bench of eight judges in M.P. Sharma v. Satish Chandra AIR at pp.306-07, para 8 in the context of search and seizure observed that:

"When the Constitution makers have though fit not to subject such regulation to constitutional limitations by recognition of a fundamental right to privacy, analogous to the American Fourth Amendment, we have no justification to import it, into a totally different fundamental right, by some process of strained construction"

55. Similarly in Kharak Singh v. State of UP., AIR 1963 SC 1295, the majority judgment observed thus: (AIR p. 1303, parsa 20)

"The right of privacy is not a guaranteed right under our Constitution and therefore the attempt to ascertain the movements of an individual which is merely a manner in which privacy is invaded is not an infringement of a fundamental right guaranteed by Part III."

56. With the expansive interpretation of the phrase "personal liberty", this right has been read into Article 21 of the Indian Constitution. [See R. Rajagopal v. State of Tamil Nadu and Ors.

95, People's Union of Civil Liberties v. Union of India 97]. In some cases the right has been held to amalgam of various rights.

58. In Govind v. State of Madhya Pradesh and Anr., it was held:

"Assuming that the fundamental rights explicitly guaranteed to a citizen have penumbral zones and that the right to privacy is itself a fundamental right, that fundamental right must be subject to restriction on the basis of compelling public interest."

59. If there were a conflict between fundamental rights of two parties, that right which advances public morality would prevail. [See Mr. 'X' v. Hospital 'Z' (1998) 8 SCC 296 and Mr. 'X' v. Hospital 'Z' 02]. In R. Rajagopal v. State of Tamil Nadu and Ors. this Court upon formulating six principles, however, hastened to add that they are only broad principles and neither exhaustive nor all comprehending and indeed no such enunciation is possible or advisable.

60. In Govind v. State of Madhya Pradesh and Anr. (supra) it was held:

"28. The right to privacy in any event will necessarily have to go through a process of case- by-case development. Therefore, even assuming that the right to personal liberty, the right to move freely throughout the territory of India and the freedom of speech create an independent right of privacy as an emanation from them which one can characterize as a fundamental right, we do not think that the right is absolute."

76. The matter may be considered from another angle. In all such matrimonial cases where divorce is sought, say on the ground of impotency, schizophrenia...etc. normally without there being medical examination, it would be difficult to arrive at a conclusion as to whether the allegation made by his spouse against the other spouses seeking divorce on such a ground, is correct or not. In order to substantiate such allegation, the petitioner would always insist on medical examination. If respondent avoids such medical examination on the ground that it violates his/her right to privacy or for a matter right to personal liberty as enshrined under Article 21 of the Constitution of India, then it may in most of such cases become impossible to arrive at a conclusion. It may render the very grounds on which divorce is permissible nugatory. Therefore, when there is no right to privacy specifically conferred by Article 21 of the Constitution of India and with the extensive interpretation of the phrase "personal liberty" this right has been read into Article 21, it cannot be treated as absolute right. What is emphasized is that some limitations on this right have to be imposed and particularly where two competing interests clash. In mattes of aforesaid nature where the legislature has conferred a right upon his spouse to seek divorce on such grounds, it would be the right of that spouse which comes in conflict with the so-called right to privacy of the respondent. Thus the Court has to reconcile these competing interests by balancing the interests involved.

79. If despite an order passed by the Court, a person refuses to submit himself to such medical examination, a strong case for drawing an adverse inference would be made out Section 114 of the Indian Evidence Act also enables a Court to draw an adverse inference if the party does not produce the relevant evidences in his power an possession.

80. So viewed, the implicit power of a court to direct medical examination of a party to a matrimonial litigation in a case of this nature cannot beheld to be violative of one's right of privacy."

29. Thereafter, in Bhabani Prasad Jena Vs. Convenor Secretary, Orissa State Commission for Women, 2010 (8) SCC 633, Court considered the questions of right to privacy and when can a direction be given to hold a D.N.A. Test. The two judges Bench specifically dealt with the question regarding propriety of holding a D.N.A. Test in the light of the provisions contained in Section 112 of Indian Evidence Act. The following has been observed by the Court in paragraph 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23:

"15. In Goutam Kundu v. State of West Bengal and Anr.1, this Court was concerned with a matter arising out of maintenance for child claimed by the wife. The husband disputed the paternity of the child and prayed for blood group test of the child to prove that he was not the father of the child. This Court referred to Section 4 and Section 112 of the Evidence Act and also the decisions of English and American Courts and some authoritative texts including the following statement made in Rayden's Law and Practice in Divorce and Family Matters (1983), Vol. I, p. 1054 which reads thus:

"Medical Science is able to analyse the blood of individuals into definite groups; and by examining the blood of a given man and a child to determine whether the man could or could not be the father. Blood tests cannot show positively that any man is father, but they can show positively that a given man could or could not be the father. It is obviously the latter aspect that proves most valuable in determining paternity, that is, the exclusion aspect, for once it is determined that a man could not be the father, he is thereby automatically excluded from considerations of paternity. When a man is not the father of a child, it has been said that there is at least a 70 per cent chance that if blood tests are taken they will show positively he is not the father, and in some cases the chance is even higher; between two given men who have had sexual intercourse with the mother at the time of conception, both of whom undergo blood tests, it has likewise been said that there is a 90 per cent chance that the tests will show that one of them is not the father with the irresistible inference that the other is the father."

16. This Court then finally concluded, thus :

"(1) that courts in India cannot order blood test as a matter of course;

(2) wherever applications are made for such prayers in order to have roving inquiry, the prayer for blood test cannot be entertained.

(3) There must be a strong prima facie case in that the husband must establish non- access in order to dispel the presumption arising under Section 112 of the Evidence Act.

(4) The court must carefully examine as to what would be the consequence of ordering the blood test; whether it will have the effect of branding a child as a bastard and the mother as an unchaste woman.

(5) No one can be compelled to give sample of blood for analysis."

17. In Sharda v. Dharmpal, 2003 (4) SCC 493, a three-Judge Bench was concerned with the question whether a party to the divorce proceedings can be compelled to a medical examination. That case arose out of an application for divorce filed by the husband against the wife under Section 13(1)(iii) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. In other words, the husband claimed divorce on the ground that wife has been incurably of unsound mind or has been suffering from mental disorder. The Court observed,

"Goutam Kundu is, therefore, not an authority for the proposition that under no circumstances the Court can direct that blood tests be conducted. It, having regard to the future of the child, has, of course, sounded a note of caution as regards mechanical passing of such order. In some other jurisdictions, it has been held that such directions should ordinarily be made if it is in the interest of the child."

18. While dealing with the aspect as to whether subjecting a person to a medical test is violative of Article 21 of the Constitution of India, it was stated that the right to privacy in terms of Article 21 of the Constitution is not an absolute right. This Court summed up conclusions thus : (2003) 4 SCC 493 "

1. A matrimonial court has the power to order a person to undergo medical test.

2. Passing of such an order by the court would not be in violation of the right to personal liberty under Article 21 of the Indian Constitution.

3. However, the Court should exercise such a power if the applicant has a strong prima facie case and there is sufficient material before the Court. If despite the order of the court, the respondent refuses to submit himself to medical examination, the court will be entitled to draw an adverse inference against him."

19. In Banarsi Dass v. Teeku Dutta & Anr.3, this Court was concerned with a case arising out of succession certificate. The allegation was that Teeku Dutta was not the daughter of the deceased. An application was made to subject Teeku Dutta to DNA test. The High Court held that trial court being a testamentary court, the parties should be left to prove their respective cases on the basis of the evidence produced during trial, rather than creating evidence by directing DNA test. When the matter reached this Court, few decisions of this Court, particularly, Goutam Kundu1 was noticed and it was held that even the result of a genuine DNA test may not be enough to (2005) 4 SCC 449 escape from the conclusiveness of Section 112 of the Evidence Act like a case where a husband and wife were living together during the time of conception. This is what this Court said :

"13. We may remember that Section 112 of the Evidence Act was enacted at a time when the modern scientific advancements with deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) as well as ribonucleic acid (RNA) tests were not even in contemplation of the legislature. The result of a genuine DNA test is said to be scientifically accurate. But even that is not enough to escape from the conclusiveness of Section 112 of the Evidence Act e.g. if a husband and wife were living together during the time of conception but the DNA test revealed that the child was not born to the husband, the conclusiveness in law would remain irrebuttable. This may look hard from the point of view of the husband who would be compelled to bear the fatherhood of a child of which he may be innocent. But even in such a case the law leans in favour of the innocent child from being bastardised if his mother and her spouse were living together during the time of conception. Hence the question regarding the degree of proof of non-access for rebutting the conclusiveness must be answered in the light of what is meant by access or non-access as delineated above."

It was emphasized that DNA test is not to be directed as a matter of routine and only in deserving cases such a direction can be given.

20. Recently, in the case of Ramkanya Bai v. Bharatram4 decided by the Bench of which one of us, R.M. Lodha, J. was the member, the order of the High Court directing DNA of the child at the instance of the husband was set aside and it was held that the High Court was not justified in allowing the application for grant of DNA of the child on the ground that there will be possibility of reunion of the parties if such DNA was conducted and if it was found from the outcome of the DNA that the son was born out of the wedlock of the parties.

21. In a matter where paternity of a child is in issue before the court, the use of DNA is an extremely delicate and sensitive aspect. One view is that when modern science gives means of ascertaining the paternity of a child, there should not be any hesitation to use those means whenever the occasion requires. The other view is that the court must be reluctant in use of such scientific advances and tools which result in invasion of right to privacy of an individual and may not only be prejudicial to the rights of the parties but may have devastating effect on the child. Sometimes the result of such scientific test may bastardise an innocent child even though his mother and her spouse were living together during the time of conception.

22. In our view, when there is apparent conflict between the right to privacy of a person not to submit himself forcibly to medical examination and duty of the court to reach the truth, the court must exercise its discretion only after balancing the interests of the parties and on due consideration whether for a just decision in the matter, DNA is eminently needed. DNA in a matter relating to paternity of a child should not be directed by the court as a matter of course or in a routine manner, whenever such a request is made. The court has to consider diverse aspects including presumption under Section 112 of the Evidence Act; pros and cons of such order and the test of `eminent need' whether it is not possible for the court to reach the truth without use of such test.

23. There is no conflict in the two decisions of this Court, namely, Goutam Kundu1 and Sharda2 . In Goutam Kundu1 , it has been laid down that courts in India cannot order blood test as a matter of course and such prayers cannot be granted to have roving inquiry; there must be strong prima facie case and court must carefully examine as to what would be the consequence of ordering the blood test. In the case of Sharda while concluding that a matrimonial court has power to order a person to undergo a medical test, it was reiterated that the court should exercise such a power if the applicant has a strong prima facie case and there is sufficient material before the court. Obviously, therefore, any order for DNA can be given by the court only if a strong prima facie case is made out for such a course."

30. In Nandlal Wasudeo Badwaik Vs. Lata Nandlal Badwaik and another, 2014 (2) SCC 576, Court considered the question of presumption in the light in section 4, section 101 to 117 of Indian Evidence Act and also the propriety of holding D.N.A. Test to judge the legitimacy of a child. The following was observed by Court in paragraphs 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 :

"14. Now we have to consider as to whether the DNA test would be sufficient to hold that the appellant is not the biological father of respondent no. 2, in the face of what has been provided under Section 112 of the Evidence Act, which reads as follows:

"112. Birth during marriage, conclusive proof of legitimacy.-

The fact that any person was born during the continuance of a valid marriage between his mother and any man, or within two hundred and eighty days after its dissolution, the mother remaining unmarried, shall be conclusive proof that he is the legitimate son of that man, unless it can be shown that the parties to the marriage had no access to each other at any time when he could have been begotten."

From a plain reading of the aforesaid, it is evident that a child born during the continuance of a valid marriage shall be a conclusive proof that the child is a legitimate child of the man to whom the lady giving birth is married. The provision makes the legitimacy of the child to be a conclusive proof, if the conditions aforesaid are satisfied. It can be denied only if it is shown that the parties to the marriage have no access to each other at any time when the child could have been begotten.

15. Here, in the present case, the wife had pleaded that the husband had access to her and, in fact, the child was born in the said wedlock, but the husband had specifically pleaded that after his wife left the matrimonial home, she did not return and thereafter, he had no access to her. The wife has admitted that she had left the matrimonial home but again joined her husband. Unfortunately, none of the courts below have given any finding with regard to this plea of the husband that he had or had not any access to his wife at the time when the child could have been begotten.

16. As stated earlier, the DNA test is an accurate test and on that basis it is clear that the appellant is not the biological father of the girl- child. However, at the same time, the condition precedent for invocation of Section 112 of the Evidence Act has been established and no finding with regard to the plea of the husband that he had no access to his wife at the time when the child could have been begotten has been recorded. Admittedly, the child has been born during the continuance of a valid marriage. Therefore, the provisions of Section 112 of the Evidence Act conclusively prove that respondent No. 2 is the daughter of the appellant. At the same time, the DNA test reports, based on scientific analysis, in no uncertain terms suggest that the appellant is not the biological father. In such circumstance, which would give way to the other is a complex question posed before us.

17. We may remember that Section 112 of the Evidence Act was enacted at a time when the modern scientific advancement and DNA test were not even in contemplation of the Legislature. The result of DNA test is said to be scientifically accurate. Although Section 112 raises a presumption of conclusive proof on satisfaction of the conditions enumerated therein but the same is rebuttable. The presumption may afford legitimate means of arriving at an affirmative legal conclusion. While the truth or fact is known, in our opinion, there is no need or room for any presumption. Where there is evidence to the contrary, the presumption is rebuttable and must yield to proof. Interest of justice is best served by ascertaining the truth and the court should be furnished with the best available science and may not be left to bank upon presumptions, unless science has no answer to the facts in issue. In our opinion, when there is a conflict between a conclusive proof envisaged under law and a proof based on scientific advancement accepted by the world community to be correct, the latter must prevail over the former.

18. We must understand the distinction between a legal fiction and the presumption of a fact. Legal fiction assumes existence of a fact which may not really exist. However presumption of a fact depends on satisfaction of certain circumstances. Those circumstances logically would lead to the fact sought to be presumed. Section 112 of the Evidence Act does not create a legal fiction but provides for presumption."

31. From the aforesaid judgement of the Apex Court, it is clear that once the order for D.N.A. Test has been passed and D.N.A test has been conducted, the result of D.N.A. Test cannot be brushed aside. The same will have to be given effect to even if the circumstances justifying attraction of presumption as contemplated under section 112 of Indian Evidence Act exists. This judgement therefore, does not directly deal with the issue in hand.

32. Coming to the judgement relied upon by learned counsel for the plaintiff-appellant i.e. Dipanwita Roy Vs. Ronobroto Roy (Supra), Court considered the question of the presumption arising out under section 112 and the necessity of holding D.N.A. test. The Court Bench referred to the provisions of Section 112 and thereafter observed as follows in paragraphs 9, 10, 11, 13, 14, 15, 17, 18:

"9. Learned counsel for the appellant-wife, in the first instance, invited our attention to Section 112 of the Indian Evidence Act. The same is being extracted hereunder:

"112. Birth during marriage, conclusive proof of legitimacy- The fact that any person was born during the continuance of a valid marriage between his mother and any man, or within two hundred and eighty days after its dissolution, the mother remaining unmarried, shall be conclusive proof that he is the legitimate son of that man, unless it can be shown that the parties to the marriage had no access to each other at any time when he could have been begotten."

Based on the aforesaid provision, learned counsel for the appellant-wife drew our attention to decision rendered by the Privy Council in Karapaya Servai v. Mayandi, AIR 1934 PC 49, wherein it was held, that the word 'access' used in Section 112 of the Evidence Act, connoted only the existence of an opportunity for marital intercourse, and in case such an opportunity was shown to have existed during the subsistence of a valid marriage, the provision by a fiction of law, accepted the same as conclusive proof of the fact that the child born during the subsistence of the valid marriage, was a legitimate child. It was the submission of the learned counsel for the appellant-wife, that the determination of the Privy Council in Karapaya Servai's case(supra) was approved by this Court in Chilukuri Venkateshwarly vs. Chilukuri Venkatanarayana, 1954 SCR 424.

10. Learned counsel for the appellant-wife also invited our attention to a decision rendered by this Court in Goutam Kundu vs. State of West Bengal and another, (1993) 3 SCC 418, wherein this Court, inter alia, held as under:

"(1) That Courts in India cannot order blood test as a matter of course.

(2) Wherever applications are made for such prayers in order to have roving inquiry, the prayer for blood test cannot be entertained.

(3) There must be a strong prima facie case in that the husband must establish non-access in order to dispel the presumption arising under Section 112 of the Evidence Act.

(4) The Court must carefully examine as to what would be the consequence of ordering the blood test; whether it will have the effect of branding a child as a bastard and the mother as an unchaste woman.

(5) No one can be compelled to give samle of blood for analysis." Reliance was also placed on the decision rendered by this Court in Kamti Devi and another v. Poshi Ram, AIR 2001 SC 2226, wherefrom, the following observations made by this Court, were sought to be highlighted:

"9. But Section 112 itself provides an outlet to the party who wants to escape from the rigour of that conclusiveness. The said outlet is, if it can be shown that the parties had no access to each other at the time when the child could have been begotten the presumption could be rebutted. In other words, the party who wants to dislodge the conclusiveness has the burden to show a negative, not merely that he did not have the opportunity to approach his wife but that she too did not have the opportunity of approaching him during the relevant time. Normally, the rule of evidence in other instances is that the burden is on the party who asserts the positive, but in this instance the burden is cast on the party who pleads the negative. The raison d'etre is the legislative concern against illegitimatizing a child. It is a sublime public policy that children should not suffer social disability on account of the laches or lapses of parents.

10. We may remember that Section 112 of the Evidence Act was enacted at a time when the modern scientific advancements with Dioxy Nucleric Acid (DNA) as well as Ribonucleic Acid (RNA) tests were not even in contemplation of the legislature. The result of a genuine DNA test is said to be scientifically accurate. But even that is not enough to escape from the conclusiveness of Section 112 of the Act, e.g., if a husband and wife were living together during the time of conception but the DNA test revealed that the child was not born to the husband, the conclusiveness in law would remain unrebuttable. This may look hard from thepoint of view of the husband who would be compelled to bear the fatherhood of a child of which he may be innocent. But even in such a case the law leans in favour of the innocent child from being bastardized if his mother and her spouse were living together during the time of conception. Hence the question regarding the degree of proof of non-access for rebutting the conclusiveness must be answered in the light of what is meant by access or non-access as delineated above.

11.....Its corollary is that the burden of the plaintiff-husband should be higher than the standard of preponderance of probabilities. The standard of proof in such cases must at least be of a degree in between the two as to ensure that there was no possibility of the child being conceived through the plaintiff-husband. " (emphasis is ours)

11. Lastly, learned counsel for the appellant-wife, placed reliance on the decision rendered by this Court in Sham Lal @ Kuldeep vs. Sanjeev Kumar and others, (2009) 12 SCC 454, wherein it was inter alia, held as under:

"Once the validity of marriage is proved then there is strong presumption about the legitimacy of children born from that wedlock. The presumption can only be rebutted by a strong, clear, satisfying and conclusive evidence. The presumption cannot be displaced by mere balance of probabilities or any circumstance creating doubt. Even the evidence of adultery by wife which though amounts to very strong evidence, it, by itself, is not quite sufficient to repel this presumption and will not justify finding of illegitimacy if husband has had access. In the instant case, admittedly the plaintiff and Defendant 4 were born to D during the continuance of her valid marriage with B. Their marriage was in fact never dissolved. There is no evidence on record that B at any point of time did not have access to D." (emphasis is ours).

13. All the judgments relied upon by the learned counsel for the appellant were on the pointed subject of the legitimacy of the child born during the subsistence of a valid marriage. The question that arises for consideration in the present appeal, pertains to the alleged infidelity of the appellant-wife. It is not the husband's desire to prove the legitimacy or illegitimacy of the child born to the appellant. The purpose of the respondent is, to establish the ingredients of Section 13(1)(ii) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, namely, that after the solemnisation of the marriage of the appellant with the respondent, the appellant had voluntarily engaged in sexual intercourse, with a person other than the respondent. There can be no doubt, that the prayer made by the respondent for conducting a DNA test of the appellant's son as also of himself, was aimed at the alleged adulterous behaviour of the appellant. In the determination of the issue in hand, undoubtedly, the issue of legitimacy will also be incidentally involved. Therefore, insofar as the present controversy is concerned, Section 112 of the Indian Evidence Act would not strictly come into play.

14. A similar issue came to be adjudicated upon by this Court in

Bhabani Prasad Jena vs. Convenor Secretary, Orissa State Commission for Women and another, (2010) 8 SCC 633, wherein this Court held as under:

"21. In a matter where paternity of a child is in issue before the court, the use of DNA test is an extremely delicate and sensitive aspect. One view is that when modern science gives the means of ascertaining the paternity of a child, there should not be any hesitation to use those means whenever the occasion requires. The other view is that the court must be reluctant in the use of such scientific advances and tools which result in invasion of right to privacy of an individual and may not only be prejudicial to the rights of the parties but may have devastating effect on the child. Sometimes the result of such scientific test may bastardise an innocent child even though his mother and her spouse were living together during the time of conception.

22. In our view, when there is apparent conflict between the right to privacy of a person not to submit himself forcibly to medical examination and duty of the court to reach the truth, the court must exercise its discretion only after balancing the interests of the parties and on due consideration whether for a just decision in the matter, DNA test is eminently needed. DNA test in a matter relating to paternity of a child should not be directed by the court as a matter of course or in a routine manner, whenever such a request is made. The court has to consider diverse aspects including presumption under Section 112 of the Evidence Act; pros and cons of such order and the test of "eminent need" whether it is not possible for the court to reach the truth without use of such test.

23. There is no conflict in the two decisions of this ourt, namely, Goutam Kundu vs. State of West Bengal (1993) 3 SCC 418 and Sharda vs. Dharmpal (2003) 4 SCC 493. In Goutam Kundu, it has been laid down that courts in India cannot order blood test as a matter of course and such prayers cannot be granted to have roving inquiry; there must be strong prima facie case and the court must carefully examine as to what would be the consequence of ordering the blood test. In Sharda, while concluding that a matrimonial court has power to order a person to undergo a medical test, it was reiterated that the court should exercise such a power if the applicant has a strong prime facie case and there is sufficient material before the court. Obviously, therefore, any order for DNA test can be given by the court only if a strong prima facie case is made out for such a course.

24. Insofar as the present case is concerned, we have already held that the State Commission has no authority, competence or power to order DNA test. Looking to the nature of proceedings with which the High Court was concerned, it has to be held that the High Court exceeded its jurisdiction in passing the impugned order. Strangely, the High Court overlooked a very material aspect that the matrimonial dispute between the parties is already pending in the court of competent jurisdiction and all aspects concerning matrimonial dispute raised by the parties in that case shall be adjudicated and determined by that court. Should an issue arise before the matrimonial court concerning the paternity of the child, obviously that court will be competent to pass an appropriate order at the relevant time in accordance with law. In any view of the matter, it is not possible to sustain the order passed by the High Court. " (emphasis is ours)

It is therefore apparent, that despite the consequences of a DNA test, this Court has concluded, that it was permissible for a Court to permit the holding of a DNA test, if it was eminently needed, after balancing the interests of the parties.

15. Recently, the issue was again considered by this Court in Nandlal Wasudeo Badwaik vs. Lata Nandlal Badwaik and another, (2014) 2 SCC 576, wherein this Court held as under:

"15. Here, in the present case, the wife had pleaded that the husband had access to her and, in fact, the child was born in the said wedlock, but the husband had specifically pleaded that after his wife left the matrimonial home, she did not return and thereafter, he had no access to her. The wife has admitted that she had left the matrimonial home but again joined her husband. Unfortunately, none of the courts below have given any finding with regard to this plea of the husband that he had not any access to his wife at the time when the child could have been begotten.

16. As stated earlier, the DNA test is an accurate test and on that basis it is clear that the appellant is not the biological father of the girl child. However, at the same time, the condition precedent for invocation of Section 112 of the Evidence Act has been established and no finding with regard to the plea of the husband that he had no access to his wife at the time when the child could have been begotten has been recorded. Admittedly, the child has been born during the continuance of a valid marriage. Therefore, the provisions of Section 112 of the Evidence Act conclusively prove that Respondent 2 is the daughter of the appellant. At the same time, the DNA test reports, based on scientific analysis, in no uncertain terms suggest that the appellant is not the biological father. In such circumstances, which would give way to the other is a complex question posed before us.

17. We may remember that Section 112 of the Evidence Act was enacted at a time when the modern scientific advancement and DNA test were not even in contemplation of the legislature. The result of DNA test is said to be scientifically accurate. Although Section 112 raises a presumption of conclusive proof on satisfaction of the conditions enumerated therein but the same is rebuttable. The presumption may afford legitimate means of arriving at an affirmative legal conclusion. While the truth or fact is known, in our opinion, there is no need or room for any presumption. Where there is evidence to the contrary, the presumption is rebuttable and must yield to proof. The interest of justice is best served by ascertaining the truth and the court should be furnished with the best available science and may not be left to bank upon presumptions, unless science has no answer to the facts in issue. In our opinion, when there is a conflict between a conclusive proof envisaged under law and a proof based on scientific advancement accepted by the world community to be correct, the latter must prevail over the former.

18. We must understand the distinction between a legal fiction and the presumption of a fact. Legal fiction assumes existence of a fact which may not really exist. However, a presumption of a fact depends on satisfaction of certain circumstances. Those circumstances logically would lead to the fact sought to be presumed. Section 112 of the Evidence Act does not create a legal fiction but provides for presumption.

19. The husband's plea that he had no access to the wife when the child was begotten stands proved by the DNA test report and in the face of it, we cannot compel the appellant to bear the fatherhood of a child, when the scientific reports prove to the contrary. We are conscious that an innocent child may not be bastardised as the marriage between her mother and father was subsisting at the time of her birth, but in view of the DNA test reports and what we have observed above, we cannot forestall the consequence. It is denying the truth. "Truth must triumph" is the hallmark of justice." (emphasis is ours) This Court has therefore clearly opined, that proof based on a DNA test would be sufficient to dislodge, a presumption under Section 112 of the Indian Evidence Act.

16. It is borne from the decisions rendered by this Court in Bhabani Prasad Jena (supra), and Nandlal Wasudeo Badwaik (supra), that depending on the facts and circumstances of the case, it would be permissible for a Court to direct the holding of a DNA examination, to determine the veracity of the allegation(s), which constitute one of the grounds, on which the concerned party would either succeed or lose. There can be no dispute, that if the direction to hold such a test can be avoided, it should be so avoided. The reason, as already recorded in various judgments by this Court, is that the legitimacy of a child should not be put to peril.

17. The question that has to be answered in this case, is in respect of the alleged infidelity of the appellant-wife. The respondent-husband has made clear and categorical assertions in the petition filed by him under Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, alleging infidelity. He has gone to the extent of naming the person, who was the father of the male child born to the appellant-wife. It is in the process of substantiating his allegation of infidelity, that the respondent-husband had made an application before the Family Court for conducting a DNA test, which would establish whether or not, he had fathered the male child born to the appellant-wife. The respondent feels that it is only possible for him to substantiate the allegations levelled by him (of the appellant-wife's infidelity) through a DNA test. We agree with him. In our view, but for the DNA test, it would be impossible for the respondent-husband to establish and confirm the assertions made in the pleadings. We are therefore satisfied, that the direction issued by the High Court, as has been extracted hereinabove, was fully justified. DNA testing is the most legitimate and scientifically perfect means, which the husband could use, to establish his assertion of infidelity. This should simultaneously be taken as the most authentic, rightful and correct means also with the wife, for her to rebut the assertions made by the respondent-husband, and to establish that she had not been unfaithful, adulterous or disloyal. If the appellant-wife is right, she shall be proved to be so.

18. We would, however, while upholding the order passed by the High Court, consider it just and appropriate to record a caveat, giving the appellant-wife liberty to comply with or disregard the order passed by the High Court, requiring the holding of the DNA test. In case, she accepts the direction issued by the High Court, the DNA test will determine conclusively the veracity of accusation levelled by the respondent-husband, against her. In case, she declines to comply with the direction issued by the High Court, the allegation would be determined by the concerned Court, by drawing a presumption of the nature contemplated in Section 114 of the Indian Evidence Act, especially, in terms of illustration (h) thereof. Section 114 as also illustration (h), referred to above, are being extracted hereunder:

"114. Court may presume existence of certain facts - The Court may presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened, regard being had to the common course of natural events, human conduct and public and private business, in their relation to the facts of the particular case.

Illustration (h) - That if a man refuses to answer a question which he is not compelled to answer by law, the answer, if given, would be unfavourable to him."

*This course has been adopted to preserve the right of individual privacy to the extent possible. Of course, without sacrificing the cause of justice. By adopting the above course, the issue of infidelity alone would be determined, without expressly disturbing the presumption contemplated under Section 112 of the Indian Evidence Act. Even though, as already stated above, undoubtedly the issue of legitimacy would als*o be incidentally involved.

33. Thus from the law as discussed above, Court in Dipanwita Roy Vs. Ronobroto Roy, (Supra) relied upon by the learned counsel for the appellant is of no help as the aforesaid judgement is in respect of a case where infidelity of the spouse is sought to be established. From the perusal of plaint of divorse petition, we find that no such plea regarding infedility of spouse was pleaded and therefore, no benefit can be derived from the aforesaid judgement. The law laid down by the three judges Bench in the case of Sharda Vs. Dharampal (Supra) holds the field. The following conclusions were drawn by Court in the aforesaid judgement:

"1. A matrimonial court has the power to order a person to undergo medical test.

2. Passing of such an order by the Court would not be in violation of the right to personal liberty under Article 21 of the Indian Constitution.

3. However, the Court should exercise such a power if the applicant has a strong prima facie case and there is sufficient material before the Court. If despite the order of the court, the respondent refuses to submit himself to medical examination, the court will be entitled to draw an adverse inference against him."

34. Thus the point of determination No. 3 involved in the present appeal has to be decided in the light of the third conclusion drawn in Sharda Vs. Dharmpal (Supra). As already noted above, except for the two pathological reports, there is no other material relied upon by plaintiff-appellant, in support of his application (paper No. 42 Ga) for getting the D.N.A. test of the minor girl. Court below has disbelieved pathological report as plaintiff-appellant could not establish as to how the said reports were obtained by him. Apart from the aforesaid, we further find that there is no allegations of adultery against the defendant-respondent, on the basis of which, infidelity of spouse could be established. There is no pleading to the effect that during subsistence of marriage, plaintiff-appellant had never any access to the defendant-respondent, whereas, the testimony of D.W.1 the defendant-respondent and D.W. proves to the contrary. As such, the second point of determination, is answered against appellant.

35. So far as the third point of determination is concerned we find from the perusal of plaint that no such ground was pleaded in the plaint. Therefore, question that crops up for consideration is "whether a decree of reversal can be passed on a ground which was not the subject matter of adjudication before the Court below."

36. The issue relating to irretrievable break down of marriage has been considered by a Division Bench of this Court in First Appeal No. 525 of 2006 (Smt. Kavita Sharma Vs. Neeraj Sharma) decided on 7.2.2018, wherein it has been observed as follows in paragraph 28:-

"28. The above findings recorded by Court below could not be shown perverse or contrary to record. Having considered the fact that parties are living separately from decades, we are also of the view that marriage between two is irretrievable and has broken down completely. Irretrievable breakdown of marriage is not a ground for divorce under Act, 1955. But, where marriage is beyond repair on account of bitterness created by the acts of the husband or the wife or of both, Courts have always taken irretrievable breakdown of marriage as a very weighty circumstance amongst others necessitating severance of marital tie. A marriage which is dead for all purposes cannot be revived by the Court's verdict, if the parties are not willing. This is because marriage involves human sentiments and emotions and if they are dried-up there is hardly any chance of their springing back to life on account of artificial reunion created by the Court's decree. On the ground of irretrievable marriage, Courts have allowed decree of divorce and reference may be made to Naveen Kohli v. Neelu Kohli (2006) 4 SCC 558 and Rishikesh Sharma Vs. Saroj Sharma, 2006(12) SCALE 282. It is also noteworthy that in Naveen Kohli v. Neelu Kohli (supra) Court made recommendation to Union of India that Act, 1955 be amended to incorporate irretrievable breakdown of marriage as a ground for grant of divorce. "

37. Similarly this Court in First Appeal No. 792 of 2008 (Ashwani Kumar Kohli Vs. Smt. Anita) decided on 17.11.2016 has also considered this question and observed as follows in paragraphs 7, 8, 10, 11, 12 and 13:-

"7. Therefore, point for adjudication in this appeal is "whether a decree of reversal can be passed by granting divorce to the appellant on the ground which was not subject matter of adjudication before the Court below and is being raised for the first time in appeal".

8. Under the provisions of Act, 1955 there is no ground like any "irretrievable breakdown of marriage", justifying divorce. It is a doctrine laid down by judicial precedents, in particular, Supreme Court in exercise of powers under Article 142 of the Constitution has granted decree of divorce on the ground of irretrievable breakdown of marriage.

10. This aspect has been considered by this Court in Ram Babu Babeley Vs.

Smt. Sandhya AIR 2006 (All) 12 = 2006 AWC 183 and it has laid down certain inferences from various authorities of Supreme Court, which read as under:-

"(i) The irretrievable break down of marriage is not a ground for divorce by itself. But while scrutinizing the evidence on record to determine whether the grounds on which divorce is sought are made out, this circumstance can be taken into consideration as laid down by Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of Savitri Pandey v. prem Chand Pandey, (2002) 2 SCC 73 and V. Bhagat versus D. Bhagat, AIR 1994 SC 710.

(ii) No divorce can be granted on the ground of irretrievable break down of marriage if the party seeking divorce on this ground is himself or herself at fault for the above break down as laid down in the case of Chetan Dass Versus Kamla Devi, AIR 2001 SC 1709, Savitri Pandey v. prem Chand Pandey, (2002) 2 SCC 73 and Shyam Sunder Kohli v. Sushma Kohli, (2004) 7 SCC 747.

(iii) The decree of divorce on the ground that the marriage had been irretrievably broken down can be granted in those cases where both the parties have levelled such allegations against each other that the marriage appears to be practically dead and the parties can not live together as laid down in Chandra Kala Trivedi versus Dr. SP Trivedi, (1993) 4 SCC 232.

(iv)The decree of divorce on the ground that the marriage had been irretrievably broken down can be granted in those cases also where the conduct or averments of one party have been so much painful for the other party (who is not at fault) that he cannot be expected to live with the offending party as laid down in the cases of V. Bhagat versus D. Bhagat, (supra), Ramesh Chander versus Savitri, (1995) 2 SCC 7, Ashok Hurra versus Rupa Bipin Zaveri, 1997(3) AWC 1843 (SC), 1997(3) A.W.C. 1843(SC) and A. Jayachandra versus Aneel Kaur, (2005) 2 SCC 22.

(v) The power to grant divorce on the ground of irretrievable break down of marriage should be exercised with much care and caution in exceptional circumstances only in the interest of both the parties, as observed by Hon'ble Apex Court at paragraph No. 21 of the judgment in the case of V. Bhagat and Mrs. D. Bhagat, AIR (supra) and at para 12 in the case of Shyam Sunder Kohli versus Sushma Kohli, (supra)."

11. The above authorities have been followed by this Court in "Pradeep Kumar Vs. Smt. Vijay Lakshmi' in 2015 (4) ALJ 667 wherein one of us (Hon'ble Sudhir Agarwal, J.) was a member of the Bench.

12. In Vishnu Dutt Sharma Vs. Manju Sharma, (2009) 6 SCC 379, it was held that under Section 13 of Act 1955 there is no ground of irretrievable breakdown of marriage for granting decree of divorce. Court said that it cannot add such a ground to Section 13, as that would amount to amendment of Act, which is the function of legislature. It also referred to some judgments of Supreme Court in which dissolution of marriage was allowed on the ground of irretrievable breakdown but held that those judgments do not lay down any precedent. Supreme Court very categorically observed as under:-

"If we grant divorce on the ground of irretrievable breakdown, then we shall by judicial verdict be adding a clause to Section 13 of the Act to the effect that irretrievable breakdown of marriage is also a ground for divorce. In our opinion, this can only be done by the legislature and not by the Court. It is for the Parliament to enact or amend the law and not for the Court. Hence, we do not find force in the submission of learned counsel for the appellant."

13. The above view has been followed in Darshan Gupta Vs. Radhika Gupta (2013) 9 SCC 1. Similar view was expressed in "Gurubux Singh Vs. Harminder Kaur' (2010) 14 SCC 301. This Court also has followed the above view in Shailesh Kumari Vs. Amod Kumar Sachan 2016 (115) ALR 689."

38. In the case in hand, we find that the parties have not been living separately on account of their own free will. The record shows, it is the plaintiff-appellant, who has refused to keep defendant-respondent with him. The defendant-respondent has continuously and consistently pleaded that she wants to live with plaintiff-appellant. In this view of the matter, the argument raised by the learned counsel for the appellant that there has been an irretrievable break down of marriage has no factual foundation. That apart this Court in Ashwani Kumar Kohli (supra) has clearly held that the divorce cannot be granted on the aforesaid ground particularly when such a plea is raised by one party alone. In addition to the aforesaid, decree of divorce was not prayed for on the ground of irretrievable break down of marriage as the parties are alleged to have been living separately since 02.07.2004. The plaint was presented in the year 2004 whereas divorce petition was finally decided vide judgement dated 27.03.2012 and decree dated 10.04.2012 passed by the Principal Judge (Family Court), Varanasi in Petition No. 360 of 2004 (Rajesh Kumar Chaudhary Vs. Savita). For a period of eight long years, plaintiff-appellant kept quiet and now for the first time, this issue is being raised. We are of the considered opinion that in view of the discussion made herein above, plaintiff-appellant is estopped from raising this plea.

39. The defendant-respondent has filed an application in the year 2013 for payment of interim maintenance in terms of Section 24 of Act, 1955 during the pendency of the appeal. From the record, it appears that plaintiff-appellant was directed to pay a sum of Rs. 3,000/- to the defendant-respondent towards interim maintenance. However, payment of interim maintenance to the defendant-respondent came to an end with the passing of the final judgement and decree. So long as defendant-respondent continues to be the legally wedded wife of plaintiff-appellant the plaintiff-appellant, he has a legal as well as moral obligation to maintain her. There is nothing on record to show that the plaintiff-appellant has maintained his wife even subsequent to the judgement and decree passed by Court below. We accordingly allow the application for interim maintenance filed by defendant-respondent, i.e. Civil Misc. Application No. 28761 of 2013 and accordingly direct plaintiff-appellant to pay interim maintenance @ Rs. 5,000/- per month from April, 2012 till July 2019. The entire amount shall be deposited by plaintiff-appellant before Court below within a period of one month from the date of the judgement, failing which Court below shall proceed to recover the same.

40. No other point was pressed before us. Consequently, appeal fails and is therefore liable to be dismissed. It is accordingly dismissed with costs.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Sudhir Agarwal, J.
Hon'ble Rajeev Misra, J.)

1. This appeal under Section 19 of the Family Courts Act, 1984 (hereinafter referred to as Act of 1984) has been filed by the plaintiff (husband) assailing the judgment and decree dated 29.02.2012 passed by Principal Judge, Family Court, Agra in Divorce Petition No. 457 of 2004 whereby the suit of the plaintiff-appellant for divorce filed under Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 (hereinafter referred to as Act of 1955) has been dismissed.

2. We have heard Sri Swapnil Kumar, Advocate for plaintiff-appellant and Sri S. K. Purwar, learned counsel for the defendant-respondent.

3. From record it transpires that initially marriage of the appellant Anil Kumar Jain was solemnized with Smt. Nishi Jain on 12.04.1991. From aforesaid wedlock, two daughters namely Gazal Jain and Geetika Jain were born. Unfortunately, Smt. Nishi Jain, wife of the appellant, died on 12.04.1991. Accordingly, plaintiff-appellant performed his second marriage with the defendant Smt. Kalpana Jain on 14.11.1994. The aforesaid marriage was solemnized in accordance with Hindu Rites and Customs. It is the case of the appellant that after almost more than nine years of marriage, the defendant-wife deserted the appellant on 25.05.2004 and went to her paternal home, without disclosing the grounds for leaving the matrimonial home. The appellant thereafter filed Marriage Petition No.457 of 2004 (Sri Anil Kumar Jain Vs. Smt. Kalpana Jain) before the Family Court, Agra, for a decree of divorce on the ground of cruelty.

4. At this stage, the defendant-wife filed Misc. Case No. 155 of 2005 under Section 9 of the Hindu Marriage Act i.e regarding Restitution of Conjugal Rights. At this very juncture, the defendant-wife also initiated proceedings before the Rajasthan State Commission for Women in which the plaintiff-husband appeared. On 28.12.2005 the plaintiff-husband specifically stated before the Rajasthan State Commission for Women that he shall not keep the defendant-wife with him.

5. While the aforesaid Marriage Petition was pending, the defendant-wife filed Case No. 146 of 2007 (Smt. Kalpana Jain Vs. Anil Kumar Jain) under Sections 12, 18, 19, 20, 22 and 23 of the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005. However, the aforesaid case came to be dismissed vide order dated 08.03.2010.

6. Ultimately, Misc. Case No. 155 of 2005 (Kalyani Jain Vs. Anil Kumar Jain) for Restitution of Conjugal Rights was decreed by the Family Court, Kota Rajasthan vide judgement and decree dated 16.03.2011. Against the aforesaid judgement and decree, the plaintiff-husband has preferred Civil Misc. Appeal No. 2088 of 2006 (Anil Kumar Jain Vs. Kalpana Jain) before the Rajasthan High Court and the same is said to be pending.

7. The Court Below by means of the judgement and decree dated 29.02.2014 has dismissed the divorce Suit filed by the plaintiff-husband. Thus, feeling aggrieved by the aforesaid judgement and decree the plaintiff-husband has now approached this Court by means of the present Family Court Appeal.

8. The plaintiff-appellant filed Marriage Petition No. 457 of 2004 (Anil Kumar Jain Vs. Smt. Kalpana Jain) on the ground of cruelty. As per the allegations made in the divorce petition, it was alleged by the plaintiff-husband that though the plaintiff had performed all the marriage obligations towards his wife but the wife has failed to reciprocate the same. It was further alleged that after marriage the defendant-wife resided substantially at her parental home and spend very short time with the plaintiff at his home in Agra. The defendant-wife used to frequently leave her matrimonial home and went to her parental home at Kota, Rajasthan. It was also alleged that while the defendant resided with the plaintiff at Agra, her conduct towards the plaintiff was always full of harassment and cruelty, which amounted to commission of physical and mental cruelty upon the plaintiff-husband by the defendant-wife. It was also alleged that the defendant has refused to perform the daily house hold job on account of which the plaintiff and his two daughters have been deprived of the benefit of home cooked food and therefore of necessity they have to eat outside which in turn has a bad effect upon the health of the plaintiff and his two daughters. The defendant-wife does not behave cordially with the two daughters of the plaintiff born from the wedlock with the first wife. The defendant indulges into scuffle and exchange of hot words with the two daughters resulting in immense mental pain to the plaintiff. It was also alleged that repeatedly the plaintiff requested the defendant to modify her behavior but no heed was paid by the defendant to the same. To the contrary out of sheer revenge the conduct of the defendant became more outrageous and non-cooperative. She not only exchanged hot words with the plaintiff but also indulged in fight with the plaintiff, which shows her wrath towards the plaintiff and also her outrageous character. It was also alleged that the defendant-wife has deprived the plaintiff of conjugal relationship and inspite of repeated request the defendant-wife has failed to discharge her marriage obligations. Lastly, it was alleged that the defendant-wife has left the house of the plaintiff on 26.05.2004 without disclosing any reason to the plaintiff-husband and since then she is residing with her parents at Kota, Rajasthan.

9. The divorce petition filed by the plaintiff-appellant was contested by the defendant-wife. Accordingly, the defendant-wife filed a written statement denying the allegations made in the divorce petition. The defendant-wife clearly admitted that at the time of marriage the plaintiff-husband had categorically disclosed that his first wife has expired. He also disclosed that from the first wife, there are two daughters, who live with their Mama or Bua. It is proper for up bringing of the two minor daughters that the plaintiff is remarrying. The defendant-wife further stated that right from 14.11.1994 upto 24.04.2004 when the plaintiff-appellant kept the defendant-wife, she duly discharged her obligations as wife and mother of the two minor daughters. She took every step for the proper up bringing of the two daughters and performed daily routine work with sincerity. The defendant-wife in discharge of her obligations as the mother of the two minor daughters even gave up her parental home and used to visit her parental home only during the summer vacations but alongwith the two minor daughters. She also travelled to Agra and Bombay alongwith the two daughters. For ten years, it is the defendant- wife, who looked after the two minor daughters and when they have become major, the plaintiff has turned dishonest and he as well as his two daughters have started committing cruelty upon the defendant-wife. It was also alleged that whenever the plaintiff-appellant went out of Agra in connection with his business, it was the defendant-wife who looked after them and discharged the obligations of not only the mother but also of the father. The defendant-wife had never misbehaved with the plaintiff-appellant or his two daughters nor even committed any cruelty upon them. Had it been so then the plaintiff would have certainly not kept the defendant with him for ten long years. The plaintiff would not have placed the responsibility of the two minor daughters upon the defendant in case her conduct was as alleged by the plaintiff. To the contrary, it is the plaintiff who has committed cruelty upon the defendant as she has been used as long as the two daughters were minors and thereafter, she has been sought to be abandoned by ousting her from her matrimonial home. It was further stated that as long as the defendant resided with the plaintiff at Mumbai or Agra, she satisfied every demand of the plaintiff and her conduct towards the plaintiff and his two daughters was both amicable and cordial. The defendant further stated that the plaintiff had concealed the factum of his getting the family planning operation done and therefore, the charge alleged against the defendant that the defendant has filed to discharge marriage obligations is wholly incorrect. Lastly, it was stated that the defendant wants to reside with the plaintiff and for that purpose, she had instituted proceedings under Section 9 of Hindu Marriage Act, which had been decreed vide judement and decree dated 16.03.2011. The defendant is still ready to reside with the plaintiff.

10. The Court below on the basis of the pleadings of the parties framed the following three issues for adjudication:

(I) Whether the conduct of the defendant-wife towards the plaintiff-husband is cruel or the conduct of the plaintiff-husband towards the defendant-wife is cruel? If yes, its effect.

(II) Whether the plaintiff is entitled to the decree of divorce?

(III) Whether the plaintiff is entitled to any other relief? If yes, then what.

11. After the aforesaid issues were framed, the parties went to trial. The plaintiff in order to prove his case adduced himself as P.W.-1, his daughter Gazal as P.W.-2 and one Raju Prakash Jain as P.W.-3. The plaintiff further filed some documentary evidence in support of his case, the detail of which are mentioned in paragraph 7 of the impugned judgement.

12. The defendant-wife in order to establish her defence adduced herself as D.W.-1 and one Anil Kumar Jain as D.W.-2. The defendant-wife also filed documentary evidence to establish the document set up by her, the same is detailed in paragraph 8 of the impugned judgement.

13. The Court below considered issue no.1 in the light of the pleadings raised by the parties and the oral and documentary evidence adduced by them. While considering the aforesaid issue, the Court below framed an ancillary question as to whether the defendant-wife has been ousted from her matrimonial home for sufficient reason or the defendant-wife has herself left the matrimonial home. Upon evaluation of the same the Court below concluded that the plaintiff-husband has failed to establish cruelty on the part of the defendant-wife against the plaintiff and secondly, the defendant-wife has been ousted from her matrimonial home without any sufficient reason. As such the suit for divorce filed by the plaintiff-appellant was dismissed.

14. Mr. Swapnil Kumar, the learned counsel for the plaintiff-appellant has assailed the impugned judgement on the ground that the Court below has committed a manifest error of law in deciding the issue no.1 against the plaintiff. It is the submission of the learned counsel for the plaintiff-appellant that the allegations made in the divorce petition stood proved by the testimony of D.W.-2, Gazal. As such, the plaintiff-appellant is clearly entitled to the decree of divorce on the ground of cruelty as prayed for. He thus submits that the judgement and decree passed by the Court below are liable to be set aside on the suit of the plaintiff-appellant for divorce be decreed throughout.

15. Mr. S. K. Purwar, the learned counsel for the defendant-wife has supported the impugned judgement. He has referred to the facts relating to the proceedings initiated before the Rajasthan State Commission for Women and the decree passed under Section 9 of the Hindu Marriage Act in favour of the defendant-wife. It has further been argued that the marriage of the plaintiff-appellant was solemnized with the defendant-wife on 14.11.1994 whereas the suit for divorce has been filed on 22.07.2004 i.e. after more than 9 years of marriage. It was then urged that at the time of marriage the two daughters of the plaintiff-appellant namely Gazal Jain and Geetika Jain, who were born out of the wedlock from the first wife Smt. Nishi Jain, were minors and looked after by the defendant-wife. This is established from the fact that there is no pleading in the divorce petition as to who looked after the minor daughters in case the defendant-wife was absent from her matrimonial home at Agra and the plaintiff-appellant frequently left Agra in connection with his business.

16. Thus, the only question which has cropped up for consideration before us is whether the plaintiff-appellant was able to prove the case of cruelty and Court below has committed any error in disbelieving the case of appellant or not.

17. Before proceeding to consider the aforesaid question, it shall be appropriate to reproduce Section 13 of the Act of 1955, which provides for the grounds of divorce.

" 13 Divorce. --(1) Any marriage solemnized, whether before or after the commencement of this Act, may, on a petition presented by either the husband or the wife, be dissolved by a decree of divorce on the ground that the other party--

[(iii) that in a suit under section 18 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 (78 of 1956), or in a proceeding under section 125 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974) [or under the corresponding section 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (5 of 1898)], a decree or order, as the case may be, has been passed against the husband awarding maintenance to the wife notwithstanding that she was living apart and that since the passing of such decree or order, cohabitation between the parties has not been resumed for one year or upwards; or

[(iv) that her marriage (whether consummated or not) was solemnised before she attained the age of fifteen years and she has repudiated the marriage after attaining that age but before attaining the age of eighteen years.]

Explanation. --This clause applies whether the marriage was solemnised before or after the commencement of the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976 (68 of 1976).]

STATE AMENDMENT

Uttar Pradesh.-- In its application to Hindus domiciled in Uttar Pradesh and also when either party to the marriage was not at the time of marriage a Hindu domiciled in Uttar Pradesh, in section 13--

(i) in sub-section (1), after clause (i) insert (and shall be deemed always to have been inserted) the following

"(1-a) has persistently or repeatedly treated the petitioner with such cruelty as to cause a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the petitioner that it will be harmful or injurious for the petitioner to live with the other party; or", and

(ii) for clause (viii) (since repealed) substituted and deem always to have been so substituted for following.

" (viii) has not resumed cohabitation after the passing of a decree for judicial separation against that party and--

(a) a period of two years has elapsed since the passing of such decree, or

(b) the case is one of exceptional hardship to the petitioner or of exceptional depravity on the part of other party; or"."

18. Section 13 (i-a) of the Act of 1955 clearly provides that a decree of divorce can be granted in case after the solemnization of marriage, the petitioner has been treated with cruelty.

19. The term cruelty has been the subject matter of debate for long. A Division Bench of this Court in the case of Smt. Sarita Devi Vs. Sri Ashok Kumar Singh reported in 2018 (3) AWC 2328 has considered the question of cruelty in detail in paragraphs 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 27 and 29:-

"16. In Samar Ghosh vs. Jaya Ghosh (2007) 4 SCC 511 Court considered the concept of cruelty and referring to Oxford Dictionary defines 'cruelty' as 'the quality of being cruel; disposition of inflicting suffering; delight in or indifference to another's pain; mercilessness; hard-heartedness'.

17. In Black's Law Dictionary, 8th Edition, 2004, term "mental cruelty" has been defined as, "a ground for divorce, one spouse's course of conduct (not involving actual violence) that creates such anguish that it endangers the life, physical health, or mental health of the other spouse."

18. The concept of cruelty has been summarized in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol.13, 4th Edition Para 1269, as under:

"The general rule in all cases of cruelty is that the entire matrimonial relationship must be considered, and that rule is of special value when the cruelty consists not of violent acts but of injurious reproaches, complaints, accusations or taunts. In cases where no violence is averred, it is undesirable to consider judicial pronouncements with a view to creating certain categories of acts or conduct as having or lacking the nature or quality which renders them capable or incapable in all circumstances of amounting to cruelty; for it is the effect of the conduct rather than its nature which is of paramount importance in assessing a complaint of cruelty. Whether one spouse has been guilty of cruelty to the other is essentially a question of fact and previously decided cases have little, if any, value. The court should bear in mind the physical and mental condition of the parties as well as their social status, and should consider the impact of the personality and conduct of one spouse on the mind of the other, weighing all incidents and quarrels between the spouses from that point of view; further, the conduct alleged must be examined in the light of the complainant's capacity for endurance and the extent to which that capacity is known to the other spouse. Malevolent intention is not essential to cruelty but it is an important element where it exits."

19. In 24 American Jurisprudence 2d, the term "mental cruelty" has been defined as under:

"Mental Cruelty as a course of unprovoked conduct toward one's spouse which causes embarrassment, humiliation, and anguish so as to render the spouse's life miserable and unendurable. The plaintiff must show a course of conduct on the part of the defendant which so endangers the physical or mental health of the plaintiff as to render continued cohabitation unsafe or improper, although the plaintiff need not establish actual instances of physical abuse. "

20. One of the earliest decision considering "mental cruelty" we find is, N.G. Dastane v. S. Dastane (1975) 2 SCC 326, wherein Court has said:

"The enquiry therefore has to be whether the conduct charges as cruelty is of such a character as to cause in the mind of the petitioner a reasonable apprehension that it will be harmful or injurious for him to live with the respondent. "

21. In Sirajmohmedkhan Janmohamadkhan v. Haizunnisa Yasinkhan and Anr. (1981) 4 SCC 250 Court said that a concept of legal cruelty changes according to the changes and advancement of social concept and standards of living. With the advancement of our social conceptions, this feature has obtained legislative recognition, that a second marriage is a sufficient ground for separate residence and maintenance. Moreover, to establish legal cruelty, it is not necessary that physical violence should be used. Continuous ill-treatment, cessation of marital intercourse, studied neglect, indifference on the part of the husband, and an assertion on the part of the husband that the wife is unchaste are all factors which lead to mental or legal cruelty.

22. In Shobha Rani v. Madhukar Reddi, (1988) 1 SCC 105, Court observed that word 'cruelty' has not been defined in Act, 1955 but legislature, making it a ground for divorce under Section 13(1)(i)(a) of Act, 1955, has made it clear that conduct of party in treatment of other if amounts to cruelty actual, physical or mental or legal is a just reason for grant of divorce. Cruelty may be mental or physical, intentional or unintentional. If it is physical, it is a question of fact about degree. If it is mental, the enquiry must begin as to the nature of cruel treatment and then as to the impact of such treatment on the mind of the spouse. Whether it caused reasonable apprehension that it would be harmful or injurious to live with the other, ultimately, is a matter of inference to be drawn by taking into account the nature of conduct and its effect on the complaining spouse. There may, however, be cases where conduct complained of itself is bad enough and per se unlawful or illegal. Then the impact or injurious effect on the other spouse need not be enquired into or considered. In such cases, cruelty will be established if conduct itself is proved or admitted. The absence of intention should not make any difference in the case, if by ordinary sense in human affairs, the act complained of could otherwise be regarded as cruelty.

23. In V. Bhagat v. D. Bhagat (Mrs.), (1994) 1 SCC 337 considering the concept of "mental cruelty" in the context of Section 13(1)(i)(a) of Act, 1984, Court said that it can be defined as conduct which inflicts upon the other party such mental pain and suffering as would make it not possible for that party to live with other. In other words, mental cruelty must be of such a nature that the parties cannot reasonably be expected to live together. The situation must be such that the wronged party cannot reasonably be asked to put up with such conduct and continue to live with other party. It is not necessary to prove that mental cruelty is such as to cause injury to the health of other party. While arriving at such conclusion, regard must be had to the social status, educational level of parties, the society they move in, the possibility or otherwise of the parties ever living together in case they are already living apart and all other relevant facts and circumstances which it is neither possible nor desirable to set out exhaustively. What is cruelty in one case may not amount to cruelty in another case. It is thus has to be determined in each case having regard to the facts and circumstances of each case.

24. In Chetan Dass v. Kamla Devi, (2001) 4 SCC 250, Court observed that matrimonial matters relates to delicate human and emotional relationship. It demands mutual trust, regard, respect, love and affection with sufficient play for reasonable adjustments with spouse. The relationship has to conform to the social norms as well. There is no scope of applying the concept of "irretrievably broken marriage" as a straitjacket formula for grant of relief of divorce but it has to be considered in the backdrop of facts and circumstances of the case concerned.

25. In Savitri Pandey v. Prem Chandra Panadey, (2002) 2 SCC 73, Court held that mental cruelty is the conduct of other spouse which causes mental suffering or fear to matrimonial life of other. Cruelty postulates a treatment of party to marriage with such conduct as to cause a reasonable apprehension in his or her mind that it would be harmful or injurious to live with other party. Cruelty has to be distinguished from ordinary wear and tear of family life.

27. In Vinita Saxena v. Pankaj Pandit, (2006) 3 SCC 778 Court held that complaints and reproaches, sometimes of ordinary nature, may not be termed as 'cruelty' but their continuance or persistence over a period of time may do so which would depends on the facts of each case and have to be considered carefully by the Court concerned.

29. In Samar Ghosh vs. Jaya Ghosh (supra) Court said that though no uniform standard can be laid down but there are some instances which may constitute mental cruelty and the same are illustrated as under:

"(i) On consideration of complete matrimonial life of the parties, acute mental pain, agony and suffering as would not make possible for the parties to live with each other could come within the broad parameters of mental cruelty.

(ii) On comprehensive appraisal of the entire matrimonial life of the parties, it becomes abundantly clear that situation is such that the wronged party cannot reasonably be asked to put up with such conduct and continue to live with other party.

(iii) Mere coldness or lack of affection cannot amount to cruelty, frequent rudeness of language, petulance of manner, indifference and neglect may reach such a degree that it makes the married life for the other spouse absolutely intolerable.

(iv) Mental cruelty is a state of mind. The feeling of deep anguish, disappointment, frustration in one spouse caused by the conduct of other for a long time may lead to mental cruelty.

(v) A sustained course of abusive and humiliating treatment calculated to torture, discommode or render miserable life of the spouse.

(vi) Sustained unjustifiable conduct and behavior of one spouse actually affecting physical and mental health of the other spouse. The treatment complained of and the resultant danger or apprehension must be very grave, substantial and weighty.

(vii) Sustained reprehensible conduct, studied neglect, indifference or total departure from the normal standard of conjugal kindness causing injury to mental health or deriving sadistic pleasure can also amount to mental cruelty.

(viii) The conduct must be much more than jealousy, selfishness, possessiveness, which causes unhappiness and dissatisfaction and emotional upset may not be a ground for grant of divorce on the ground of mental cruelty.

(ix) Mere trivial irritations, quarrels, normal wear and tear of the married life which happens in day to day life would not be adequate for grant of divorce on the ground of mental cruelty.

(x) The married life should be reviewed as a whole and a few isolated instances over a period of years will not amount to cruelty. The ill-conduct must be persistent for a fairly lengthy period, where the relationship has deteriorated to an extent that because of the acts and behavior of a spouse, the wronged party finds it extremely difficult to live with the other party any longer, may amount to mental cruelty.

(xi) If a husband submits himself for an operation of sterilization without medical reasons and without the consent or knowledge of his wife and similarly if the wife undergoes vasectomy or abortion without medical reason or without the consent or knowledge of her husband, such an act of the spouse may lead to mental cruelty.

(xii) Unilateral decision of refusal to have intercourse for considerable period without there being any physical incapacity or valid reason may amount to mental cruelty.

(xiii) Unilateral decision of either husband or wife after marriage not to have child from the marriage may amount to cruelty.

(xiv) Where there has been a long period of continuous separation, it may fairly be concluded that the matrimonial bond is beyond repair. The marriage becomes a fiction though supported by a legal tie. By refusing to sever that tie, the law in such cases, does not serve the sanctity of marriage; on the contrary, it shows scant regard for the feelings and emotions of the parties. In such like situations, it may lead to mental cruelty."

20. With regard to mental cruelty reference be made to the judgement of the Apex Court in the case of A. Jaya Chandra Vs. Aneel Kaur, 2005 (2) SCC 22. The aforesaid judgement has also been considered by the Division Bench (supra) and the following has been observed in paragraph-26 of the judgement. The same is accordingly reproduced herein under.

"26. In A. Jayachandra v. Aneel Kaur, (2005) 2 SCC 22, Court observed that conduct of spouse, if established, an inference can legitimately be drawn that treatment of spouse is such that it causes an apprehension in the mind of other spouse, about his or her mental welfare then this conduct amounts to cruelty.

Court observed that when a petition for divorce on the ground of cruelty is considered, Court must bear in mind that the problems before it are those of human beings and psychological changes in a spouse's conduct have to be borne in mind before disposing of petition for divorce. Before a conduct can be called cruelty, it must touch a certain pitch of severity. Mere trivial irritations, quarrels between spouses, which happen in day-to-day married life, may also not amount to cruelty."

21. In K. Srinivas Rao Vs. D.A. Deepa (2013) 5 SCC 226, while dealing with the instances of mental cruelty, the court opined that to the illustrations given in the case of Samar Ghosh (supra) certain other illustrations could be added. We think it seemly to reproduce the observations:

"Making unfounded indecent defamatory allegations against the spouse or his or her relatives in the pleadings, filing of complaints or issuing notices or news items which may have adverse impact on the business prospect or the job of the spouse and filing repeated false complaints and cases in the court against the spouse would, in the facts of a case, amount to causing mental cruelty to the other spouse."

22. With the aid of the meaning of the term "physical cruelty" and "mental cruelty" this Court has now to examine as to whether the plaintiff-appellant was able to establish the same before the Court below and the findings recorded by the Court below are illegal, perverse and erroneous or not.

23. From the perusal of the impugned judgement, we find that the Court below has disbelieved the case set up by the plaintiff-appellant by assigning cogent reasons. The Court below concluded that the conduct of the plaintiff-appellant towards the defendant-respondent is inhuman and the defendant-respondent has been ousted from her matrimonial home deliberately by the plaintiff-appellant. Therefore, the case set up in the divorce petition that the defendant-respondent has herself left her matrimonial home was disbelieved by the Court below as the same was found to be false. In arriving at the aforesaid finding the Court below relied upon the statement of the plaintiff-appellant himself given before the Rajasthan State Commission for Women on 28.12.2005 that the plaintiff-appellant shall not keep the defendant-wife with him. Apart from the above, the Court below drew an adverse inference against the plaintiff-appellant that inspite of the fact that a decree of restitution of conjugal rights has been granted in favour of the defendant-respondent on 16.03.2011, yet inspite of the same the plaintiff-appellant has not honoured the same. This again goes to prove that the defendan-wife had not deserted the plaintiff' (husband) but that defendant-wife was ousted from her matrimonial home without any reason.

24. On the issue regarding the commission of physical and mental cruelty, the Court below concluded that the plaintiff-appellant has not given any specific instance of such act on the part of the defendant-respondent, which may constitute physical or mental cruelty. The plaintiff-appellant has only stated that physical and mental cruelty was exerted upon the plaintiff-appellant by the defendant-respondent by stating that the defendant-respondent refused to do house hold work and misbehaved with the two daughters of the plaintiff-appellant born from the first wife. The Court below concluded that this by itself does not amount to commission of cruelty by the defendant-respondent. As such the plaintiff-husband failed to established cruelty on the part of the defendant-wife.

25. With regard to the issue relating to the failure on the part of the defendant-respondent in not performing her marriage obligations, the Court below concluded that the plaintiff-appellant has not approached the Court with clean hands. The various evidences filed by the plaintiff-appellant himself clearly belies his case on the aforesaid issue and therefore, the said issue was decided against the plaintiff-appellant.

26. The Trial Court also considered the issue relating to the conduct of the defendant-respondent towards the two daughters of the plaintiff-appellant who were born from the first wife. After considering the entire pleadings and the evidence on record, the Court below concluded that the conduct of the defendant-respondent cannot be interpreted in such a manner that it has lead to the commission of physical and mental cruelty upon the plaintiff-appellant and his two daughters. To the contrary the conduct of deponent-respondent right from the date of her marriage up to the date of her ouster i.e. 25.05.2004 has been that of a pious and benevolent mother and for the welfare of the two daughters she has taken every step, which a woman of even ordinary prudence could take.

27. Mr. Swapnil Kumar, the learned counsel for the plaintiff-appellant has confined his submission that the issue of commission of cruelty by the defendant-respondent was fully established and therefore the judgement and decree passed by the Court below is liable to be set aside. According to the learned counsel for the plaintiff-appellant, the oral testimony of P.W.-2 Gazal Jain clearly proves the plaintiff's case.

28. We have accordingly gone through the testimony of P.W.-2, Gazal Jain and find that the same is not worthy of reliance. P.W.-2 is neither a credible nor a reliable witness. Firstly, her statement is tutored as is reflected from the statement in chief itself. She herself states that the oral testimony is being given by her as per the advice of the advocate. Secondly, the deliberate omissions in her statement regarding the date of various occurrences referred to in her statement and also the absence of material facts which could substantiate her statement make her statement wholly doubtful. For the aforesaid reasons, the Court below disbelieved the testimony of P.W.-2 Gazal Jain. We do not find any illegality in the view taken by the Trial Court to discard the testimony of P.W.-2.

29. Mr. Swapnil Kumar, the learned counsel for the plaintiff-appellant could not place before us any such other material on the basis of which the view taken by the Court below in not accepting the oral testimony of P.W.-2 could be faulted with.

30. Accordingly, we hold that the Court below did not commit any illegality in disbelieving the testimony of P.W.-2 and rightly dismiss the suit of the plaintiff-appellant for divorce. No other point was pressed before us.

31. In view of the discussion made herein above, the appeal fails and is therefore liable to be dismissed. It is accordingly dismissed with costs.

A. Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 - Section 12 -Divorce - Irretrievable breakdown of marriage.

Held:-Parties living separately for last 12 years - Court found that the marriage has virtually become a dead marriage - clear case of irretrievable breakdown - Also intention of the parties to go in for divorce - Wife had filed cases against the husband under Section 498-A IPC and Domestic Violence Act and under Section 125 Cr.P.C. and the husband had also undergone about two years of incarceration – Marriage between the parties was beyond repair - No fruitful purpose would be served by relegating the parties to the court below to file fresh petition for divorce under Section 13 of the Act, as more than 12 years has already passed – Alternative relief of divorce under Section 13 of the Act claimed before the Court granted. (Para 26 & 27)

Decree of divorce between the parties passed.

3. K. Srinivas Rao vs D.A. Deepa (2013) 5 SCC 226

(Delivered by Hon'ble Vivek Kumar Birla, J.)

1. Heard Sri Pratik Nagar, learned counsel appearing for the appellant in First Appeal No. 51 of 2012 (Smt. Bhavna Sharma vs. Sri Sanjeev Sharma) arising out of Original Suit No. 1168 of 2008 filed under Section 12 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 (hereinafter referred as the Act), for declaring the marriage as void on the ground of impotency of the defendant-respondent, who also appears for the defendant-respondent in the connected appeal and Sri Anurag Pathak, learned counsel for the appellant-plaintiff in the connected First Appeal No. 178 of 2012 (Sri Sanjeev Sharma Vs Smt. Bhavna Sharma) arising out of the Original Suit No. 88 of 2009 filed under Section 9 of the Act for restitution of conjugal rights, who also appears for the defendant-respondent in the leading appeal.

2. Both the original suits were consolidated and were dismissed by the lower court by a common judgment.

3. With the consent of parties First Appeal No. 51 of 2012 is taken as the leading appeal.

4. The marriage between the parties had taken place on 30.11.2007. An Original Suit No. 1168 of 2008 under Section 12 of the Act was filed by the wife on 22.11.2008, i.e. within one year of the marriage. The other suit being Original Suit No. 88 of 2009 under Section 9 of the Act was filed by the husband on 9.1.2009.

5. The trial Court framed six issues in O.S. No. 1168 of 2008 (Smt. Bhavna Sharma vs. Sri Sanjeev Sharma). The first issue was regarding impotency of the husband and its impact; second issue related to consummation of marriage between the parties; third issue was as to whether the marriage is liable to be declared as null and void, fourth issue was regarding relief to which the wife is entitled; fifth issue was as to whether the behaviour of opposite party (husband) was cruel towards the plaintiff (wife) and sixth issue was as to whether the opposite party has fraudulently represented himself as manager of a firm to marry the plaintiff (wife).

6. In evidence copy of affidavits and oral statements of Smt. Bhavna Sharma as P.W.-1, Sri Rajeev Kumar as P.W.-2, Sri Sanjeev Sharma as D.W.-1 and Smt. Sarita Sharma as D.W.-2 have been filed.

7. In O.S. No. 88 of 2009 (Sri Sanjeev Sharma vs. Smt. Bhavna Sharma) filed under Section 9 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, five issues were framed. First, whether the defendant is legally wedded wife of plaintiff; second, whether they are living separately without any reasonable cause, third, whether the proceedings of the case are liable to be stayed under Section 10 of C.P.C.; fourth, whether the sole plaintiff is entitled for restitution of conjugal rights; and fifth was regarding any other relief.

8. In evidence statements of witness produced on behalf of the plaintiff as P.W.-1 and statements of witness produced on behalf of defendant as D.W.-1 have been filed.

9. The issue nos. 1 and 2 of both the original suits were decided together.

10. The Trial Court recorded a categorical finding that the plaintiff-wife had failed to prove the impotency of the defendant-husband and in this regard only oral statement was made by her. Similarly, it was also recorded that she has also failed to prove the ground of cruelty. In O.S. No. 88 of 2009 it was found that the husband has also failed to prove his case and there is no cogent evidence on record to substantiate his case claiming restitution of conjugal rights as he has failed to prove his case.

11. At the very outset, Sri Pratik Nagar submits that he does not want to press the ground of impotency. However, he is pressing his alternative prayer for divorce under Section 13 (1) (i-a) of the Act and submits that the same is liable to be allowed. In other words, learned counsel for the appellant did not press his relief for declaring marriage null and void on the ground of impotency under Section 12 of the Act.

12. At this stage, Sri Harshit Pathak, learned counsel holding brief of Sri Anurag Pathak, learned counsel for the respondent-defendant in the leading case submitted that since the issue of impotency is no longer in dispute and therefore, the suit under Section 9 of the Act is liable to be allowed. He, further opposed the prayer for divorce on the ground that the wife has failed to prove her case of cruelty.

13. I have considered the rival submissions and perused the record.

14. In view of the statement made by Sri Pratik Nagar, the issue regarding impotency need not be gone into by this Court and thus, challenge to the impugned judgment to the extent of Section 12 of the Act stands rejected. Now, only alternative prayer for grant of divorce under Section 13 (1) (i-a) of the Act falls for consideration before this Court and the question before this Court is as to whether the same can be granted or not.

15. Admittedly, an agreement dated 19.8.2008 between the parties, paper no. 42C1, Annexure-1 to the affidavit, whereby the parties have agreed to take divorce and some amount was to be paid, was filed before the court below. I have perused the agreement as available on record of the lower court and I find that the same has been duly signed by both the parties as well as by five other witnesses. The affidavit and the agreement (paper no. 42C1) is quoted as under:-

16. Insofar as the relief regarding restitution of conjugal rights is concerned, on perusal of the document at page 146 of the appellants' paper book and annexure 1 thereof, which is an agreement entered into between the parties, and of the finding that has been returned at page 135 of the paper book by the trial Court that in their statement both the parties have admitted execution of the said agreement and they have agreed to divorce, I do not find any good ground to allow the OS No. 88 of 2004 and consider the prayer for restitution of conjugal rights. The agreement entered into between the parties outside the court clearly indicates that the defendant-respondent in the leading appeal has, in fact, agreed for divorce between the parties. Even otherwise, the court below on the said issue has also recorded a finding against the husband. On perusal of the evidence, I do not find any cogent reason to disagree with the findings recorded by the trial court.

17. Now the sole question remains before this Court is regarding the claim of divorce under Section 13 (1) (i-a) of the Act on the ground of cruelty. The same has been rejected on the ground that since the petition was filed by the wife within a period of one year from the date of marriage, therefore, the petition under Section 13 was not maintainable. Hence, no relief was granted to the wife.

18. It is not in dispute that both husband and wife are living separately for about 12 years. On the last date, on 17.7.2019 both the learned counsel agreed that the appeals be decided on merits. In this view of the matter, I am not inclined to relegate the parties to the court below for filing fresh petition under Section 13 of the Act. Moreso, in view of the settled law I find that it is a case where ground of irretrievable breakdown between the parties is liable to be considered and thus, prayer for the relief of divorce can be considered by this Court.

19. Learned counsel for the petitioner has placed reliance on judgments of the Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of Vinita Saxena Vs. Pankaj Pandit, (2006) 3 SCC 778; Sukhendu Das vs. Rita Mukherjee, (2017) 9 SCC 632; and K. Srinivas Rao vs. D.A. Deepa, (2013) 5 SCC 226 to contend that it is a case of mental cruelty and the appellant cannot be forced to stay in a dead marriage. He, thus, submits that no purpose would be served by compelling the parties to live together in the matrimony.

20. Paragraphs 41 and 49 of Vinita Saxena (supra) are quoted as under:

"41. The Division Bench in Rita Nijhawan v. Balkishan Nijhawan AIR 1973 Del 200 in AIR at p. 209, para 22 observed as follows:

"Marriage without sex in an anathema. Sex is the foundation of marriage and without a vigorous and harmonious sexual activity it would be impossible for any marriage to continue for long. It cannot be denied that the sexual activity in marriage has an extremely favourable influence on a woman's mind and body. The result being that if she does not get proper sexual satisfaction it will lead to depression and frustration. It has been said that the sexual relations when happy and harmonious vivifies woman's brain, develops her character and trebles her vitality. It must be recognised that nothing is more fatal to marriage than disappointments in sexual intercourse."

"49. The observation made by this Court in Shobha Rani vs. Madhukar Reddi (1988) 1 SCC 105: 1988 SCC (Cri) 60: AIR 1988 SC 121 can be reproduced to appreciate the facts and circumstances of the case on hand. It reads as follows:

"There has been a marked change in the life around us. In matrimonial duties and responsibilities in particular, there is a sea change. They are of varying degrees from house to house or person to person. Therefore, when a spouse makes complaint about the treatment of cruelty by the partner in life or relations, the court should not search for standard in life. A set of facts stigmatised as cruelty in one case may not be so in another case. The cruelty alleged may largely depend upon the type of life the parties are accustomed to or their economic and social conditions. It may also depend upon their culture and human values to which they attach importance. The judges and lawyers, therefore, should not import their own notions of life. Judges may not go in parallel with them. There may be a generation gap between the judges and the parties. It would better be if the judges keep aside their customs and manners. It would also be better if judges less depend upon precedents."

21. Paragraphs 7 and 8 of Sukhendu Das (supra) are quoted as under:

"7. The Respondent, who did not appear before the trial court after filing of written statement, did not respond to the request made by the High Court for personal appearance. In spite of service of Notice, the Respondent did not show any interest to appear in this Court also. This conduct of the Respondent by itself would indicate that she is not interested in living with the Appellant. Refusal to participate in proceeding for divorce and forcing the appellant to stay in a dead marriage would itself constitute mental cruelty (Samar Ghosh v. Jaya Ghosh (2007) 4 SCC 511). The High Court observed that no attempt was made by either of the parties to be posted at the same place. Without entering into the disputed facts of the case, we are of the opinion that there is no likelihood of the Appellant and the Respondent living together and for all practical purposes there is an irretrievable breakdown of the marriage.

8. This court in a series of judgments has exercised its inherent powers under Article 142 of the Constitution for dissolution of a marriage where the Court finds that the marriage is totally unworkable, emotionally dead, beyond salvage and has broken down irretrievably, even if the facts of the case do not provide a ground in law on which the divorce could be granted (Manish Goel v. Rohini Goel (2010) 4 SCC 393). Admittedly, the Appellant and the Respondent have been living separately for more than 17 years and it will not be possible for the parties to live together and there is no purpose in compelling the parties to live together in 1 (2007) 4 SCC 511 [para101 (xiv)] 2 (2010) 4 SCC 393 [para 11] matrimony (Rishikesh Sharma v. Saruoj Sharma (2007) 2 SCC 263). The daughter of the Appellant and the Respondent is aged about 24 years and her custody is not in issue before us. In the peculiar facts of this case and in order to do complete justice between the parties, we allow the Appeal in exercise of our power under Article 142 of the Constitution of India, 1950."

22. Paragraphs 30, 31 and 32 of K. Srinivas Rao (supra) are also quoted as under:

"30. It is also to be noted that the appellant husband and the respondent wife are staying apart from 27-4-1999. Thus, they are living separately for more than ten years. This separation has created an unbridgeable distance between the two. As held in Samar Ghosh v. Jaya Ghosh, (2007) 4 SCC 511, if we refuse to sever the tie, it may lead to mental cruelty."

"31. We are also satisfied that this marriage has irretrievably broken down. Irretrievable breakdown of marriage is not a ground for divorce under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. But, where marriage is beyond repair on account of bitterness created by the acts of the husband or the wife or of both, the courts have always taken irretrievable breakdown of marriage as a very weighty circumstance amongst other necessitating severance of marital tie. A marriage which is dead for all purposes cannot be revived by the court's verdict, if the parties are not willing. This is because marriage involves human sentiments and emotions and if they are dried up there is hardly any chance of their springing back to life on account of artificial reunion created by the court's decree.

"32. In V. Bhagat v. D. Bhagat, (1994) 1 SCC 337, this Court noted that divorce petition was pending for eight years and a good part of the lives of both the parties had been consumed in litigation, yet the end was not in sight. The facts were such that there was no question of reunion, the marriage having irretrievably broken down. While dissolving the marriage on the ground of mental cruelty this Court observed that:

"21. ... Irretrievable breakdown of the marriage is not a ground by itself. But, while scrutinising the evidence on record to determine whether the ground(s) alleged is/are made out and in determining the relief to be granted, the said circumstance can certainly be borne in mind."

23. To consider the prayer for grant of divorce I also would like to make a reference to the judgements rendered in the case of Naveen Kohli vs. Neelu Kohli, (2006) SCC 558 and Smt. Mamta Dubey vs. Rajesh Dubey, AIR 2009 Allahabad 141.

24. Paragraphs 57, 58, 59, 60, 66, 67, 72, 74, 75, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89 and 91 of Naveen Kohli (supra) are quoted as under:

"57. In Sandhya Rani v. Kalyanram Narayanan 1994 Supp (2) SCC 588 this Court reiterated and took the view that since the parties are living separately for the last more than three years, we have no doubt in our minds that the marriage between the parties has irretrievably broken down. There is no chance whatsoever of their coming together. Therefore, the Court granted the decree of divorce.

58. In the case of Chandrakala Menon v. Vipin Menon, reported in (1993) 2 SCC 6, the parties had been living separately for so many years. This Court came to the conclusion that there is no scope of settlement between them because, according to the observation of this Court, the marriage has irretrievably broken down and there is no chance of their coming together. This Court granted decree of divorce.

59. In the case of Kanchan Devi v. Promod Kumar Mittal, reported in (1996) 8 SCC 90, the parties were living separately for more than 10 years and the Court came to the conclusion that the marriage between the parties had to be irretrievably broken down and there was no possibility of reconciliation and therefore the Court directed that the marriage between the parties stands dissolved by a decree of divorce.

60. In Swati Verma v. Rajan Verma (2004), reported in (2004) 1 SCC 123, a large number of criminal cases had been filed by the petitioner against the respondent. This Court observed that the marriage between the parties had broken down irretrievably with a view to restore good relationship and to put a quietus to all litigations between the parties and not to leave any room for future litigation, so that they may live peacefully hereafter, and on the request of the parties, in exercise of the power vested in this Court under Article 142 of the Constitution of India, the Court allowed the application for divorce by mutual consent filed before it under Section 13-B of the Hindu Marriage Act and declared the marriage dissolved and granted decree of divorce by mutual consent.

66. Irretrievable breakdown of marriage is not a ground for divorce under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. Because of the change of circumstances and for covering a large number of cases where the marriages are virtually dead and unless this concept is pressed into services, the divorce cannot be granted. Ultimately, it is for the Legislature whether to include irretrievable breakdown of marriage as a ground of divorce or not but in our considered opinion the Legislature must consider irretrievable breakdown of marriage as a ground for grant of divorce under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.

67.The 71st Report of the Law Commission of India briefly dealt with the concept of Irretrievable breakdown of marriage. This Report was submitted to the Government on 7th April, 1978. We deem it appropriate to recapitulate the recommendation extensively. In this Report, it is mentioned that during last 20 years or so, and now it would around 50 years, a very important question has engaged the attention of lawyers, social scientists and men of affairs, namely, should the grant of divorce be based on the fault of the party, or should it be based on the breakdown of the marriage? The former is known as the matrimonial offence theory or fault theory. The latter has come to be known as the breakdown theory.

72. Once the parties have separated and the separation has continued for a sufficient length of time and one of them has presented a petition for divorce, it can well be presumed that the marriage has broken down. The court, no doubt, should seriously make an endeavour to reconcile the parties; yet, if it is found that the breakdown is irreparable, then divorce should not be withheld. The consequences of preservation in law of the unworkable marriage which has long ceased to be effective are bound to be a source of greater misery for the parties.

74. We have been principally impressed by the consideration that once the marriage has broken down beyond repair, it would be unrealistic for the law not to take notice of that fact, and it would be harmful to society and injurious to the interests of the parties. Where there has been a long period of continuous separation, it may fairly be surmised that the matrimonial bond is beyond repair. The marriage becomes a fiction, though supported by a legal tie. By refusing to sever that tie the law in such cases do not serve the sanctity of marriage; on the contrary, it shows scant regard for the feelings and emotions of the parties.

75. Public interest demands not only that the married status should, as far as possible, as long as possible, and whenever possible, be maintained, but where a marriage has been wrecked beyond the hope of salvage, public interest lies in the recognition of that fact.

83. Even at this stage, the respondent does not want divorce by mutual consent. From the analysis and evaluation of the entire evidence, it is clear that the respondent has resolved to live in agony only to make life a miserable hell for the appellant as well. This type of adamant and callous attitude, in the context of the facts of this case, leaves no manner of doubt in our mind that the respondent is bent upon treating the appellant with mental cruelty. It is abundantly clear that the marriage between the parties had broken down irretrievably and there is no chance of their coming together, or living together again.

84. The High Court ought to have appreciated that there is no acceptable way in which the parties can be compelled to resume life with the consort, nothing is gained by trying to keep the parties tied forever to a marriage that in fact has ceased to exist.

85. Undoubtedly, it is the obligation of the Court and all concerned that the marriage status should, as far as possible, as long as possible and whenever possible, be maintained, but when the marriage is totally dead, in that event, nothing is gained by trying to keep the parties tied forever to a marriage which in fact has ceased to exist. In the instant case, there has been total disappearance of emotional substratum in the marriage. The course which has been adopted by the High Court would encourage continuous bickering, perpetual bitterness and may lead to immorality.

86. In view of the fact that the parties have been living separately for more than 10 years and a very large number of aforementioned criminal and civil proceedings have been initiated by the respondent against the appellant and some proceedings have been initiated by the appellant against the respondent, the matrimonial bond between the parties is beyond repair. A marriage between the parties is only in name. The marriage has been wrecked beyond the hope of salvage, public interest and interest of all concerned lies in the recognition of the fact and to declare defunct de jure what is already defunct de facto. To keep the sham is obviously conducive to immorality and potentially more prejudicial to the public interest than a dissolution of the marriage bond.

87.The High Court ought to have visualized that preservation of such a marriage is totally unworkable which has ceased to be effective and would be greater source of misery for the parties.

88. The High Court ought to have considered that a human problem can be properly resolved by adopting a human approach. In the instant case, not to grant a decree of divorce would be disastrous for the parties. Otherwise, there may be a ray of hope for the parties that after a passage of time (after obtaining a decree of divorce) the parties may psychologically and emotionally settle down and start a new chapter in life.

89. In our considered view, looking to the peculiar facts of the case, the High Court was not justified in setting aside the order of the Trial Court. In our opinion, wisdom lies in accepting the pragmatic reality of life and take a decision which would ultimately be conducive in the interest of both the parties.

91. Before we part with this case, on the consideration of the totality of facts, this Court would like to recommend the Union of India to seriously consider bringing an amendment in the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 to incorporate irretrievable breakdown of marriage as a ground for the grant of divorce. A copy of this judgment be sent to the Secretary, Ministry of Law & Justice, Department of Legal Affairs, Government of India for taking appropriate steps."

25. Paragraphs 36 and 39 of Smt. Mamta Dubey (supra) are quoted as under:

"36. Upon an overall assessment of the facts and circumstances of the case and the perusal of record, we are of the opinion that the marriage between the plaintiff and the defendant has broken down irretrievably. The defendant-appellant is not willing to withdraw the criminal prosecution which is pending against the plaintiff and his family members. On account of the filing of the case under Section 498-A IPC by the defendant against the plaintiff and his family members, the plaintiff and his father were sent to jail and they had to remain there for a considerably long period of time before they were enlarged on bail. There has been no interaction between the parties after 1999. The parties admittedly have not cohabited for the last 13 years. The defendant has accused the plaintiff of having adulterous relationship with his female colleagues and Ms. Deepti Rawal and also made these allegations public thereby seriously damaging the plaintiff's reputation and undermining his character. A husband cannot be expected to live with his wife under the same roof who distrusts him, holds him responsible for the death of her daughters and who is prosecuting a criminal case against him and his entire family. Admittedly, there has been a long period of continuous separation in the present case and it may fairly be concluded that the matrimonial bond is beyond repair. Thus we are of the view that the marriage between the plaintiff and the defendant is dead in all respects and has broken down irretrievably.

39. The judgment and decree passed by the trial court does not call for any interference."

26. Learned counsel for the respondent though sought to support the case of the husband, however, could not dispute the fact that admittedly, both the parties are living separately for last about 12 years. On the last date husband, namely, Sri Sanjeev Sharma was present in the Court and on pointed query, this Court also found that the marriage has virtually become a dead marriage and there is a clear case of irretrievable breakdown. Apart from that, the agreement entered into between the parties, which is on record bearing the signature of the parties and is also not in dispute, clearly reflects the intention of the parties to go in for divorce. Apart from that admittedly, the plaintiff wife had filed cases against the defendant under Section 498-A IPC and Domestic Violence Act and under Section 125 Cr.P.C. and undisputedly, the defendant had also undergone about two years of incarceration.

27. Under such circumstances, I do not find any good ground to set aside the judgments passed by the court below impugned in the leading appeal filed under Section 12 of the Act, as well as in the connected appeal passed filed under Section 19 of the Act. However, in view of the law as discussed above, I find that it is a case of irretrievable breakdown of marriage, where marriage between the parties is beyond repair and is dead, and no fruitful purpose would be served by relegating the parties to the court below to file fresh petition for divorce under Section 13 of the Act, as more than 12 years has already passed and the alternative relief of divorce under Section 13 of the Act claimed before the Court is liable to be granted.

28. Accordingly, the relief claimed by the wife in alternative in O.S. No. 1168 of 2008 is granted and a decree of divorce between the parties is passed.

29. However, before parting with the appeal I would like to put this on record that on the last date, on 17.7.2019, in order to settle the dispute between the parties, when learned counsel for the appellant (wife) in leading appeal was pressing hard for grant of divorce, he was pointedly asked to seek instructions from his client (wife) if she is agreeable to forgo any kind of permanent alimony/compensation, as the defendant-respondent (husband) present in the court has narrated the pain of undergoing imprisonment for about 2 years in a case under Section 498-A IPC and stated that the plaintiff (wife) is well of, today learned counsel for the appellant Sri Pratik Nagar on instructions from his client (wife) stated that she is willing to forgo the same. I also find that, in fact, there is no such prayer also. There is yet another reason for the same i.e., a compromise had already taken place between the parties outside the court as mentioned above.

30. No other point was pressed.

31. For the discussions made hereinabove, the leading appeal being First Appeal No. 51 of 2012 (Smt. Bhavna Sharma vs. Sanjeev Sharma) stands partly allowed and a decree of divorce is granted under Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 and the connected appeal being First Appeal No. 178 of 2012 stands dismissed.

32. Ordered accordingly.

Crl. Misc. Writ Petition disposed of (E-6)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Pankaj Naqvi, J.
Hon'ble Umesh Kumar, J.)

Heard Sri V.P. Srivastava, the learned Senior Counsel assisted by Sri Sangam Lal Kesharwani for the petitioners and Sri A.N. Mulla, the learned A.G.A.

This writ petition challenges the order dated 25.4.2019, passed by the Addl. Sessions Judge / F.T.C.-I, Kushinagar at Padrauna, directing for registration of cases against the petitioners and the consequential FIR dated 28.4.2019 as Case Crime No.235/2019, under Sections 195/211/220/323/330/197 IPC, P.S. Taraya Sujan, Kushinagar.

1. Brief facts are as under:-

Petitioner no. 1, the Sub-Inspector, no. 2, the Investigating Officer and no. 3, the Constable of the P.S. concerned on 24.4.2019 allegedly recovered 1.9 kg. of ganja from accused Sarwan Yadav in Case Crime No.230/2019, under Section 8/20 of the N.D.P.S. Act, P.S. Taraya Sujan, Kushinagar. The accused was produced for remand before the Addl. Sessions Judge / F.T.C.-I, Kushinagar (Special Court) on 25.4.2019. The accused informed the court that he had been illegally detained for the last 4 days at the police station where he was subjected to physical torture and the alleged recovery is fake and planted. The medical report of the accused prepared by Dr. Sanjay Kumar, C.H.C., Tamkuhiganj did not indicate any pain or injury. The Special Court physically examined the injuries of the accused and found several injuries on his body and directed the C.M.O., Kushinagar to get the accused examined by a board of 2 doctors for fresh medical examination. The Board examined the accused and reported as many as 17 injuries. The Board opined that out of 17 injuries, injuries nos. 2, 7, 11, 12, 15, 16 & 17 are old, injuries nos. 1, 3, 4, 5, 8, 9 & 14 are 3-5 days old, injury no. 6 is a week old, injury no. 13 is an inflammatory lesion and injuries nos. 5 & 10 are hard blunt trauma. The court below on above materials, was of the view that prima facie the contention of the accused that he was subjected to physical torture in police custody, is made out and while refusing to grant further remand of the accused, directed for his immediate release on personal bond, imposed a penalty of Rs.1000/- each on the petitioners, which was directed to be paid to the accused after deduction from their salary with a simultaneous direction for prosecution against the petitioners under Section 195/211/220/323/330 IPC and under Section 197 IPC against the doctor concerned along with a direction to send a copy of the order to the authorities concerned. Pursuant thereto, respondent no.4 lodged the above FIR against the petitioners, i.e., the Sub-Inspector, the Investigating Officer, the Constable of the police station concerned and the doctor, (non-petitioner).

2. Sri Srivastava, the learned Senior Counsel for the petitioners challenged the correctness of the order dated 25.4.2019 and the FIR dated 24.5.2019 on the ground that Section 195(1) of the Code specifically prohibits that no court shall take cognizance except on a complaint in writing of that court or by any designated officer of the court in respect of the offences specified therein, thus both the order and the FIR are in teeth of the statutory prohibition, same are liable to be quashed.

3. Sri Mulla, the learned A.G.A. submits that it would be in the fitness of things if a direction is given to the complaint magistrate to treat the FIR as a complaint. He had already on the previous date, i.e., 13.5.2019 submitted that considering the nature of issue involved, he does not propose to file any counter affidavit, writ petition be disposed off on available materials.

4. Section 195 of the Code in so far is relevant is extracted hereunder:

195. Prosecution for contempt of lawful authority of public servants, for offences against public justice and for offences relating to documents given in evidence.

(1) No Court shall take cognizance-

(i) .....

(ii) .....

(iii) .....

(b) (i) of any offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code (45 of 1860), namely, sections 193 to 196 (both inclusive), 199, 200, 205 to 211 (both inclusive) and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, or

(ii) .....

except on the complaint in writing of that Court, or by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other court to which that court is subordinate.

5. The object of Section 195 is to safeguard against irresponsible and reckless prosecution by private individuals in respect of offences which relate to the administration of justice and contempt of lawful authority, i.e., where an act amounts to the offence of contempt of the lawful authority of public servants or to an offence against public justice, private prosecutions are barred and only the court in relation to which the offence was committed may initiate proceedings by way of complaint. Section 195(1)(b)(i) prohibits taking cognizance of the offences under Sections 193 to 196 IPC (both inclusive), 199, 200, 205 to 211 IPC (both inclusive) and 228 IPC when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to any proceeding in any court, except on the complaint in writing of that court or by such other designated officer of the court.

6. To attract the prohibition under Section 195(1)(b)(i) of the Code, it will have to be demonstrated that the alleged specified offences were either committed in the court or in relation to any proceeding in any court (emphasis ours). Admittedly, in the present case, no offence is alleged to have been committed in the court. But the issue is whether it can be said that the offences were committed in relation to any proceeding in any court. The term "any proceeding in any court" under Section 195(1)(b)(i) of the Code came to be examined by the Apex Court in M.L. Sethi vs. R.P. Kapoor and others, AIR 1967 SC 528, wherein it held in paragraphs 13 to 15 as under:

13. .....

When examining the question whether there is any proceeding in any Court, there are three situations that can be envisaged. One is that there may be no proceeding in any Court at all. The second is that a proceeding in a Court may actually be pending at the point of time when cognizance is sought to be taken of the offence under s. 211, I.P.C. The third is that, though there may be no proceeding pending in any Court in which, or in relation to which, the offence under s. 211, I.P.C., could have been committed, there may have been a proceeding which had already concluded and the offence under s. 211 may be alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, that proceeding. It seems to us that in both the latter two circumstances envisaged above, the bar to taking cognizance under s. 195(1)(b) would come into operation. If there be a proceeding actually pending in any Court and the offence under s. 211, I.P.C., is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, that proceeding, s. 195(1)(b) would clearly apply. Even if there be a case where there was, at one stage, a proceeding in any Court which may have concluded by the time the question of applying the provisions of s. 195(1)(b) arises, the bar under that provision would apply if it is alleged that the offence under s. 211 I.P.C., was committed in, or in relation to, that proceeding. The fact that the proceeding had concluded would be immaterial, because s. 195(1)(b) does not require that the proceeding in any Court must actually be pending at the time when the question of applying this bar arises.

14. In the first circumstance envisaged above, when there is no proceeding pending in any Court at all at the time when the applicability of s. 195(1)(b) has to be determined, nor has there been any earlier proceeding which may have been concluded, the provisions of this sub-section would not be attracted, because the language used in it requires that there must be a proceeding in some Court in, or in relation to, which the offence under s. 211, I.P.C. is alleged to have been committed. In such a case, a Magistrate would be competent to take cognizance of the offence under s. 211 I.P.C., if his jurisdiction is invoked in the manner laid down in s. 190 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

15. Mr. Frank Anthony on behalf of the appellant urged before us that even in those cases where there may be no pending proceeding in any Court, nor any proceeding which has already concluded in any Court, the bar of s. 195(1)(b) should be held to be applicable if it is found that subsequent proceeding in any Court is under contemplation. We do not think that the language of clause(b) of sub-s. (1) of s. 195 can justify any such interpretation. A proceeding in contemplation cannot be said to be a proceeding in a Court. When there is mere contemplation of starting a proceeding in future, there is no certainty that the proceeding will come into existence. It will always be dependent on the decision to be taken by the person who is contemplating that the proceeding be started; and any interpretation of the law, which will make the applicability dependent on a future decision to be taken by another person, would, in our opinion, be totally incorrect. The applicability of this provision at the sweet will of the person contemplating the proceeding will introduce an element of uncertainty in the applicability of the law; and such an interpretation must be avoided. In this case, apart from this circumstance, the language used clearly lends itself to the interpretation that the bar has been placed by the Legislature only in those cases where the offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding actually pending in any Court, or any proceeding which has already been taken in any Court. There is nothing in the language to indicate that the Legislature also intended to lay down this bar if a proceeding in a Court was still under contemplation and if and when that proceeding is taken, it may be found that the offence alleged to have been committed was, in fact, committed in, or in relation to, that proceeding. In this connection, the question of time when the applicability of this provision has to be determined, assumes importance. It appears to us that at the time when in the present case the Judicial Magistrate at Chandigarh had to determine the applicability of this bar, he could not be expected to come to a decision whether any proceeding in any Court was under contemplation in, or in relation to, which the offence under s. 211, I.P.C., of which he was asked to take cognizance, was alleged to have been committed. In fact, it would be laying on the Magistrate a burden which he could not be expected to discharge properly and judicially as no Magistrate could determine in advance of a proceeding in a Court whether the offence under s. 211, I.P.C., of which he is required to take cognizance, will be an offence which will be found subsequently to have been committed in relation to the contemplated proceeding to be taken thereafter. This interpretation, sought to be placed on this provision on behalf of the appellant, cannot, therefore, be accepted

7. The upshot of the above legal position is that there could be three contingencies which may arise under Section 195(1)(b)(i):-

(i).. where there is no proceeding pending at all,

(ii) where proceedings are pending,

(iii) where proceedings have been concluded.

8. The 1st contengency will not attract the prohibition but the 2nd and 3rd i.e., prosecution relating to specified offences therein would be maintainable only by way of a complaint. The Apex Court in paragraph -15 of the above judgment ruled out the applicability of prohibition in respect of a contemplated proceeding. But once contemplated proceeding is converted "into a proceeding", in a court, the statutory prohibition of Section 195 shall automatically come into operation. What is crucial for applicability of the prohibition under Section 195 of the Code is not the date when the alleged offence under specified offence is committed, rather it is the date on which a complaint / FIR is lodged.

9. Thus, it is immaterial as to when was the recovery effected in the present case. But once a proceeding has been initiated with request for remand in respect of an offence under the N.D.P.S. Act, the bar under Section 195 of the Code shall come into play as the offences under Sections 195/211/197 IPC are alleged to have been committed in relation to a proceeding under the N.D.P.S. Act, pending before the court.

10. The order dated 25.4.2019 does not specifically direct for lodging of an FIR, rather it directs for registering a case which could be interpreted both ways, i.e., FIR / complaint but the illegality crept in when the learned Judge after conducting a preliminary inquiry, instead of remitting the matter to the complaint magistrate as a complaint as envisaged under Section 340 Cr.P.C not only adjudicated the issue but also awarded penalty against the petitioners for an offence which was yet to be established in a court of competent jurisdiction, i.e., before the complaint magistrate, we precisely for these reasons, are not directing the FIR to be treated as complaint before the complaint magistrate.

11. How a prosecution in respect of specified offences under Section 195 of Cr.P.C would proceed, is provided under Section 340 Cr.P.C.

Section 340 of the Cr.P.C. Is extracted hereunder:-

340. Procedure in cases mentioned in section 195.

(1) When, upon an application made to it in this behalf or otherwise, any Court is of opinion that it is expedient in the interests of justice that an inquiry should be made into any offence referred to in clause (b) of sub- section (1) of section 195, which appears to have been committed in or in relation to a proceeding in that Court or, as the case may be, in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in that Court, such Court may, after such preliminary inquiry, if any, as it thinks necessary,-

(a) record a finding to that effect;

(b) make a complaint thereof in writing;

(c) send it to a Magistrate of the first class having jurisdiction;

(d) take sufficient security for the appearance of the accused before such Magistrate, or if the alleged offence is non- bailable and the Court thinks it necessary so to do, send the accused in custody to such Magistrate; and

(e) bind over any person to appear and give evidence before such Magistrate.

(2) The power conferred on a Court by sub- section (1) in respect of an offence may, in any case where that Court has neither made a complaint under sub- section (1) in respect of that offence nor rejected an application for the making of such complaint, be exercised by the Court to which such former Court is subordinate within the meaning of sub- section (4) of section 195.

(3) A complaint made under this section shall be signed,-

(a) where the Court making the complaint is a High Court, by such officer of the Court as the Court may appoint;

(b) in any other case, by the presiding officer of the Court.

(4) In this section," Court" has the same meaning as in section 195.

12. From the aforesaid, it is evident that if the court upon an application or otherwise finds it in the interest of justice that an inquiry in respect of offences mentioned in Section 195 of the Code is necessary, the court would make a preliminary inquiry and after such inquiry, record a finding to that effect and make a complaint in writing to the magistrate of 1st class having jurisdiction.

13. In view of above, this petition is disposed off with the following directions:

(i) The order dated 25.4.2019 and the consequential FIR dated 28.4.2019 as Case Crime No.235/2019, under Sections 195/211/220/323/330/197 IPC, P.S. Taraya Sujan, Kushinagar stand quashed.

(ii) The learned Special Court shall reduce the substance of accusation along with the relevant evidence and forward the same to the C.J.M. who shall treat the same as a complaint and endeavour to conclude the same as expeditiously as possible, preferably within 6 months, from the date of receipt of certified copy of the order, in accordance with law.

(iii) The complaint magistrate shall decide the complaint on its own merit, without being influenced by any observation on merits by us, as the same have been made only for a limited purpose.

(iv) Quashing of the order dated 25.4.2019 and its consequential FIR dated 28.4.2019 shall not adversely affect accused Sarwan Yadav in any manner but the disciplinary / departmental proceedings against the petitioners, if any, shall continue.

14. The O.S.D. (Criminal) is directed to immediately send a copy of this order to the court concerned and the Superintendent of Police concerned.

Compliance report be submitted by the complaint magistrate in the Chambers on 25.2.2020 at 4.00 PM.

A. Black Money Act, 2015 - Sections 50, 51- Undisclosed Foreign Income and Assets- challenge to-issuance of show cause notice, sanction order and complaints without giving opportunity of hearing to the petitioner before granting sanction and filing the impugned complaint- prima facie case is made out against the petitioner or that the petitioner deserves no relief claimed by him-The criminal proceedings can be quashed only in accordance with parameters laid down by Hon'ble Apex Court in catena of decisions-The present petition does not fall in any of such category, wherein, this Court can exercise jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India to quash the impugned notice and complaints.

B. As per prosecution manual it is not incumbent upon the office of Principal Director to grant opportunity hearing to petitioner. Further, grant of sanction is purely an administrative act and the department is not under the obligation to serve copy of the sanction on the petitioner and thus, no principle of judicial procedure has been violated. In view of the material on record it cannot be held that the impugned notice or criminal proceeding are manifestly attended with mala fide and maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge. 3. It has been argued by the learned counsel for the petitioner that the petitioner, who is a journalist and editor, has entered into Sale and Purchase Agreement dated 30.11.2015 with ST George Blackfriars Limited to purchase a property in London (foreign asset) against consideration of GBP 2,725,000/ and details of said property were duly disclosed in the Income Tax Return of petitioner and that source of payments, which were made to purchase the alleged property, were also disclosed. The petitioner has made first payment of GBP 10,000 & 262500 from his foreign account and second payment of GBP 272,500 was made from foreign account of his daughter Ms Tara Bahl and thereafter through assignment deed dated 01.11.2017 petitioner has assigned his interest in said property to RBRK Investment Limited. It was submitted that a search under Section 132(1) of Income Tax Act was conducted by Income Tax Authorities at the residence and office premises of the petitioner and certain documents were seized and thereafter Income Tax Officer issued a show-cause notice dated 02.11.2018 against Ms. Tara Bahl, daughter of the petitioner, under Section 276C of the Income Tax Act 1961 for Assessment Year 2017-18 and 2018-19 and under Section 50 and 51 of the Black Money (Undisclosed Foreign Income and Asset) and Imposition of Tax Act, 2015) and another notice dated 02.11.2018 was issued against petitioner under Section 276C of the Income Tax Act 1961 for Assessment Year 2018-19 and under Section 50 and 51 of the Black Money Act, 2015, which were duly replied by their authorized representative/ Chartered Accountant. Again show cause notice dated 22.11.18 issued by the Income Tax Officer, which was replied vide reply letter dated 28.11.2018. Similarly, the show cause notice dated 07.12.18 under Section 50 of the Black Money Act, 2015 issued to the petitioner for the Assessment Year 2017-18 was also replied by reply dated 12.12.2018.

It was stated that the Income Tax Officer vide Emails dated 01.05.2019 issued show-cause notice dated 01.05.2019 under Section 50 and 51 of the Black Money Act, 2015 against the petitioner for the Assessment year 2018-19, wherein it was alleged that the petitioner has under-reported total investment in his foreign Assets by GBP 2.73 lakhs and thereby, has wilfully attempted to evade tax and its reply was sought by 02.05.2019. The authorised representative/ CA of petitioner submitted that the information provided in show-cause notice dated 01.05.2019 is factually incorrect and that payments made by petitioner for London property have been duly and properly mentioned in Income Tax Return for Assessment Year 2018-19. The petitioner's representative has requested Income Tax Authority to adjourn the matter for a fortnight for submitting detailed response but that request was rejected by the Income Tax officer vide Emails dated 02.05.2019 and petitioner was directed to file factual reply/ submission of show-cause notice by 02.05.2019. Petitioner's authorized representative again requested for the grant of adjournment vide Email dated 11.05.2019 and thereafter authorized representative/CA Firm, has filed reply dated 13.05.2019 containing detailed submissions against the show-cause notice dated 01.05.2019 but the Respondent's Department has filed impugned criminal complaints on 03.05.2019 under Section 50 and 51 of Black Money Act, 2015 in the Court the Special Chief Judicial Magistrate, Meerut, against petitioner.

It was further submitted that no copy of any sanction has been provided to the petitioner and that respondents have denied opportunity of hearing to the petitioner before granting sanction and filing the impugned complaint as much as the third show-cause notice was issued on 01.05.2019 and complaint was filed on 03.05.2019 declining the request of petitioner to grant reasonable time to submit his submissions. If any Sanction order has been granted, it was passed without giving opportunity of personal hearing to the petitioner, who has specifically asked for it in its reply Emails dated 02.05.2019. The respondents have instituted the impugned complaints against the petitioner with intention to tarnish and harm his integrity and standing in public eyes and that the impugned complaints and sanction order do not fulfill the necessary ingredients of the alleged offence ie undisclosed foreign income and assets. It was stated that all the payments made in foreign bank account in connection with alleged property (foreign asset) were transferred from Indian legitimate bank accounts of petitioner and money transferred in foreign bank accounts was duly disclosed and that the petitioner has legitimate source of such income.

Learned counsel further argued that the necessary ingredients of Section 50 and 51 of Black Money Act, 2015 are not satisfied and that no prima facie case is made out against the petitioner. It has been submitted that all investment in London property were duly disclosed in Income Tax Return and there was no undisclosed foreign income or assets of the petitioner.

4. Sri Ashish Agrawal, learned counsel for respondents argued that as per the petitioner, he has made payment of GBP 145047 and GBP 28998.6 for London property on 11.06.2018 and 27.07.2018 and Ms. Ritu Kapur has made payments of GBP 72523.4 and GBP 43514.1 for the London property on 07.08.2018 and 29.10.2018 while the alleged assignment was made on 01.11.2017 and thus, payments for the alleged property were made by petitioner and Ms. Ritu Kapur after alleged assignment, which is contradictory to his later submissions and that petitioner has shown the London property as directly held asset in his ITR for Assessment Year 2018-19, that is after the purported assignment of the property to M/s RBRK Investments Ltd. It was pointed out that as per AY 2017-18 and 2018-19, total share holding of petitioner in M/s RBRK Investment Ltd is merely of Rs 200/ while of Ritu Kapur is Rs 2,51,16,284/. It was submitted that no details of RB Trust and Vidur Bahl having been allotted any shares has been submitted. It was stated that prosecution has been launched u/s 50 of Black Money Act for non disclosure of foreign bank accounts in the name of his minor son Vidur Bahl as there is no such disclosure in the ITRs of petitioner that any shares have been allotted to Vidur Bahl and that Prima facie, petitioner is owner of the said property and he has under-reported total investment till 31.03.2018 in London property.

So far as question of grant of sanction is concerned, it was submitted that Sanction order dated 02.05.19 has been passed considering the response submitted by the petitioner in response to show-cause notice dated 01.05.19. There is no obligation of serving the sanction order to the petitioner and that sanction orders were duly passed before instituting the prosecution in the Court. It was further submitted that the above stated assignment deed dated 01.11.2017 is not a registered document and thus, it has no evidentiary value. Further it does not even specify the consideration against which the assignment has been made and that the alleged assignment deed is an afterthought arrangement. It was further pointed out that the petitioner was not allotted any shares even by the month of January 2019 i.e. much after the search on the petitioner, for assigning his interest in the London property to M/s RBRK Investments Ltd. The petitioner was given sufficient opportunity to make his submission/ representation. The show-cause notice dated 01.05.2019 was issued before granting sanction for launching prosecution. However, as per prosecution manual it is not incumbent upon the office of Principal Director to grant opportunity hearing to petitioner. Further, grant of sanction is purely an administrative act and the department is not under the obligation to serve copy of the sanction on the petitioner and thus, no principle of judicial procedure has been violated.

5. Much thrust has been given to the argument that petitioner was denied opportunity of hearing before according sanction for launching prosecution of petitioner as much as the show-cause notice was issued on 01.05.2019 and complaint was filed on 03.05.2019 by declining the request of petitioner to grant reasonable time to submit his submissions and that the sanction order was also passed without giving opportunity of personal hearing to the petitioner, who has specifically asked for it in the reply E-mails dated 02.05.2019. In this regard it would be pertinent to mention that petitioner could not show any such legal or mandatory requirement that before according sanction or instituting such prosecution, an opportunity of hearing has to be given to the accused. Further, show cause notices dated 02.11.2018, 27.11.18 and 07.12.18 were issued to the petitioner to put his submissions.

In the case of Superintendent of Police (C.B.I.) Vs. Deepak Chaudhary, AIR 1996 SC 186, referred by the learned counsel for the respondents, accused respondent filed writ petition in the High Court seeking quashing of the order of sanction. One of the ground for challenge was that he not given an opportunity of hearing before granting sanction. The High Court accepted the contention and quashed the sanction order. Before the Hon'ble Apex Court, it was contended on behalf of the appellant that question of giving an opportunity to the charged officer before granting sanction does not arise since it is not a quasi judicial function but purely an administrative function. This argument was accepted by the Hon'ble Apex Court and it was held as under :

"We find force in the contention. The grant of sanction is only an administrative function, though it is true that the accused may be saddled with the liability to be prosecuted in a Court of law. What is material at that time is that the necessary facts collected during investigation constituting the offence have to be placed before the sanctioning authority and it has to consider the material. Prima-facie, the authority is enquired to reach the satisfaction that the relevant facts would constitute the offence and then either grant or refuse to grant sanction. The grant of sanction, therefore, being administrative act the need to provide an opportunity of hearing the accused before according sanction does not arise. The High Court, therefore, was clearly in error in holding that the order of sanction is vitiated by violation of the principles of natural justice."

In case of Union of India Vs W.N. Chadha, AIR 1993 SC 1082 after registration of the case against the accused, the Director, CBI requested the authority in Switzerland for freezing/blocking certain bank accounts of the accused which had relevency in the investigation of the case whereupon Federal Department of Justice and Police in Switzerland made an application before the concerned court which vide order dated 29.1.1990 froze the said bank account and further directed that the account shall remain frozen till 28 February, 1990 and further necessary assistance would be rendered only on receipt of the letter rogatory from a competent judicial authority in India. In response thereto, the C.B.I. approached the Special Judge, Delhi to issue a letter rogatory/request to Switzerland for getting the necessary investigation, which was allowed vide order dated 05.02.1990. In the meantime, certain public interest litigation was filed and the matter travelled up to the Hon'ble Apex Court. Detail facts and orders passed in those cases have no relevance to the controversy herein. What is relevant to mention here is that one of the accused W.N. Chadha filed a criminal writ petition before the High Court of Delhi challenging the legality and validity of the first information report and also the letter rogatory issued by the Special Court. The High Court allowed the writ petition and quashed the first information report as well as letter rogatory issued on two occasions and other proceedings. The issue was taken to the Hon'ble Apex Court by way of Special Leave Petition. One of the issue raised before Hon'ble Apex Court was whether the letter rogatory issued without hearing the accused is violative of principle of natural justice and thereby has become liable to be quashed. While considering the said issue, it was observed in paragraph 80 & 81 as under :

"80. The rule of audi alteram partem is a rule of justice and its application is excluded where the rule will itself lead to injustice. In A.S. de Smith's Judicial Review of Administrative Action, 4th Ed. at page 184, it is stated that in administrative law, a prima facie right to prior notice and opportunity to be heard may be held to be excluded by implication in the presence of some factors, singly or in combination with another. Those special factors are mentioned under items (1) to (10) under the heading "Exclusion of the audi alteram partem rule". 81. Thus, there is exclusion of the application of audi alteram partem rule to cases where nothing unfair can be inferred by not affording an opportunity to present and meet a case. This rule cannot be applied to defeat the ends of justice or to make the law 'lifeless; absurd, stultifying and self-defeating or plainly contrary to the common sense of the situation' and this rule may be jettisoned in very exceptional circumstances where compulsive necessity so demands."

The Apex Court in the case of State of M.P. Vs. Dr. Krishna Chandra Saksena, reported in (1996) 11 SCC 439, relied by learned counsel for the respondents, held that at the stage of granting of sanction, accused need not be heard. Para 8 of the said judgment is as follows :

"8. On a careful consideration of the rival contentions it is found that the learned Single Judge had ex fade erred in interfering with the criminal proceedings at the stage of filing a challan after investigation which was backed up by relevant sanction. It is now well settled that interference under Section 482 Cr.PC for quashing a criminal proceeding should be done very sparingly and in exceptional cases. In the case of State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal it has been laid down by a two member Bench of this Court speaking through S. Ratnavel Pandian, J., that the power of quashing a criminal proceeding should be exercised very sparingly and with circumspection and that too in the rarest of rare cases. The extraordinary or inherent powers do not confer an arbitrary jurisdiction on the High Courts to act according to its whim or caprice. The court will not be justified in embarking upon an enquiry as to the reliability or genuineness or otherwise of the allegations made in the FIR or the complaint. It has also been laid down by way of illustration as to under what circumstances the High Court can be justified in interfering with the criminal proceedings under Article 226 of the Constitution of India or Section 482 Cr.PC."

The case of Zenit Mataplast Private Ltd Vs State of Maharashtra (2009)10 SCC 388, relied by the learned counsel for the petitioner, does not address the issue involved in the present case. That case does not assist the appellant, since the facts and issue involved therein differ materially from those in present case. In the instant case, it is correct that prior of granting sanction, the show-cause notice was issued on 01.05.2019 and complaint was filed on 03.05.2019 by declining the request of petitioner for grant of more time to submit his submissions but from the above stated position of law it is quite apparent that grant of sanction is an administrative act and there is no requirement to provide an opportunity of hearing to the accused before according sanction. Once there was no requirement of affording an opportunity of hearing to the petitioner before grant of sanction, it would not make any difference that the request of petitioner for granting more time to submit reply in pursuance of notice dated 01.05.19 was declined.

In view of aforesaid legal position, no fault can be found with the alleged notice dated 01.05.19 or with grant of sanction. The complaint or proceeding thereof are not vitiated on ground that no opportunity of hearing was granted to the petitioner before according sanction or before instituting the complaint. The contention raised in this regard by the learned counsel for the petitioner has no substance.

6. So far the argument that alleged property in London can not be termed as "undisclosed foreign income and assets" and that necessary ingredients of Section 50 and 51 of Black Money Act, 2015 are not satisfied and that no prima facie case is made out against the petitioner, is concerned, in view of allegations made against petitioner and material on record, it can not be said that prima facie no case is made out against the petitioner. There are allegations against the petitioner that alleged payment of GBP 145047 and GBP 28998.6 for property in question were made on 11.06.2018 and 27.07.2018 and Ms. Ritu Kapur has made payments of GBP 72523.4 and GBP 43514.1 on 07.08.2018 and 29.10.2018 while the alleged assignment was made on 01.11.2017 and thus, payments for the alleged property were made by petitioner and Ms. Ritu Kapur after alleged assignment, which is contradictory with the version of petitioner. No terms, conditions and consideration have been mentioned in the alleged assignment nor petitioner has provided share transfer deed of RBRK Investment. Further, petitioner has shown the London property as directly held asset in his ITR for Assessment Year 2018-19, that is after the purported assignment of the property to M/s RBRK Investments Ltd. Alleged Assignment deed was not registered and even as per petitioner, he was assigned shares of M/s RBRK Investments Ltd only in month of February 2019 and thus, as per the respondents, alleged assignment deed was afterthought. As per AY 2017-18 and 2018-19, total share holding of petitioner in M/s RBRK Investment Ltd is merely of Rs 200/ while of Ritu Kapur is Rs 2,51,16,284/. The account in name of his minor son, was not disclosed by the petitioner in return of income for 2017-18. No details of RB Trust and Vidur Bahl having been allotted any shares, were provided. Further, as per respondents, the prosecution has been launched u/s 50 of Black Money Act for non disclosure of foreign bank accounts in the name of his minor son Vidur Bahl as there is no such disclosure in the ITRs of petitioner and that there is nothing to show that any shares have been allotted to Vidur Bahl. As per respondent, Prima facie, petitioner is owner of the said property and he has under-reported total investment till 31.03.2018 in London property, which falls within the ambit of section 51 of Black Money Act 2015.

7. Recently in case of Srinidhi Karti Chidambaram vs The Principal Chief Commissioner decided on 2 November, 2018, (W.A.Nos.1125 to 1128, 1130 & 1131 of 2018, W.P.Nos.13005 to 13007, 13008 to 13010, 13070 to 13072, 13041 to 13043, 11714, 11715 & 22329 to 22331 & 22333 of 2018 and Rev.Appl.Nos.79 to 82 of 2018 and Connected WMPs, CMPs and MPs), Hon'ble Madras High Court had an occasion to consider the provisions of Black Money Act 2015 and it was held as under:

"The object of the Black Money (Undisclosed Foreign Income and Assets) and Imposition of Tax Act, 2015 (BMA 2015 for short) is not only assessment of total disclosed foreign asset and income of an assessee but also mandates true and full disclosure of such foreign asset or income to be disclosed voluntarily by a resident assessee in the return of income filed by him under the Income Tax Act, 1961. Failure of such assessee to furnish return of income under s.139(1) attracts prosecution under s.49 of BMA, 2015; Failure to disclose fully and truly by such assessee details of foreign assets and income in a return of income filed under s.139(1) attracts prosecution under s.50 of BMA 2015 and attempts in any manner to evade tax, penalty that proceedings should be initiated and completed U/s 10 of the BMA before invoking the provisions of Chapter of V particularly Section 50 read with Section 55 is not tenable. Section 10 deals with assessment of undisclosed foreign income and asset. As per section 2(11), undisclosed asset located outside India means an asset held by the assessee in his name or in respect of which he is a beneficial owner, and he has no explanation about the source of Investment in such asset or the explanation given by him is in the opinion of the Assessing Officer unsatisfactory. The provisions of Section 50 (falling under chapter V) are attracted for failure to furnish in a return of income filed any information about an asset (including financial interest in any entity) located outside India. Thus it can be seen the proceedings under s 10 and proceedings under 5.50 are separate and distinct. It is pertinent to point out here that even assuming that the assessee has provided explanation to the satisfaction of the A.0, regarding the source of investment of asset located outside India, still prosecution under s.50 is attracted for failure to furnish any information of asset located outside India in return of Income filed in the prescribed form setting forth such details in the prescribed manner. It therefore follows that the process of sanctioning prosecution can commence even before completion of assessment U/s 10(3) of the BMA, 2015. The scheme of the Act makes It clear that assessment and prosecution are not only distinct and separate but the two proceedings are independent and irrespective of the outcome of the assessment under s.10(3) of the BMA, 2015. Besides, it has been held by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in P.Jeyappan Vs S.K. PERUMAL, 1984 AIR 1693 that the pendency of assessment proceedings cannot act as a bar to institution of criminal prosecution for offences punishable under the provisions of law".

8. In the instant case on a careful consideration of the aforesaid facts and circumstances of the case and the provisions of law, we are satisfied that there exists a prima facie case to initiate prosecution against the petitioner for the offence in terms of section 50, 51 of the Black Money Act, 2015 and it could not be said that a prima facie case is not made out against the petitioner. The legal position on the issue of quashing of criminal proceedings is well-settled that the jurisdiction to quash a complaint, FIR or a charge-sheet should be exercised sparingly and only in exceptional cases and Courts should not ordinarily interfere with the investigations of cognizable offences. However, where the allegations made in the FIR or the complaint even if taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out a case against the accused, the FIR or the charge-sheet may be quashed in exercise of powers under Article 226 or inherent powers under Section 482 of the Cr.P.C. In the well celebrated judgment reported in AIR 1992 SC 605 State of Haryana and others Vs. Ch. Bhajan Lal, also referred by learned counsel for the petitioner, Hon'ble Supreme Court has carved out certain guidelines, wherein proceedings can be quashed but cautioned that those guidelines should be exercised sparingly and that too in the rarest of rare cases. Guidelines are as follows:

(1) Where the allegations made in the First Information Report or the complaint, even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety to do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out a case against the accused.

(2) Where the allegations in the First Information Report and other materials, if any, accompanying the FIR do not disclose a cognizable offence, justifying an investigation by police officers under Section 156(1) of the Code except under an order of a Magistrate within the purview of Section 156(2) of the Code.

(3) Where the uncontroverted allegations made in the FIR or complaint and the evidence collected in support of the same do not disclose the commission of any offence and make out a case against the accused.

(4) Where, the allegations in the FIR do not constitute a cognizable offence but constitute only a non-cognizable offence, no investigation is permitted by a police officer without an order of a Magistrate as contemplated under Section 155(2) of the Code.

(5) Where the allegations made in the FIR or complaint are so absurd and inherently improbable on the basis of which no prudent person can every reach a just conclusion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused.

(6) Where there is an express legal bar engrafted in any of the provisions of the Code or the concerned Act (under which a criminal proceeding is instituted) to the institution and continuance of the proceedings and/or where there is a specific provision in the Code or the concerned Act, providing efficacious redress for the grievance of the aggrieved party.

(7) Where a criminal proceeding is manifestly attended with mala fide and/or where the proceeding is maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge."

9. The issue has been reconsidered by the Supreme Court on several occasions. In (2003) 6 SCC 195 (Union of India vs. Prakash P. Hinduja and Another) the Supreme Court narrowed down the scope of Ch. Bhajan Lal (supra) and held as follows:

"The grounds on which power under Section 482 Cr.P.C. can be exercised to quash the criminal proceedings are: (1) where the allegations made in the FIR or complaint, even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out a case against the accused, (2) where the uncontroverted allegations made in the FIR or the complaint and the evidence collected in support of the same do not disclose the commission of any offence and make out a case against the accused, (3) where there is an express legal bar engrafted in any of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure or the Act concerned to the institution and continuance of the proceedings. But this power has to be exercised in a rare case and with great circumspection."

In case of State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal & Ors. (supra) also, in guideline number 3 it was laid down that where the uncontroverted allegations made in the FIR or complaint and the evidence collected in support of the same do not disclose the commission of any offence and do not make out a case against the accused, the Court may quash the FIR as well as the investigations, however a note of caution was added by observing that the power of quashing a criminal proceeding should be exercised sparingly and with circumspection and that too in the rarest of rare cases. It was held that the Court would not be justified in embarking upon an inquiry as to the reliability or genuineness or otherwise of the allegations made in the FIR or the complaint.

In the judgments of Rupan Deol Bajaj v. K.P.S. Gill; reported in (1995) SCC (Cri) 1059, Rajesh Bajaj v. State of NCT of Delhi; reported in (1999) 3 SCC 259 and Medchl Chemicals & Pharma (P)

Ltd. v. Biological E Ltd. & Ors; reported in 2000 SCC (Cri) 615, the Apex Court clearly held that if a prima facie case is made out disclosing the ingredients of the offence, Court should not quash the complaint. However, it was held that if the allegations do not constitute any offence as alleged and appear to be patently absurd and improbable, Court should not hesitate to quash the complaint. The note of caution was reiterated that while considering such petitions the Courts should be very circumspect, conscious and careful. Thus, there is no controversy about the legal proposition that in case a prima facie case is made out, the FIR or the proceedings in consequence thereof cannot be quashed.

10. It was further submitted by the learned counsel for the petitioner that the entire proceedings against the petitioner are malicious and that respondents are trying to put 'cart before the horse', it may be observed that no specific material was indicated in support of alleged plea and even otherwise, such questions can not be examined by this Court in proceedings under Article 226 of the Constitution of India. The appreciation of evidence or the reliability of the allegations can not be examined at this stage. In State of Orissa v. Saroj Kumar Sahoo (2005) 13 SCC 540 it has been held that probabilities of the prosecution version can not be analysed at this stage. Likewise, the allegations of mala fides of the complainant/ respondents are of secondary importance. The relevant passage reads thus: (SCCp. 550, para 11)

"11.....It would not be proper for the High Court to analyse the case of the complainant in the light of all probabilities in order to determine whether a conviction would be sustainable and on such premises arrive at a conclusion that the proceedings are to be quashed. It would be erroneous to assess the material before it and conclude that the complaint cannot be proceeded with."

11. From the above stated case law it is apparent that the adjudication of questions of facts and appreciation of evidence or examining the reliability and credibility of the version, does not fall within the arena of jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India. In view of the material on record it can not be held that the impugned notice or criminal proceeding are manifestly attended with mala fide and maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge. The criminal proceedings can be quashed only in accordance with parameters laid down by Hon'ble Apex Court in catena of decisions. The present petition does not fall in any of such category, wherein, this Court can exercise jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India to quash the impugned notice and complaints.

12. In view of aforementioned facts and legal position and considering submissions of the parties, allegations made against petitioner and perusing the material on record including sanction order, it could not be said that no prima facie case is made out against the petitioner or that the petitioner deserves any relief claimed by him. The petition lacks merit and thus, liable to be dismissed.

13. Hence the petition is accordingly, dismissed.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Rajeev Misra, J.)

1. This is defendant's appeal under section 19 of Family Court Act, 1984 (hereinafter referred to as 'Act 1984') arising out of judgement and order dated 24.4.2015, passed by Principal Judge, Family Court, Mathura in Misc. Case No. 294 of 2010 (Smt. Prabha Vs. Kapir Kumar Singh) under section 24 of Act 1984, in Marriage Petition No. 294 of 2010 (Kapil Kumar Singh Vs. Smt. Prabha), whereby application (paper no. 4 Ga) filed by defendant-appellant for interim maintenance has been decided to the dissatisfaction of plaintiff-appellant.

2. We have heard Mr. S.S.P. Gupta, learned counsel for defendant-appellant. Inspite of revision of cause list, no one has appeared on behalf of defendant-respondent even though names of five advocates namely, Mr. Amit Kumar Srivastava, Mr. Arun Kumar Srivastava, Mr. Abhishek Kumar Yadav, Mr. Arun Kumar Vishvakarma and Mr. Arun Kumar Srivastava are printed in cause list.

3. Plaintiff-respondent, Kapil Kumar Singh filed Marriage Petition No. 294 of 2010 (Kapil Kumar Singh Vs. Smt. Prabha) for a decree of dissolution of marriage of parties. As per plaint allegations, marriage of parties was solemnized at Central Goat Research Centre, Makhdoom Farrah, Tehsil and District Mathura on 28.2.2008. According to plaintiff-respondent, conduct of defendant-appellant was unbecoming of a wife. To the contrary her conduct towards plaintiff-respondent and his family members was full of cruelty. Consequently, the basis of suit for dissolution of marriage was cruelty which is a ground recognized in law for grant of dissolution of marriage, as per section 13 (i) (a) of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 (hereinafter referred to as 'Act 1955').

4. Notices were issued to defendant-appellant. She accordingly appeared in Marriage Petition No. 294 of 2010 (Kapil Kumar Singh Vs. Smt. Prabha) and filed an application dated 16.8.2011 (paper no. 4 Ga) for interim maintenance for herself and her minor child and also litigation expenses as contemplated under section 24 of Act 1955. By means of aforesaid application, defend-appellant alleged that plaintiff-respondent is employed in R.S. Infra Project Pvt. Ltd. Greater Noida and is drawing salary to the tune of Rs. 18,000/- per month. It was further stated that plaintiff-respondent has an income of Rs. 35,000/- from Agricultural Land. Father-in-law of defend-appellant has superannuated from his services in the Irrigation Department of Government of U.P. He has received Rs. 50,000/- towards fund and gratuity. He is also getting Rs. 20,000/- per month towards pension. According to defendant-appellant, she is unemployed. The son born out of wedlock of parties is too young. No arrangement has been made by plaintiff-respondent for maintenance of his wife and minor son. As such it was prayed that defendant-appellant be awarded interim maintenance to the tune of Rs. 15,000/- and a sum of Rs. 12,000/- towards litigation expenses.

5. Plaintiff-respondent contested the application for interim maintenance (paper no. 4-Ga) filed by defendant-appellant. He accordingly, filed his objections dated 16.5.2012. According to plaintiff-respondent, all the expenses which were incurred in delivery of child were borne by plaintiff-respondent. The salary of plaintiff-respondent is Rs. 9008 and not Rs. 18,000/- as alleged by defendant-appellant. The plaintiff-respondent has no agricultural income. As plaintiff-respondent is residing separately from his father, he has no concern with finance available with father-in-law of defendant-appellant. It was also alleged that defendant-appellant is working as a teacher in Ideal Public Junior High School, Farrah Tehsil, District Mathura, from where she is getting salary at the rate of Rs. 10,000/- per month. Apart from above, defendant-appellant also earns Rs. 10,000/- from private tution. Father-in-law of plaintiff-respondent is working as Technical Officer at Central Goat Research Institute, Makhdoom Farrah, from where he is getting a salary of Rs. 50,000/- per month. Father-in-law of plaintiff-respondent also has some tenure recorded in his favour from which he earns about Rs. 2,00,000/- per annum.

6. After exchange of pleadings, Court below proceeded to decide application for interim maintenance filed by defendant-appellant. Upon evaluation of material on record, Court below concluded that as per salary bill dated 1.5.2014, salary of plaintiff-respondent is

Rs. 10,603/-. From the perusal of Khatauni 1413 to 1418 Fasli, it is established that plaintiff-respondent is recorded co-tenure holder along with Balbir Singh of Khatauni Khata No. 1447 area 0.729 hectares. As such, Court below concluded that plaintiff-respondent has some tenure recorded in his favour.

7. The defence raised by plaintiff-respondent that defendant-appellant is working in an institution and drawing a salary of Rs. 10,000/- could not be established by plaintiff-respondent. Similarly, plea raised by plaintiff-respondent that defendant-appellant earns Rs.10,000/- from tuition also could not be established by him. Court below concluded that defendant-appellant has no source of income and therefore, she is unable to maintain herself and her minor child. Accordingly, Court below opined that interest of justice shall be served in case some amount towards interim maintenance is granted to defendant-appellant after deducting the amount already paid pursuant to direction issued under section 125 Cr.P.C.

8. It is pertinent to mention here that vide order dated 1.6.2012 defendant-appellant has been awarded a sum of Rs. 2000/- towards maintenance for herself and a sum of Rs. 1,200/- has been awarded to minor child of defendant-appellant. As such, a total sum of Rs. 3,200/- has been awarded. Court below, however, very curiously awarded a sum of Rs. 3,000/- towards interim maintenance for defendant-appellant and her minor son. The amount paid under section 125 Cr.P.C. was to be adjusted. Apart from the above, a lump sum amount of Rs. 5000/- was given towards litigation expenses. With the aforesaid directions, Court below decided application for interim maintenance filed by defendant-appellant vide order dated 25.4.2015. Dissatisfied with the order dated 25.4.2015, defendant-appellant has come up in appeal before this Court.

9. Learned counsel for defendant-appellant in support of appeal has submitted that it is an undisputed fact that compensation to the tune of Rs. 3,200/- was already awarded to defendant-appellant and her minor son. However, Court below in proceedings under Section 24 of Act 1984, has awarded a sum of Rs. 3,000/- towards interim maintenance and litigation expenses, which have been quantified at Rs. 5000/-. Further, while granting benefit to defendant-appellant under section 24 of Act 1955, Court below has also directed that amount payable under section 125 Cr.P.C. shall be adjusted. Thus, for all practical purposes, no amount of interim maintenance has been awarded by Court below to defendant-appellant and her minor son under section 24 of Act 1955. He thus submits that the impugned order passed by Court below is liable to be set aside/modified by this Court.

10. It is next submitted that it is an admitted position that salary of plaintiff-respondent is Rs. 10,603/- per month. It is also proved on record that certain tenure is recorded in favour of plaintiff-respondent. Taking these two undisputed facts into account, Court below ought to have sympathetically considered application filed by defendant-appellant for interim maintenance. However, Court below while passing impugned order has completely ignored the undisputed position as noted herein above, rendering the impugned order arbitrary.

11. Before proceeding to consider the submissions urged by learned counsel for defendant- appellant, it shall be useful to refer to provisions of Section 24 of Act 1955 which provides for payment of interim maintenance and litigation expenses. The same is reproduced herein below:

"24. Maintenance pendente lite and expenses of proceedings. - Where in any proceeding under this Act it appears to the court that either the wife or the husband, as the case may be, has no independent income sufficient for her or his support and the necessary expenses of the proceeding, it may, on the application of the wife or the husband, order the respondent to pay to the petitioner the expenses of the proceeding, and monthly during the proceeding such sum as, having regard to the petitioner's own income and the income of the respondent, it may seem to the court to be reasonable:

Provided that the application for the payment of the expenses of the proceeding and such monthly sum during the proceeding shall, as far as possible, be disposed of within sixty days from the date of service of notice on the wife or the husband, as the case may be."

12. The object of Section 24 of Act 1955 is to provide interim maintenance so that the parties in whose favour maintenance is awarded is able to support itself. As such, the meaning of term "maintenance" and 'support' needs to be referred to, as is defined in Black's Law Dictionary (6th Edn., pp.953-54) thus:

" ... The furnishing by one person to another, for his or her support, of the means of living, or food, clothing, shelter, etc. particularly where the legal relation of the parties is such that one is bound to support the other, as between father and child, or husband and wife."

13. Likewise, the word "support" as defined in the said dictionary (p. 1439) reads as under:

"That which furnishes a livelihood; a source or means of living; subsistence, sustenance, maintenance, or living. In a broad sense the term includes all such means of living as would enable one to live in the degree of comfort suitable and becoming to his station of life. It is said to include anything requisite to housing, feeding, clothing, health, proper recreation, vacation, traveling expense, or other proper cognate purposes; also, proper care, nursing, and medical attendance in sickness, and suitable burial at death."

14. From perusal of Section 24 of Act 1955, it is apparent that there is only one indicator in the section, which shall be taken into account by a Court for the purpose of awarding interim maintenance. Similarly in the entire act of 1955, there is no provision, which provides relevant factors to be looked into by a Court while awarding interim maintenance or factors which are required to be ignored by a Court while awarding interim maintenance. In Neeta Rakesh Jain Vs. Jeetmal Jain, 2010 (12) SCC 242 Court has considered relevant factors, which are required to be taken into consideration by a Court while deciding an application under Section 24 of Act 1955. Paragraphs 9 and 10 of aforesaid judgement are relevant for the controversy in hand. Accordingly, the same are reproduced herein under:

"9. Section 24 thus provides that in any proceeding under the Act, the spouse who has no independent income sufficient for her or his support may apply to the court to direct the respondent to pay the monthly maintenance as the court may think reasonable, regard being had to the petitioner's own income and the income of the respondent. The very language in which the section is couched indicates that wide discretion has been conferred on the court in the matter of an order for interim maintenance. Although the discretion conferred on the court is wide, the section provides the guideline inasmuch as while fixing the interim maintenance the court has to give due regard to the income of the respondent and the petitioner's own income.

10. In other words, in the matter of making an order for interim maintenance, the discretion of the court must be guided by the criterion provided in the section, namely, the means of the parties and also after taking into account incidental and other relevant factors like social status; the background from which both the parties come from and the economical dependence of the petitioner. Since an order for interim maintenance by its very nature is temporary, a detailed and elaborate exercise by the court may not be necessary, but, at the same time, the court has got to take all the relevant factors into account and arrive at a proper amount having regard to the factors which are mentioned in the statute."

15. Subsequently, Apex Court in Manish Jain Vs. Akansha Jain, 2017 (15) SCC 801 has observed as follows in paragraph 12:

"12. The Court exercises a wide discretion in the matter of granting alimony pendente lite but the discretion is judicial and neither arbitrary nor capricious. It is to be guided on sound principles of matrimonial law and to be exercised within the ambit of the provisions of the Act and having regard to the object of the Act. The Court would not be in a position to judge the merits of the rival contentions of the parties when deciding an application for interim alimony and would not allow its discretion to be fettered by the nature of the allegations made by them and would not examine the merits of the case. Section 24 of the HM Act lays down that in arriving at the quantum of interim maintenance to be paid by one spouse to another, the Court must have regard to the appellant's own income and the income of the respondent."

16. A Division Bench of our Court in Lalta Prasad Kushwaha Vs. Jayanti Kushwaha, 2019 (2) ADJ 12, after considering aforesaid judgements of Apex Court observed as follows in paragraphs 15 and 16:

"15. Section 24 of the HM Act empowers the court in any proceeding under the Act, if it appears to the court that either the wife or the husband, as the case may be, has no independent income sufficient for her or his support and the necessary expenses of the proceeding, it may, on the application of any one of them order the other party to pay to the petitioner the expenses of the proceeding and monthly maintenance as may seem to be reasonable during the proceeding, having regard to also the income of both the applicant and the respondent. Heading of Section 24 of the Act is "Maintenance pendente lite and expenses of proceedings". The Section, however, does not use the word "maintenance"; but the word "support" can be interpreted to mean as Section 24 is intended to provide for maintenance pendente lite.

16. An order for maintenance pendente lite or for costs of the proceedings is conditional on the circumstance that the wife or husband who makes a claim for the same has no independent income sufficient for her or his support or to meet the necessary expenses of the proceeding. It is no answer to a claim of maintenance that the wife is educated and could support herself. Likewise, the financial position of the wife's parents is also immaterial. The court must take into consideration the status of the parties and the capacity of the spouse to pay maintenance and whether the applicant has any independent income sufficient for her or his support. Maintenance is always dependent upon factual situation; the court should, therefore, mould the claim for maintenance determining the quantum based on various factors brought before the court."

17. Upon perusal of impugned judgement in the backdrop of judgements referred to above, we find that Court below has not adverted itself to the undisputed facts that salary of plaintiff-respondent is Rs. 10,603/- and he also has recorded tenure in his favour. The plaintiff-respondent deliberately concealed his Agricultural income from Court below. Court below ought to have taken into consideration the aforesaid factors and in that situation, amount of interim maintenance awarded to defendant-appellant would certainly have been more than Rs. 3000/-.

18. There is another aspect of matter. A sum of Rs. 3,200/- has been awarded towards interim maintenance to defendant appellant and her minor son in proceedings under section 125 Cr.P.C. It is impossible even to imagine as to how a mother and a minor son can meet their daily expenses with a meagre amount of Rs. 3,200/-.

19. Considering the law laid down in Neeta Rakesh Jain (Supra), and undisputed facts of the present case as detailed above, we are of the view that Court below has erred in law in awarding a sum of Rs. 3000/- towards interim maintenance to defendant-appellant and her minor child under section 24 of Act 1955. Court below has further directed that amount payable pursuant to order passed under section 125 Cr.P.C. shall be adjusted. The result of same is that no amount of interim maintenance has been awarded to defendant-appellant and her minor son.

20. In view of the discussions, made herein above, we are of the view that impugned judgement and order passed by Court below needs to be modified to do complete justice between the parties. Accordingly, we allow this appeal, modify the impugned judgement and decree passed by Court below by directing that defendant-appellant shall be entitled to a sum of Rs. 6,000/- per month towards interim maintenance i.e. Rs. 4000/- for herself and Rs. 2,000/- for minor son. However, the amount of maintenance paid and awarded under section 125 Cr.P.C. shall be adjusted.

21. Appeal is, accordingly, allowed.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Rajeev Misra, J.)

1. This is defendant's appeal under Section 19 of Family Courts Act, 1984 (hereinafter refereed to as 'Act 1984'), challenging judgement and decree dated 20.12.2006, passed by Principal Judge, Family Court, Meerut in Matrimonial Case No. 123 of 2003 (Dr. Vikas Kannaujia Vs. Smt. (Dr.) Sarita), under section 13 (I) of Hindu Marriage Act 1955 (hereinafter referred to as 'Act 1955'), whereby Court below has decreed suit of plaintiff respondent and consequently, annulled marriage of parties from the date of judgement i.e. 20.12.2006.

2. We have heard Mr. Sujeet Kumar, learned counsel for defendant-appellant, Mr. Ravi Kiran Jain, learned Senior Counsel assisted by Mr. A.P. Paul, learned counsel appearing for plaintiff-respondent.

3. According to plaint allegations, marriage of plaintiff respondent, was solemnized with defendant-appellant on 20.2.2002 at Delhi in accordance with Hindu Rites and Customs. After marriage defendant-appellant came to her marital home i.e. house of plaintiff-respondent situate at Tope Khana Bazar, Meerut Cant, District Meerut. It is the case of plaintiff-respondent that consummation of marriage took place on the first night of defendant-appellant at her marital home. It is alleged by plaintiff-respondent that subsequently, relationship between the parties became strained as according to plaintiff-respondent, defendant-appellant refused to perform her marital obligations to the satisfaction of plaintiff-respondent. It was also alleged that defendant-appellant, misbehaved with mother of plaintiff-respondent, when she was requested to touch feet of elder relatives and obtain their blessings. On 22nd February, 2002, younger brother of defendant-appellant and her maternal aunt (mami) are alleged to have visited house of plaintiff-respondent for taking defendant-appellant to her parental home. According to plaintiff-respondent, behaviour of younger brother of defendant-appellant as well as her maternal aunt was neither friendly nor cordial and they started to allege complaint on behalf of defendant-appellant. Ultimately, they all left marital home of defendant-appellant and went to parental home of defendant-appellant at Delhi along with defendant-appellant. Plaintiff-respondent, brought defendant-respondent back to her marital home on 4.3.2002. In the evening of 4.3.2002, they both went to Udhampur (Jammu and Kashmir) where plaintiff was working as an eye surgeon at Kishan Lal Sharma Memorial, Rotary Eye Hospital Udhampur, However, according to plaintiff-respondent, behaviour of defendant-appellant with plaintiff respondent at Udampur was neither cheerful nor congenial. So much so, that according to plaintiff-respondent, though they were in cohabitation, yet there was no establishment of conjugal relations between the parties in their seven days of stay on account of cold and indifferent attitude of defendant-respondent. Accordingly, parties returned in the morning of 11.3.2002. The thirteenth day function (Terahi Ceremony) of elder brother of father of plaintiff-respondent was scheduled on 17.3.2002 as he expired on 10.3.2002.However, according to plaintiff-respondent, defendant appellant left her marital home in the evening of 17.3.2002, which conduct is unbecoming of a good daughter-in-law. Since then defendant-respondent is residing at her parental home. Repeated attempts are alleged to have been made by plaintiff-respondent to bring back defendant-appellant to her marital home but all went in vain. Plaintiff-respondent also filed a suit under section 9 of Act 1955, which was registered as Suit No. 598 of 2002 (Dr. Vikas Kannaujia Vs. Smt. Dr. Sarita) for restitution of conjugal rights. The defendant-appellant appeared in aforesaid suit and filed an application under section 24 of Act 1955 claiming interim maintenance and litigation expenses. According to plaintiff-respondent, inspite of initiation of above mentioned proceedings, defendant-appellant refused to reside along with plaintiff-respondent at her marital home, which is situate at Meerut. On the aforesaid factual premise, plaintiff-respondent alleged commission of 'cruelty' by defendant-appellant upon him and consequently prayed for grant of a decree of divorce on the ground of cruelty as contemplated under section 13 (1) (i-a) of Act 1955.

4. Suit filed by plaintiff-respondent was contested by defendant-appellant. She filed a written statement whereby, not only the plaint allegations were denied but also additional pleas were raised. According to defendant-appellant, she is a well educated lady and never even attempted to break matrimonial life. It is the parents and other relatives of plaintiff-respondent who want to break matrimonial life of defendant-appellant so that plaintiff-respondent could be remarried and their lust for dowry could be satisfied. The filing of petition under section 9 of Act 1955 was admitted to defendant-appellant. However, she pleaded that in the petition under section 9 of Act 1955 date was fixed for conciliation. However, plaintiff-respondent did not appear before Court on date fixed for conciliation. Ultimately, suit under section 9 of Act 1955 was withdrawn by plaintiff-respondent and thereafter suit for divorce has been filed. According to defendant-appellant, the above conduct clearly establishes malicious motive of plaintiff-respondent to bring married life of parties to an end without any valid cause. Defendant-appellant clearly denied commission of any physical or mental cruelty upon plaintiff-respondent or her family members. It was thus prayed that the suit is liable to be dismissed.

5. The parties went to trial. Plaintiff-respondent, in support of his case , adduced himself as P.W.1. and one Mahendra Singh Kannaujia as P.W.2. Plaintiff filed 39 documents vide list of documents (paper no. 31 Ga to 32 Ga), bringing on record the proceedings of different cases pending in Courts at Delhi. Defendant-appellant in proof of her defence adduced herself as D.W. 1 and her brother Sandeep as D.W.2. However, no documentary evidence was filed by her.

6. Court below on basis of pleadings raised by parties, framed following issues for determination:

a) Whether plaintiff-respondent is entitled to decree of annulment of marriage solemnized on 22.2.2002 on the ground of 'cruelty' against defendant-appellant?

b) Whether Court has j1.50 "urisdiction to try the suit?

c) Whether plaintiff-respondent is entitled to any relief?

7. In respect of Issue no.1, Court below concluded that there is no evidence with regard to giving of dowry or harassment of defendant-appellant on account of additional demand of dowry. The proceedings for cruelty against wife punishable under section 498 A IPC and for criminal breach of trust punishable under section 406 IPC have been initiated by defendant appellant one year after the institution of divorce suit. Court below further recorded a finding that even though defendant appellant is working as a junior Doctor in Lady Harding Hospital, New Delhi, yet she has filed a complaint under section 125 Cr.P.C. in the Court of A.C.M.M, New Delhi. As such, intention of defendant appellant is not to have maintenance in case of despair and destitution but to harass plaintiff-respondent. The case of defendant-appellant that plaintiff-respondent and his family members caused physical and mental cruelty upon defendant-appellant was disbelieved by Court below. Defendant-appellant herself admitted in her cross-examination that she had no quarrel with mother-in-law. Her mother-in-law only scolded her but except for the aforesaid, there was no dispute with any member in the family of her in-laws. There were no differences between defendant-appellant and plaintiff-respondent upto 17.3.2000. It may be noted here that except for the solitary incident which took place on 17.3.2002, when defendant-appellant is alleged to left her matrimonial home in the evening even though the thirteenth day function (terahi) of elder brother of father-in-law was going on, no other instance of cruelty was pleaded in plaint. However, this particular conduct on the part of defendant-appellant was not considered by Court below to be sufficient enough to constitute 'cruelty' as a single instance does not constitute 'cruelty'.

8. Plea raised by plaintiff respondent that there was complete indifference and cold attitude on behalf of defendant-appellant towards plaintiff-respondent resulting in deprivation of physical pleasure was not accepted by Court below.

9. However, Court below concluded that commission of cruelty by defendant-appellant upon plaintiff-respondent is established from the fact that defendant-appellant has initiated false criminal cases against plaintiff-respondent and her family members. Placing reliance upon judgement of this Court in Smt. Archana Vs. Dr. P.K. Tomar, 2003 (2) AWC 1119, Court below concluded that such act falls within the category of commission of cruelty. As such suit for divorce filed by plaitiff-respondent was decreed on the ground of cruelty vide judgement and decree dated 20.12.2006.

10. Thus, feeling aggrieved by aforesaid judgement and decree, defendant-appellant has come to this Court by means of present first appeal.

11. Mr. Sujeet Kumar, learned counsel for defendant-appellant in challenge to impugned judgement and decree passed by Court below has submitted with vehemence that impugned judgement and decree passed by Court below are liable to be set aside, as the same are manifestly illegal and in excess of jurisdiction. According to learned counsel for defendant-appellant criminal proceedings were initiated by defendant-appellant after expiry of a period of one year from date of institution of divorce suit. The plaint of divorce suit was not got amended to plead that divorce is also being prayed on account of initiation of false criminal cases. He, further, submits that once the aforesaid factum was not pleaded in plaint, then evidence in that regard could not be looked into as no amount of evidence can be looked into unless a fact has been pleaded. As there was no pleading regarding commission of cruelty by defendant-appellant on account of initiation of false criminal cases by defendant-appellant, pleadings of criminal cases, or documents relating thereto as well as judgement rendered therein could not be looked into. As such, Court below has erred in law in concluding that cruelty was committed by defendant-appellant upon plaintiff-respondent by initiating false criminal cases. As such, conclusion drawn by Court below to grant decree of divorce in favour of plaintiff-respondent on aforesaid basis is unsustainable.

12. He next contends that in the plaint, except for solitary incident which took place in the evening of 17.3.2002, when defendant-appellant left her matrimonial home when the thirteenth day function (terahi) of elder brother of father-in-law of defendant-appellant was being performed, no other instance of cruelty has been detailed. Thus decree of divorce could not have been granted even on the ground of cruelty as a single incident, does not by itself constitute cruelty.

13. He lastly, submits that allegation made by plaintiff-respondent with regard to failure of defendant-appellant to perform her obligations as wife and denial of physical pleasure to plaintiff-respondent to his satisfaction on account of her indifferent attitude could neither be established nor proved in evidence and therefore not taken as a ground by Court below to award decree of divorce. On cumulative strength of aforesaid submissions, it is urged by appellant's counsel that decree of divorce granted by Court below is liable to be set aside by this Court. To lend legal support to his submissions, he has referred to judgement in Deepika Alias Baby Vs. Naresh Chandra Singhnia, 2000 (0) AIR (All) 148; A. Jayachandra Vs. Aneel Kaur, 2005 (2) SCC 22; Kiran Singh Vs. Shiv Kumar, 2013 (10) ADJ 560.

14. Mr. Ravi Kiran Jain, learned Senior Counsel assisted by Mr. A.P. Paul, learned counsel for plaintiff-respondent has supported impugned judgement. According to learned Senior Counsel, it is established from record that defendant-appellant has deprived plaintiff-respondent of sexual pleasure. He has relied upon paragraphs 4, 5, and 10 of plaint. According to learned Senior Counsel, there is no denial of aforesaid by plaintiff-respondent in her written statement. The findings recorded by Court below at page 73 of respondent's paper book has been referred to in support of aforesaid submission. He then submits that admittedly, defendant-appellant is daughter-in-law of family. Therefore, it was obligatory on her part to behave in such a manner which is not unbecoming of an obedient daughter-in-law. However, contrary to same, defendant-appellant misbehaved with her mother-in-law. The finding to that effect has been recorded by Court below, which is at page 77 of respondent's paper book. He further submits that commission of physical and mental cruelty by defendant-appellant upon plaintiff-respondent is well established. To buttress his submission he has referred to findings recorded by Court below which is at page 74 of respondent's paper book. Lastly it is urged that parties have been living separately since 17.3.2002 and therefore, there has been an irretrievable break down of marriage. As such, in view of aforesaid, the decree of divorce granted by Court below is not liable to be set-aside. Mr. Ravi Kiran Jain in support of aforesaid submissions has relied upon judgements of Supreme Court : G V N Kameswara Rao V/s G Jabilli, 2002 (2) SCC 296; Parveen Mehta V/s Inderjit Mehta, 2002 5 SCC 706; Naveen Kohli V/s Neetu Kohli, 2006 (4) SCC

558; Samar Ghosh V/s Jaya Ghosh, 2007 (4) SCC 511; K Srinivas Rao V/s D A Deepa, 2013 (5) SCC 226; K Srinivas V/s K Sunita, 2014 (16) SCC 34

15. We shall refer to the aforesaid judgements at appropriate place in the subsequent part of this judgement.

16. After hearing counsel for parties, and upon perusal of record, following points of determination arise in this appeal:

A) Whether on the basis of allegations made in the plaint, it can be said with certainty that plaintiff-respondent has duly pleaded and proved commission of physical/mental cruelty by defendant-appellant upon him and therefore, entitled to grant of a decree of divorce under section 13 (i)(a) of Act 1955.

B) Whether proceedings of criminal case could be looked into or referred to by Court below even when criminal proceedings were initiated one year after the institution of divorce suit and plaint was not amended to enlarge the ground of cruelty by pleading initiation of false criminal proceedings.

C) Whether in the absence of any application filed under Order 41 Rule 27 C.P.C. any document filed by the parties in appeal has to be ignored mandatorily as it is not part of evidence.

D) Whether impugned judgement and decree passed by Court below has to be judged on the reasons recorded in judgement or independently of the same.

E) Whether judgement and decree passed by Court below can be sustained on the ground of irretrievable marriage.

17. Before proceeding to consider the points of determination involved in this appeal, it shall be useful to consider meaning of the term "cruelty" in the context of Act 1955

18. The term 'cruelty' has not been defined in Act 1955. Consequently, this term has been the subject matter of debate for long. However, recently a Division Bench of this Court in Smt. Sarita Devi Vs. Sri Ashok Kumar Singh reported in 2018 (3) AWC 2328 has considered the question of cruelty in detail in paragraphs 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 27 and 29 which read as under:-

"16. In Samar Ghosh vs. Jaya Ghosh (2007) 4 SCC 511 Court considered the concept of cruelty and referring to Oxford Dictionary defines 'cruelty' as 'the quality of being cruel; disposition of inflicting suffering; delight in or indifference to another's pain; mercilessness; hard-heartedness'.

17. In Black's Law Dictionary, 8th Edition, 2004, term "mental cruelty" has been defined as, "a ground for divorce, one spouse's course of conduct (not involving actual violence) that creates such anguish that it endangers the life, physical health, or mental health of the other spouse."

18. The concept of cruelty has been summarized in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol.13, 4th Edition Para 1269, as under:

"The general rule in all cases of cruelty is that the entire matrimonial relationship must be considered, and that rule is of special value when the cruelty consists not of violent acts but of injurious reproaches, complaints, accusations or taunts. In cases where no violence is averred, it is undesirable to consider judicial pronouncements with a view to creating certain categories of acts or conduct as having or lacking the nature or quality which renders them capable or incapable in all circumstances of amounting to cruelty; for it is the effect of the conduct rather than its nature which is of paramount importance in assessing a complaint of cruelty. Whether one spouse has been guilty of cruelty to the other is essentially a question of fact and previously decided cases have little, if any, value. The court should bear in mind the physical and mental condition of the parties as well as their social status, and should consider the impact of the personality and conduct of one spouse on the mind of the other, weighing all incidents and quarrels between the spouses from that point of view; further, the conduct alleged must be examined in the light of the complainant's capacity for endurance and the extent to which that capacity is known to the other spouse. Malevolent intention is not essential to cruelty but it is an important element where it exits."

19. In 24 American Jurisprudence 2d, the term "mental cruelty" has been defined as under:

"Mental Cruelty as a course of unprovoked conduct toward one's spouse which causes embarrassment, humiliation, and anguish so as to render the spouse's life miserable and unendurable. The plaintiff must show a course of conduct on the part of the defendant which so endangers the physical or mental health of the plaintiff as to render continued cohabitation unsafe or improper, although the plaintiff need not establish actual instances of physical abuse. "

20. One of the earliest decision considering "mental cruelty" we find is, N.G. Dastane v. S. Dastane (1975) 2 SCC 326, wherein Court has said:

"The enquiry therefore has to be whether the conduct charges as cruelty is of such a character as to cause in the mind of the petitioner a reasonable apprehension that it will be harmful or injurious for him to live with the respondent. "

21. In Sirajmohmedkhan Janmohamadkhan v. Haizunnisa Yasinkhan and Anr. (1981) 4 SCC 250 Court said that a concept of legal cruelty changes according to the changes and advancement of social concept and standards of living. With the advancement of our social conceptions, this feature has obtained legislative recognition, that a second marriage is a sufficient ground for separate residence and maintenance. Moreover, to establish legal cruelty, it is not necessary that physical violence should be used. Continuous ill-treatment, cessation of marital intercourse, studied neglect, indifference on the part of the husband, and an assertion on the part of the husband that the wife is unchaste are all factors which lead to mental or legal cruelty.

22. In Shobha Rani v. Madhukar Reddi, (1988) 1 SCC 105, Court observed that word 'cruelty' has not been defined in Act, 1955 but legislature, making it a ground for divorce under Section 13(1)(i)(a) of Act, 1955, has made it clear that conduct of party in treatment of other if amounts to cruelty actual, physical or mental or legal is a just reason for grant of divorce. Cruelty may be mental or physical, intentional or unintentional. If it is physical, it is a question of fact about degree. If it is mental, the enquiry must begin as to the nature of cruel treatment and then as to the impact of such treatment on the mind of the spouse. Whether it caused reasonable apprehension that it would be harmful or injurious to live with the other, ultimately, is a matter of inference to be drawn by taking into account the nature of conduct and its effect on the complaining spouse. There may, however, be cases where conduct complained of itself is bad enough and per se unlawful or illegal. Then the impact or injurious effect on the other spouse need not be enquired into or considered. In such cases, cruelty will be established if conduct itself is proved or admitted. The absence of intention should not make any difference in the case, if by ordinary sense in human affairs, the act complained of could otherwise be regarded as cruelty.

23. In V. Bhagat v. D. Bhagat (Mrs.), (1994) 1 SCC 337 considering the concept of "mental cruelty" in the context of Section 13(1)(i)(a) of Act, 1984, Court said that it can be defined as conduct which inflicts upon the other party such mental pain and suffering as would make it not possible for that party to live with other. In other words, mental cruelty must be of such a nature that the parties cannot reasonably be expected to live together. The situation must be such that the wronged party cannot reasonably be asked to put up with such conduct and continue to live with other party. It is not necessary to prove that mental cruelty is such as to cause injury to the health of other party. While arriving at such conclusion, regard must be had to the social status, educational level of parties, the society they move in, the possibility or otherwise of the parties ever living together in case they are already living apart and all other relevant facts and circumstances which it is neither possible nor desirable to set out exhaustively. What is cruelty in one case may not amount to cruelty in another case. It is thus has to be determined in each case having regard to the facts and circumstances of each case.

24. In Chetan Dass v. Kamla Devi, (2001) 4 SCC 250, Court observed that matrimonial matters relates to delicate human and emotional relationship. It demands mutual trust, regard, respect, love and affection with sufficient play for reasonable adjustments with spouse. The relationship has to conform to the social norms as well. There is no scope of applying the concept of "irretrievably broken marriage" as a straitjacket formula for grant of relief of divorce but it has to be considered in the backdrop of facts and circumstances of the case concerned.

25. In Savitri Pandey v. Prem Chandra Panadey, (2002) 2 SCC 73, Court held that mental cruelty is the conduct of other spouse which causes mental suffering or fear to matrimonial life of other. Cruelty postulates a treatment of party to marriage with such conduct as to cause a reasonable apprehension in his or her mind that it would be harmful or injurious to live with other party. Cruelty has to be distinguished from ordinary wear and tear of family life.

27. In Vinita Saxena v. Pankaj Pandit, (2006) 3 SCC 778 Court held that complaints and reproaches, sometimes of ordinary nature, may not be termed as 'cruelty' but their continuance or persistence over a period of time may do so which would depends on the facts of each case and have to be considered carefully by the Court concerned.

29. In Samar Ghosh vs. Jaya Ghosh (supra) Court said that though no uniform standard can be laid down but there are some instances which may constitute mental cruelty and the same are illustrated as under:

"(i) On consideration of complete matrimonial life of the parties, acute mental pain, agony and suffering as would not make possible for the parties to live with each other could come within the broad parameters of mental cruelty.

(ii) On comprehensive appraisal of the entire matrimonial life of the parties, it becomes abundantly clear that situation is such that the wronged party cannot reasonably be asked to put up with such conduct and continue to live with other party.

(iii) Mere coldness or lack of affection cannot amount to cruelty, frequent rudeness of language, petulance of manner, indifference and neglect may reach such a degree that it makes the married life for the other spouse absolutely intolerable.

(iv) Mental cruelty is a state of mind. The feeling of deep anguish, disappointment, frustration in one spouse caused by the conduct of other for a long time may lead to mental cruelty.

(v) A sustained course of abusive and humiliating treatment calculated to torture, discommode or render miserable life of the spouse.

(vi) Sustained unjustifiable conduct and behavior of one spouse actually affecting physical and mental health of the other spouse. The treatment complained of and the resultant danger or apprehension must be very grave, substantial and weighty.

(vii) Sustained reprehensible conduct, studied neglect, indifference or total departure from the normal standard of conjugal kindness causing injury to mental health or deriving sadistic pleasure can also amount to mental cruelty.

(viii) The conduct must be much more than jealousy, selfishness, possessiveness, which causes unhappiness and dissatisfaction and emotional upset may not be a ground for grant of divorce on the ground of mental cruelty.

(ix) Mere trivial irritations, quarrels, normal wear and tear of the married life which happens in day to day life would not be adequate for grant of divorce on the ground of mental cruelty.

(x) The married life should be reviewed as a whole and a few isolated instances over a period of years will not amount to cruelty. The ill-conduct must be persistent for a fairly lengthy period, where the relationship has deteriorated to an extent that because of the acts and behavior of a spouse, the wronged party finds it extremely difficult to live with the other party any longer, may amount to mental cruelty.

(xi) If a husband submits himself for an operation of sterilization without medical reasons and without the consent or knowledge of his wife and similarly if the wife undergoes vasectomy or abortion without medical reason or without the consent or knowledge of her husband, such an act of the spouse may lead to mental cruelty.

(xii) Unilateral decision of refusal to have intercourse for considerable period without there being any physical incapacity or valid reason may amount to mental cruelty.

(xiii) Unilateral decision of either husband or wife after marriage not to have child from the marriage may amount to cruelty.

(xiv) Where there has been a long period of continuous separation, it may fairly be concluded that the matrimonial bond is beyond repair. The marriage becomes a fiction though supported by a legal tie. By refusing to sever that tie, the law in such cases, does not serve the sanctity of marriage; on the contrary, it shows scant regard for the feelings and emotions of the parties. In such like situations, it may lead to mental cruelty."

19. The aforesaid Division Bench judgement clearly explains different shades of 'cruelty' which by itself are sufficient enough to dissolve marriage on ground of cruelty. The aforesaid judgement also prescribes the mode as to how 'cruelty' has to be proved and also the manner in which it has to be proved so as to grant decree of divorce on ground of 'cruelty'.

20. With the aid of aforesaid material, Court has now to examine, whether plaintiff-respondent was able to successfully establish cruelty on part of defendant- appellant and therefore, entitled to decree of divorce on the aforesaid ground.

21. Plaintiff-respondent filed suit for divorce on ground of cruelty as contemplated under section 13 (1)(i-a) of Act 1955. Burden to prove same was upon plaintiff-respondent himself. From perusal of plaint, it is apparent that reference is made to a solitary instance of cruelty and otherwise only allegations of cruelty have been made. According to plaintiff-appellant, thirteenth day function (terahi ceremony) of elder brother of father of plaintiff-respondent was schedule on 17.3.2002 as he expired on 10.3.2002. According to plaintiff-respondent, defendant appellant left for her marital home in the evening of 17.3.2002, which conduct does not commensurate with her status as daughter-in-law. Except for aforesaid solitary instance, no other instance of cruelty has been alleged in the plaint. Court below has returned a finding that departure of defendant-respondent from her marital home on 17.3.2002 is proved. However, Court below did not grant decree of divorce in favour of plaintiff-respondent. It is well settled by now that a solitary instance does not constitute cruelty by itself as has been held in G.V.N. Kameswara Rao Vs. G. Jabilli, 2002 (2) SCC 296. Paragraph 12 of judgement is relevant for the controversy in hand, which reads as under:

"12. The court has to come to a conclusion whether the acts committed by the counter-petitioner amount to cruelty, and it is to be assessed having regard to the status of the parties in social life, their customs, traditions and other similar circumstances. Having regard to the sanctity and importance of marriages in a community life, the court should consider whether the conduct of the counter-petitioner is such that it has become intolerable for the petitioner to suffer any longer and to live together is impossible, and then only the court can find that there is cruelty on the part of the counter-petitioner. This is to be judged not from a solitary incident, but on an overall consideration of all relevant circumstances."

22. Thus suit of plaintiff-appellant could be decreed on the ground of cruelty only as pleaded in plaint and also proved by plaintiff-appellant.

23. However, in the present case Court below has decreed suit on the ground of cruelty holding that defendant-respondent has initiated false criminal proceedings against plaintiff-respondent. It may be noted here that criminal proceedings were initiated by defendant-appellant one year after institution of divorce suit. The suit for divorce was filed in the year 2003 but decided vide judgement dated 20.12.2006. During this entire period, no amendment application was filed seeking amendment in plaint, whereby, facts regarding initiation of false criminal proceedings which have been held to cause commission of cruelty could be brought on record and therefore, could also be taken as a ground of divorce.

24. The question is whether in absence of any pleading in plaint, divorce can be granted on the ground of commission of cruelty because of initiation of false criminal proceedings by wife against husband. Law stands crystallized on the aforesaid issue. Reference in this regard be made to K. Srinivas Rao Vs. D.A. Deepa, 2013 (5) SCC 226, wherein it has been held that initiation of false criminal cases by wife against husband also amounts to commission of cruelty.

25. However, from record we find that during pendency of divorce suit, plaintiff-respondent, filed paper no. 31 Ga, which is list of documents dated 30.8.2006. By means of aforesaid, plaintiff-respondent filed following documents before Court below to establish commission of cruelty upon himself by defendant-appellant on aforesaid ground:

(I) One certified copy of order dated 9.5.2005 passed by Additional Session Judge New Delhi in case State Vs. Vikas U/s 498A, 406 and 34 IPC. (paper no. 32-Ga)

(ii) One certified copy of order dated 01.6.2005 passed by Member Secretary Delhi Legal Aid Cell, Patiala Court in case State Vs. Sumeri Lal Kanojia (paper no. 33-Ga)

(iii) One certified copy of order dated 15.6.2005 passed by The Court of Additional Session Judge New Delhi in granting Anticipary Bail to Sumeri Lal Kanojia and Smt. Prem Lata. (paper no. 34-Ga)

(iv) One certified copy of order dated 06.7.2005 passed by Additional Session Judge New Delhi in case State Vs. Vikas U/s 498A, 406 and 34 IPC. (paper no. 35-Ga)

(v) One certified copy of order dated 12.8.2005 passed by Additional Session Judge New Delhi in case State Vs. Vikas U/s 498 A, 406 and 34 IPC. (paper no. 36-Ga)

(vi) One certified copy of order dated 22.8.2005 passed by Additional Session Judge New Delhi in case State Vs. Vikas U/s 498A, 406 and 34 IPC. (paper no. 37-Ga)

(vii) One certified copy of F.I.R. case Crime No. 965 of 2004 dated 05.11.2004 lodged by Dr. Sarita defendant. (paper no. 38-Ga)

(viii) One certified copy of interim application moved by the defendant in case no. 928/1 of 2003 U/s 125 Cr.P.C. in court of A.C.M.M New Delhi. (paper no. 39-Ga)

26. From perusal of order sheet of Case No. 126 of 2003 (Dr. Vikas Kannaujia Vs. Smt. (Dr) Sarita) it is apparent that on 30.8.2006, Court below passed following order:

"पुकार कराई गई पक्षकार हाजिर आये वादी की ओर से सूची 31ग 31क द्वारा 32ग ता 39ग पेपर हाजिर किये गये तथा सूची गवाह 40ग के साथ मुख्य परीक्षा शपथ पत्र पी0डब्लू01 डा0 विकास कन्नोजिया 41क तथा पी0डब्लू02 श्री महेन्द्र सिंह कन्नोजिया 42क

दाखिल हुऐ पत्रावली वास्ते जिरह 2.11.06 को पेश होवे।''

"Case was called out. Parties came up. On behalf of the plaintiff, paper nos. 32Ga to 39 Ga have been produced vide lists 31 Ga, 31 Ka. Along with the list of witnesses being 40 Ga, affidavit at examination-in-chief of P.W-1 Dr. Vikas Kannaujia being 41 ka and that of PW-2 Shri Mahendra Singh Kannaujia being 42Ka have been filed. File be produced on 02.11.2006 for cross-examination"

(English Translation by Court)

27. There is nothing in the order sheet of matrimonial case to indicate that documents filed by plaintiff-appellant vide list of documents (paper no. 31 Ga) were formally admitted in evidence.

28. Mr. Ravi Kiran Jain, learned Senior Counsel, has tried to support impugned judgement by placing reliance upon the judgement of Apex Court in K. Srinivas Vs. K. Sunita, 2014 (16) SCC 34. He has referred to paragraph 6 of the judgement, which reads as under:

"6. Another argument which has been articulated on behalf of the learned counsel for the respondent is that the filing of the criminal complaint has not been pleaded in the petition itself. As we see it, the criminal complaint was filed by the wife after filing of the husband's divorce petition, and being subsequent events could have been looked into by the court. In any event, both the parties were fully aware of this facet of cruelty which was allegedly suffered by the husband. When evidence was led, as also when arguments were addressed, objection had not been raised on behalf of the respondent wife that this aspect of cruelty was beyond the pleadings. We are, therefore, not impressed by this argument raised on her behalf." (Emphasis added)

29. On the strength of aforesaid observations made by Apex Court, learned Senior Counsel has tried to impress upon us, that in the present case also facts are similar and therefore, decree passed by Court below, cannot be faulted with on aforesaid ground.

30. Mr. Sujeet Kumar, learned counsel for defendant-appellant has vehemently opposed the submissions urged by Mr. Ravi Kiran Jain, learned Senior Counsel appearing for plaintiff-respondent. He submits that admittedly factum with regard to commission of cruelty by defendant-appellant upon plaintiff-respondent on account of initiation of false criminal case was not pleaded initially nor plaint was got amended subsequently. He further submits that pleadings decide course of evidence which is to be led by parties. Therefore, the rule "no amount of evidence can be looked into unless a fact is pleaded is applicable in this case." He thus submits that documents filed by plaintiff-respondent in respect of criminal cases initiated by defendant-appellant could not be looked into by Court below. As such, impugned judgement passed by Court below on the basis of such documents is manifestly illegal. He further submits that there is nothing on record to show that counsel for plaintiff-appellant submitted before Court below to grant decree of divorce on the ground of initiation of false criminal cases by defendant appellant. Court below has itself concluded to grant divorce decree on the said ground. In the light of aforesaid facts, judgement rendered in K.

Srinivas (Supra) cannot be of any help to plaintiff-respondent. Therefore, the decree passed by Court below is nonest as it is based upon facts not pleaded in plaint nor argued by counsel for plaintiff-appellant before Court below.

31. There is another aspect of matter. Documents relating to criminal cases lodged by defendant-appellant have been filed before Court below by plaintiff-respondent vide list of documents (paper no. 31 Ga). According to counsel for defendant-appellant, no reliance could be placed upon such documents by Court below unless they were admitted in evidence. There is nothing on record to show that these documents relating to criminal cases initiated by defendant-appellant were ever admitted in evidence. Consequently, the same could not be relied upon by Court below.

32. The Court is not unmindful of section 10 of Act 1984, which provides that Court may formulate its own procedure. For ready reference Section 10 of Act 1984 is reproduced herein under:

"10. Procedure generally.- (1) Subject to the other provisions of this Act and the rules, the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (5 of 1908) and of any other law for the time being in force shall apply to the suits and proceedings [other than the proceedings under Chapter IX of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974)] before a Family Court and for the purposes of the said provisions of the Code, Family Court shall be deemed to be a civil court and shall have all the powers of such court.

(2) Subject to the other provisions of this Act and the rules, the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974) or the rules made thereunder, shall apply to the proceedings under Chapter IX of that Code before a Family Court.

(3) Nothing in sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) shall prevent a Family Court from laying down its own procedure with a view to arrive at a settlement in respect of the subject-matter of the suit or proceedings or at the truth of the facts alleged by the one party and denied by the other."

33. Irrespective of aforesaid, there is nothing on record to indicate that documents relating to criminal proceedings, initiated by defendant-appellant were admitted in evidence as per mandate of Order XIII C.P.C. or under Sub-clause 3 of Section 10 of Act 1984. Thus, documents relating to criminal proceedings initiated by defendant-appellant did not form part of evidence adduced in suit for divorce filed by plaintiff-respondent.

34. A perusal of impugned judgement as well as order sheet of divorce suit will go to show that there is no recital indicating that documents filed vide list of documents (paper no. 31 Ga) are proposed to be admitted in evidence. As such, there was no opportunity before defendant-appellant for admission/denial of documents filed vide list of documents (paper no. 31 Ga). Learned counsel for defendant-appellant further submitted that on account of aforesaid no arguments for grant of divorce on account of initiation of false criminal cases was pressed by counsel for plaintiff-respondent. The impugned judgement does not contain any recital to establish to the contrary. Court below itself appears to have culled out this ground for granting decree of divorce, which is not permissible in law.

35. Learned Senior Counsel has tried to support judgement and decree passed by Court below on the ground that it is proved from record that wife has committed physical/mental cruelty upon plaintiff-respondent by denying him physical pleasure on account of her cold and indifferent attitude. To buttress his submission, he has invited attention of Court to pleadings in plaint, written statement as well as finding of Court below at page 73 of respondent's paper book. He has also referred to paragraphs 18, 19, 20 and 21 of judgement in Parveen Mehta Vs. Inderjit Mehta, 2002 (5) SCC 706 For ready reference, paragraphs 18, 19, 20 and 21 of Praveen Mehta's case (Supra) and page 73 of respondent's paper book relied upon by learned Senior Counsel are reproduced herein below:

"18. Quoting with approval the following passage from the judgment in V. Bhagat v. D. Bhagat [(1994) 1 SCC 337] this Court observed therein: (SCC p. 347, para 16)

"16. Mental cruelty in Section 13(1)(i-a) can broadly be defined as that conduct which inflicts upon the other party such mental pain and suffering as would make it not possible for that party to live with the other. In other words, mental cruelty must be of such a nature that the parties cannot reasonably be expected to live together. The situation must be such that the wronged party cannot reasonably be asked to put up with such conduct and continue to live with the other party. It is not necessary to prove that the mental cruelty is such as to cause injury to the health of the petitioner. While arriving at such conclusion, regard must be had to the social status, educational level of the parties, the society they move in, the possibility or otherwise of the parties ever living together in case they are already living apart and all other relevant facts and circumstances which it is neither possible nor desirable to set out exhaustively. What is cruelty in one case may not amount to cruelty in another case. It is a matter to be determined in each case having regard to the facts and circumstances of that case. If it is a case of accusations and allegations, regard must also be had to the context in which they were made."

19. Clause (i-a) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 of the Act is comprehensive enough to include cases of physical as also mental cruelty. It was formerly thought that actual physical harm or reasonable apprehension of it was the prime ingredient of this matrimonial offence. That doctrine is now repudiated and the modern view has been that mental cruelty can cause even more grievous injury and create in the mind of the injured spouse reasonable apprehension that it will be harmful or unsafe to live with the other party. The principle that cruelty may be inferred from the whole facts and matrimonial relations of the parties and interaction in their daily life disclosed by the evidence is of greater cogency in cases falling under the head of mental cruelty. Thus mental cruelty has to be established from the facts (Mulla's Hindu Law, 17th Edn., Vol. II, p. 91).

20. In the case in hand the foundation of the case of "cruelty" as a matrimonial offence is based on the allegations made by the husband that right from day one after marriage the wife was not prepared to cooperate with him in having sexual intercourse on account of which the marriage could not be consummated. When the husband offered to have the wife treated medically, she refused. As the condition of her health deteriorated she became irritating and unreasonable in her behaviour towards the husband. She misbehaved with his friends and relations. She even abused him, scolded him and caught hold of his shirt collar in the presence of elderly persons like Shri S.K. Jain. This Court in the case of Dr N.G. Dastanev.S. Dastane[(1975) 2 SCC 326 : AIR 1975 SC 1534] observed: (SCC p. 346, para 56)

"Sex plays an important role in marital life and cannot be separated from other factors which lend to matrimony a sense of fruition and fulfilment."

21. Cruelty for the purpose of Section 13(1)(i-a) is to be taken as a behaviour by one spouse towards the other, which causes reasonable apprehension in the mind of the latter that it is not safe for him or her to continue the matrimonial relationship with the other. Mental cruelty is a state of mind and feeling with one of the spouses due to the behaviour or behavioural pattern by the other. Unlike the case of physical cruelty, mental cruelty is difficult to establish by direct evidence. It is necessarily a matter of inference to be drawn from the facts and circumstances of the case. A feeling of anguish, disappointment and frustration in one spouse caused by the conduct of the other can only be appreciated on assessing the attending facts and circumstances in which the two partners of matrimonial life have been living. The inference has to be drawn from the attending facts and circumstances taken cumulatively. In case of mental cruelty it will not be a correct approach to take an instance of misbehaviour in isolation and then pose the question whether such behaviour is sufficient by itself to cause mental cruelty. The approach should be to take the cumulative effect of the facts and circumstances emerging from the evidence on record and then draw a fair inference whether the petitioner in the divorce petition has been subjected to mental cruelty due to conduct of the other."

''क्रूरता कभी कभी ऐसे कृत्यो से भी उत्पन्न होती है जिनका कोई प्रत्यक्ष और मूर्ति रूप नही होता है और न ही साक्ष्य से स्थापित किया जा सकता है। लेकिन इनकी अनुभूति अवश्य की जा सकती हैं इस श्रेणी का तथ्य इस अभिकथन मे शामिल है कि विपक्षी ने शादी के तत्काल बाद सुहागरात और उसके बाद प्रार्थी के साथ दाम्पत्य जीवन के आनन्द की अनुभूति और अनुभव से प्रार्थी को वंचित रखा और विपक्षी ने कोई सहभागिता नही की।''"

"Cruelty sometimes arises from the acts which are not in tangible and physical state nor can they be established with evidence. But they can certainly be realised. This statement includes such a category of fact that the opposite party deprived the applicant of marital bliss, and did not ensure participation, on the wedding night immediately after the marriage and also on later occasion."

(English Translation by Court)

36. In the opinion of Court, recital contained in paragraph 3 at page 73 is not a finding but a recital regarding explanation offered by Court to the pleading raised by plaintiff-respondent. Even otherwise also when paragraphs 4, 5 and 10 of plaint relied upon by learned Senior Counsel are examined, the same appear to be contradictory to paragraphs 3 and 6 of plaint itself. In other words there is no categorical pleading regarding denial of physical pleasure to plaintiff-appellant after marriage on account of non establishment of conjugal relationship between parties. Even in cross-examination of D.W.1, i.e. Dr. Sarita, we find that no specific question was put to her regarding aforesaid. Reliance placed upon written statement of defendant-appellant is also of no help as averments/allegations made in paragraphs 4, 5 and 10 of plaint were not admitted by defendant-appellant. Furthermore, suit filed by plaintiff-respondent has not been decreed on the ground of denial of physical pleasure. Therefore, once Court below has not taken this as a basis for passing decree of divorce, the impugned judgement and decree cannot be supported on this ground as judgement contains reasons in support of decree.

37. Mr. Ravi Kiran Jain, learned Senior Counsel has alternatively submitted that marriage of parties has broken down irretrievably as parties are living separately since 2.7.2004, therefore, decree of divorce granted by Court below should not be reversed.

38. The argument raised by learned Senior Counsel appears to be attractive at the first flush. However, upon deeper scrutiny, the same is devoid of substance.

39. The issue relating to irretrievable break down of marriage has been considered by a Division Bench of this Court in First Appeal No. 525 of 2006 (Smt. Kavita Sharma Vs. Neeraj Sharma) decided on 7.2.2018, wherein it has been observed in paragraph 28:-

"28. The above findings recorded by Court below could not be shown perverse or contrary to record. Having considered the fact that parties are living separately from decades, we are also of the view that marriage between two is irretrievable and has broken down completely. Irretrievable breakdown of marriage is not a ground for divorce under Act, 1955. But, where marriage is beyond repair on account of bitterness created by the acts of the husband or the wife or of both, Courts have always taken irretrievable breakdown of marriage as a very weighty circumstance amongst others necessitating severance of marital tie. A marriage which is dead for all purposes cannot be revived by the Court's verdict, if the parties are not willing. This is because marriage involves human sentiments and emotions and if they are dried-up there is hardly any chance of their springing back to life on account of artificial reunion created by the Court's decree. On the ground of irretrievable marriage, Courts have allowed decree of divorce and reference may be made to Naveen Kohli v. Neelu Kohli (2006) 4 SCC 558 and Rishikesh Sharma Vs. Saroj Sharma, 2006(12) SCALE 282. It is also noteworthy that in Naveen Kohli v. Neelu Kohli (supra) Court made recommendation to Union of India that Act, 1955 be amended to incorporate irretrievable breakdown of marriage as a ground for grant of divorce. "

40. Similarly this Court in First Appeal No. 792 of 2008 (Ashwani Kumar Kohli Vs. Smt. Anita) decided on 17.11.2016 has also considered this question and observed in paragraphs 7, 8, 10, 11, 12 and 13 as under:-

"7. Therefore, point for adjudication in this appeal is "whether a decree of reversal can be passed by granting divorce to the appellant on the ground which was not subject matter of adjudication before the Court below and is being raised for the first time in appeal".

8. Under the provisions of Act, 1955 there is no ground like any "irretrievable breakdown of marriage", justifying divorce. It is a doctrine laid down by judicial precedents, in particular, Supreme Court in exercise of powers under Article 142 of the Constitution has granted decree of divorce on the ground of irretrievable breakdown of marriage.

10. This aspect has been considered by this Court in Ram Babu Babeley Vs. Smt. Sandhya AIR 2006 (All) 12 = 2006 AWC 183 and it has laid down certain inferences from various authorities of Supreme Court, which read as under:-

"(i) The irretrievable break down of marriage is not a ground for divorce by itself. But while scrutinizing the evidence on record to determine whether the grounds on which divorce is sought are made out, this circumstance can be taken into consideration as laid down by Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of Savitri Pandey v. prem Chand Pandey, (2002) 2 SCC 73 and V. Bhagat versus D. Bhagat, AIR 1994 SC 710.

(ii) No divorce can be granted on the ground of irretrievable break down of marriage if the party seeking divorce on this ground is himself or herself at fault for the above break down as laid down in the case of Chetan Dass Versus Kamla Devi, AIR 2001 SC 1709, Savitri Pandey v. prem Chand Pandey, (2002) 2 SCC 73 and Shyam Sunder Kohli v. Sushma Kohli, (2004) 7 SCC 747.

(iii) The decree of divorce on the ground that the marriage had been irretrievably broken down can be granted in those cases where both the parties have levelled such allegations against each other that the marriage appears to be practically dead and the parties can not live together as laid down in Chandra Kala Trivedi versus Dr. SP Trivedi, (1993) 4 SCC 232.

(iv)The decree of divorce on the ground that the marriage had been irretrievably broken down can be granted in those cases also where the conduct or averments of one party have been so much painful for the other party (who is not at fault) that he cannot be expected to live with the offending party as laid down in the cases of V. Bhagat versus D. Bhagat, (supra), Ramesh Chander versus Savitri, (1995) 2 SCC 7, Ashok Hurra versus Rupa Bipin Zaveri, 1997(3) AWC 1843 (SC), 1997(3) A.W.C. 1843(SC) and A. Jayachandra versus Aneel Kaur, (2005) 2 SCC 22.

(v) The power to grant divorce on the ground of irretrievable break down of marriage should be exercised with much care and caution in exceptional circumstances only in the interest of both the parties, as observed by Hon'ble Apex Court at paragraph No. 21 of the judgment in the case of V. Bhagat and Mrs. D. Bhagat, AIR (supra) and at para 12 in the case of Shyam Sunder Kohli versus Sushma Kohli, (supra)."

11. The above authorities have been followed by this Court in "Pradeep Kumar Vs. Smt. Vijay Lakshmi' in 2015 (4) ALJ 667 wherein one of us (Hon'ble Sudhir Agarwal, J.) was a member of the Bench.

12. In Vishnu Dutt Sharma Vs. Manju Sharma, (2009) 6 SCC 379, it was held that under Section 13 of Act 1955 there is no ground of irretrievable breakdown of marriage for granting decree of divorce. Court said that it cannot add such a ground to Section 13, as that would amount to amendment of

Act, which is the function of legislature. It also referred to some judgments of Supreme Court in which dissolution of marriage was allowed on the ground of irretrievable breakdown but held that those judgments do not lay down any precedent. Supreme Court very categorically observed as under:-

"If we grant divorce on the ground of irretrievable breakdown, then we shall by judicial verdict be adding a clause to Section 13 of the Act to the effect that irretrievable breakdown of marriage is also a ground for divorce. In our opinion, this can only be done by the legislature and not by the Court. It is for the Parliament to enact or amend the law and not for the Court. Hence, we do not find force in the submission of learned counsel for the appellant."

13. The above view has been followed in Darshan Gupta Vs. Radhika Gupta (2013) 9 SCC 1. Similar view was expressed in "Gurubux Singh Vs. Harminder Kaur' (2010) 14 SCC 301. This Court also has followed the above view in Shailesh Kumari Vs. Amod Kumar Sachan 2016 (115) ALR 689."

41. In the case in hand, we find that parties have not been living separately on account of their own free will. The record shows, it is plaintiff-respondent, who has refused to keep defendant-appellant with him. The defendant-appellant has herself not deserted plaintiff-respondent. In this view of the matter, the argument raised by learned counsel for plaintiff-respondent that there has been an irretrievable break down of marriage has no factual foundation. That apart this Court in Ashwani Kumar Kohli (supra) has held that divorce cannot be granted on aforesaid ground particularly when such a plea is raised by one party alone. In addition to aforesaid, decree of divorce was not prayed for on ground of irretrievable break down of marriage as the parties are alleged to have been living separately since 17.3.2002. The plaint was presented in the year 2003 whereas, divorce petition was finally decided vide judgement and decree dated 20.12.2006, passed by Principal Judge (Family Court), Meerut in Matrimonial Case No. 127 of 2003 (Rajesh Kumar Chaudhary Vs. Savita). For a period of fourteen long years, plaintiff-respondent kept quiet and now for the first time, this issue is being raised. We are of the considered opinion that in view of what has been stated above, plaintiff-respondent is estopped from raising this plea.

42. In view of discussions made herein above, appeal is liable to succeed. It is accordingly allowed. Judgement and decree dated 20.12.2006, passed by Principal Judge, Family Court, Meerut in Matrimonial Case No. 123 of 2003 (Dr. Vikas Kannaujia Vs. Smt. (Dr.) Sarita), are hereby set aside. The suit filed by plaintiff respondent shall stand dismissed. Parties to bear their own cost.

REVISIONAL JURISDICTION
CRIMINAL SIDE
DATED: LUCKNOW 13.12.2018

BEFORE

THE HON'BLE MOHD. FAIZ ALAM KHAN, J.

Criminal Revision No. 95 of 2010

State of U.P. ...Revisionist
Versus
Amar Bahadur & Ors. ...Opp. Parties

Counsel for the Revisionist:
Govt. Advocate

Counsel for the Opposite Parties:

A. Cr.P.C., 1973 - Section 397/401 and Section 321 -Application for withdrawal of prosecution rejected by trial court - Public Prosecutor-Duty and powers- is not empowered to exercise his authority under Section 321 Cr.P.C. in a whimsical and arbitrary manner and to follow the command of the Government blindly but is required to apply his mind-Discretion of Trial Court - is not to be exercised mechanically and the consent applied for has not to be granted as a matter of formality or for the mere asking-Pendency of Cross Case - not in the interest of justice that no decision has been taken to withdraw from prosecution of the cross case - Trial of present case resulting in conviction of accused-Revision rendered infructuous.

(Para 16,17 & 18)

The Public Prosecutor is not empowered to exercise its authority under Section 321 Cr.P.C. in a whimsical and arbitrary manner and to follow the command of the Government blindly but he is required to apply his mind on the parameters set forth by the Apex Court and this power can only be exercised for just, reasonable and valid reasons, for public good.

Paucity of evidence is not the only ground on which a public prosecutor may withdraw from the prosecution.

The Court has to exercise its judicial discretion with reference to such material as is then available to it and in exercise of this discretion the Court has to satisfy itself that the executive function of the public prosecutor has not been improperly exercised and that the grounds urged in support of the application for withdrawal are legitimate grounds in furtherance of public justice.

The application for withdrawal from prosecution moved by prosecutor in the present case is not commensurate with the guidelines laid down by the Supreme Court in Sheo Nandan Paswan and Rajendra Kumar Jain (supra), more so when no decision has been taken to withdraw from prosecution of the cross case, therefore their appears no illegality or impropriety in the judgment of the Court below whereby the application of the Prosecutor to withdraw from prosecution has been rejected.

The Session Trial case wherein application 40-A was moved has been decided on merits by the Additional District and Session Judge Court No.3, Raibareilly vide judgment and order dated 26.04.2017 and accused persons have been convicted under section 427 IPC and sentenced with fine of Rs. 2000/- each. The adjudication of criminal case on merits also renders this criminal revision infructuous. The revision preferred by the State is devoid of merit and liable to be dismissed at the admission stage.

2. Ram Naresh Pandey's case 1957 SCR 279: (AIR 1957 SC 389)

4. Rajendra Kumar Jain Vs St. through Special Police Establishment & ors. AIR 1980 SC 1510

(Delivered by Hon'ble Mohd. Faiz Alam Khan, J.)

1. Heard learned A.G.A. on behalf of the State on the point of admission.

2. This Criminal Revision has been preferred by the State of U.P. against the order dated 18.01.2010 of Additional District and Sessions Judge Court No. 6, Raibareilly, whereby an application No. 40-A moved under Section 321 of the Cr.P.C. to grant permission to withdraw from prosecution of Session Trial No. 137 of 2007 (State Vs. Amar Bahadur) under Sections 147, 148, 149, 307, 427, 506 I.P.C has been rejected.

This Revision petition is pending for the last ten years at the stage of admission.

3. Brief facts necessary for the disposal of this criminal revision are that one Devendra Bahadur Singh lodged an First Information Report that on 08.02.1995 at about 7:00 p.m. accused persons Ayodhya, Amar Bahadur, Om Prakash s/o Gajadhar , Shankara and Vijay Kumar along with other persons started demolishing the boundary wall of his plot. On being confronted all accused persons fired Gun shots on him. He did not get injured in the incident however he sustained monetory loss by such demolition of the wall. On the information so provided by Sri Devendra Bahadur Singh an First Information Report was registered at Case Crime No. 46 of 1995 under Sections 147, 148, 149, 307, 427, 504, 506 I.P.C. at Police Station Lal Ganj District Raibareilly.After investigation Charge Sheet was also filed in the above mentioned sections.

4. The case being triable by the Court of Sessions was committed to the Court of Session and charges in the above mentioned sections were framed accordingly.

5. During the course of trial an application (40-A) was moved by Sri Ashok Kumar Srivastava District Government Counsel (Criminal) enclosing therewith the Government Order dated 28.02.2009 stating that accused Ayodhya Prasad and Smt. Shankara Devi had died and the nature of Fire Arms, allegdly used in the incident, have not been mentioned in the F.I.R. It is also stated that nobody had been injured in the incident and the incident had occurred in the spur of the moment, therefore, permission be granted to withdraw from the prosecution, so that the valuable time of the Court and Government money may be saved.

6. After hearing parties the Court below rejected this application by the impugned order dated 18.01.2010 on the ground that the fact whether accused persons may be convicted or acquitted can only be decided after full fledge criminal trial, there is a cross version of the incident regarding which an F.I.R. had also been lodged by the accused persons at Case Crime No. 59 of 1995 under Section 147, 504, 435, 379, 506, 307 I.P.C. Section 3(2)(5), 3(1)(10) of SC/ST Act, at Police Station Lalganj District Raibareilly.The Cross Case is pending in the Court of Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate Court No.1, Raibareilly and both these incidents are stated to have occurred on 08.02.1995.The trial Court, while rejecting the application, concluded that it is not in the interest of justice that from amongst cross cases consent be given only in one case to withdraw from prosecution.

7. The Stae Government feeling Aggrieved by this order has challenged the same in this criminal revision .

8. Sri Aniruddh Kumar Singh, learned A.G.A. overwhelmingly argued that the Court below has passed the impugned order without looking into the fact that there was no hope of conviction in the case as there were inherent weaknesses in the case and there is no bar to seek withdrawal from prosecution even if there is a cross case of the incident remained pending. He further submits that a decision to this effect is usually taken by the prosecutor and in this case the prosecutor after applying his mind came to the conclusion that it is for the public good and Public peace and in the interest of society that he should be permitted to withdraw from the prosecution of this case, therefore, the Court below has materially erred in rejecting the application of the prosecutor moved under Section 321 of the Cr.P.C. He requested that the order of the Court below be quashed.

9. During the course of argument he also submits that the Session Trial No. 137 of 2007, wherein the above stated application for withdrawal from prosecution was moved, has also been decided on merits by Additional District and Sessions Judge Court No.3, Raibareilly vide judgment and order dated 26.04.2017 whereby the accused persons Amar Bahadur and Om Prakash have been convicted under Section 427 and had been sentencedto pay fine of Rs.2000/- each or two months simple imprisonment in default. He also submits a computerized copy of the judgment dated 26.04.2017 passed in Session Trial No. 137 of 2007 ,State Vs. Amar Bahadur and Others, which has been taken on record.

10. I have given thoughtful consideration to the submissions of Ld. A.G.A. and have also perused the record in the background of the arguments.

Section 321 of the Cr.P.C. provides as under:

"Withdrawal from prosecution. The Public Prosecutor or Assistant Public Prosecutor in charge of a case may, with the consent of the Court, at any time before the judgment is pronounced, withdraw from the prosecution of any person either generally or in respect of any one or more of the offences for which he is tried; and, upon such withdrawal,-

(a) if it is made before a charge has been framed, the accused shall be discharged in respect of such offence or offences;

(b) if it is made after a charge has been framed, or when under this Code no charge is required, he shall be acquitted in respect of such offence or offences: Provided that where such offence-

(i) was against any law relating to a matter to which the executive power of the Union extends, or

(ii) was investigated by the Delhi Special Police Establishment under the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act, 1946 (25 of 1946), or

(iii) involved the misappropriation or destruction of, or damage to, any property belonging to the Central Government, or

(iv) was committed by a person in the service of the Central Government while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty, and the Prosecutor in charge of the case hag hot been appointed by the Central Government, he shall not, unless he hag been permitted by the Central Government to do so, move the Court for its consent to withdraw from the prosecution and the Court shall, before according consent, direct the Prosecutor to produce before it the permission granted by the Central Government to withdraw from the prosecution."

11. The scope and ambit of Section 321 of the Cr.P.C. was considered by the Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in a public interest litigation namely In Re withdrawal of criminal cases by State Government (State of U.P. & Others) PIL No.16507/2015 decided on 20.02.2017 where in after discussing at length various authorities on the subject the Full Bench concluded as under:

"In the background of the provisions, that have been quoted above, and various judicial pronouncement, that has been noted above, the issues referred are answerred by us as follows:

Issue No.1: State Government is not at all free to exercise its authority under Section 321 Cr.P.C. in whimsical or arbitrary manner or for extraneous considerations apart from just and valid reasons.

Issue No.II: The decision taken by the State Government for withdrawal of the case communicated to the Public Prosecutor, is open to judicial review under Article 226 of the Constitution of India on the same parameters as are prescribed for invoking the authority of judicial review.

Issue No.III: The State Government is free to act under the parameters provided for to make scrutiny of criminal cases pending in subordinate courts to find out as to whether they deserve withdrawal under Section 321 Cr.P.C. or not as it is in the realm of the policy decision, and call on the said score has to be taken by the State Government and same has to be based on the parameters required to be observed while moving an application for withdrawal of prosecution under Section 321 Cr.P.C."

12. In Sheo Nandan Paswan vs. State of Bihar reported in AIR 1987 Supreme Court Page 877, Supreme Court while expressing majority view held as under :-

"44. I respectfully agree with the legal position flowing from S. 321 of the Code of Criminal Procedure as explained by Krishna Iyer and Chinnappa Reddy, JJ. in respect of cases relating to Bansi Lal and Fernandes in R. K. Jain v. State through Special Police Establishment, (1980) 3 SCR 982 : (AIR 1980 SC 1510). In that case Chinnappa eddy, J. has summarised the true legal position thus :

"1. Under the scheme of the Code prosecution of an offender for a serious offence is primarily the responsibility of the Executive.

2.The withdrawal from the prosecution is an executive function of the Public Prosecutor.

3. The discretion to withdraw from the prosecution is that of the Public Prosecutor and none else, and so, he cannot surrender that discretion to someone else.

4. The Government may suggest to the Public Prosecutor that he may withdraw from the prosecution but none can compel him to do so.

5. The Public Prosecutor may withdraw from the prosecution not merely on the ground of paucity of evidence but on other relevant grounds as well in order to further the broad ends of public justice, public order and peace. The broad ends of public justice will certainly include appropriate social, economic and, political purposes sans Tammany Hall enterprise.

6. The Public Prosecutor is an officer of the Court and responsible to the Court.

7. The Court performs a supervisory function in granting its consent to the withdrawal.

8. The Court's duty is not to reappreciate the grounds which led the Public Prosecutor to request withdrawal from the prosecution but to consider whether the Public Prosecutor applied his mind as a free agent, uninfluenced by irrelevant and extraneous considerations. The Court has a special duty in this regard as it is the ultimate repository of legislative confidence in granting or withholding its consent to withdrawal from the prosecution.

We may add it shall be the duty of the Public Prosecutor to inform the Court and it shall be the duty of the Court to apprise itself of the reasons which prompt the Public Prosecutor to withdraw from the prosecution.. The Court has a responsibility and a stake in the administration of criminal justice and so has the Public Prosecutor, its 'Minister of Justice'. Both have a duty to protect the administration of criminal justice against possible abuse or misuse by the Executive by resort to the provisions of S. 321, Criminal Procedure Code. The independence of the judiciary requires that once the case has travelled to the Court, the Court and its officers alone must have control over the case and decide what is to be done in each case."

"45. In the circumstances of this case I find it difficult to say that the Public Prosecutor had not applied his mind to the case or had conducted himself in an improper way. If in the light of the material before him the Public Prosecutor has taken the view that there was no prospect of securing a conviction of the accused it cannot be said that his view is an unreasonable one. We should bear in mind the nature of the role of a Public Prosecutor. He is not a persecutor. He is the representative not of an ordinary party to a controversy, but of sovereignty whose obligation to govern impartially is as compelling as its obligation to govern at all, and whose interest, therefore, in a criminal prosecution is not that it shall win a case, but that justice shall be done. As such he is in a peculiar and very definite sense the servant of the land the two-fold aim of which is that guilt shall not escape or innocence suffer. He may prosecute with earnest and vigour indeed, he should do so. But while he may strike hard blows, he is not at liberty to strike foul ones. It is as much his duty to refrain from improper methods calculated to produce a wrongful conviction as it is to use every legitimate one to bring about a just one. (See Berger v. United States, (1934) 295 US 78). It is a privilege of an accused that he should be prosecuted by a Public Prosecutor in all cases involving heinous charges whenever the State undertakes prosecution. The judgment of a Public Prosecutor under S. 321 of the Criminal P.C., 1973 cannot be lightly interfered with unless the Court comes to the conclusion that he has not applied his mind or that his decision is not bona fide."

"70. The section gives no indication as to the grounds on which the Public Prosecutor may make the application, or the considerations on which the Court is to grant its consent, The initiative is that of the Public Prosecutor and what the Court has to do is only to give its consent and not to determine any matter judicially. The judicial function implicit in the exercise of the judicial discretion for granting the consent would normally mean that the Court has to satisfy itself that the executive function of the Public Prosecutor has not been improperly exercised, or that it is not an attempt to interfere with the normal course of justice for illegitimate reasons or purposes."

"75. Since S. 321 does not give any guideline regarding the grounds on which a withdrawal application can be made, such guidelines have to be ascertained with reference to decided cases under this section as well as its predecessor S. 494. I do not propose to consider all the authorities cited before me for the reason that this Court had occasion to consider the question in all its aspects in some of its decisions. Suffice it to say that in the judgments rendered by various High Courts, public policy, interests of the administration, inexpediency to proceed with the prosecution for reasons of State and paucity of evidence were considered good grounds for withdrawal in many cases and not good grounds for withdrawal in certain other cases depending upon the peculiar facts and circumstances of the cases in those decisions. AIR 1932 Cal 699 (Giribala Dasi v. Mader Gazi), AIR 1943 Sind 161 (Emperor v. Sital Das) (Milan Mal?), AIR 1936 Cal 356 (FB) (Harihar Sinha v. Emperor), AIR 1941) Patna 233 (FB) (The King v. Moule Bux). AIR 1952 Raj 42 and AIR 1938 PC 266 are some of the cases which were brought to our notice."

13. The Court than quoted with authority the following paragraph from Ram Naresh Pandey's case reported in 1957 SCR 279 : (AIR 1957 SC 389), "His discretion in such matters has necessarily to be exercised with reference to such material as is by then available and it is not a prima facie judicial determination of any specific issue. The Magistrate's functions in these matters are not only supplementary, at a higher level, to those of the executive but are intended to prevent abuse. Section 494 requiring the consent of the Court for withdrawal by the public prosecutor is more in line with this scheme, than with the provisions of the Code relating to inquiries and trials by Court. It cannot be taken to place on the Court the responsibility for a prima facie determination of the triable issue. For instance the discharge that results therefrom need not always conform to the standard of "no prima facie case" under Sections 209 (1) and 253(1) or of 'groundlessness' under Sections 209 (2) and 253(2). This is not to say that a consent is to be lightly given on the application of the public prosecutor, without a careful and proper scrutiny of the grounds on which the application for consent is made."

Supreme Court than quoted excerpts from, M. N. Sankaranarayanan Nair v. P. V. Balakrishnan ,AIR 1972 SC 496,Bansi Lal v. Chandan Lal, AIR 1976 SC 370,Balwant Singh v. State of Bihar ,AIR 1977 SC 2265, Subhash Chander v. State AIR 1980 SC 423, Rajendra Kumar Jain v. State, AIR 1980 SC 1510),Sheonandan Paswan. v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 1125 and hold in para "77.that all above decisions have followed the reasoning of Ram Naresh Pandey's case (AIR 1957 SC 389) and the principles settled in that decision were not doubted."

It is also desirable to place on record the minority view expressed by Chief Justice Bhagwati ,as His Lordship than was, Speking on behalf of himself and Justice Oza in following words :-

"32. When the application for consent to the withdrawal from the prosecution comes for consideration, the Court has to decide whether to grant such consent or not. The function which the Court exercises in arriving at this decision, as pointed out by this Court in State of Bihar v. Ram Naresh, (AIR 1957 SC 389), is a judicial function. The Court has to exercise its judicial discretion with reference to such material as is then available to it and in exercise of this discretion the Court has to satisfy itself that the executive function of the public prosecutor has not been improperly exercised and that the grounds urged in support of the application for withdrawal are legitimate grounds in furtherance of public justice. The discretion has not to be exercised by the Court mechanically and the consent applied for has not to be granted as a matter of formality or for the mere asking. The Court has to consider the material placed before it and satisfy itself that the grant of consent would serve the interest of justice. That is why this Court in State of Bihar v. Ram Naresh (supra) examined the entire material which was available to it for the purpose of coming to the conclusion that there was no evidence worth the name on the basis of which the prosecution could be sustained against the accused Mahesh Desai. This Court pointed out that consent is not to be lightly given on the application of public prosecutor "without a careful and proper scrutiny of the grounds on which the application for consent is made".(Emphasis Mine)

14. Similarly in State of Orissa vs. Chandrika Mohapatra and others reported in 1977 CRI. L. J. 773 Supreme Court held as under:

"6. It will, therefore, be seen that it is not sufficient for the Public Prosecutor merely to say that it is not expedient to proceed with the prosecution. He has to make out some ground which would show that the prosecution is sought to be with-drawn because inter alia the prosecution may not be able to produce sufficient evidence to sustain the charge or that the prosecution does not appear to be well founded or that there are other circumstances which clearly show that the object of administration of justice would not be advanced or furthered by going on with the prosecution. The ultimate guiding consideration must always be the interest of administration of justice and that is the touchstone on which the question must be determined whether the prosecution should be allowed to be withdrawn.

10. We have already discussed the principles which should govern cases of this kind where an application is made by the Public Prosecutor for grant of consent to the withdrawal of prosecution under Section 494 of the Criminal Procedure Code. We have pointed out that the paramount consideration in all these cases must be the interest of administration of justice. No hard and fast rule can be laid down nor can any categories of cases be defined in which consent should be granted or refused. It must ultimately depend on the facts and circumstances of each case in the light of what is necessary in order to promote the ends of justice, because the objective of every judicial process must be the attainment of justice."

15. Supreme Court again considered this issue in Rajendra Kumar Jain vs. State through Special Police Establishment and others reported in AIR 1980 Supreme Court 1510 laid down the principles which will govern the issue of withdrawal of prosecution in Para 13 A and 14 of the judgment the same are produced as under:

"13-A. We may add, it shall be the duty of the Public Prosecutor to inform the Court and it shall be the duty of the Court to appraise itself of the reasons which prompt the Public Prosecutor to withdraw from the prosecution. The Court has a responsibility and a stake in the administration of criminal justice and so has the Public Prosecutor, its 'Minister of Justice'. Both have a duty to protect the administration of criminal justice against possible abuse or misuse by the Executive by resort to the provisions of s. 321 Criminal Procedure Code. The independence of the judiciary requires that once the case has travelled to the Court, the Court and its officers alone must have control over the case and decide what is to be done in each case.

14. We have referred to the precedents of this Court where it has been said that paucity of evidence is not the only ground on which the Public Prosecutor may withdraw from the prosecution. In the past, we have often known how expedient and necessary it is in the public interest for the Public Prosecutor to withdraw from prosecutions arising out of mass agitations, communal riots, regional disputes, industrial conflicts, student unrest etc. Wherever issues involve the emotions and there is a surcharge of violence in the atmosphere it has often been found necessary to withdraw from prosecutions in order to restore peace, to free the atmosphere from the surcharge of violence, to bring about a peaceful settlement of issues and to preserve the calm which may follow the storm. To persist with prosecutions where emotive issues are involved in the name of vindicating the law may even be utterly counter-productive. An elected Government, sensitive and responsive to the feelings and emotions of the people, will be amply justified if for the purpose of creating an atmosphere of goodwill or for the purpose of not disturbing a calm which has descended it decides not to prosecute the offenders involved or not to proceed further with prosecutions already launched. In such matters who but the Government, can and should decide in the first instance, whether it should be baneful or beneficial to launch or continue prosecutions. If the Government decides that it would be in the public interest to withdraw from prosecutions, how is the Government to go about this task ?"

16. From the authorities cited herein above it emerges that the Public Prosecutor is not empowered to exercise its authority under Section 321 Cr.P.C. in a whimsical and arbitrary manner and to follow the command of the Government blindly but he is required to apply his mind on the parameters set forth by the Apex Court in above mentioned authorities and this power can only be exercised for just, reasonable and valid reasons, for public good, as has been specifically held in the cases of Sheo Nandan Paswan and Rajendra Kumar Jain (Supra) .Moreover, paucity of evidence is not the only ground on which a public prosecutor may withdraw from the prosecution, In fact in the case of Rajendra Kumar Jain (Supra) Supreme Court has given wide guidelines which may guide the State Government in taking the decision under Section 321 of the Cr.P.C. In Sheo Nandan Paswan (Supra) Supreme Court emphasized that when the application for consent to the withdrawal from the prosecution comes for consideration, the Court has to decide whether to grant such consent or not. The Court has to exercise its judicial discretion with reference to such material as is then available to it and in exercise of this discretion the Court has to satisfy itself that the executive function of the public prosecutor has not been improperly exercised and that the grounds urged in support of the application for withdrawal are legitimate grounds in furtherance of public justice. The discretion has not to be exercised by the Court mechanically and the consent applied for has not to be granted as a matter of formality or for the mere asking.

17. From the principles of Law as enunciated in the authorities mentioned herein above, the application for withdrawal from prosecution moved by prosecutor in the present case is not commensurate with the guidelines laid down by the Supreme Court in Sheo Nandan Paswan and Rajendra Kumar Jain (supra), more so when no decision has been taken to withdraw from prosecution of the cross case , therefore their appears no illegality or impropriety in the judgment of the Court below whereby the application of the Prosecutor to withdraw from prosecution has been rejected. In these circumstances, this Court is of the considered view that the findings recorded by the trial Court, while rejecting the application 40-A of the prosecutor under Section 321 of Cr.P.C., could not be faulted in any manner and there is no requirement of any interference in the impugned order.

18. Moreover, during the pendency of this Revision Petition, the Session Trial case wherein application 40-A was moved has been decided on merits by the Additional District and Session Judge Court No.3, Raibareilly vide judgment and order dated 26.04.2017 and accused persons have been convicted under section 427 IPC and sentenced with fine of Rs. 2000/- each. The adjudication of criminal case on merits also renders this criminal revision infructuous. So on this score also the revision lacks merits. The net result of the above mentioned discussion is that the revision preferred by the State is devoid of merit and liable to be dismissed at the admission stage.

19. The revision is dismissed.

A. Railway Claims Tribunal Act, 1987 - Section 16 r/w Section 123(c)(2) of the Railways Act, 1989 - Railway Accidents and Untoward Incidents (Compensation) Rules, 1990 - Claim Petition - Computation of compensation - Whether the quantum of compensation should be as per the prescribed rate of compensation as on the date of application/incident or on the date of order awarding compensation ?

Held: -Tribunal should first calculate the compensation as per the schedule operating on the date of the accident, along with a reasonable rate of interest applicable till the date of award. If the amount, so calculated is less than the amount prescribed under the schedule on the date of award, the Tribunal should award the higher of the said two amounts towards compensation. (Para 15)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Rakesh Srivastava, J.)

1. This first appeal from order has been filed challenging the judgment and award dated 12.3.2018 passed by the Railway Claims Tribunal, Lucknow Bench, Lucknow in Case No.OA/II/U/870/09, Om Prakash and another vs. Union of India and others.

2. The claimants-respondents filed a claim petition under Section 16 of The Railway Claims Tribunal Act, 1987 for compensation for the death of their son Umesh Kumar as a result of an untoward incident. It was alleged that on 21.9.2009, Umesh Kumar while travelling from Faizabad Railway Station to Rudauli Railway Station by train no.3 FBL Passenger (Faizabad Lucknow Passenger) accidentally fell down from the train at Deorakot Railway Station and sustained serious injuries. He was admitted in District Hospital, Faizabad, where he died during his treatment. The deceased, it was alleged, was travelling as a bona fide passenger holding valid journey ticket, which was lost during the incident.

3. A written statement was filed on behalf of the appellant denying the averments made in the claim application. Inter alia it was stated therein that the alleged incident was not an untoward incident and as such it did not fall within the ambit of Section 123(c)(2) of the Railways Act, 1989 (for short 'Act'). It was further alleged that the deceased was not a passenger of the train in question.

4. After taking into account the oral and documentary evidence led by the parties, the Tribunal, by the judgment and order dated 1.1.2017, held that the deceased was a bona fide railway passenger and he died as a result of an untoward incident in terms of the provisions of Section 123 of the Act. The tribunal held the claimants-respondents to be entitled to compensation of Rs.8 Lakhs along with interest. The relevant portion of the award is extracted below: -

"The application is allowed. The respondent railway shall pay the applicants a sum of Rs.8,00,000/- Rs.Eight lakhs) as per apportionment shown above.

The awarded sum will carry simple interest @ 6% per annum as under keeping in view the Gazette Notification dated 22.12.2016 effective from 01.01.2017:

a) from the date of the application till 31.12.2016 on the compensation amount of Rs. 4,00,000/- existing for the period,

b) from 01.01.2017 till date of the award on the amount of Rs. 8,00,000/- existing at present,

The Respondent shall pay the aforesaid amount together with the interest to the applicant within a period of 90 days from the date of certified copy of the order, failing which, the applicant is entitled to get interest @ 9% per annum from the date of default till actual payment.

i) Out of the compensation amount payable to the applicants No. 1 & 2, namely Om Prakash and Savitri Devi (parents of the deceased), a sum of Rs.4,00,000/- lakhs each with entire proportionate interest on the compensation awarded shall be paid to them, out of which, Rs. 2,00,000/- each shall be paid to them with entire proportionate interest by means of ECS while remaining amount i.e. Rs. 2,00,000/- each shall be invested by way of fix deposit in a nationalized bank for a period of three years.

ii) No order as to costs.

iii) Applicants are directed to furnish their bank account particulars together with copy of pass book in the office of Presenting Officer of this Tribunal for making payment through ECS, failing which the applicants shall not be entitled for interest from the date of this order till submission of Bank particular.

(emphasis supplied)

5. Sri Anuj Dayal, learned counsel for the appellant, after arguing at some length, confined his arguments to the interest awarded by the Tribunal and submitted that in view of the law laid down by the Apex Court in the case o*f Union of India v. Rina Devi, (2019) 3 SCC 572* the maximum compensation to which the respondent is entitled is Rs.8 Lakhs without interest.

6. Per contra, Sri Anil Kumar Srivastava, learned counsel for the respondents has supported the impugned judgment and award.

7. Chapter XIII of the Act deals with the liability of Railway Administration for death and injury to passengers due to accidents. The first section of the Chapter, defines "untoward incident". Section 123, as far as, relevant for the present case, is as under: -

"123. Definitions.--In this Chapter, unless the context otherwise requires --

(c) "untoward incident" means--

(1) (i) to (iii) omitted being not relevant;

(2) the accidental falling of any passenger from a train carrying passengers.

8. Section 124-A of the Act provides as follows: -

"124-A. Compensation on account of untoward incident.--When in the course of working a railway an untoward incident occurs, then whether or not there has been any wrongful act, neglect or default on the part of the Railway Administration such as would entitle a passenger who has been injured or the dependant of a passenger who has been killed to maintain an action and recover damages in respect thereof, the Railway Administration shall, notwithstanding anything contained in any other law, be liable to pay compensation to such extent as may be prescribed and to that extent only for loss occasioned by the death of, or injury to, a passenger as a result of such untoward incident:

Provided that no compensation shall be payable under this section by the Railway Administration if the passenger dies or suffers injury due to--

(a) suicide or attempted suicide by him;

(b*) self-inflicted injury;*

(c) his own criminal act;

(d) any act committed by him in a state of intoxication or insanity;

(e) any natural cause or disease or medical or surgical treatment unless such treatment becomes necessary due to injury caused by the said untoward incident.

Explanation.--For the purposes of this section, "passenger" includes--

(i) a railway servant on duty; and

(ii) a person who has purchased a valid ticket for travelling, by a train carrying passengers, on any date or a valid platform ticket and becomes a victim of an untoward incident."

(emphasis supplied)

9. In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 129 of the Act, the Central Government has framed rules known as Railway Accidents and Untoward Incidents (Compensation) Rules, 1990 (for short 'Rules'). The Rules provide for a schedule prescribing the amount of compensation payable in respect of death and injuries. As per the schedule in force at the time of the incident the compensation for death was Rs.4 Lakhs. During the pendency of the claim petition, by a notification dated 22.12.2016, the schedule to the Rules was amended w.e.f. 1.1.2017. The amount of compensation, which was earlier fixed at Rs.4 Lakhs in case of death was raised to Rs.8 Lakhs.

10. In Rathi Menon v. Union of India, (2001) 3 SCC 714 the Apex Court, with reference to a claim under the Act, held that the compensation payable would be as per the rate of compensation applicable as per the rules at the time of making of the order for the payment of compensation, but in Kalandi Charan Sahoo v. South-East Central Railways, (2019) 12 SCC 387 after referring to Rathi Menon (supra) it was held that the right to compensation arises on the date of the accident, and the applicable rate of compensation would be the one applicable at the time of filing of the claim petition. The apparent conflict between the decisions mentioned above was resolved by the Apex Court in the case of Rina Devi (supra). In the said case the Apex Court inter alia considered the following questions: -

"15.1. i) Whether the quantum of compensation should be as per the prescribed rate of compensation as on the date of application/incident or on the date of order awarding compensation;

ii) Whether principle of strict liability applies;

iii) Whether presence of a body near the railway track is enough to maintain a claim;

iv) Rate of interest.

11. In relation to the first question, in paragraphs 18 and 19 of Rina Devi (supra), the Apex Court opined as under: -

18. ... We are of the view that law in the present context should be taken to be that the liability will accrue on the date of the accident and the amount applicable as on that date will be the amount recoverable but the claimant will get interest from the date of accident till the payment at such rate as may be considered just and fair from time to time. In this context, rate of interest applicable in motor accident claim cases can be held to be reasonable and fair. Once concept of interest has been introduced, principles of the Workmen Compensation Act can certainly be applied and judgment of the four-Judge Bench in Pratap Narain Singh Deo will fully apply. Wherever it is found that the revised amount of applicable compensation as on the date of award of the Tribunal is less than the prescribed amount of compensation as on the date of accident with interest, higher of the two amounts ought to be awarded on the principle of beneficial legislation. Present legislation is certainly a piece of beneficent legislation.

19. Accordingly, we conclude that compensation will be payable as applicable on the date of the accident with interest as may be considered reasonable from time to time on the same pattern as in accident claim cases. If the amount so calculated is less than the amount prescribed as on the date of the award of the Tribunal, the claimant will be entitled to higher of the two amounts. This order will not affect the awards which have already become final and where limitation for challenging such awards has expired, this order will not by itself be a ground for condonation of delay. Seeming conflict in Rathi Menon and Kalandi Charan Sahoo stands explained accordingly. The four-Judge Bench judgment in Pratap Narain Singh Deo holds the field on the subject and squarely applies to the present situation. Compensation as applicable on the date of the accident has to be given with reasonable interest and to give effect to the mandate of beneficial legislation, if compensation as provided on the date of award of the Tribunal is higher than unrevised amount with interest, the higher of the two amounts has to be given."

12. Even though the entire principle of law was lucidly explained by the Apex Court in the case o*f Rina Devi (supra), Apex Court* further clarified the law as laid down in Rina Devi case (supra) in Union of India v. Radha Yadav, (2019) 3 SCC 410 in the following manner: -

"11. The issue raised in the matter does not really require any elaboration as in our view, the judgment of this Court in Rina Devi [Union of India v. Rina Devi, (2019) 3 SCC 572] is very clear. What this Court has laid down is that the amount of compensation payable on the date of accident with reasonable rate of interest shall first be calculated. If the amount so calculated is less than the amount prescribed as on the date of the award, the claimant would be entitled to higher of these two amounts. Therefore, if the liability had arisen before the amendment was brought in, the basic figure would be as per the Schedule as was in existence before the amendment and on such basic figure reasonable rate of interest would be calculated. If there be any difference between the amount so calculated and the amount prescribed in the Schedule as on the date of the award, the higher of two figures would be the measure of compensation. For instance, in case of a death in an accident which occurred before amendment, the basic figure would be Rs 4,00,000. If, after applying reasonable rate of interest, the final figure were to be less than Rs 8,00,000, which was brought in by way of amendment, the claimant would be entitled to Rs 8,00,000. If, however, the amount of original compensation with rate of interest were to exceed the sum of Rs 8,00,000 the compensation would be in terms of figure in excess of Rs 8,00,000. The idea is to afford the benefit of the amendment, to the extent possible. Thus, according to us, the matter is crystal clear. The issue does not need any further clarification or elaboration.

13. Thus, while dealing with a railway claim arising out of the death of a passenger where the claim was instituted before the amendment and the award is given post the amendment and the basic compensation of Rs.4 Lakhs, along with interest does not exceed Rs.8 Lakhs, the claimant shall be entitled to the compensation of Rs.8 Lakhs, keeping in view the beneficent nature of the legislation and the law laid down by the Apex Court in the case of Rina Devi (supra). On the other hand, where the claim was instituted before amendment, but the award was given post the amendment and the basic compensation of Rs.4 Lakhs along with interest exceeds Rs.8 Lakhs, the said amount shall be payable as it is.

14. It is now to be seen as to whether the computation of compensation by the Tribunal in the present matter is in accordance with law or not.

15. In view of the settled legal position, the Tribunal ought to have first calculated the compensation as per the schedule operating on the date of the accident, along with a reasonable rate of interest applicable till the date of award. If the amount, so calculated, was less than the amount prescribed under the schedule on the date of award, the Tribunal should have awarded the higher of the said two amounts towards compensation.

16. In the case at hand, the accident and death occurred on 21.9.2009. The award was made by the Tribunal on 12.3.2018. On the date of accident the compensation payable for death was Rs.4 Lakhs whereas on the date of award it was enhanced to Rs.8 Lakhs. The Tribunal should have taken Rs.4 Lakhs as the basic figure and should have calculated the compensation by applying simple interest @ 6% per annum, as awarded by the Tribunal in this case, from the date of filing of claim petition till the date of award.

17. After taking Rs.4 Lakhs as basic figure, if the interest is calculated on the said amount @ 6% w.e.f. 21.9.2009 i.e. the date of accident till the date of award i.e. 12.3.2009, the amount comes to less than Rs.8 Lakhs. On the date of award the compensation payable in case of death was Rs.8 Lakhs and in view of Rina Devi (supra), the Tribunal ought to have awarded the compensation of Rs.8 Lakhs. The Tribunal has erred in awarding interest over and above Rs.8 Lakhs.

18. The Tribunal has apportioned the compensation between the claimants-respondents. Both of them have been awarded Rs.4 Lakhs each. The Tribunal has issued directions for the payment of half the amount of compensation to the claimants and for the balance amount to be invested in a fixed deposit account in some nationalized bank for a period of three years.

19. The claimants-respondent nos.1 and 2 are 54 and 51 years of age respectively. More than 10 years have passed since the unfortunate incident occurred. There is evidence on record that respondent no.1 is suffering from severe lung disorder and his kidney is also affected and the respondents are in dire need of money to take care of medical expenses of respondent no.1.

20. In view of the above, the judgment and award dated 12.3.2018 is modified and the claimants-respondents are held entitled to a sum of Rs.8 Lakhs as per the apportionment mentioned in the award and in view of the law laid down by the Apex Court in the case of A.V. Padma v. R. Venugopal, (2012) 3 SCC 378 the appellant is directed to release the entire decretal amount of Rs.8 Lakhs in favour of the claimants-respondents forthwith.

21. No order as to costs.

22. The appeal stands disposed of accordingly.

C.S.C., Sri Ashok Shukla.

A. Latches/ Delay - number of posts advertised for the post of Sub - Registrar and Auditor Panchayat were reduced by the respondents - petitioner joined the post of Auditor Panchayat on bonafide belief of reduction of vacancies on genuine grounds - reduction in vacancies were challenged by one named Anoop Singh before the Court - petitioner claims parity with Anoop Singh after a lapse of 15 years - law leans in favour of those who are alert and vigilant

Although there is no period of limitation provided for filing the writ petition under Article 226 of the Constitution of India, yet it should be filed within a reasonable period of time. Delay and latches are relevant factor for a Court of Law to determine the question as to whether the petitioners are entitled to the benefit which has been provided to others or not. (Para 34 & 36)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Irshad Ali, J.)

1). Heard Sri L.P. Mishra, learned counsel for the petitioners and to Sri Kuldeep Pati Tripathi, learned Additional Advocate General for the State-respondents and Sri Ashok Shukla, learned counsel for the respondent-Commission.

2). Brief fact of the case is that 49 vacancies were requisitioned to the Commission for initiation of selection proceeding on the post of Sub Registrar and Auditor Panchayat. In pursuance thereof, an advertisement was issued inviting applications from the eligible and qualified candidates in the year 2001. The petitioners having eligibility criteria as prescribed under the advertisement applied for the post of Sub Registrar as well as on the post of Auditor Panchayat.

3). A selection proceeding was conducted and result of the same was declared by reducing the vacancies from 49 to 10. In the said selection, the petitioners were selected on the post of Auditor Panchayat and joined the post under bonafide belief that the vacancies have been reduced on genuine grounds. One Anoop Kumar Singh filed Writ Petition No.1697 (SB) of 2010 (Anoop Kumar Singh Vs. State of U.P. and others), wherein after exchange of affidavits, this Court passed a judgment with the following direction:

"Resultantly, the writ petition is allowed in the following terms.

1. Since no other candidate, who participated in the selection/examination held pursuant to the advertisement issued in the month of February, 2001, has approached this Court, the directions which are being issued in this judgment and order shall be confined to the petitioner alone.

2. U.P. Public Service Commission shall consider the candidature of the petitioner for his selection to the post of Sub-Registrar in accordance with his merit on the basis of U.P. State Combined Subordinate Services Examination-2001 and in case based on his merit, the petitioner gets selected to the post of Sub-Registrar, recommendation to the State Government for his appointment shall be made by the Commission.

3. The recommendation which may be made by the Commission in respect of the petitioner's appointment to the post of Sub-Registrar shall thereafter be considered by the State Government in accordance with the law and in case the petitioner is found suitable and fit, he shall be appointed on the post of Sub-Registrar against an existing vacancy. However, in case at present no vacancy is available, he shall be appointed and adjusted against any other future vacancy which may occur. The aforesaid exercise shall be completed by the State Government and the Commission within a period of four months from the date of presentation of a certified copy of this order."

4). After the judgment passed on 29.11.2017, the reasons in regard to reducing of vacancies from 49 to 10 came in the knowledge of the petitioners and thereafter, the present writ petition was filed before this Court with the prayer to quash the decision taken by the respondents in reducing the number of vacancies of the post of Sub Registrar from 49 to 10 for which the combined state public service examination was conducted with the prayer for issuance of writ of mandamus commanding the respondents to appoint the petitioners on the post of Sub Registrar on the ground considered by this Court in the judgment referred herein above.

5). Learned counsel for the petitioners submitted that at the time of reducing the vacancies, the reasons were not known to the petitioners. It came in the knowledge of the petitioners, when the judgment by this Court was delivered, wherein the ground was placed before this Court and was recorded in the judgment. Therefore, there are no latches on the part of the petitioners in approaching to this Court. At earlier point of time, the reasons were not known to the petitioners, therefore, they cannot be blamed for the same.

6). His next submission is that the proceeding under Article 226 of the Constitution of India is the proceeding of equity jurisdiction and in case there is arbitrariness on the part of the State and after coming to know the illegalities committed, the person aggrieved has right to come to this Court. He further submitted that no discrimination or distinction can be carved out between the candidates, who are on equal footing and have participated in a selection proceeding under bonafide belief that their right shall not be curtailed on the discrimination created by the State Government. He placed reliance upon certain judgments, which are as under:

i) Prem Chandra and others Vs. State of U.P. and others; Special Appeal No.377 of 2008.

ii) State of Uttar Pradesh and another Vs. Santosh Kumar Mishra and another; (2010) 9 SCC 52.

iii) K.C. Sharma and others Vs. Union of India and others; (1997) 6 SCC 721.

iv) Inder Pal Yadav and others Vs. Union of India and others; (1985) 2 SCC 648.

v) State of Karnataka and others vs. C. Lalitha; (2006) 2 SCC 747.

7). On the other hand, learned Additional Advocate General and Sri Ashok Shukla, learned counsel for the respondents submitted that the petitioners have approached to this Court after a long delay of almost 15 years, as the advertisement was issued in the year 2001 and the selection was completed in the year 2003, therefore, they are not entitled to get relief, as claimed in the present writ petition.

8). Learned Additional Advocate General placed reliance upon certain judgments on the point that under Article 226 of the Constitution of India, writ petition is not maintainable on the ground of latches in regard to those persons, who are not vigilant in regard to their rights. The judgments relied upon by learned Additional Advocate General are referred herein below:

i) U.P. Jal Nigam and another Vs. Jaswant Singh and another; (2006) 11 SCC 464.

ii) State of Uttaranchal and another Vs. Shiv Charan Singh Bhandari and others; (2013) 12 SCC 179.

9). Having heard the rival contentions advanced by learned counsel for the parties, I perused the material on record and the judgments relied upon by learned counsel for the parties.

10). To resolve the controversy involved in the present writ petition, relevant portion of the judgments relied upon by learned counsel for the parties are being quoted below;

:- The judgments relied upon by learned counsel for the petitioners:

i) Prem Chandra and others Vs. State of U.P. and others (Supra):

"A peculiar and a piquant situation has arisen in the instant case, where it is not the case, that an aspirant of the higher post in service on becoming eligible for promotion or a person seeking direct appointment on the date when he is to be considered for such a promotion or appointment, seeks to interpret the rule of recruitment in a particular manner, looking to the past practice, to his advantage, but here is a case, where the appellants were excluded from consideration of their appointment at the relevant time earlier, by interpreting the rule to their disadvantage, and were made to believe that likewise their candidature shall be considered later on, for which various circulars and instructions were also issued by the State Government, but when their turn came for getting employment, they are again being put out of consideration, by interpreting the rule in a different manner.

Injustice thus, caused to them, in the hands of the State Government, therefore, requires to be corrected.

We also take notice of the fact that under the present advertisement, 766 vacancies have been notified, therefore, the present appellants, who are much less in number, can also be considered for appointment, leaving sizeable vacancies for the rest of the candidates.

We, therefore, dispose of these special appeals with the direction that the appellants' cases shall be considered in accordance with the pre-existing practice by considering their appointment on the basis of their merit taking their batches into consideration as was being done earlier but this process would be available only for the appellants and they would be accommodated if they are otherwise found eligible and the remaining vacancies would be filled in by following Rule 15 (2) strictly as directed by the learned Single Judge."

ii) State of Uttar Pradesh and another Vs. Santosh Kumar Mishra and another Supra:

"41. It is on account of a deliberate decision taken by the State Government that the private Respondents were left out of the zone of consideration for appointment as Pharmacists in order to accommodate those who had obtained their diplomas earlier. The decision taken by the State Government at that time to accommodate the diploma- holders in batches against their respective years can no doubt be discontinued at a later stage, but not to the disadvantage of those who had been deprived of an opportunity of being appointed by virtue of the same Rules. In our view, the same decision which was taken to deprive the private Respondents from being appointed, could not now be discarded, once again to their disadvantage to prevent them from being appointed, introducing the concept of merit selection at a later stage. The same may be introduced after the private Respondents and those similarly-situated persons have been accommodated."

iii) K.C. Sharma and others Vs. Union of India and others (Supra):

"6. Having regarding to the facts and circumstances of the case, we are of the view that this was a fit case in which the Tribunal should have condoned the delay in the filing of the application and the appellants should have been given relief in the same terms as was granted by the Full Bench of the Tribunal. The appeal is, therefore, allowed, the impugned judgment of the Tribunal is set aside, the delay in filing of O.A. No. 774 of 199 is condoned and the said application is allowed. The appellants would be entitled to the same relief in matter of pension as has been granted by the Full Bench of the Tribunal in its judgment dated December 16, 1993 in O.A. Nos. 395-403 of 1993 and connected matters. No order as to costs."

iv) Inder Pal Yadav and others Vs. Union of India and others (Supra):

"5. The scheme envisages that it would be applicable to casual labour on projects who were In service as on January 1, 1984. The choice of this date does not commend, for it is likely to introduce an invidious distinction between similarly situated persons and expose some workmen to arbitrary discrimination flowing from fortuitous court's order, since, in some matters, the court granted interim stay before the workmen could be retrenched while some other were not so fortunate. Those in respect of when the Court granted interim relief by stay suspension of the order of retrenchment, they would be treated in service on January 1, 1984 while others who fail to obtain interim relief though similarly situated would be pushed down in the implementation of the scheme. Therefore, those who could not come to the Court need not be at a comparative disadvantage to those who rushed in here. If they are otherwise similarly situated, they are entitled to similar treatment. Keeping in view all the aspects of the matter, the Court modifies part 5.1 (a) (i) of the scheme by modifying the date from 1.1.1984 to 1.1. 1981. With this modification and consequent rescheduling in absorption from that date onward, the scheme framed by Railway Ministry is accepted and a direction is given that it must be implemented by re-casting the stages consistent with the change in the date as herein directed."

v) State of Karnataka and others vs. C. Lalitha (Supra):

"29. Service jurisprudence evolved by this Court from time to time postulates that all persons similarly situated should be treated similarly. Only because one person has approached the court that would not mean that persons similarly situated should be treated differently. It is furthermore well-settled that the question of seniority should be governed by the rules. It may be true that this Court took notice of the subsequent events, namely, that in the meantime she had also been promoted as Assistant Commissioner which was a Category I Post but the direction to create a supernumerary post to adjust her must be held to have been issued only with a view to accommodate her therein as otherwise she might have been reverted and not for the purpose of conferring a benefit to which she was not otherwise entitled to."

:- Sri Kuldeep Pati Tripathi, learned Additional Advocate General placed reliance in support of his submissions on following judgments:

i) U.P. Jal Nigam and another Vs. Jaswant Singh and another (Supra):

"4. It appears that during the pendency of the appeals and writ petitions before this Court and after disposal of the same by this Court, a spate of writ petitions followed in the High Court by the employees who had retired long back. Some of the petitions were filed by the employees who retired on attaining the age of 58 years long back. However, some were lucky to get interim orders allowing them to continue in service. Number of writ petitions were filed in the High Court in 2005 on various dates after the judgment in the case of Harwindra Kumar (supra) and some between 2002 and 2005. All those writ petitions were disposed of in the light of the judgment in the case of Harwindra Kumar (supra) and relief was given to them for continuing in service up to the age of 60 years. Hence, all these appeals arise against various orders passed by the High Court from time to time.

5. So far as the principal issue is concerned, that has been settled by this Court. Therefore, there is no quarrel over the legal proposition. But the only question is grant of relief to such other persons who were not vigilant and did not wake up to challenge their retirement and accepted the same but filed writ petitions after the judgment of this Court in the case of Harwindra Kumar (supra). Whether they are entitled to same relief or not ? Therefore, a serious question that arises for consideration is whether the employees who did not wake up to challenge their retirement and accepted the same, collected their post retirement benefits, can such persons be given the relief in the light of the subsequent decision delivered by this Court ?

6. The question of delay and laches has been examined by this Court in a series of decisions and laches and delay has been considered to be an important factor in exercise of the discretionary relief under Article 226 of the Constitution. When a person who is not vigilant of his rights and acquiesces with the situation, can his writ petition be heard after a couple of years on the ground that same relief should be granted to him as was granted to person similarly situated who was vigilant about his rights and challenged his retirement which was said to be made on attaining the age of 58 years. A chart has been supplied to us in which it has been pointed out that about 9 writ petitions were filed by the employees of the Nigam before their retirement wherein their retirement was somewhere between 30.6.2005 and 31.7.2005. Two writ petitions were filed wherein no relief of interim order was passed. They were granted interim order. Thereafter a spate of writ petitions followed in which employees who retired in the years 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004 and 2005, woke up to file writ petitions in 2005 & 2006 much after their retirement. Whether such persons should be granted the same relief or not ?"

8. Our attention was also invited to a decision of this Court in the case of State of Karnataka & Ors. v. S.M. Kotrayya & Ors. reported in (1996) 6 SCC 267. In that case the respondents woke up to claim the relief which was granted to their colleagues by the Tribunal with an application to condone the delay. The Tribunal condoned the delay. Therefore, the State approached this Court and this Court after considering the matter observed as under :

" Although it is not necessary to give an explanation for the delay which occurred within the period mentioned in sub-section (1) or (2) of Section 21, explanation should be given for the delay which occasioned after the expiry of the aforesaid respective period applicable to the appropriate case and the Tribunal should satisfy itself whether the explanation offered was proper. In the instant case, the explanation offered was that they came to know of the relief granted by the Tribunal in August 1989 and that they filed the petition immediately thereafter. That is not a proper explanation at all. What was required of them to explain under sub-sections (1) and (2) was as to why they could not avail of the remedy of redressal of their grievances before the expiry of the period prescribed under sub-section (1) or (2). That was not the explanation given. Therefore, the Tribunal was wholly unjustified in condoning the delay."

9. Similarly, in the case of Jagdish Lal & Ors. v. State of Haryana & Ors. reported in (1997) 6 SCC 538, this Court reaffirmed the rule if a person chose to sit over the matter and then woke up after the decision of the Court, then such person cannot stand to benefit. In that case it was observed as follows :

" The delay disentitles a party to discretionary relief under Article 226 or Article 32 of the Constitution. The appellants kept sleeping over their rights for long and woke up when they had the impetus from Vir Pal Singh Chauhan case. The appellants' desperate attempt to redo the seniority is not amenable to judicial review at this belated stage."

17. The benefits shall only be confined to above mentioned persons who have filed writ petitions before their retirement or they have obtained interim order before their retirement. The appeals filed against these persons by the Nigam shall fail and the same are dismissed. Rest of the appeals are allowed and orders passed by the High Court are set aside. There would be no order as to costs."

ii) State of Uttaranchal and another Vs. Shiv Charan Singh Bhandari and others (Supra):

"23. In State of T.N. v. Seshachalam, this Court, testing the equality clause on the bedrock of delay and laches pertaining to grant of service benefit, has ruled thus: -

"16. ....filing of representations alone would not save the period of limitation. Delay or laches is a relevant factor for a court of law to determine the question as to whether the claim made by an applicant deserves consideration. Delay and/or laches on the part of a government servant may deprive him of the benefit which had been given to others. Article 14 of the Constitution of India would not, in a situation of that nature, be attracted as it is well known that law leans in favour of those who are alert and vigilant."

24. There can be no cavil over the fact that the claim of promotion is based on the concept of equality and equitability, but the said relief has to be claimed within a reasonable time. The said principle has been stated in Ghulam Rasool Lone v. State of Jammu and another.

25. In New Delhi Municipal Council v. Pan Singh and others, the Court has opined that though there is no period of limitation provided for filing a writ petition under Article 226 of the Constitution of India, yet ordinarily a writ petition should be filed within a reasonable time. In the said case the respondents had filed the writ petition after seventeen years and the court, as stated earlier, took note of the delay and laches as relevant factors and set aside the order passed by the High Court which had exercised the discretionary jurisdiction."

iii) New Delhi Municipal Council Vs. Pan Singh and others (Supra):

"16. There is another aspect of the matter which cannot be lost sight of. Respondents herein filed a Writ Petition after 17 years. They did not agitate their grievances for a long time. They, as noticed herein, did not claim parity with the 17 workmen at the earliest possible opportunity. They did not implead themselves as parties even in the reference made by the State before the Industrial Tribunal. It is not their case that after 1982, those employees who were employed or who were recruited after the cut-off date have been granted the said scale of pay. After such a long time, therefore, the Writ Petitions could not have been entertained even if they are similarly situated. It is trite that the discretionary jurisdiction may not be exercised in favour of those who approach the Court after a long time. Delay and laches are relevant factors for exercise of equitable jurisdiction. See Govt. of W.B. v. Tarun K. Roy and others [(2004) 1 SCC 347], Chairman, U.P. jal Nigam & Anr. v. Jaswant Singh and anr.[2006 (12) SCALE 347] and Karnataka Power Corpn. Ltd. through its Chairman & Managing Director and Another v. K. Thangappan and Another [(2006) 4 SCC 322]."

iv) Tridip Kumar Dingal and others Vs. State of West Bengal and others (Supra):

"56. We are unable to uphold the contention. It is no doubt true that there can be no waiver of fundamental right. But while exercising discretionary jurisdiction under Articles 32, 226, 227 or 136 of the Constitution, this Court takes into account certain factors and one of such considerations is delay and laches on the part of the applicant in approaching a writ-Court. It is well settled that power to issue a writ is discretionary. One of the grounds for refusing reliefs under Article 32 or 226 of the Constitution is that the petitioner is guilty of delay and laches.

57. If the petitioner wants to invoke jurisdiction of a writ-Court, he should come to the Court at the earliest reasonably possible opportunity. Inordinate delay in making the motion for a writ will indeed be a good ground for refusing to exercise such discretionary jurisdiction. The underlying object of this principle is not to encourage agitation of stale claims and exhume matters which have already been disposed of or settled or where the rights of third parties have accrued in the meantime [vide State of M.P. & Anr. V. Bhailal Bhai, (1964) 6 SCR 261; Moon Mills v. Industrial Court, Bombay, AIR 1967 SC 1450; Bhoop Singh v. Union of India & Ors., (1992) 2 SCR 969]. This principle applies even in case of an infringement of fundamental right (vide Trilokchand Motichand v. H.B. Munshi, (1969) 1 SCC 110; Durga Prasad v. Chief Controller, (1969) 1 SCC 185; Rabindranath Bose v. Union of India).

58. There is no upper limit and there is no lower limit as to when a person can approach a Court. The question is one of discretion and has to be decided on the basis of facts before the Court depending on and vary from case to case. It will depend upon what the breach of fundamental right and the remedy claimed are and when and how the delay arose.

59. We are in respectful agreement with the following observations of this Court in P.S. Sadasivaswamy v. State of T.N., (1975) 1 SCC 152;

"It is not that there is any period of limitation for the Courts to exercise their powers under Article 226 nor is it that there can never be a case where the Courts cannot interfere in a matter after the passage of a certain length of time. But it would be a sound and wise exercise of discretion for the Courts to refuse to exercise their extra-ordinary powers under Article 226 in the case of persons who do not approach it expeditiously for relief and who stand by and allow things to happen and then approach the Court to put forward stale claims and try to unsettle settled matters"

62. Though there is considerable force in the argument of the learned counsel for the State and contesting respondents that there is substantial delay on the part of the appellants in approaching this Court, in the light of factual scenario and the direction which we are inclined to issue, we have thought it fit not to dismiss Special Leave Petitions on the ground of delay but considering merits of the case, we are issuing necessary directions granting relief to the appellants who were vigilant about their rights."

v) State of U.P. through its Secretary (Revenue Deptt.) Lko. and others Vs. Dan Bahadur Singh (Supra):

"In our view, the case of Pratap Narain Pandey is clearly distinguishable having due regard to the fact that in that case the candidate, who was aggrieved, had pursued his legal remedies with reasonable dispatch. The judgment of the learned Single Judge in Pratap Narain Pandey's case was delivered on 19 August 2006 in regard to two writ petitions. The first writ petition was filed by Pratap Narain Pandey as far back as in 1990 (Writ Petition No.10539 (S/S) of 1990). Apart from this writ petition, he had filed another writ petition in 2001 (Writ Petition No.4031 (S/S) of 2001). Both the writ petitions had been clubbed together and were disposed of on 19 August 2006.

On the other hand, the respondent filed his writ petition on 22 February 2015, seeking the benefit of the judgment and order dated 19 August 2006 delivered in the writ petition filed by Pratap Narain Pandey. By that judgment, the petitioner in the earlier proceedings was directed to be given appointment on the post of regular Collection Amin and to be treated as a regular Collection Amin in service since 5 June 1986 for the purposes of seniority etc. except the salary for the period for which he had not worked. In the writ petition which has been filed by the respondent before the learned Single Judge, there is absolutely no explanation much less a cogent explanation in regard to reasons which led the respondent to wait for nearly twenty nine years since 1986 before he filed a writ petition in 2015. The fact that other persons may have been granted the benefit of the judgment in Pratap Narain Pandey in the interregnum would not absolve the respondent of his own duty to explain why he chose to remain silent in the pursuit of his own rights. In a situation of this nature where a delay has been completely unexplained, a writ petition which was filed in 2015 seeking the benefit of parity with a case which had been decided in 2006 and where the petitioner in the earlier round had been vigilant enough in espousing his rights since 1990, could not have been entertained. There was evidently no parity with the case of Pratap Narain Pandey.

The learned counsel appearing on behalf of the respondent has relied upon a judgment of a Division Bench of this Court dated 8 August 2014 in a batch of special appeals filed by the State of Uttar Pradesh (Special Appeal Defective No.110 of 2012 :State of Uttar Pradesh Vs Mohd. Usman Ansari) and connected cases). In that batch of cases, the learned Single Judge had granted the benefit of the decision in Pratap Narain Pandey in various writ petitions. In fact, the judgment of the Division Bench would indicate that several of those writ petitions had been filed as far back as in 1991 (Writ Petition No.4587 (S/S) of 1991, Writ Petition No.6472 (S/S) of 1991 and Writ Petition No.3764 (S/S) of 1991) which had been decided by the learned Single Judges on 28 October 2010, 12 May 2010 and 12 May 2010 respectively. Those petitioners had again been vigilant enough to pursue their rights and the writ petitions had remained pending before this Court. Undoubtedly, one of those writ petitions in the batch (Writ Petition No.1595 (S/S) of 2008) had been dismissed on 26 March 2008 by a learned Single Judge on the ground of laches and the special appeal which had been filed by the State (Special Appeal No.311 of 2008) was disposed of by holding that the dismissal of the writ petition on the ground of laches was erroneous in view of the submission of the learned Standing Counsel that the case was identical to Pratap Narain Pandey which had attained finality and that the benefit had been granted to other similarly situated persons. The case proceeded entirely on a concession which was made and it would appear that no effort was made on the part of the State even to submit before the Division Bench that there was a factual difference between the case at hand and in the case of Pratap Narain Pandey. The judgment of the Division Bench does not lay down the principle that a writ petition which had been filed without any cogent explanation for a delay, as in the present case, must still be entertained merely on the ground of the decision in Pratap Narain Pandey. Hence, the judgment of the Division Bench will not assist the case of the respondent.

The learned counsel appearing on behalf of the respondent has relied upon a judgment of the Supreme Court in Basanti Prasad Vs Chairman, Bihar School Examination Board2. In that case, the husband of the appellant, who was an employee of the School Examination Board, was convicted of offences under Sections 467, 468, 471 and 120-B of the Penal Code on 7 February 1989 against which, a criminal appeal was filed before the Additional Sessions Judge. When the appeal was pending, his services were terminated in 1992. The husband of the appellant died during the pendency of the appeal before the Sessions Court and with the permission of the Court, the appellant continued to prosecute the criminal appeal. After he was acquitted by the Sessions Court, the appellant moved the Examination Board for an order that he would be deemed to have remained in service till the date of his retirement and that all the consequential retiral benefits of her late husband be paid. "

vi) State of U.P. through its Secretary (Revenue Deptt.) Lko. And others Vs. Shyam Lal, 425 (SS) 2011 (Supra):

"Facts and issues involved herein are same as have already been considered by us while deciding another Special Appeal (Defective) No.17 of 2016 and Special Appeal (Defective No.19 of 2016 filed by the State against a similar order passed in writ petition No.333(SS) of 2013, Dinesh Chandra Pathak v. State of U.P., and writ petition no.680(S) of 2015, Dan Bahadur Singh v. State of U.P. & ors., and the judgments passed by the writ court were set aside. Relevant extracts of the judgment dated 10.1.2016 passed in Special Appeal (Defective) No.17 of 2016 are quoted hereinbelow:

"In our view, the case of Pratap Narain Pandey is clearly distinguishable having due regard to the fact that in that case the candidate, who was aggrieved, had pursued his legal remedies with reasonable dispatch. The judgment of the learned Single Judge in Pratap Narain Pandey's case was delivered on 19 August 2006 in regard to two writ petitions. The first writ petition was filed by Pratap Narain Pandey as far back as in 1990 (Writ Petition No.10539 (S/S) of 1990). Both the writ petitions had been clubbed together and were disposed of on 19 August 2006.

On the other hand, the respondent filed his writ petition on 22 February 2015, seeking the benefit of the judgment and order dated 19 August 2006 delivered in the writ petition filed by Pratap Narain Pandey. By that judgment, the petitioner in the earlier proceedings was directed to be given appointment on the post of regular Collection Amin and to be treated as a regular Collection Amin in service since 5 June 1986 for the purposes of seniority etc. except the salary for the period for which he had not worked. In the writ petition which has been filed by the respondent before the learned Single Judge, there is absolutely no explanation much less a cogent explanation in regard to reasons which led the respondent to wait for nearly twenty nine years since 1986 before he filed a writ petition in 2015. The fact that other persons may have been granted the benefit of the judgment in Pratap Narain Pandey in the interregnum would not absolve the respondent of his own duty to explain why he chose to remain silent in the pursuit of his own rights. In a situation of this nature where a delay has been completely unexplained, a writ petition which was filed in 2015 seeking the benefit of parity with a case which had been decided in 2006 and where the petitioner in the earlier round had been vigilant enough in espousing his rights since 1990, could not have been entertained. There was evidently no parity with the case of Pratap Narain Pandey.

The learned counsel appearing on behalf of the respondent has relied upon a judgment of a Division Bench of this Court dated 8 August 2014 in a batch of special appeals filed by the State of Uttar Pradesh (Special Appeal Defective No.110 of 2012 :State of Uttar Pradesh Vs Mohd. Usman Ansari) and connected cases). In that batch of cases, the learned Single Judge had granted the benefit of the decision in Pratap Narain Pandey in various writ petitions. In fact, the judgment of the Division Bench would indicate that several of those writ petitions had been filed as far back as in 1991 (Writ Petition No.4587 (S/S) of 1991, Writ Petition No.6472 (S/S) of 1991 and Writ Petition No.3764 (S/S) of 1991) which had been decided by the learned Single Judges on 28 October 2010, 12 May 2010 and 12 May 2010 respectively. Those petitioners had again been vigilant enough to pursue their rights and the writ petitions had remained pending before this Court. Undoubtedly, one of those writ petitions in the batch (Writ Petition No.1595 (S/S) of 2008) had been dismissed on 26 March 2008 by a learned Single Judge on the ground of laches and the special appeal which had been filed by the State (Special Appeal No.311 of 2008) was disposed of by holding that the dismissal of the writ petition on the ground of laches was erroneous in view of the submission of the learned Standing Counsel that the case was identical to Pratap Narain Pandey which had attained finality and that the benefit had been granted to other similarly situated persons. The case proceeded entirely on a concession which was made and it would appear that no effort was made on the part of the State even to submit before the Division Bench that there was a factual difference between the case at hand and in the case of Pratap Narain Pandey. The judgment of the Division Bench does not lay down the principle that a writ petition which had been filed without any cogent explanation for a delay, as in the present case, must still be entertained merely on the ground of the decision in Pratap Narain Pandey. Hence, the judgment of the Division Bench will not assist the case of the respondent."

"In the present case, we find from the record that the writ petition which was filed by the respondent was without any explanation for the delay. The delay of nearly twenty nine years in filing the writ petition was completely unexplained. Merely because certain other individuals have been granted the benefit in the meantime, would not justify such a writ petition having been entertained in 2015. Hence, we hold that the respondent's writ petition ought to have been dismissed only on the ground of laches.

We, accordingly, allow the special appeal and set aside the impugned judgment and order of the learned Single Judge dated 26 February 2015. In consequence, the writ petition filed by the respondent (Service Single No.680 of 2015) shall stand dismissed. There shall be no order as to costs."

In the facts of the case cause of action, if any, arose in favour of the respondent in the year 1986 or at best in 1989, but the petitioner did not approach the court claiming the status of a regular employee. Instead as has been averred in paragraph 18 of the writ petition certain proceedings were initiated by him seeking regularization of his services which impliedly is an admission of the fact that his initial appointment was not a regular one. However, it appears that on account of the writ petition filed by Pratap Narain Pandey bearing writ petition No.4031(SS) of 2001 and a subsequent writ petition bearing No.8672(SS) of 2006 by a similarly situated person, having been allowed, the petitioner approached this court seeking the same relief albeit after a delay of nineteen years without any plausible explanation for the same.

We have already noted in our earlier judgment, quoted hereinabove, that Pratap Narain Pandey had been pursuing the matter diligently and promptly having filed a writ petition firstly in the year 1990 followed by subsequent writ petitions whereas the respondent herein was indolent in the matter and approached this court only after a delay of nineteen years.

We have already observed in our earlier judgment that such a writ petition could not have been entertained by the writ court. There was evidently no parity with the case of Pratap Narain Pandey. Same is the case herein also. Therefore, for the reasons already mentioned in the earlier judgment and those mentioned hereinabove, the judgment passed by the writ court on 9.9.2011 in writ petition no.425(SS) of 2011 cannot be sustained. Same is hereby quashed. Special appeal is allowed. Writ Petition no.425(SS) of 2011 stands dismissed."

11. On perusal of the judgments relied upon by learned counsel for the petitioners in the case of Prem Chandra and others (Supra), it is transpired that a selection proceeding was initiated on the post of pharmacist against 766 vacancies and in accordance with Rule 15(2) of U.P. Pharmacists Service Rules, 1980 the selection was proceeded to be held. The matter was considered by the Division Bench of this Court and thereafter, direction was issued that the case of the appellants shall be considered in accordance with pre-existing practice by considering their appointment on the basis of merit taking their batches into consideration, as was being done earlier but this process would be available only for the appellants and they would be accommodated, if they are otherwise found eligible and remaining vacancies would be filled in by following Rule 15(2) strictly, as directed by the learned Single Judge.

12. The judgment passed by the Division Bench of this Court in the case of Prem Chandra and others (Supra), was considered by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of State of Uttar Pradesh and another Vs. Santosh Kumar Mishra and another (Supra), wherein the Hon'ble Supreme Court has held that the decision, which was taken to deprive the private respondents from being appointed could now be discarded once again to their disadvantage to prevent them from being appointed introducing the concept of merit selection at a later stage. The same may be introduced after the private respondents and those similarly situated persons have been accommodated.

13. In the present case, the only objection on the State side is that the petitioners are claiming parity of a judgment passed in the case of Sri Anoop Kumar Singh (Supra), wherein direction was issued for consideration of his claim on a writ petition filed at the time of not providing appointment on the post of Sub Registrar.

14. In the opinion of this Court, the selection process was initiated in the year 2001 and was completed in the year 2004. The petitioners do not approach to the competent Court of law for redressal of their grievances within reasonable time. In the case of Sri Anoop Kumar Singh (Supra), by filing counter affidavit, the statement of fact was brought on record that 39 vacancies were backlog vacancies, therefore, the decision was taken for curtailing of vacancies and the selection was made against 10 vacancies. It has been held that action of the State in decreasing the number of vacancies was not justifiable in law and directed for consideration of grant of appointment to Sri Anoop Kumar Singh.

15. In the present case, the petitioners after lapse of almost 15 years have approached to this Court seeking the same relief as was granted in the case of Anoop Kumar Singh (Supra).

16. On perusal of the judgment in the case of K.C. Sharma and others Vs. Union of India and others (Supra), the fact of the case was that certain employees were employed as Guards in the Northern Railway and they retired as Guards during the period 1980 to 1988. They felt aggrieved by notification dated 05.12.1988, wherein Rule 2544 of Indian Railways Establishment Code was amended and for the purpose of calculation of average emoluments the maximum limit in respect of running allowances was reduced from 75% to 45% in respect of period from 01.01.1973 to 31.03.1979 and 55% for the period from 01.04.1979 onwards.

17. The notification issued on 05.12.1988 was challenged and was considered by the full Bench of the tribunal in its judgment in the case of C.R. Rangadhamaiah & others Vs. Chairman, Railway Board & others and connected matters and said notifications in so far as they gave retrospective effect to the amendments were held to be invalid being violative of Article 14 and 16 of the Constitution of India.

18. The appellants in the case of K.C. Sharma and others (Supra) filed a representation along with full Bench judgment before the railway administration and when no relief was granted, they approached to the tribunal in April, 1994. The application filed before the tribunal was dismissed being barred by limitation and the tribunal refused to condone the delay in filing the original application.

19. Hon'ble the Supreme Court considering the fact that the full Bench decision has been affirmed, held that the tribunal should have been condoned the delay in filing the application and the appellants should have been given relief in same terms, as was granted by the full Bench of the tribunal and allowed the appeal.

20. On perusal of the above referred judgment, the full Bench decided the case vide judgment and order dated 16.12.1993. The petitioner by way of representation approached to the railway administration and when no consideration was made, they immediately approached by filing Original Application No.774 of 1994 seeking parity of full Bench judgment of the tribunal. There was no inordinate delay in approaching the tribunal to get the benefit of full Bench judgment.

21. Here, in the present case, the delay is of 15 years in approaching to this Court, therefore, the ratio of the above referred judgment is not applicable to the facts and circumstances of the present case.

22. In the case of Inder Pal Yadav and others Vs. Union of India and others (Supra), the controversy under consideration was that Project Casual Labours after putting continuous service for years on the end to wit ranging from 1974 till 1983, yet their services were terminated with impunity under the specious plea that the project on which they were employed has been wound up on its completion and their services were no more needed.

23. The Railway Ministry framed a scheme and circulated the same amongst others to all the General Managers of Indian Railways including production units as per its circular dated 01.06.1984. In the Scheme, it was stated that all the General Managers were directed to implement the decision of the Railway Ministry by the target dates. It was further stated that a detailed letter regarding group 5 1(ii) would follow. Such a letter was issued on June 25, 1984.

24. The question for consideration was that whether the similarly situated persons and the expose some workmen to arbitrary discrimination flowing from fortuitous court's order, wherein, in some matters, the court granted interim stay before the workmen could be retrenched while some other were not so fortunate. Some of the retrenched workmen failed to knock at the doors of the court of justice because these doors do not open unless huge expenses are incurred. Thus, the Court held that those who could not come to the court, need not be at a comparative disadvantage to those who rushed in here.

25. Here, in the present case, the petitioners were selected on the post of Auditor Panchayat. They were very well aware about their non selection on the post of Sub Registrar and they joined with their own will on the said post without raising objection before any competent authority or competent Court of law.

26. In the case of State of Karnataka and others vs. C. Lalitha (Supra), the point under consideration was that an application was filed before the Karnataka Administrative Tribunal claiming appointment as Assistant Commissioner although in terms of the revised reservation policy, the applicant was appointed as Tehsildar. The original application having been dismissed, a special leave petition was filed before Hon'ble the Supreme Court, which was allowed by setting aside the order passed by the Karnataka Administrative Tribunal by allowing the appeal with the direction that the appellant has since been promoted on Class-I post of Assistant Commissioner, if no vacancies are available, the State Government will create a supernumerary post for the appellant's appointment with the further direction that for the purpose of seniority, the appellant shall be placed below the last candidate appointed in 1976 but she will not be entitled to any back wages. It was further provided that the appellant will be considered for promotion, if otherwise found suitable.

27. On a review petition, Hon'ble Supreme Court held that service jurisprudence evolved by this Court from time to time postulates that all persons similarly situated should be treated similarly. Only because one person has approached the court that would not mean that persons similarly situated should be treated differently. It has further been held that it is well established that the question of seniority shall be governed by rules and after consideration of material on record, allowed the appeal by holding that justice demands that a person should not be allowed to turn any undue advantage over other employees. The concept of justice is that one should get what is due to him or her in law. The concept of justice cannot be stretched so as to cause heart-burning to more meritorious candidates and therefore, the direction was issued by Hon'ble Supreme Court that the matter of seniority be considered in terms of the order passed by Hon'ble Supreme Court on 15.03.1994.

28. Sri Kuldeep Pati Tripathi, learned Additional Advocate General appearing for the State-respondents by placing reliance upon certain judgments has submitted that after lapse of 15 years, no parity can be granted to a person, who is sleeping and is not vigilant of his rights.

29. On perusal of the judgments relied upon by learned counsel for the parties, the question is for grant of relief to some other persons, who were not vigilant and did not wake up to challenge the curtailment of vacancies from 49 to 10. The issue before this Court is that whether they are entitled to get some relief as was granted in the case of Anoop Kumar Singh (Supra) or not?

30. A serious question, which arose for consideration is that the benefit, as has been provided to one Anoop Kumar Singh, can be provided in the light of the decisions delivered by this Court to the petitioners, who did not wake up to challenge the reducement of vacancies of the post of Sub Registrar.

31. The question of delay and latches has been examined by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the series of decisions referred herein above and relied upon by learned Additional Advocate General, wherein latches and delay has been considered to be an important factor in exercise of discretionary power under Article 226 of the Constitution of India.

32. When a person is not vigilant of his rights and acquiesces with the situation, whether his writ petition can be heard after a long lapse of time on the ground that the relief granted in the similar petition to a petitioner, who was vigilant about his rights and challenged the denial of appointment on the post of Sub Registrar, should be granted to him?

33. In the present case, the petitioners woke up to claim the relief after a long spell of time only on the ground that they came to know the reasons of curtailment of vacancies from 49 to 10 after the judgment was rendered in the case of Anoop Kumar Singh (Supra) on 29.11.2017. The reason that 39 vacancies advertised were backlog vacancies, therefore, the selection could not be made, first time came into knowledge of the petitioners on the finding returned in the case of Anoop Kumar Singh (Supra) and immediately thereafter, the writ petition in hand was filed claiming rights on the post of Sub Registrar.

34. This Court considered the submissions advanced and law reports relied upon by learned counsel for the parties and came to the conclusion that the delay and latches are relevant factor for a Court of law to determine the question as to whether the claim made by an applicant deserves consideration or not. Delay and / or latches on the part of petitioners may deprive them of the benefit, which has been provided to others.

35. Article 14 of the Constitution of India would not, in a situation of that nature, be attracted as it is well known that law leans in favour of those who are alert and vigilant. The relief of equality should be made within a reasonable time.

36. In the opinion of this Court, there is no period of limitation provided for filing a writ petition under Article 226 of the Constitution of India, yet ordinarily a writ petition should be filed within a reasonable time. In the present case, the selection proceeding was initiated in pursuance to an advertisement issued in the year 2001 and completed in the year 2004. The petitioners did not raise their grievances before appropriate forum at any level in regard to curtailment of vacancies from 49 to 10 and this writ petition has been filed after a long delay of almost 15 years.

37. This Court takes into account that there is inordinate delay and latches on the part of the petitioners in approaching to this Court. It is well settled that power to issue a writ is discretionary. One of the ground for refusing the relief under Article 226 of the Constitution of India is that the petitioners are guilty of delay and latches. Inordinate delay in making the motion for a writ will indeed be a good ground for refusing to exercise such discretionary jurisdiction, as the object of this Court is not to encourage agitation of stale claims, which have already been settled or where the rights of third parties have accrued in the meantime.

38. This Court while considering the issue of parity and discrimination has considered the judgment relied upon by learned counsel for the petitioners and has recorded that discrimination would not in a situation of the present nature be attracted, as it is well known that law leans in favour of those, who are alert and vigilant. The relief of equality should be made within reasonable time. Thus, in the opinion of this Court, the judgments relied upon by learned counsel for the petitioners are not applicable to the facts and circumstances of the present case.

39. This Court, on perusal of the material on record, is satisfied that the petitioners are not vigilant of their rights and acquiesce with the situation claiming relief, as prayed for in the present writ petition and waited for 15 years, thus, this Court refuses to exercise discretionary jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India.

40. Accordingly, the writ petition lacks merit and is hereby dismissed.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Saurabh Lavania, J.)

1. Heard Sri Nishant Shukla, learned counsel for the petitioners, learned Standing Counsel for the opposite party nos.2 and 3 and Shri Ashok Shukla, learned counsel for the claimant-opposite party no.1.

2. By means of the present writ petition, the petitioners have challenged the judgment and order dated 01.08.2018 passed by the State Public Services Tribunal, Lucknow (in short "Tribunal") in the Claim Petition No.58 of 2016 (Subhash Pratap Bagri vs. State of U.P. & Ors.).

3. Facts in brief of the present case are that opposite party no.1/Subhash Pratap Bagri was appointed and joined as Assistant Engineer on 12.06.1989 and thereafter was promoted to the post of Deputy Project Manager on 30.06.1998. While the opposite party no.1 was posted as Unit In-charge in the Construction Unit, Gorakhpur during the period between 04.01.2005 to 12.08.2005, he was found responsible for gross negligence in the construction of Bridge over river Burhi Rapti. The charge sheet was issued on 11.03.2011 which was served on the opposite party no.2. The charge against the opposite party no.1 was that the curves found on the pillars were not made on correct place, as a result of which, there was a variation/gap between the concerned pillars from 28.25 meter to 31.79 meter and 24.6 meter respectively. However, the opposite party no.1 continued the work without taking correct measurement and without getting approval of revised drawing from his superiors and this act of the opposite party resulted in heavy additional expenditure. The opposite party no.1 submitted a reply to the charge sheet dated 11.03.2011 on 02.06.2011. Thereafter, in the matter in question, an enquiry was conducted and vide order dated 06.02.2015, disciplinary authority awarded a censure entry to the opposite party no.1 and also directed to recover a sum of Rs.13,27,000/- from him.

4. Aggrieved by the order dated 06.02.2015, the opposite party no.1 had filed a Claim Petition No.58 of 2016 before the Tribunal.

5. The Tribunal interfered in the order of punishment dated 06.02.2015 on the following grounds.

(i) The Enquiry Officer failed to conduct the Regular Enquiry by fixing date, time and place for proving the charges and documents relied upon. Witnesses were not examined. The Enquiry Officer only on the basis of the reply of the charged employee and statement of cane operator submitted the enquiry report and based on the same, the order of punishment has been passed.

6. On the aforesaid, the Tribunal considered Rule 7 of the U. P. Government Servants (Discipline and Appeal) Rules, 1999 and judgments on issue.

7. After considering the material on record, particularly the enquiry report, the Tribunal, in its order dated 01.08.2018, on the procedure adopted by the Enquiry Officer, observed as under :

"मेरे द्वारा पत्रावली पर उपलब्ध जाँच आख्या का भलीभांति अवलोकन किया गया जिससे स्पष्ट होता है कि जाँच अधिकारी द्वारा याची को सुनवाई हेतु समय, स्थान व तिथि नियत नहीं किया गया और न ही उसको साक्षियों से परीक्षण/प्रतिपरीक्षण करने का अवसर दिया गया तथा मात्र याची द्वारा दिये गये आरोप पत्र के स्पष्टीकरण एवं क्रेन ऑपरेटर के कथन के आधार पर जाँच अधिकारी द्वारा जाँच पूर्णकर जाँच आख्या दण्डाधिकारी के समक्ष प्रस्तुत की गयी है। अतः स्पष्ट है कि जाँच अधिकारी द्वारा की गयी जाँच नियम विरुद्ध है और नियम विरुद्ध जाँच आख्या के आधार पर पारित दण्डादेश स्वतः निरस्त होने योग्य है।"

(ii) The order of punishment dated 06.02.2015 is unreasoned and non-speaking order.

8. On this aspect, the Tribunal after considering the judgment of the Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of Raj Kumar Mehrotra vs. State of Bihar reported in 2006 SCC (L&S) 679 and the order dated 06.02.2015 came to the conclusion that order dated 06.02.2015 is a non-speaking and unreasoned order. The observation of Tribunal in this regard reads as under.

"उपरोक्त के सम्बन्ध में प्रश्नगत दण्डादेश के अवलोकन से स्पष्ट है कि दण्डाधिकारी ने दण्डादेश में याची को निर्गत आरोप पत्र एवं जांच अधिकारी द्वारा दी गयी जाँच आख्या के कथनों का उल्लेख करते हुए मात्र यह कहा है कि "जांच अधिकारी द्वारा प्रेषित आख्या एवं जाँच आख्या पर प्राप्त अपचारी के अभ्यावेदन पर सम्यक विचारोपरान्त श्री एस पी बागडी के वेतन /देयकों में से किये जाने के आदेश एतद्द्वारा पारित किये जाते है" जिसे किसी भी प्रकार से सकारण आदेश के अभाव में पारित किया गया दण्डादेश विधि के अंतर्गत मान्य नहीं है तथा निरस्त किये जाने योग्य है।

इस तरह उपरोक्त विवेचना के आधार पर यह स्पष्ट है कि याची के विरुद्ध लगाये गये लापरवाही व विदुषित कार्य प्रणाली के आरोप के सम्बन्ध में जाँच अधिकारी द्वारा न तो कोई साक्ष्य दिया गया और न ही उसे दोषी पाया गया है परन्तु दण्डाधिकारी द्वारा बिना किसी साक्ष्य के आधार पर अपना मत स्थिर करके शासकीय क्षति का स्वतः निर्धारण करते हुए याची के विरुद्ध बिना कोई नोटिस निर्गत किये वसूली का आदेश पारित कर दिया गया जो मेरे विचार से प्राकृतिक न्याय के सिद्धांतों के विपरीत है। ऐसी दशा में प्रश्नगत दण्डादेश नियम विरुद्ध होने के कारण निरस्त किये जाने योग्य है। तदनुसार याचिका स्वीकार किये जाने योग्य है।"

9. After recording specific findings, as stated herein above, by means of the order dated 01.08.2018, the Tribunal allowed the claim petition with the following direction :-

"याचिका स्वीकार की जाती है | आलोच्य दण्डादेश दिनांकित 06.02.2015 (संलग्नक स. -ए -1) निरस्त किया जाता है | याची समस्त पारिणामिक सेवा लाभ पाने का अधिकारी है जो इस आदेश द्वारा रोके गये हो| विपक्षीगण को यह निर्देशित किया जाता है कि यदि उक्त आदेश के क्रम में याची से कोई वसूली की जा चुकी हो तो उसे इस निर्णय की सत्यप्रतिलिपि प्राप्ति के तीन माह के अन्दर वापस करना सुनिश्चित करें|

10. Assailing the order dated 01.08.2018, it is submitted by learned counsel for the petitioner that the Model Conduct, Discipline and Appeal Rules For Public Undertakings are applicable in the present case and the Tribunal wrongly considered the Rules known as U.P. Government Servants (Discipline & Appeal) Rules, 1999 and as such the order dated 01.08.2018 based on the Rules of 1999 is unsustainable.

11. The learned counsel for the petitioner further submitted that the impugned order dated 01.08.2018 passed by the State Public Service Tribunal, Lucknow is contrary to law laid down by Hon'ble the Apex Court in the case of Chairman, Life Insurance Corporation of India and others vs. A. Masilamani, (2013) 6 SCC 530, wherein it has been, held as under :-

"15. In view of the issues raised by the learned Counsel for the parties, the following questions arise for our consideration:

15.1 When a court/tribunal sets aside the order of punishment imposed in a disciplinary proceeding on technical grounds, i.e., non-observance of statutory provisions, or for violation of the principles of natural justice, then whether the superior court, must provide opportunity to the disciplinary authority, to take up and complete the proceedings, from the point that they stood vitiated ; and

15.2 If the answer to question No. 1 is, that such fresh opportunity should be given, then whether the same may be denied on the ground of delay in initiation, or in conclusion of the said disciplinary proceedings.

16. It is a settled legal proposition, that once the Court sets aside an order of punishment, on the ground that the enquiry was not properly conducted, the Court cannot reinstate the employee. It must remit the concerned case to the disciplinary authority, for it to conduct the enquiry from the point that it stood vitiated, and conclude the same. (Vide: Managing Director, ECIL, Hyderabad etc. etc. v. B. Karunakar etc., AIR 1994 SC 1074; Hiran Mayee Bhattacharyya v. Secretary, S.M. School for Girls and Ors. : (2002) 10 SCC 293; U.P. State Spinning C. Ltd. v. R.S. Pandey and Anr., (2005) 8 SCC 264; and Union of India v. Y.S. Sandhu, Ex-Inspector, AIR 2009 SC 161).

17. The second question involved herein, is also no longer res integra. Whether or not the disciplinary authority should be given an opportunity, to complete the enquiry afresh from the point that it stood vitiated, depends upon the gravity of delinquency involved. Thus, the court must examine, the magnitude of misconduct alleged against the delinquent employee. It is in view of this, that courts/tribunals, are not competent to quash the charge-sheet and related disciplinary proceedings, before the same are concluded, on the aforementioned grounds.

18. The court/tribunal should not generally set aside the departmental enquiry, and quash the charges on the ground of delay in initiation of disciplinary proceedings, as such a power is de hors the limitation of judicial review. In the event that, the court/tribunal exercises such power, it exceeds its power of judicial review at the very threshold. Therefore, a charge-sheet or show cause notice, issued in the course of disciplinary proceedings, cannot ordinarily be quashed by court. The same principle is applicable, in relation to there being a delay in conclusion of disciplinary proceedings. The facts and circumstances of the case in question, have to be examined, taking into consideration the gravity/magnitude of charges involved therein. The essence of the matter is that the court must take into consideration, all relevant facts and to balance and weigh the same, so as to determine, if it is infact in the interest of clean and honest administration, that the judicial proceedings are allowed to be terminated, only on the ground of delay in their conclusion. (Vide: State of U.P. v. Brahm Datt Sharma and Anr. AIR 1987 SC 943; State of Madhya Pradesh v. Bani Singh and Anr. AIR 1990 SC 1308; Union of India and Anr. v. Ashok Kacker : 1995 (1) SCC 180; Secretary to Government, Prohibition & Excise Department v. L. Srinivasan (1996) 3 SCC 157; State of Andhra Pradesh v. N. Radhakishan AIR 1998 SC 1833; M.V. Bijlani v. Union of India and Ors. AIR 2006 SC 3475; Union of India and Anr. v. Kunisetty Satyanarayana AIR 2007 SC 906; and The Secretary, Ministry of Defence and Ors. v. Prabash Chandra Mirdha AIR 2012 SC 2250)."

12. Per contra learned counsel for the claimant/respondent, on the basis of the record, submitted that order of Tribunal is not liable to be interfered as the same is perfectly valid being passed after considering the material available on record. The Tribunal after considering the order dated 06.02.2015 and judgment on the issue of requirement of reasonsed order recorded specific finding that the order dated 06.02.2015 is a non speaking order and this is evident from the same. The finding on the procedure of holding the enquiry is also perfectly valid and requires not interference. In this regard he placed reliance of paras 4.5 and 4.6 of the claim petition and reply to the same given in para 8 of written statement. Further submitted that the matter is old and no fruit full purpose would be served in remanding the matter, in facts of the case. Prayer to dismiss the writ petition.

13. The reasons and findings given by the Tribunal on the issue to the effect that the order of punishment dated 06.02.2015 is a non-speaking and unreasoned order, have not been assailed by the counsel for the petitioner.

14. We have learned counsel for the parties and gone through the records.

15. On the findings of the Tribunal which has been assailed by the petitioner, on the issues of holding the proper regular enquiry and applicability of Rules of 1999, we have considered the Rules of 1999 and Model Conduct Rules. We find that Model Conduct Rules are applicable.

16. For the purposes of adjudication for present case, we would like to refer the relevant Rule/Clause i.e. Rule/Clause 35 of the Model Conduct Rules, the same on reproduction reads as under :

"Rule/Clause 35 (1) No order imposing any of the major penalties specified in Clauses (e), (f) and (g) of Rule 33 shall be made except after an inquiry is held in accordance with this rule.

2. Whenever the disciplinary authority is of the opinion that there are grounds for inquiring into the truth of any imputation of misconduct or misbehaviour against an employee, it may itself enquire into, or appoint any public servant (hereinafter called the inquiring authority) to inquire into the truth thereof.

3. Where it is proposed to hold an inquiry, disciplinary authority shall frame definite charges on the basis of the allegations against the employee. The charges, together with a statement of the allegations, on which they are based, a list of document by which and a list of witnesses by whom, the articles of charge are proposed to be sustained, shall be communicated in writing to the employee, who shall be required to submit within such time as may be specified by the Disciplinary Authority (not exceeding 15 days), a written statement whether he admits or denies any of or all the articles of charge.

Explanation--It will not be necessary to show the documents listed with the charge-sheet or any other document to the employee at this stage.

4. On receipt of the written statement of the employee, or if no such statement is received within the time specified, an enquiry may he held by the Disciplinary Authority itself, or by any other public servant appointed as an Inquiring Authority under Sub-clause (2) :

(5) Where the disciplinary authority itself inquires or appoints an inquiring authority for holding an inquiry, it may, by an order appoint a public servant to be known as the 'Presenting Officer' to present on its behalf the case in support of the articles of charge.

(6) The employee may take the assistance of any other public servant but may not engage a legal practitioner for the purpose.

(7) On the date fixed by the inquiring authority, the employee shall appear before the Inquiring Authority at the time, place and date specified in the notice. The Inquiring Authority shall ask the employee whether he pleads guilty to any of the articles of charge the inquiring authority shall record the plea, sign the record and obtain the signature of the employee concerned thereon. The inquiring Authority shall return a finding of guilt in respect of those articles of charge to which the employee concerned pleads guilty.

(8) If the employee does not plead guilty, the inquiring authority shall adjourn the case to a later date not in exceeding thirty days after recording an order that the employee may for the purpose of preparing his defence :-

(i) inspect the document listed with the charge-sheet ;

(ii) submit a list of additional documents and witnesses that he wants to examine ;

(iii) be supplied with the copies of the statements of witnesses, if any listed the charge-sheet.

Relevancy of the additional documents and the witnesses referred to in sub-clause D (ii) above will have to be given by the employee concerned and the documents and the witnesses shall be summoned if the Inquiring Authority is satisfied about their relevance to the charges, under inquiry.

(9) The Inquiring Authority shall ask the authority in whose custody or possession the documents are kept, for the production of the documents on such date as may be specified.

(10) The authority in whose custody or possession the requisitioned documents are, shall arrange to produce the same before the inquiring authority on the date place and time specified in the requisition.

Provided that the authority having the custody or possession of the requisitioned documents may claim privilege if the production of such documents will be against the public interest or the interest of the Corporaton/Company. In that event, it shall inform the inquiring authority accordingly.

(11) On the date fixed for the inquiry, the oral and documentary evidence by which the articles of charge are proposed to be proved shall be produced by or on behalf of the disciplinary authority. The witnesses shall be examined by or on behalf of the Presenting Officer and may be cross-examined by or on behalf of the employee. The Presenting Officer shall be entitled tore-examine the witnesses on any points on which they have been cross-examined, but not on a new matter, without the leave of the Inquiring Authority. The Inquiring Authority may also put such questions to the witnesses as it thinks fit.

(12) Before the close of the prosecution case, the inquiring authority may, in its discretion, allow Presenting Officer to produce evidence not included in the charge-sheet or may itself call for new evidence or recall or re-examine any witness. In such case the employee shall be given opportunity to inspect the documentary evidence before it is taken on record ; or to cross-examine a witness, who has been so summoned.

(13) When the case for the disciplinary authority is closed, the employee may be required to state his defence, orally or in writing, as he may refer. If the defence is made orally, it shall be recorded and the employee shall be required to sign the record. In either case a copy of the statement of defence shall be given to the Presenting Officer, if any, appointed.

(14) The evidence on behalf of the employee shall then be produced. The employee may examine himself or take the assistance of another employee as given in rule 32 (6) to examine on his behalf if he so prefers. The witnesses produced by the employee shall then be examined and shall be liable to cross-examination, re-examination and examination by the inquiring authority according to the provision applicable to the witnesses for the disciplinary authority.

(15) The Inquiring Authority may, after the employee closes his case, and shall, if the employee has not examined himself, generally question him on the circumstances appearing against him in the evidence for the purposes of enabling the employee to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him.

(16) After the completion of the production of the evidence, the employee and the Presenting Officer may file written briefs of their respective cases within 15 days of the date of completion of the production of evidence.

(17) If the employee does not submit the written statement of defence referred to in sub-rule 93) or before the date specified for the purpose or does not appear in person, or through the assisting offer or otherwise fails or refuses to comply with any of the provisions of those rules, the inquiring authority may hold the enquiry ex parte.

(18) Whenever any inquiring authority, after having heard and recorded the whole or any part of the evidence in an inquiry ceases to exercise jurisdiction therein, and is succeeded by another inquiry authority which has and which exercise, such jurisdiction, the inquiring authority so succeeding may act on the evidence so recorded by its predecessor, or partly recorded by its predecessor and partly recorded by itself.

Provided that if the succeeding inquiring authority is of the opinion that further examination of any of the witnesses whose evidence has already been recorded is necessary in the interest of justice, it may recall, examine, cross-examine and re-examine and such witnesses as here in before provided.

(19) (i) After the conclusion of the enquiry, report shall be prepared and it shall contain -

(a) a gist of the articles of charge and the statement of the imputations of misconduct or misbehaviour ;

(b) a gist of the defence of the employee in respect of each article of charge ;

(c) an assessment of the evidence in respect of each article of charge ;

(d) the findings of each article of charge and the reasons therefore.

Explanation :- If in the opinion of the inquiring authority the proceedings of the inquiry establish any article of charge different from the original articles of the charge, if any record its findings on such article of charge ;

Provided that the findings on such articles of charge shall not be recorded unless the employee has either admitted the facts on which such article of charge is based or has had a reasonable opportunity of defending himself against such article of charge.

(ii) The enquiring authority, where it is not itself the disciplinary authority, shall forward to the disciplinary authority the records of inquiry which shall include :-

(a) The report of the inquiry prepared by it under sub-clause (i) above ;

(b) The written statement of defence, if any submitted by the employee referred to in sub-rule (13) ;

(c) The oral and documentary evidence produced in the course of the inquiry ;

(d) Written briefs referred to in sub-rule (16), if any ; and

(e) The orders, if any, made by the disciplinary authority and the inquiring authority in regard to the inquiry."

17. The above quoted provision speaks that regular enquiry has to be conducted and principles of natural justice have to be followed in the disciplinary proceedings by the enquiry officer, which includes an opportunity to the employee to examine the witnesses of department, those are required to prove the charges and documents relied upon in the charge sheet, as also an opportunity to produce his witnesses in his defence and an opportunity of being heard in person.

18. In what manner the principles of natural justice have to be followed in the departmental/disciplinary proceedings has already explained by the Apex Court as well as by this Court.

19. The Division Bench of this Court, after considering the catena of judgments on the issue of holding the disciplinary enquiry i.e. a regular enquiry, in the judgment dated 28.11.2018 passed in Writ Petition No.34093 (S/B) of 2018 (State of U.P. v. Deepak Kumar) has observed asunder:-

"It is settled by the catena of judgments that it is the dutyof Enquiry Officer to hold ''Regular Enquiry'. Regularenquiry means that after reply to the charge-sheet theEnquiry Officer must record oral evidence with anopportunity to the delinquent employee to cross-examinethe witnesses and thereafter opportunity should be given tothe delinquent employee to adduce his evidence in defence.The opportunity of personal hearing should also begiven/awarded to the delinquent employee. Even if thecharged employee does not participate/co-operate in theenquiry, it shall be incumbent upon the Enquiry Officer toproceed ex-parte by recording oral evidence. For regularenquiry, it is incumbent upon the Enquiry Officer to fixdate, time and place for examination and cross-11S.A. No. 175 of 2005examination of witnesses for the purposes of proving ofcharges and documents, relied upon and opportunity todelinquent employee should also be given to produce hiswitness by fixing date, time and place. After completion ofenquiry the Enquiry Officer is required to submit its report,stating therein all the relevant facts, evidence andstatement of findings on each charge and reasons thereof,and thereafter, prior to imposing any punishment, the copyof the report should be provided to charged officer for thepurposes of submission of his reply on the same. Thepunishment order should be reasoned and speaking andmust be passed after considering entire material on record.(vide: Jagdish Prasad Vs. State of U.P. 1990 (8) LCD 486;Avatar Singh Vs. 20. Taking into account the relevant provision i.e. Rule/Clause 35 of Model Conduct Rules and principles settled on the issue of holding of departmental enquiry, we find from the record, particularly para 4.5 & 4.6 of claim petition and reply to the same given in para 8 of the written statement of the petitioner filed before the Tribunal as well as as enquiry report on record, that Enquiry Officer failed to conduct the regular enquiry and thus enquiry report is vitiated and being so subsequent order based on the same are unsustainable.

21. In regard to the finding of the Tribunal to the effect that order dated 06.02.2015 is a non-speaking order, though not assailed by the learned counsel for the petitioner, we have perused the order dated 06.02.2015 and we find that reasons for coming to the conclusion have not mentioned in the order dated 06.02.2015, order of punishment and being so the finding of the Tribunal in this regard is perfectly valid. The relevant portion of order dated 06.02.2015 reads as under :-

"अतः जाँच अधिकारी द्वारा प्रेषित आख्या एवं जाँच आख्या पर प्राप्त अपचारी के अभ्यावेदन पर सम्यक विचारोपरान्त श्री एस. पी. बागड़ी। उप परियोजना प्रबन्धक (सिविल) को परिनिन्दित करते हुये शासकीय क्षति रू. 13. २७ लाख (तरह लाख सत्ताईस हजार मात्र) की वसूली श्री एस. पी. बागड़ी, के वेतन/देयको में से किये जाने के आदेश एतद्द्वारा पारित किये जाते है।"

22. Considering the facts of the case including the contents of charge sheet and finding recorded by the Tribunal as well as by us in the preceeding paras and the law laid down by the Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of Chairman, Life Insurance Corporation of India (supra), we are of the considered opinion that the order dated 01.08.2018 passed by the Tribunal is contrary to law and being is liable to be partly set aside/modified.

23. For the foregoing reasons, writ petition is partly allowed and the impugned order dated 01.08.2018 passed by State Public Service Tribunal, Lucknow is set aside to the extent it provides consequential benefits and refund of amount recovered. The matter is remanded back to the opposite party no.2 to conduct the enquiry afresh from the stage of submitting the charge sheet dated 11.03.2011. Issue of providing consequential benefits and refund of amount would considered by the appointing authority after conclusion/final outcome of the enquiry proceeding.

24. Further, till the passing of the final order in the matter in question by the disciplinary authority, no recovery shall be made from the claimant/opposite party no.1 and the amount recovered from the opposite party no.1, in pursuance to the order dated 06.02.2015, shall be subject to outcome of the final order passed by the disciplinary authority.

25. The disciplinary authority is directed to conclude the entire proceeding within six months from the date of receipt of a certified copy of this order.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Anil Kumar, J.
Hon'ble Saurabh Lavania, J.)

1. Heard learned counsel for the petitioner, learned State Counsel for the opposite party No. 1, Sri Sameer Kalia, learned counsel for the opposite party No. 2 and Sri Uttam Kumar Verma, learned counsel for the opposite party Nos. 3 and 4.

2. By means of the present writ petition, the petitioner has challenged the orders dated 02.08.2011 and 17.03.2012, passed by the opposite party Nos. 2 and 4 (Annexure Nos. 1 and 2 to the writ petition).

3. Facts, in brief, of the present case are to the effect that initially on 14.12.1987, the petitioner was appointed on the post of Manager, Printing Press in the pay-scale of Rs. 500-900. Vide letter dated 03.01.1991, one post of Manager, Printing Press was sanctioned and it was directed that on the said post, regular selection be made and after making regular selection, the services of the petitioner shall be terminated.

4. On 31.07.1997, an order was passed in the Writ Petition No. 4138 of 1997 filed by the petitioner before this Court challenging the advertisement for holding regular selection for the post of Manager. Relevant portion of the order dated 31.07.1997 reads as under:-

"In the meantime no result shall be declared nor shall any appointment be made in pursuance of the advertisement dated 4th December, 1992 for which the meeting is scheduled to be held on 31.01.1997 for the post of manager printing press in the University concerned."

5. In the aforesaid writ petition, counter affidavit was filed in the year 1998 on behalf of opposite party No. 3 stating therein that the regular appointment on the post of Manager, Printing Press has been made and the petitioner has been adjusted against the post of Research Assistant in pay-scale of Rs. 500-900. The writ petition was dismissed by this Court vide order 06.12.2000.

6. Thereafter, the petitioner was transferred along with his post of Research Assistant in the Department of Dairy and Animal Husbandry and it was directed that the work shall be taken from the petitioner. Thereafter, on a complaint dated 16.08.2010 under Section 23 of the U.P. Krishi Evam Praudyogik Vishwavidyalaya Adhiniyam, 1958, with regard to the appointment/adjustment of the petitioner on the post of Research Assistant, the opposite party No. 2 issued the order dated 02.08.2011, whereby directed the opposite party No. 3 to take appropriate decision in the matter of appointment of the petitioner keeping in view the report of University and direction of the State Government. Thereafter, vide order dated 15.04.2011, the opposite party No. 1 refused to provide the revised pay-scale on the ground that the appointment of the petitioner on the post of Research Assistant is in violation of Government Orders dated 03.01.1990, 27.02.1991 and 30.08.1990. Thereafter, vide order dated 27.06.2011, a Committee was constituted by the opposite party No. 3 to inquire into the matter/appointment of the petitioner on the post of Research Assistant.

7. The Committee so constituted submitted its report dated 31.10.2011. Considering the report of the Committee dated 31.10.2011, the petitioner was asked to submit his reply, which he submitted on 06.12.2011, and he was provided personal hearing fixing 07.12.2012, on which date the petitioner was heard. Thereafter, vide order dated 17.03.2012, the services of the petitioner were terminated.

8. In view of the aforesaid factual background, the present writ petition has been filed before this Court.

9. Learned counsel for the petitioner submitted that the petitioner has not been given adequate opportunity to defend his case.

10. Learned counsel for the petitioner further submitted that the service of the petitioner has been terminated, which is a major penalty and before terminating the petitioner, a full-fledged enquiry should have been done in the matter. However, no such steps were taken by the respondents, as such, the impugned order dated 17.03.2012, terminating the services of the petitioner, is violative of principles of natural justice and arbitrary in nature.

11. Learned counsel for the petitioner further submitted that in identical circumstances, four persons, who did not possess the requisite qualification, have been retained in service and the petitioner was terminated from service.

12. The prayer is to allow the writ petition.

13. Learned counsel for the respondents while opposing the submission made by learned counsel for the petitioner submitted that the petitioner did not possess the requisite qualification, which was to be possessed by a person to be appointed on the post of Research Assistant i.e. B.Sc Krishi. In view of the said fact and after conducting the enquiry wherein, the petitioner was given the opportunity to defend his case, and considering his reply, the impugned order of termination was passed, which is just and proper in the facts of the case.

14. We have heard the learned counsel for the parties and gone through the record carefully.

15. Needless to mention here that learned counsel for the petitioner has not disputed the fact that for the post of Research Assistant, the requisite qualification is B.Sc. Krishi and the petitioner did not possess the said qualification. Rather the petitioner possessed the qualification of M.A. and Ph.D.

16. In view of the aforesaid facts, the admitted position emerges out to the effect that the petitioner did not possess the requisite qualification to be appointed on the post of Research Assistant in the Chandrasekhar Azad Agriculture and Technology University, Kanpur and also the minimum qualification for the said post cannot be relaxed, contrary to this, no Rule has been placed before us.

17. In this regard, this Court in the case of Ajay Singh v. State of U.P. reported in 2011 SCC OnLine All 2201 : (2011) 3 All LJ 38 : (2011) 87 ALR (SUM 14) 7 : 2011 Lab IC 3113, observed as under:-

were justified in making appointment of respondent No. 5 by permitting relaxation in the qualification even if this Court assume that such relaxation was permissible under 1986 Rules, the fact remains that before acting thereon, no modification, amendment or readvertisement of the post in question took place with modified qualification. This resulted ex facie denial of opportunity to such other persons who could have satisfied the relaxed qualification but failed to apply since the advertisement which was actually made did not contain such qualification. This also makes appointment of respondent No. 5 pursuant to the relaxed qualification illegal being violative of Articles 15 and 16 of Constitution of India having resulted in denial of equal opportunity of employment to others. Even cases where there is some change in the qualification etc. under the Rules etc. after an advertisement is made, it has consistently been the view of the Court that in such a case afresh advertisement or modified advertisement, as a rule, must be published so as to give opportunity to the people at large who satisfy the altered, modified or changed qualification to apply. This is consistent with the constitutional requirement of giving equal opportunity of employment to all.

12. In State of M.R v. Shyama Pardi, (1996) 7 SCC 118 : (AIR 1996 SC 2219) the Apex Court held that an appointment made in the absence of requisite qualification prescribed under Rules is void ab initio and neither it confers any right upon the person concerned to hold the post or continue if he/she has been appointed though did not possess requisite qualification nor any direction for payment of salary can be issued in such cases.

13. A similar controversy arose in the case of Mohd. Sartaj v. State of U.P., JT 2006 (1) SC 331 : (AIR 2006 SC 3492) and the Apex Court held that an appointment lacking requisite qualification would be a nullity. A question also raised before the Apex Court that if subsequently the candidate has attained the requisite qualification whether that would validate the appointment but it was replied by the Apex Court that the validity of an appointment has to be considered at the time of appointment and if the appointment was made by ignoring the requisite qualification or if it is found that the candidate did not possess requisite qualification at that time of appointment, the appointment would be void ab initio.

17. Learned Standing Counsel or Sri R.L. Verma, Advocate appearing on behalf of respondent No. 5 also could not place any pro vision to show that the Rules pertaining to recruitment under 1986 Rules could have been relaxed by the Director General. Rule 25 of 1986 Rules confers power of relaxation relating to Rules regulating conditions of service and reads as under:

"25. Relaxation in the conditions of service. Where the State Government is satisfied that the operation of any Rule regulating the conditions of service of persons appointed to the service causes undue hardship in any particular case, it may, not withstanding anything contained in the Rules applicable to the case, by order, dispense with or relax the requirements of that Rule to such extent and subject to such conditions as it may consider necessary for dealing with the case in a just and equitable manner."

18. The distinction between Rules, pertaining to recruitment and condition of service came up for consideration before the Apex Court in the case of Keshav Chandra Joshi v. Union of India, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 272 : (AIR 1991 SC 284) where the Rule permitted relaxation of conditions of service and it was held that the Rule did not permit relaxation of recruitment Rules. It was reiterated in Syed Khalid Rizvi v. Union of India, 1993 Supp (3) SCC 575 wherein it was held:--

"Conditions of recruitment and conditions of service are distinct and the latter is precedent by an appointment according to Rules. Former cannot be relaxed."

19. In Keshav Chandra Joshi (supra) the Apex Court also says that Rules permitting relaxation of provisions regulating conditions of service cannot be invoked to suggest relaxation of Rules regulating recruitment. The Rules relating to age, qualification, other eligibility process of selection etc. that is all the steps anterior to appointment constitute Rules regulating recruitment. Under 1986 Rules, firstly the Rules relating to recruitment cannot be relaxed and secondly even Rule 25 of 1986 Rules which permits relaxation of Rules regulating conditions of service authorises the State Government or Director General to do so hence such relaxation by Director General is impermissible."

18. We also like to refer the judgment passed by the Apex Court in the case of State of Orissa v. Mamata Mohanty reported in (2011) 3 SCC 436. The relevant paras are reproduced hereunder:-

"Appointment/employment without advertisement

35. At one time this Court had been of the view that calling the names from employment exchange would curb to certain extent the menace of nepotism and corruption in public employment. But, later on, it came to the conclusion that some appropriate method consistent with the requirements of Article 16 should be followed. In other words there must be a notice published in the appropriate manner calling for applications and all those who apply in response thereto should be considered fairly. Even if the names of candidates are requisitioned from employment exchange, in addition thereto it is mandatory on the part of the employer to invite applications from all eligible candidates from the open market by advertising the vacancies in newspapers having wide circulation or by announcement in radio and television as merely calling the names from the employment exchange does not meet the requirement of the said article of the Constitution. (Vide Delhi Development Horticulture Employees' Union v. Delhi Admn. [(1992) 4 SCC 99 : 1992 SCC (L&S) 805 : (1992) 21 ATC 386 : AIR 1992 SC 789] , State of Haryana v. Piara Singh [(1992) 4 SCC 118 : 1992 SCC (L&S) 825 : (1992) 21 ATC 403 : AIR 1992 SC 2130] , Excise Supdt. v. K.B.N. Visweshwara Rao [(1996) 6 SCC 216 : 1996 SCC (L&S) 1420] , Arun Tewari v. Zila Mansavi Shikshak Sangh [(1998) 2 SCC 332 : 1998 SCC (L&S) 541 : AIR 1998 SC 331] , Binod Kumar Gupta v. Ram Ashray Mahoto [(2005) 4 SCC 209 : 2005 SCC (L&S) 501 : AIR 2005 SC 2103] , National Fertilizers Ltd. v. Somvir Singh [(2006) 5 SCC 493 : 2006 SCC (L&S) 1152 : AIR 2006 SC 2319] , Telecom District Manager v. Keshab Deb [(2008) 8 SCC 402 : (2008) 2 SCC (L&S) 709] , State of Bihar v. Upendra Narayan Singh [(2009) 5 SCC 65 : (2009) 1 SCC (L&S) 1019] and State of M.P. v. Mohd. Abrahim [(2009) 15 SCC 214 : (2010) 1 SCC (L&S) 508].)

36. Therefore, it is a settled legal proposition that no person can be appointed even on a temporary or ad hoc basis without inviting applications from all eligible candidates. If any appointment is made by merely inviting names from the employment exchange or putting a note on the noticeboard, etc. that will not meet the requirement of Articles 14 and 16 of the Constitution. Such a course violates the mandates of Articles 14 and 16 of the Constitution of India as it deprives the candidates who are eligible for the post, from being considered. A person employed in violation of these provisions is not entitled to any relief including salary. For a valid and legal appointment mandatory compliance with the said constitutional requirement is to be fulfilled. The equality clause enshrined in Article 16 requires that every such appointment be made by an open advertisement as to enable all eligible persons to compete on merit.

Order bad in inception

37. It is a settled legal proposition that if an order is bad in its inception, it does not get sanctified at a later stage. A subsequent action/development cannot validate an action which was not lawful at its inception, for the reason that the illegality strikes at the root of the order. It would be beyond the competence of any authority to validate such an order. It would be ironic to permit a person to rely upon a law, in violation of which he has obtained the benefits. If an order at the initial stage is bad in law, then all further proceedings consequent thereto will be non est and have to be necessarily set aside. A right in law exists only and only when it has a lawful origin. (Vide Upen Chandra Gogoi v. State of Assam [(1998) 3 SCC 381 : 1998 SCC (L&S) 872 : AIR 1998 SC 1289] , Mangal Prasad Tamoli v. Narvadeshwar Mishra [(2005) 3 SCC 422 : AIR 2005 SC 1964] and Ritesh Tewari v. State of U.P. [(2010) 10 SCC 677 : (2010) 4 SCC (Civ) 315 : AIR 2010 SC 3823])

38. The concept of adverse possession of lien on post or holding over are not applicable in service jurisprudence. Therefore, continuation of a person wrongly appointed on post does not create any right in his favour. [Vide M.S. Patil (Dr.) v. Gulbarga University [(2010) 10 SCC 63 : (2010) 2 SCC (L&S) 785 : AIR 2010 SC 3783] .]

Eligibility lacking

39. In Prit Singh (Dr.) v. S.K. Mangal [1993 Supp (1) SCC 714 : 1993 SCC (L&S) 246 : (1993) 23 ATC 783] this Court examined the case of a person who did not possess the requisite percentage of marks as per the statutory requirement and held that he cannot hold the post observing: (SCC pp. 718-19, paras 12-13)

"12. ... It need not be pointed out that the sole object of prescribing qualification that the candidate must have a consistently good academic record with first or high second class Master's degree for appointment to the post of a Principal, is to select a most suitable person in order to maintain excellence and standard of teaching in the institution apart from administration. ... The appellant had not secured even second class marks in his

Master of Arts Examination whereas the requirement was first or high second class (55%). The irresistible conclusion is that on the relevant date the appellant did not possess the requisite qualifications.

13. ... on the date of the appointment the appellant did not possess the requisite qualifications and as such his appointment had to be quashed."

(emphasis added)

40. In Pramod Kumar v. U.P. Secondary Education Services Commission [(2008) 7 SCC 153 : (2008) 2 SCC (L&S) 244 : AIR 2008 SC 1817] this Court examined the issue as to whether a person lacking eligibility can be appointed and if so, whether such irregularity/illegality can be cured/condoned. After considering the provisions of the U.P. Secondary Education Services Commission Rules, 1983 and the U.P. Intermediate Education Act, 1921, this Court came to a conclusion that lacking eligibility as per the rules/advertisement cannot be cured at any stage and making appointment of such a person tantamounts to an illegality and not an irregularity, and thus cannot be cured. A person lacking the eligibility cannot approach the court for the reason that he does not have a right which can be enforced through court.

41. This Court in Pramod Kumar [(2008) 7 SCC 153 : (2008) 2 SCC (L&S) 244 : AIR 2008 SC 1817] further held as under: (SCC p. 160, para 18)

"18. If the essential educational qualification for recruitment to a post is not satisfied, ordinarily the same cannot be condoned. Such an act cannot be ratified. An appointment which is contrary to the statute/statutory rules would be void in law. An illegality cannot be regularised, particularly, when the statute in no unmistakable term says so. Only an irregularity can be. [See State of Karnataka v. Umadevi (3) [(2006) 4 SCC 1 : 2006 SCC (L&S) 753] , National Fertilizers Ltd. v. Somvir Singh [(2006) 5 SCC 493 : 2006 SCC (L&S) 1152 : AIR 2006 SC 2319] and Post Master General v. Tutu Das (Dutta) [(2007) 5 SCC 317 : (2007) 2 SCC (L&S) 179] .]"

Relaxation

42. In J.P. Kulshrestha (Dr.) v. Allahabad University [(1980) 3 SCC 418 : 1980 SCC (L&S) 436 : AIR 1980 SC 2141] issue of relaxation of eligibility came up for consideration before this Court wherein it was held as under: (SCC pp. 425-26, paras 15-16)

"15. ... We regretfully but respectfully disagree with the Division Bench and uphold the sense of high second class attributed by the learned Single Judge. The midline takes us to 54% and although it is unpalatable to be mechanical and mathematical, we have to hold that those who have not secured above 54% marks cannot claim to have obtained a high second class and are ineligible.

16. ... We have earlier held that the power to relax, as the Ordinance now runs, insofar as high second class is concerned, does not exist. Inevitably, the appointment of the 3 respondents violate the Ordinance and are, therefore, illegal."

43. In Rekha Chaturvedi v. University of Rajasthan [1993 Supp (3) SCC 168 : 1993 SCC (L&S) 951 : (1993)

25 ATC 234] this Court again dealt with the power of relaxation of minimum qualifications as the statutory provisions applicable therein provided for relaxation, but to what extent and under what circumstances, such power could be exercised was not provided therein. Thus, this Court issued the following directions: (SCC p. 176, para 11)

"A. The University must note that the qualifications it advertises for the posts should not be at variance with those prescribed by its Ordinance/Statutes.

B. The candidates selected must be qualified as on the last date for making applications for the posts in question or on the date to be specifically mentioned in the advertisement/notification for the purpose. ...

C. When the University or its Selection Committee relaxes the minimum required qualifications, unless it is specifically stated in the advertisement/notification both that the qualifications will be relaxed and also the conditions on which they will be relaxed, the relaxation will be illegal.

D. The University/Selection Committee must mention in its proceedings of selection the reasons for making relaxations, if any, in respect of each of the candidates in whose favour relaxation is made.

E. The minutes of the meetings of the Selection Committee should be preserved for a sufficiently long time, and if the selection process is challenged until the challenge is finally disposed of. An adverse inference is liable to be drawn if the minutes are destroyed or a plea is taken that they are not available."

(emphasis added)

44. In P.K. Ramachandra Iyer v. Union of India [(1984) 2 SCC 141 : 1984 SCC (L&S) 214 : AIR 1984 SC 541] this Court while dealing with the same issue, held that once it is established that there is no power to relax the essential qualifications, the entire process of selection of the candidate was in contravention of the established norms prescribed by advertisement. The power to relax must be clearly spelt out and cannot otherwise be exercised.

45. In A.P. Public Service Commission v. B. Swapna [(2005) 4 SCC 154 : 2005 SCC (L&S) 452] this Court held that: (SCC p. 160, para 15)

"15. Another aspect which this Court has highlighted is scope for relaxation of norms. ... Once it is most satisfactorily established that the Selection Committee did not have the power to relax essential qualification, the entire process of selection so far as the selected candidate is concerned gets vitiated."

46. This Court in Kendriya Vidyalaya Sangathan v. Sajal Kumar Roy [(2006) 8 SCC 671 : (2007) 1 SCC (L&S) 23] held: (SCC p. 675, para 11)

"11. ... The appointing authorities are required to apply their mind while exercising their discretionary jurisdiction to relax the age-limits. ... The requirements to comply with the rules, it is trite, were required to be complied with fairly and reasonably. They were bound by the rules. The discretionary jurisdiction could be exercised for relaxation of age provided for in the rules and within the four corners thereof."

47. In Food Corpn. of India v. Bhanu Lodh [(2005) 3 SCC 618 : 2005 SCC (L&S) 433 : AIR 2005 SC 2775] this Court held: (SCC p. 628, para 12)

*"12. ... Even assuming that there is a power of relaxation under the Regulations, ... the power of relaxation cannot be exercised in such a manner that it completely distorts the Regulations. The power of relaxation is intended to be used in marginal cases.... We do not think that they are intended as an ''open sesame' for all and sundry. The wholesale go-by given to the Regulations, and the manner in which the recruitment process was being done, was very much reviewable as a policy directive, in exercise of the power of the Central Government under Section 6(2) of the Act." *

48. In Bhanu Prasad Panda (Dr.) v. Sambalpur University [(2001) 8 SCC 532 : 2002 SCC (L&S) 14] one of the questions raised has been as to whether a person not possessing the required eligibility of qualification i.e. 55% marks in Master's degree can be appointed in view of the fact that UGC refused to grant relaxation. On the issue of relaxation of eligibility, the Court held as under: (SCC p. 536, para 5)

"5. ... the essential requirement of academic qualification of a particular standard and grade viz. 55%, in the ''relevant subject' for which the post is advertised, cannot be rendered redundant or violated.... ... The rejection by UGC of the request of the Department in this case to relax the condition relating to 55% marks at postgraduation level ... is to be the last word on the claim of the appellant and there could be no further controversy raised in this regard."

49. In view of the above, this Court held that the appointment of the appellant therein has rightly been quashed as he did not possess the requisite eligibility of 55% marks in Master's course.

50. In the absence of an enabling provision for grant of relaxation, no relaxation can be made. Even if such a power is provided under the statute, it cannot be exercised arbitrarily. (See Union of India v. Dharam Pal [(2009) 4 SCC 170 : (2009) 1 SCC (L&S) 790] .) Such a power cannot be exercised treating it to be an implied, incidental or necessary power for execution of the statutory provisions. Even an implied power is to be exercised with care and caution with reasonable means to remove the obstructions or overcome the resistance in enforcing the statutory provisions or executing its command. Incidental and ancillary powers cannot be used in utter disregard of the object of the statute. Such power can be exercised only to make such legislation effective so that the ultimate power will not become illusory, which otherwise would be contrary to the intent of the legislature. (Vide Matajog Dobey v. H.S. Bhari [AIR 1956 SC 44 : 1956 Cri LJ 140] and State of Karnataka v. Vishwabharathi House Building Coop. Society [(2003) 2 SCC 412] .)

51. More so, relaxation in this manner is tantamount to changing the selection criteria after initiation of selection process, which is not permissible at all. Rules of the game cannot be changed after the game is over. (Vide K. Manjusree v. State of A.P. [(2008) 3 SCC 512 : (2008) 1 SCC (L&S) 841 : AIR 2008 SC 1470] and Ramesh Kumar v. High Court of Delhi [(2010) 3 SCC 104 : (2010) 1 SCC (L&S) 756 : AIR 2010 SC 3714] .)"

19. So far as the argument raised by the learned counsel for the petitioner to the effect that the petitioner was not given the proper opportunity to defend his case nor proper enquiry was done in the matter in question is concerned, the same has got no force because in the present case, as per the pleadings on record as well as the arguments advanced by the learned counsel for the parties, the position emerges out is to the effect that the petitioner did not possess the requite qualification to be appointed on the post of Research Assistant i.e. B.Sc. Krishi, as such, giving opportunity of hearing was a mere formality. The present case, in facts of the case, is covered under the phrase "useless formality theory".

20. With regard to phrase "useless formality theory", the Apex Court in the case judgment passed in the case of Aligarh Muslim University v. Mansoor Ali Khan reported in (2000) 7 SCC 529, observed as under:-

"Point 5

20. This is the crucial point in this case. As already stated under Point 4, in the case of Mr Mansoor Ali Khan, notice calling for an explanation had not been issued under Rule 5(8)(i) of the 1969 Rules. Question is whether interference is not called for in the special circumstances of the case.

21. As pointed recently in M.C. Mehta v. Union of India [(1999) 6 SCC 237] there can be certain situations in which an order passed in violation of natural justice need not be set aside under Article 226 of the Constitution of India. For example where no prejudice is caused to the person concerned, interference under Article 226 is not necessary. Similarly, if the quashing of the order which is in breach of natural justice is likely to result in revival of another order which is in itself illegal as in Gadde Venkateswara Rao v. Govt. of A.P. [AIR 1966 SC 828 : (1966) 2 SCR 172] it is not necessary to quash the order merely because of violation of principles of natural justice.

22. In M.C. Mehta [(1999) 6 SCC 237] it was pointed out that at one time, it was held in Ridge v. Baldwin [1964 AC 40 : (1963) 2 All ER 66 (HL)] that breach of principles of natural justice was in itself treated as prejudice and that no other "de facto" prejudice needed to be proved. But, since then the rigour of the rule has been relaxed not only in England but also in our country. In S.L. Kapoor v. Jagmohan [(1980) 4 SCC 379] Chinnappa Reddy, J. followed Ridge v. Baldwin [1964 AC 40 : (1963) 2 All ER 66 (HL)] and set aside the order of supersession of the New Delhi Metropolitan Committee rejecting the argument that there was no prejudice though notice was not given. The proceedings were quashed on the ground of violation of principles of natural justice. But even in that case certain exceptions were laid down to which we shall presently refer.

23. Chinnappa Reddy, J. in S.L. Kapoor case [(1980) 4 SCC 379] laid down two exceptions (at SCC p. 395) namely, if upon admitted or indisputable facts only one conclusion was possible, then in such a case, the principle that breach of natural justice was in itself prejudice, would not apply. In other words if no other conclusion was possible on admitted or indisputable facts, it is not necessary to quash the order which was passed in violation of natural justice. Of course, this being an exception, great care must be taken in applying this exception.

24. The principle that in addition to breach of natural justice, prejudice must also be proved has been developed in several cases. In K.L. Tripathi v. State Bank of India [(1984) 1 SCC 43 : 1984 SCC (L&S) 62] Sabyasachi Mukharji, J. (as he then was) also laid down the principle that not mere violation of natural justice but de facto prejudice (other than non-issue of notice) had to be proved. It was observed, quoting Wade's Administrative Law (5th Edn., pp. 472-75), as follows: (SCC p. 58, para 31)

"[I]t is not possible to lay down rigid rules as to when the principles of natural justice are to apply, nor as to their scope and extent. ... There must also have been some real prejudice to the complainant; there is no such thing as a merely technical infringement of natural justice. The requirements of natural justice must depend on the facts and circumstances of the case, the nature of the inquiry, the rules under which the tribunal is acting, the subject-matter to be dealt with, and so forth."

Since then, this Court has consistently applied the principle of prejudice in several cases. The above ruling and various other rulings taking the same view have been exhaustively referred to in State Bank of Patiala v. S.K. Sharma [(1996) 3 SCC 364 : 1996 SCC (L&S) 717] . In that case, the principle of "prejudice" has been further elaborated. The same principle has been reiterated again in Rajendra Singh v. State of M.P. [(1996) 5 SCC 460]

25. The "useless formality" theory, it must be noted, is an exception. Apart from the class of cases of "admitted or indisputable facts leading only to one conclusion" referred to above, there has been considerable debate on the application of that theory in other cases. The divergent views expressed in regard to this theory have been elaborately considered by this Court in M.C. Mehta [(1999) 6 SCC 237] referred to above. This Court surveyed the views expressed in various judgments in England by Lord Reid, Lord Wilberforce, Lord Woolf, Lord Bingham, Megarry, J. and Straughton, L.J. etc. in various cases and also views expressed by leading writers like Profs. Garner, Craig, de Smith, Wade, D.H. Clark etc. Some of them have said that orders passed in violation must always be quashed for otherwise the court will be prejudging the issue. Some others have said that there is no such absolute rule and prejudice must be shown. Yet, some others have applied via media rules. We do not think it necessary in this case to go deeper into these issues. In the ultimate analysis, it may depend on the facts of a particular case.

26. It will be sufficient, for the purpose of the case of Mr Mansoor Ali Khan to show that his case will fall within the exceptions stated by Chinnappa Reddy, J. in S.L. Kapoor v. Jagmohan [(1980) 4 SCC 379] , namely, that on the admitted or indisputable facts, only one view is possible. In that event no prejudice can be said to have been caused to Mr Mansoor Ali Khan though notice has not been issued."

21. It is well settled that if a wrong has been committed by the respondents in respect to some other persons, that will not provide a cause of action to claim parity on the ground of equal treatment since the equality in law under Article 14 is applicable for claiming parity in respect to legal and authorized acts. Two wrongs will not make one right. (See: State of Bihar and others Vs. Kameshwar Prasad Singh and another, AIR 2000 SC 2306; Union of India and another Vs. International Trading Co. and another, AIR 2003 SC 3983; Lalit Mohan Pandey Vs. Pooran Singh and others, AIR 2004 SC 2303; M/s Anand Buttons Ltd. etc. Vs. State of Haryana and others, AIR 2005 SC 5565; and Kastha Niwarak G.S.S. Maryadit, Indor Vs. President, Indore Development Authority, AIR 2006 SC 1142).

22. Hon'ble the Apex Court in the case of Gulam Rasool Lone v. State of Jammu & Kashmir reported in JT 2009 (13) SC 422 in para 11 and 12 held as under:-

"11. There cannot be any doubt whatsoever that keeping in view the equal protection clause contained in Articles 14 of the Constitution of India as also Article 16 thereof, all the employees should be treated equally. Equality clause however, must be enforced in legality and not illegality.

12. There cannot furthermore be any doubt that Article 14 is a positive concept. The Constitution does not envisage enforcement of the equality clause where a person has got an undue benefit by reason of an illegal act."

23. In the case of State of Orissa v. Mamata Mohanty reported in (2011) 3 SCC 436, the Apex Court observed as under:-

*"Article 14

56. It is a settled legal proposition that Article 14 is not meant to perpetuate illegality and it does not envisage negative equality. Thus, even if some other similarly situated persons have been granted some benefit inadvertently or by mistake, such order does not confer any legal right on the petitioner to get the same relief. (Vide Chandigarh Admn. v. Jagjit Singh [(1995) 1 SCC 745 : AIR 1995 SC 705] , Yogesh Kumar v. Govt. of NCT of Delhi [(2003) 3 SCC 548 : 2003 SCC (L&S) 346 : AIR 2003 SC 1241] , Anand Buttons Ltd. v. State of Haryana [(2005) 9 SCC 164 : AIR 2005 SC 565] , K.K. Bhalla v. State of M.P. [(2006) 3 SCC 581 : AIR 2006 SC 898] , Krishan Bhatt v. State of J&K [(2008) 9 SCC 24 : (2008) 2 SCC (L&S) 783] , Upendra Narayan Singh [(2009) 5 SCC 65 : (2009) 1 SCC (L&S) 1019] and Union of India v. Kartick Chandra Mondal [(2010) 2 SCC 422 : (2010) 1 SCC (L&S) 385 : AIR 2010 SC 3455].)

57. This principle also applies to judicial pronouncements. Once the court comes to the conclusion that a wrong order has been passed, it becomes the solemn duty of the court to rectify the mistake rather than perpetuate the same. While dealing with a similar issue, this Court in Hotel Balaji v. State of A.P.

[1993 Supp (4) SCC 536 : AIR 1993 SC 1048] observed as under: (SCC p. 551, para 12)

"12. ... "2. ... To perpetuate an error is no heroism. To rectify it is the compulsion of judicial conscience. In this, we derive comfort and strength from the wise and inspiring words of Justice Bronson in Pierce v. Delameter [1 NY 3 (1847) : A.M.Y. p. 18] at p. 18:

"a Judge ought to be wise enough to know that he is fallible and, therefore, ever ready to learn: great and honest enough to discard all mere pride of opinion and follow truth wherever it may lead: and courageous enough to acknowledge his errors".' [As observed in Distributors (Baroda) (P) Ltd. v. Union of India, (1986) 1 SCC 43, p. 46, para 2.] "

(See also Ministry of Information & Broadcasting, In re [(1995) 3 SCC 619] , Nirmal Jeet Kaur v. State of M.P. [(2004) 7 SCC 558 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1989] and Mayuram Subramanian Srinivasan v. CBI [(2006) 5 SCC 752 : (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 83 : AIR 2006 SC 2449].)"

24. Keeping in view the admitted fact that the petitioner is not qualified for the post of Research Assistant, as he does not possess the degree of B.Sc. Agriculture, and settled legal proposition regarding relaxation of eligibility/qualification prescribed for a particular post to the effect that the same can not be relaxed and appointment of a person who does not possess the qualification of the post would be void as well as the principles related to "Useless Formality Theory" and principle of "Negative Equality", which are applicable in the facts of the present case, we are not inclined to interfere in the impugned orders dated 02.08.2011 and 17.03.2012 passed by respondent Nos. 2 and 3 respectively.

25. For the foregoing reasons, we do not find any illegality in the impugned orders dated 02.08.2011 and 17.03.2012, passed by the opposite party Nos. 2 and 3 (Annexure Nos. 1 and 2 to the writ petition).

26. Resultantly, the writ petition for it lacks merit. Hence, dismissed with no order as to costs

DATED: LUCKNOW 27.09.2019

THE HON'BLE ANIL KUMAR, J.
THE HON'BLE SAURABH LAVANIA, J.

Service Bench No. 6 of 2006

Union of India & Ors. ...Petitioners
Versus
Sati Nath Khan & Anr. ...Respondents

Counsel for the Petitioners:
Sri Anil Srivastava, Sri Amit Sharma, Sri Neerav Chitravanshi, Sri S.P. Maurya.

Counsel for the Respondents:
Sri Prayas Srivastava, Sri R.C. Saxena.

A. Service Law - disciplinary proceedings - Railway Servants (Discipline & Appeal) Rules, 1968 - enquiry officer exonerated the applicant-respondent as no charges were proved - disciplinary authority dissatisfied with the enquiry report issued "disagreement memo" to the applicant-respondent - ordered for compulsory retirement - no opportunity to rebut the findings recorded by the disciplinary authority was given to the applicat-respondent

In light of the catena of judgments on this point, the Court observed that before the issuance of "disagreement memo" by the disciplinary authority, an opportunity of hearing has to be given to the delinquent employee to the reversed findings of the enquiry officer having failed to grant the opportunity would violate the principles of natural justice. Requirement of affording an opportunity of hearing is a consequential right to be heard. (Para 29)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Saurabh Lavania, J.)

1. Heard Sri Amit Sharma, learned counsel for the petitioners and Sri R.C. Saxena, learned counsel for the opposite parties.

2. By means of the present writ petition, the petitioners have challenged the judgment and order dated 13.09.2005, passed in the Original Application No. 256 of 2005 (in short "OA") (Sati Nath Khan v. Union of India and others) filed before the Central Administrative Tribunal, Lucknow Bench, Lucknow (in short "Tribunal") under Section 19 of the Administrative Tribunal Act, 1985.

3. The Tribunal while passing the impugned order dated 13.09.2005 considered the issue related to disagreement memo issued by the Disciplinary Authority to the applicant-respondent through the letter dated 08.06.2004 in relation to the findings recorded by the Enquiry Officer in the Enquiry Report submitted by him vide letter dated 16.04.2003. The Tribunal while partly allowing the OA considered the disagreement memo in the light of the decision of the Apex Court in the case of Yoginath D. Bagde v. State of Maharashtra and another; (1999) 7 SCC 739. The Tribunal while partly allowing the OA recorded the specific observation, which reads as under:-

"In the light of the decision of the Apex Court in Yogi Nath D. Bagde v. State of Maharashtra JT 1999 (7) SC-62, if before disagreeing with the Enquiry Officer the disciplinary authority has not followed the due process of law it vitiates the order of punishment. Non following the due process and denial of reasonable opportunity has caused prejudice to applicant and is infraction to the principle of natural justice, which are inbuilt in the Rules if not specifically provided.

In the light of our taking a final view of the matter, the applicant has been denied opportunity to show cause."

4. The Tribunal after interfering in the order of punishment imposing the punishment of compulsory retirement, affirmed in the appeal, passed by the Disciplinary Authority as well as the Order of Appellate Authority, granted the liberty to the petitioners to proceed in the matter in accordance with law. The operative portion of the impugned order dated 13.09.2005 is quoted below for ready reference:-

"In the light of the decision in Bagde case (supra) and the disagreement of the disciplinary authority with the enquiry officer, this O.A. is partly allowed on this issue. The order imposing the compulsory retirement as affirmed in appeal is set aside. The respondents are directed to forthwith reinstate the applicant in service. However, if so advised, the respondents may proceed in accordance with law. The intervening period shall be regulated as per rules and regulation on the subject. No costs."

5. Aggrieved by the Order dated 13.09.2005, the petitioners have filed the present writ petition.

6. The brief facts of the case, which are relevant for the purposes of the proper adjudication of the issue involved, which relate to "disagreement memo" as well as the present writ petition, are to the effect that the disciplinary proceedings were initiated against the applicant-respondent vide charge-sheet dated 08.05.2002. At the time of issuance of charge-sheet, the applicant-respondent was working on the post of Reservation Clerk in the Northern Railway at Lcuknow. Needless to say that the applicant-respondent prior to issuance of the charge-sheet dated 08.05.2002, was suspended vide order dated 18.10.2001. It appears from the charge-sheet that against the applicant-respondent, three charges were levelled. The same reads as under:-

"(1) He defrauded the Rly. by manipulating in BPT No. 671646 as he had indicated Rs.4410-00 passenger foil, whereas record foil showing amounting Rs.107-00 only. Thus by fraudulently means he pocketed rs.4303-00.

(2) He intentionally mislead the requisition from on which he generated PNR No.213-0435999 of zero amount against BPT No.671646 which was manipulated by him.

(3) To cover-up his fraudulent activity, he has prepared a requisition form in the name of Rani Jha of 3050 dated 15/3/00 from LKO to Sakaldia and kept on record so as to justified that BPT amounting Rs. 107-00, but no such name of BPT No. found indicated in the chart of 3050."

7. With regard to conducting the disciplinary proceedings pursuant to the charge-sheet dated 08.05.2002, Sri S.P. Sethi, Enquiry Officer was appointed by the Disciplinary Authority. The Enquiry Officer conducted the disciplinary proceedings and after considering the relevant material on record before him, submitted his Report to the Disciplinary Authority. The copy of the Enquiry Report was also provided to the applicant-respondent vide letter dated 16.04.2003.

8. It is pertinent to point out here that the Enquiry Officer exonerated the applicant-respondent with respect to all the charges levelled against the applicant-respondent in the charge-sheet. The relevant portion of the Enquiry Report is quoted below for ready reference:-

"Conclusion and Findings.

For the reasons recorded, I have come to the conclusion that:-

Charge-1. Stands not proved.

Charge-2. Stands not proved.

Charge-3. Also stands not proved."

9. The Disciplinary Authority considered the Enquiry Report and on being dissatisfied with the findings recorded by the Enquiry Officer, issued the disagreement memo to the applicant-respondent vide letter dated 08.06.2004. As issue involved in the present case is related with the disagreement memo, so the same is reproduced hereunder:-

"After going through the enquiry report, relied upon documents (RUDs) and proceedings of the enquiry, my considered views are as under:-

The charges brought out against Sh. S.N. Khan, ERC/LKO are as under:-

1. Article No.1

He defrauded the Railway by manipulating via BPT No.671646 as he had indicated Rs. 4410/- in passenger foil whereas record foil showed amount of Rs. 107/- only. Thus, by fraudulent means he pocketed Rs. 4309/-.

IO in his enquiry report has concluded that the charge remains unsubstantiated. The reason for this charge remaining unsubstantiated, as indicated in the enquiry report, is the absence of original RUDs. IO has also referred the judgment of the Hon'ble CAT directing the Rly to produce original RUDs.

Upon perusal of Hon'ble CAT's judgment, it is observed that the documents to be produced in original are not specifically mentioned. Therefore, IO has erred in his judgment wherein instaed of examining the defence vis a vis the article of charges brought out, he has mis interpreted Hon'ble CAT's judgment without making reference to the demand of the C.O. submitted during enquiry in line with Hon'ble CAT's directives.

It is noted from the proceedings of the enquiry that in his defence statement Sh. S.N. Khan had pointed out that documents referred to at S.Nos.1, 2 and 4 of Annexure-III of the charge sheet were required to be produced in original. The documents listed at S.Nos.1, 2 & 4 of Annexure-III are as under: -

1. PNR No.213-0435999 of AC 3 tier ex NZM to SBC.

2. Passenger foil of BPT No.671646 dated 24.03.2000.

3. TDL No.045616 issued by SS/JHS against PNR No.213-0435999 dated 19.04.2000.

It is observed from the above that original BPT, TDR and PNR existed. It is also a matter of record that Sh. A.K. Saxena, CVI/N.Rly. had visited CCM/Refund Office/C.Rly., on 16.11.2000, during investigations in this regard. Sh. A.K. Saxena, CVI/N.Rly was successful in obtaining photocopies of these documents, which is on record. It appears that the originals were misplaced during transit in dak from C. Rly. Vigilacne to N.Rly. Vigilance. However, I am inclined to give benefit of doubt to Sh. S.N. Khan, ERC/LKO since prosecution could not produce these 3 original demanded RUDs after their misplacement/loss in transit, in line with Hon'ble CAT's judgment. I agree with the IO's findings in respect of this charge.

Article No.11

IO in his enquiry report has concluded that the charge remains unsubstantiated. The reason for this charge remaining unsubstantiated, as indicated in the enquiry report, is the absence of original BPT. IO has accepted plea of the CO that he kept it on record and how it was misplaced he was not responsible.

In this context, perusal of enquiry proceedings reveals the fact that there was manipulation in the BPT. Defence has never disputed this fact that there was manipulation in the BPT. CO during general examination by IO had admitted in reply to Q.NO.4 that some body might have played a mischief and might have booked on 24.03.00 when he had gone out for urinal or for drinking water.

The plea of the CO is not acceptable due to the following reasons:-

(i) There is a provision of temporary locking of the computer by the operator, which is resorted to by the operator in case he has to leave the seat for any emergency. CO should have locked it while leaving his seat. It is further noted that C.O. has failed to provide details of documentary evidence to support his claim. Clearly it is an after thought, which has no legs to stand in the eyes of law.

(ii) BPT book remains in the personal custody of the person to whom it is issued. How any other person can have access to this BPT book and at the same time the person concerned would exactly know the BPT no. issued on 15.3.2000 and make reservations on this BPT on 24.3.2000 during the brief spell of absence of the C.O. is a mystery.

(iii) Sh. S.N. Khan, ERC/LKO in his statement vide Ex P-5 (A) had stated that he new Dr. Renu Makkar personally. It was the same person in whose name reservation was made on BPT No.671646 ex NZM to SBC dated 24.03.2000. Sh. S.N. Khan, ERC/LKO had further admitted that he had issued PNR NO.213-0435999 by train NO.2430 ex NZM to SBC.

(iv) Sh. S.N. Khan, ERC/LKO did not use double-sided carbon for preparing BPT as evident from the office copy of the BPT NO.671646, which bears the amount of Rs.107/-. In his defence, Sh. S.N. Khan has submitted that double sided carbon paper had not been issued by the office. The explanation of Sh. Khan is hardly tenable in view of the fact that use of double-sided carbon is a normal practice and under the circumstances of the case, it appears to be a deliberate attempt on the part of Sh. Khan to hide his mis deeds.

Under the above circumstances, misplacement of requisition form clearly indicates that it was an intentional act done deliberately with malafide intentions.

In view of the facts, evidence on record and circumstances brought out as above, I do not agree with the findings of the IO in respect of this charge since he has failed to analyse the evidence on record. I hold the CO guilty of this charge.

Article No.III

To cover up this fraudulent activity, he had prepared a requisition form in th name of Ms. Rani Jha in train no.3050 dated 15.03.2000 ex LKO to Sakaldia and kept on record so as to justify the BPT amounting to Rs. 107/- *but no such name or BPT no. was found indicated in the chart of train no.*3050.

IO in his enquiry report has concluded that the charge remains unsubstantiated. The reason for this charge remaining unsubstantiated, as indicated in the enquiry report, is the non-availability of original BPT. IO has not accepted the prosecution plea that the CO had prepared requisition in the name of Ms. Rani Jha in train No. 3050 dt. 15.3.2000 to cover up his fraudulent activity.

CO did not dispute issue of BPT No. 671646 amount Rs. 107/- dt. 15.3.2000 ex LKO to Sakaldia. CO also did not dispute making reservation for the passenger concerned by generating PNR of zero amount on the strength of BPT No. 671646 amount Rs. 107/- dt. 15.3.2000. CO has further submitted that the reason for non-existence of the name of Ms. Rani Jha in the chart of train No. 3050 is that he had made the entry in the working chargt.

Ex P-8 is the requisition form said to have been submitted by the passenger fro reservation in train No. 3050. Perusal of Ex P-8 reveals that it does not indicate the authority on the strength of which reservation was made by generating PNR of zero amount. Even if BPT No. was endorsed by the CO in the working chart, the same ought to have been indicated in the requisition form, which was mandatory in view of the fact that zero amount PNR was being generated. Non-indication of BPT no on Ex P-8 clearly indicates malafides on the part of the CO as brought out in the charge sheet.

In view of the facts, evidence on record and circumstances brought out as above, I do not agree with the findings of the IO in respect of this article of charge since he has failed to analyse the evidence on record. I hold the CO guilty of this charge.

In view of the facts, evidence on record and circumstances as brought out and discussed above, I do not agree with the findings of the IO in respect of the article of charges II & III. I hold Sh. S.N. Khan, ERC/LKO guilty of the charges brought out against him under article of charges II & III."

10. After the issuance of the disagreement memo, the applicant-respondent submitted his detailed reply dated 08.07.2004. Thereafter, the Disciplinary Authority vide order dated 28.10.2004 awarded the punishment of compulsory retirement from Railway services.

11. The applicant-respondent aggrieved by the order dated 28.10.2004, filed the departmental appeal and the Appellate Authority dismissed the appeal vide order dated 10.02.2005.

12. Aggrieved by the orders dated 28.10.2004 and 10.02.2005, the applicant-respondent filed an OA No. 256 of 2005 before the Tribunal at Lucknow, which was partly allowed vide impugned judgment and order dated 13.09.2005.

13. While entertaining the present writ petition, this Court has passed an interim order in favour of the petitioners on 04.01.2006, which reads as under:-

"Sri Prayas Srivastava, who has filed short counter affidavit on behalf of opposite party No. 1 is directed to file counter affidavit within three weeks. The petitioner may file rejoinder affidavit within two weeks thereafter.

List/put up this case on 07.03.2006, on which date the petitioner's counsel shall produce the record relating to the disciplinary enquiry.

Till then the impugned judgment and order dated 13.9.2005 passed by the Central Administrative Tribunal, Lucknow, shall remain in abeyance. The petitioner shall pay all the retiral benefits, which are payable to an employee against whom compulsory retirement order has been passed and the opposite party No. 1 shall complete the necessary formalities at the earliest."

14. Assailing the judgment and order dated 13.09.2005, passed by the Tribunal, Sri Amit Sharma, learned counsel for the petitioners, on the basis of the pleadings on record, submitted that the Tribunal misread the material on record. The applicant-respondent, in enquiry proceedings, was given full opportunity in accordance with provisions of the Railway Servants (Discipline & Appeal) Rules, 1968 and principles of natural justice to defend himself in the disciplinary proceedings were followed. Even the Disciplinary Authority and Appellate Authority, while dealing with the case of the applicant-respondent, applied their mind.

15. He further submitted that the Tribunal has acted illegally as an Appellate Authority and looked into the material on which the Competent Authority arrived at a conclusion that the applicant-respondent is guilty of charges levelled against him.

16. He further submitted that the Tribunal has failed to take note of the fact that the reasons recorded by the Disciplinary Authority were sound and the applicant-respondent had failed to satisfy by means of representation dated 08.07.2004. Otherwise also, the applicant-respondent could not satisfy that as to what prejudice has been caused to him.

17. He further submitted that the Tribunal has failed to appreciate that the Disciplinary Authority acted in accordance with the settled position of law and communicated a detailed disagreement memo indicating the reasons for disagreement from the finding of the Enquiry Officer.

18. It is further submitted that the Tribunal has failed to take note of the fact that the disagreement memo prepared by the Disciplinary Authority was clear on each issue and the same does not suffer from any lacuna especially when the applicant-respondent responded in response to the said disagreement memo and preferred a representation dated 08.07.2004.

19. Learned counsel for the petitioners lastly submitted that the Tribunal has erred in applying the ratio of Yoginath D. Bagde's case in the present matter. In the matter of Yoginath D. Bagde, the Disciplinary Authority had failed to issue any disagreement memo whereas in the present case, the Disciplinary Authority had issued a detailed disagreement memo to the applicant-respondent.

20. Per contra, learned counsel for the applicant-respondent, Sri R.C, Saxena submitted that the case of the petitioners is squarely covered under the judgment passed in the case of Yoginath D. Bagde (supra).

21. In order to support his submissions, learned counsel for the applicant-respondent placed relevant contents of the disagreement memo, which are quoted hereinabove. On the basis of the contents of the disagreement memo as well as the law laid down by the Apex Court in the case of Yoginath D. Bagde (supra), learned counsel for the applicant-respondent submitted that the tentative reasons of disagreement to the findings recorded by the Enquiry Officer are required to be mentioned in the disagreement memo and if the Disciplinary Authority records a conclusion/finding then it would be improper and illegal and would be violative to the principles of natural justice. He pointed out that after recording reasons, the Disciplinary Authority in the disagreement memo has recorded specific conclusion/finding with respect to the charge Nos. 2 and 3 levelled against the applicant-respondent.

22. Learned counsel for the applicant-respondent further submitted that considering the conclusion drawn by the Disciplinary Authority as well as the findings recorded in the disagreement memo by the Disciplinary Authority, the Tribunal interfered in the impugned orders and passed the judgment and order dated 13.09.2005, under challenge.

23. It is further submitted that the Tribunal has followed the law laid down by the Apex Court, which is applicable in the facts and circumstances of the case and as such, there is no illegality and infirmity in the impugned order dated 13.09.2005.

24. It is further submitted that at the time of filing of OA, the applicant-respondent was 56 years old i.e. in the year 2005 and during the pendency of the writ petition, the applicant-respondent has attained the age of superannuation, as such, in the interest of substantial justice, the matter may not be remanded back to the petitioners to reanimate the issue. Accordingly, the prayer is to dismiss the writ petition.

25. We have considered the rival submissions of learned counsel for the parties and gone through the record carefully.

26. We are not dwelling on other issues involved in the present writ petition, as the learned counsel for the parties have addressed this Court only on the issue related to the disagreement memo issued by the Disciplinary Authority and considered by the Tribunal while partly allowing the OA of the applicant-respondent.

27. As the Tribunal has relied upon the principles settled by the Apex Court in the case of Yoginath D. Bagde (supra), as such, we think it proper to reproduce the relevant portion of the same:-

"28. In view of the provisions contained in the statutory rule extracted above, it is open to the disciplinary authority either to agree with the findings recorded by the enquiring authority or disagree with those findings. If it does not agree with the findings of the enquiring authority, it may record its own findings.

Where the enquiring authority has found the delinquent officer guilty of the charges framed against him and the disciplinary authority agrees with those findings, there would arise no difficulty. So also, if the enquiring authority has held the charges proved, but the disciplinary authority disagrees and records a finding that the charges were not established, there would arise no difficulty. Difficulties have arisen in all those cases in which the enquiring authority has recorded a positive finding that the charges were not established and the delinquent officer was recommended to be exonerated, but the disciplinary authority disagreed with those findings and recorded its own findings that the charges were established and the delinquent officer was liable to be punished. This difficulty relates to the question of giving an opportunity of hearing to the delinquent officer at that stage. Such an opportunity may either be provided specifically by the rules made under Article 309 of the Constitution or the disciplinary authority may, of its own, provide such an opportunity. Where the rules are in this regard silent and the disciplinary authority also does not give an opportunity of hearing to the delinquent officer and records findings different from those of the enquiring authority that the charges were established, "an opportunity of hearing" may have to be read into the rule by which the procedure for dealing with the enquiring authority's report is provided principally because it would be contrary to the principles of natural justice if a delinquent officer, who has already been held to be "not guilty" by the enquiring authority, is found "guilty" without being afforded an opportunity of hearing on the basis of the same evidence and material on which a finding of "not guilty" has already been recorded.

29. We have already extracted Rule 9(2) of the Maharashtra Civil Services (Discipline and Appeal) Rules, 1979 which enables the disciplinary authority to disagree with the findings of the enquiring authority on any article of charge. The only requirement is that it shall record its reasoning for such disagreement. The rule does not specifically provide that before recording its own findings, the disciplinary authority will give an opportunity of hearing to a delinquent officer. But the requirement of "hearing" in consonance with the principles of natural justice even at that stage has to be read into Rule 9(2) and it has to be held that before the disciplinary authority finally disagrees with the findings of the enquiring authority, it would give an opportunity of hearing to the delinquent officer so that he may have the opportunity to indicate that the findings recorded by the enquiring authority do not suffer from any error and that there was no occasion to take a different view. The disciplinary authority, at the same time, has to communicate to the delinquent officer the "tentative" reasons for disagreeing with the findings of the enquiring authority so that the delinquent officer may further indicate that the reasons on the basis of which the disciplinary authority proposes to disagree with the findings recorded by the enquiring authority are not germane and the finding of "not guilty" already recorded by the enquiring authority was not liable to be interfered with.

30. Recently, a three-Judge Bench of this Court in Punjab National Bank v. Kunj Behari Misra [(1998) 7 SCC 84 : 1998 SCC (L&S) 1783 : AIR 1998 SC 2713] relying upon the earlier decisions of this Court in State of Assam v. Bimal Kumar Pandit [AIR 1963 SC 1612 : (1964) 2 SCR 1] , Institute of Chartered

Accountants of India v. L.K. Ratna [(1986) 4 SCC 537 : (1986) 1 ATC 714] as also the Constitution Bench decision in Managing Director, ECIL v. B. Karunakar [(1993) 4 SCC 727 : 1993 SCC (L&S) 1184 : (1993) 25 ATC 704] and the decision in Ram Kishan v. Union of India [(1995) 6 SCC 157 : 1995 SCC (L&S) 1357 : (1995) 31 ATC 475] has held that: (SCC p. 96, para 17)

"It will not stand to reason that when the finding in favour of the delinquent officers is proposed to be overturned by the disciplinary authority then no opportunity should be granted. The first stage of the enquiry is not completed till the disciplinary authority has recorded its findings. The principles of natural justice would demand that the authority which proposes to decide against the delinquent officer must give him a hearing. When the enquiring officer holds the charges to be proved, then that report has to be given to the delinquent officer who can make a representation before the disciplinary authority takes further action which may be prejudicial to the delinquent officer. When, like in the present case, the enquiry report is in favour of the delinquent officer but the disciplinary authority proposes to differ with such conclusions, then that authority which is deciding against the delinquent officer must give him an opportunity of being heard for otherwise he would be condemned unheard. In departmental proceedings, what is of ultimate importance is the finding of the disciplinary authority."

The Court further observed as under: (SCC p. 96, para 18)

"When the enquiry is conducted by the enquiry officer, his report is not final or conclusive and the disciplinary proceedings do not stand concluded. The disciplinary proceedings stand concluded with the decision of the disciplinary authority. It is the disciplinary authority which can impose the penalty and not the enquiry officer. Where the disciplinary authority itself holds an enquiry, an opportunity of hearing has to be granted by him. When the disciplinary authority differs with the view of the enquiry officer and proposes to come to a different conclusion, there is no reason as to why an opportunity of hearing should not be granted. It will be most unfair and iniquitous that where the charged officers succeed before the enquiry officer, they are deprived of representing to the disciplinary authority before that authority differs with the enquiry officer's report and, while recording a finding of guilt, imposes punishment on the officer. In our opinion, in any such situation, the charged officer must have an opportunity to represent before the disciplinary authority before final findings on the charges are recorded and punishment imposed."

The Court further held that the contrary view expressed by this Court in State Bank of India v. S.S. Koshal [1994 Supp (2) SCC 468 : 1994 SCC (L&S) 1019 : (1994) 27 ATC 834] and State of Rajasthan v. M.C. Saxena [(1998) 3 SCC 385 : 1998 SCC (L&S) 875] was not correct.

31. In view of the above, a delinquent employee has the right of hearing not only during the enquiry proceedings conducted by the enquiry officer into the charges levelled against him but also at the stage at which those findings are considered by the disciplinary authority and the latter, namely, the disciplinary authority forms a tentative opinion that it does not agree with the findings recorded by the enquiry officer. If the findings recorded by the enquiry officer are in favour of the delinquent and it has been held that the charges are not proved, it is all the more necessary to give an opportunity of hearing to the delinquent employee before reversing those findings. The formation of opinion should be tentative and not final. It is at this stage that the delinquent employee should be given an opportunity of hearing after he is informed of the reasons on the basis of which the disciplinary authority has proposed to disagree with the findings of the enquiry officer. This is in consonance with the requirement of Article 311(2) of the Constitution as it provides that a person shall not be dismissed or removed or reduced in rank except after an enquiry in which he has been informed of the charges against him and given a reasonable opportunity of being heard in respect of those charges. So long as a final decision is not taken in the matter, the enquiry shall be deemed to be pending. Mere submission of findings to the disciplinary authority does not bring about the closure of the enquiry proceedings. The enquiry proceedings would come to an end only when the findings have been considered by the disciplinary authority and the charges are either held to be not proved or found to be proved and in that event punishment is inflicted upon the delinquent. That being so, the "right to be heard" would be available to the delinquent up to the final stage. This right being a constitutional right of the employee cannot be taken away by any legislative enactment or service rule including rules made under Article 309 of the Constitution.

34. Along with the show-cause notice, a copy of the findings recorded by the enquiry officer as also the reasons recorded by the Disciplinary Committee for disagreeing with those findings were communicated to the appellant but it was immaterial as he was required to show cause only against the punishment proposed by the Disciplinary Committee which had already taken a final decision that the charges against the appellant were proved. It was not indicated to him that the Disciplinary Committee had come only to a "tentative" decision and that he could show cause against that too. It was for this reason that the reply submitted by the appellant failed to find favour with the Disciplinary Committee.

35. Since the Disciplinary Committee did not give any opportunity of hearing to the appellant before taking a final decision in the matter relating to the findings on the two charges framed against him, the principles of natural justice, as laid down by a three-Judge Bench of this Court in Punjab National Bank v. Kunj Behari Misra [(1998) 7 SCC 84 : 1998 SCC (L&S) 1783 : AIR 1998 SC 2713] referred to above, were violated.

37. The contention apparently appears to be sound but a little attention would reveal that it sounds like the reverberations from an empty vessel. What is ignored by the learned counsel is that a final decision with regard to the charges levelled against the appellant had already been taken by the Disciplinary Committee without providing any opportunity of hearing to him. After having taken that decision, the members of the Disciplinary Committee merely issued a notice to the appellant to show cause against the major punishment of dismissal mentioned in Rule 5 of the Maharashtra Civil Services (Discipline and Appeal) Rules, 1979. This procedure was contrary to the law laid down by this Court in the case of Punjab National Bank [(1998) 7 SCC 84 : 1998 SCC (L&S) 1783 : AIR 1998 SC 2713] in which it had been categorically provided, following earlier decisions, that if the disciplinary authority does not agree with the findings of the enquiry officer that the charges are not proved, it has to provide, at that stage, an opportunity of hearing to the delinquent so that there may still be some room left for convincing the disciplinary authority that the findings already recorded by the enquiry officer were just and proper. Post-decisional opportunity of hearing, though available in certain cases, will be of no avail, at least, in the circumstances of the present case.

38. The Disciplinary Committee consisted of five seniormost Judges of the High Court which also included the Chief Justice. The Disciplinary Committee took a final decision that the charges against the appellant were established and recorded that decision in writing and then issued a notice requiring him to show cause against the proposed punishment of dismissal. The findings were final; what was tentative was the proposal to inflict upon the appellant the punishment of dismissal from service."

28. In the case of S.P. Malhotra Vs. Punjab National Bank, reported in (2013) 7 SCC 251: (2013) 2 SCC (L & S) 673, the Apex Court reiterated the earlier view on the issue related to disagreement memo. The relevant paras read as under:-

"13. In ECIL [ECIL v. B. Karunakar, (1993) 4 SCC 727 : 1993 SCC (L&S) 1184 : (1993) 25 ATC 704 : AIR 1994 SC 1074] , only the first issue was involved and in the facts of this case, only second issue was involved. The second issue was examined and decided by a three-Judge Bench of this Court in Kunj Behari Misra [Punjab National Bank v. Kunj Behari Misra, (1998) 7 SCC 84 : 1998 SCC (L&S) 1783 : AIR 1998 SC 2713] wherein the judgment of ECIL [ECIL v. B. Karunakar, (1993) 4 SCC 727 : 1993 SCC (L&S) 1184 : (1993) 25 ATC 704 : AIR 1994 SC 1074] has not only been referred to, but extensively quoted, and it has clearly been stipulated that wherein the second issue is involved, the order of punishment would stand vitiated in case the reasons so recorded by the disciplinary authority for disagreement with the enquiry officer had not been supplied to the delinquent and his explanation had not been sought. While deciding the said case, the Court relied upon the earlier judgment of this Court in Institute of Chartered Accountants of India v. L.K. Ratna [(1986) 4 SCC 537 : (1986) 1 ATC 714 : AIR 1987 SC 71] .

14.Kunj Behari Misra [Punjab National Bank v. Kunj Behari Misra, (1998) 7 SCC 84 : 1998 SCC (L&S) 1783 : AIR 1998 SC 2713] itself was the case where the disciplinary authority disagreed with the findings recorded by the enquiry officer on 12-12-1983 and passed the order on 15-12-1983 imposing the punishment, and immediately thereafter, the delinquent officers therein stood superannuated on 31-12-1983. In Kunj Behari Misra [Punjab National Bank v. Kunj Behari Misra, (1998) 7 SCC 84 : 1998 SCC (L&S) 1783 : AIR 1998 SC 2713] this Court held as under: (SCC p. 97, para 19)

"19. The result of the aforesaid discussion would be that the principles of natural justice have to be read into Regulation 7(2). As a result thereof, whenever the disciplinary authority disagrees with the enquiry authority on any article of charge, then before it records its own findings on such charge, it must record its tentative reasons for such disagreement and give to the delinquent officer an opportunity to represent before it records its findings. The report of the enquiry officer containing its findings will have to be conveyed and the delinquent officer will have an opportunity to persuade the disciplinary authority to accept the favourable conclusion of the enquiry officer. The principles of natural justice, as we have already observed, require the authority which has to take a final decision and can impose a penalty, to give an opportunity to the officer charged of misconduct to file a representation before the disciplinary authority records its findings on the charges framed against the officer."

15. The Court further held as under: (Kunj Behari Misra case [Punjab National Bank v. Kunj Behari Misra, (1998) 7 SCC 84 : 1998 SCC (L&S) 1783 : AIR 1998 SC 2713] , SCC p. 97, para 21)

"21. Both the respondents superannuated on 31-12-1983. During the pendency of these appeals, Misra died on 6-1-1995 and his legal representatives were brought on record. More than 14 years have elapsed since the delinquent officers had superannuated. It will, therefore, not be in the interest of justice that at this stage the cases should be remanded to the disciplinary authority for the start of another innings."

16. The view taken by this Court in the aforesaid Kunj Behari Misra case [Punjab National Bank v. Kunj Behari Misra, (1998) 7 SCC 84 : 1998 SCC (L&S) 1783 : AIR 1998 SC 2713] has consistently been approved and followed as is evident from the judgments in Yoginath D. Bagde v. State of Maharashtra [(1999) 7 SCC 739 : 1999 SCC (L&S) 1385 : AIR 1999 SC 3734] , SBI v. K.P. Narayanan Kutty [(2003) 2 SCC 449 : 2003 SCC (L&S) 185 : AIR 2003 SC 1100] , J.A. Naiksatam v. High Court of Bombay [(2004) 8 SCC 653 : 2004 SCC (L&S) 1190 : AIR 2005 SC 1218] , P.D. Agrawal v. SBI [(2006) 8 SCC 776 : (2007) 1 SCC (L&S) 43 : AIR 2006 SC 2064] and Ranjit Singh v. Union of India [(2006) 4 SCC 153 : 2006 SCC (L&S) 631 : AIR 2006 SC 3685] .

17. In Canara Bank v. Debasis Das [(2003) 4 SCC 557 : 2003 SCC (L&S) 507 : AIR 2003 SC 2041] this Court explained the ratio of the judgment in Kunj Behari Misra [Punjab National Bank v. Kunj Behari Misra, (1998) 7 SCC 84 : 1998 SCC (L&S) 1783 : AIR 1998 SC 2713] , observing that it was a case where the disciplinary authority differed from the view of the inquiry officer.

"26. ... In that context it was held that denial of opportunity of hearing was per se violative of the principles of natural justice." (Debasis Das case [(2003) 4 SCC 557 : 2003 SCC (L&S) 507 : AIR 2003 SC 2041] , SCC p. 578, para 26)

18. In fact, not furnishing the copy of the recorded reasons for disagreement from the enquiry report itself causes prejudice to the delinquent and therefore, it has to be understood in an entirely different context than that of the issue involved in ECIL [ECIL v. B.

Karunakar, (1993) 4 SCC 727 : 1993 SCC (L&S) 1184 : (1993) 25 ATC 704 : AIR 1994 SC 1074] ."

29. In the light of the judgment rendered by the Apex Court with regard to issuance of "Disagreement Memo", we hold as under:-

(i) An opportunity of hearing has to be given to a charged employee for reversing the findings of the Enquiry Officer.

(ii) Denial of opportunity of hearing to the charged employee before reversing the findings of Enquiry Officer would be violative of the principles of natural justice. Requirement of affording of opportunity of hearing is a consequential right to be heard.

(iii) Disciplinary Authority before framing its final opinion, has to convey its tentative reasons for disagreeing with the findings of Enquiry Officer to the charged employee and ask for his reply.

(iv) After taking note of reply, if any, to the tentative reasons for disagreeing with the findings of Enquiry Officer provided to the charged employee, the reasoned and speaking order has to be passed.

30. The Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of K.I. Shephard v. Union of India; (1987) 4 SCC 431 in regard to principle of opportunity of hearing held as under:-

"15. Fair play is a part of the public policy and is a guarantee for justice to citizens. In our system of Rule of Law every social agency conferred with power is required to act fairly so that social action would be just and there would be furtherance of the well-being of citizens. The rules of natural justice have developed with the growth of civilisation and the content thereof is often considered as a proper measure of the level of civilisation and Rule of Law prevailing in the community. Man within the social frame has struggled for centuries to bring into the community the concept of fairness and it has taken scores of years for the rules of natural justice to conceptually enter into the field of social activities. We do not think in the facts of the case there is any justification to hold that rules of natural justice have been ousted by necessary implication on account of the time frame. On the other hand we are of the view that the time limited by statute provides scope for an opportunity to be extended to the intended excluded employees before the scheme is finalised so that a hearing commensurate to the situation is afforded before a section of the employees is thrown out of employment."

31. In the light of principles settled on the issue related to reversing of findings of Enquiry Officer and issuance of disagreement memo, we have to consider the disagreement memo for coming to the conclusion that whether the same is in accordance with law or not. Accordingly, we would like to quote the relevant portion of the disagreement of memo, which reads as under:-

"In view of the facts, evidence on record and circumstances brought out as above, I do not agree with the findings of the IO in respect of this article of charge since he has failed to analyse the evidence on record. I hold the CO guilty of this charge.

In view of the facts, evidence on record and circumstances as brought out and discussed above, I do not agree with the findings of the IO in respect of the article of charges II & III. I hold Sh. S.N. Khan, ERC/LKO guilty of the charges brought out against him under article of charges II & III."

32. From the above quoted portion of the disagreement memo, it is apparent/evident that the Disciplinary Authority before considering the reply of the charged employee has recorded the findings/conclusion and by the same reversed the findings of the Enquiry Officer. The same is contrary to settled principles of Law.

33. Considering the principles laid down by the Apex Court in the above referred judgments as well as the conclusion drawn by the Disciplinary Authority, quoted hereinabove, in the disagreement memo, we find that the present case is squarely covered under the aforesaid judgments.

34. For foregoing reasons, we do not find any force in the submissions of the learned counsel for the petitioners, Sri Amit Sharma to the effect that the case of the applicant-respondent is on different footing and the ratio laid down by the Apex Court in the case of Yoginath D. Bagde (supra) would not apply.

35. For the reasons and findings recorded hereinabove, we are of the view that the interference is not required in the judgment and order passed by the Tribunal. The writ petition for it lacks merit. Hence, dismissed with no order as to costs.

36. However, in fact of the case i.e. age of litigation and litigant, we are not remitting the matter back to the petitioners for considering the case of the applicant-respondent in accordance with law. In the interest of substantial justice, we direct that the period w.e.f. the date of order of punishment till attaining the age of superannuation would only be counted for the purposes of pensionary/post retiral dues and other benefits and the applicant-respondent would not be entitled for the salary with respect to the said period.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Bala Krishna Narayana, J. & Hon'ble Irshad Ali, J.)

1. Heard Sri Amit Kumar Sinha, learned counsel for the appellant, Sri Pawan Kumar Mishra, holding brief of Sri Sri Pranjal Mehrotra for respondent no. 2. None has appeared on behalf of the respondent no. 1.

2. This appeal has been filed by the appellant claimant against the judgement and order dated 10.7.2012 passed by the Motor Accident Claim Tribunal / Special Judge (S.C./S.T.) Act, Allahabad (in short the 'tribunal') in M.A.C.P. No. 659 of 2011 questioning the correctness of the amount of compensation awarded by the tribunal for the death of Shyam Babu Goshwami in an accident.

3. The brief facts of the case are that on 12.7.2011 at about2.30 a.m., deceased Shyam Babu Goshwami, husband of the claimant appellant, who was the driver of Truck No. U.P. 70 B.T. 0291, after parking his truck in village Mankahari Naya Gate railway gate, P.S. Rampur Baghelna, District Satana, Madhya Pradesh was resting under his truck when a Truck No. U.P. 78 B.T. 1960 (hereinafter referred to as 'offending vehicle') which was being driven rashly and negligently by its driver collided with the deceased's truck from behind as a result the deceased was crushed under the wheals of the truck and sustained serious injuries. He was taken to the M.P. Birla Hospital where he died during treatment; at the time of his death the deceased Shyam Babu Goshwami was aged about 28 years and was earning a sum of Rs. 7000/- per month as salary while working as driver of truck No. U.P. 70 B.T. 0291, the deceased had left behind his wife Smt. Seema Devi aged about 25 years, daughters Ku. Poonam aged about 6 years, Ku. Neha aged about 5 years and sons Vikas Goshwami aged about 4 years and Suraj Goshwami aged about 2 years. Swami Nath aged about 54 years and Smt. Munni Devi aged about 52 years parents of the deceased who were dependents upon him.

4. The first information report of the accident was lodged by one Pintu Dube at P.S. Rampur Beegha, District Satna Madhya Pradesh which was registered as Case Crime No. 382 of 2011, under Sections 279, 337 I.P.C. against the driver of the offending vehicle. Stating the aforesaid facts the appellant filed M.A.C.P. No. 659 of 2011 claiming Rs. 20,00,000/- as compensation for the death of her husband.

5. The appellant's claim was contested by opposite party nos. 1 and 2, who filed their written statements paper nos. 41-A and 10-A respectively.

6. Opposite party no. 1 Jyoti Gupta in her written statement denied the allegations made in the claim petition and further pleaded that the liability if any, to pay the compensation to the claimant appellant was that of the opposite party no. 2, the insurer of the offender truck.

7. The opposite party no. 2 in his written statement apart from denying the allegations made in the claim petition due to lack of proper knowledge denied its liability to pay the compensation on various counts.

8. On the basis of the pleadings of the parties, tribunal framed as many as four issues.

9. The claimant appellant in order to prove her case examined herself as P.W. 1 and one Vinod Kumar Goswami eye witness of the accident as P.W. 2. Documentary evidence which was filed by the claimant appellant before the tribunal comprised of copy of F.I.R. of the incident which was registered as Case Crime No. 382 of 2011, inquest report of deceased Shyam Babu and memo dated 13.7.2011 showing that the deceased was admitted to M.P. Birla Hospital as an injured patient, application given by the police department of Madhya Pradesh Administration for conducing post mortem on the body of the deceased and papers pertaining to the treatment of deceased in M.P. Birla Hospital, Madhya Pradesh.

10. Opposite party no. 1 the owner of the vehicle did not examine any witnesses. She filed the registration certificate of the offending truck, driving license of its driver, fitness certificate, national permit, Insurance policy and pollution control certificate.

11. The tribunal after considering the submissions made before it by the learned counsel for the parties and scrutinizing the evidence on record, allowed the claim petition in part awarding a sum of Rs. 3,93,500/- as compensation to the claimant appellant against the opposite party nos. 1 and 2 to be paid by the respondent no. 2.

12. Learned counsel for the appellant has challenged the quantum of compensation as awarded by trubunal on the following grounds :

(i) The job of driver being skilled job, in the absence of any documentary evidence on record in support of the appellant's claim that the deceased was earning Rs. 7000/- per month as driver, the notional income of the deceased should have been fixed at Rs. 6000/- per month for the purpose of awarding just and reasonable compensation instead of Rs. 3000/- per month has held by the tribunal.

(ii) The tribunal has not awarded any amount towards future prospect of the deceased. Considering the fact that the deceased at the time of his death aged about 28 years, the tribunal while determining the income of the deceased, who was self employed ought to have added 40% of the established income towards future prospect.

(iii) The amount awarded under the conventional heads, namely, loss of estate, loss of consortium and funeral expenses awarded by the tribunal is too meager.

13. In support of his aforesaid contentions, learned counsel for the appellant has placed reliance upon in the case of Minu Rout and another vs. Satya Pradyumna Mohapatra and others (2013) 10 SCC 695 as well as in the case of National Insurance Company Limited Vs. Pranay Sethi and others reported in 2017 (4) TAC 637 (SC)

14. Per contra learned counsel for the respondents made their submissions in support of the impugned judgement and award.

15. We have heard learned counsel for the parties and perused the impugned judgement and award as well as the material brought on record.

16. While dealing with the issue regarding monthly income of the the deceased who was doing a skilled job and where there was no documentary evidence for proving the monthly income of the deceased, the Apex Court in paragraph 119 and 20 of the case Minu Rout and another vs. Satya Pradyumna Mohapatra and others (supra) held as hereunder:

"19. The appellants claimed compensation under the heading of loss of dependency as they were all dependents upon the earnings of the deceased Susil Rout. It is an undisputed fact that Susil Rout was working as a driver of the car which is a skilled job. Appellants have stated in the claim petition and in the evidence of PW-1 that the deceased was earning Rs.5,000/- per month. The oral evidence of PW-1 is not accepted by the Tribunal, solely for the reason that the appellants did not produce documentary evidence to prove the monthly salary of the deceased as Rs.5,000/- per month as claimed by them. However, it had taken monthly income of the deceased at Rs.3,000/-, for the purpose of determining the multiplicand. Out of Rs.3,000/- p.m., 1/3rd amount was deducted towards personal expenses of the deceased and arrived at Rs.3,84,000/- towards loss of dependency. Out of that compensation, 50% was deducted towards contributory negligence on the part of the deceased and Rs.1,92,000/- was awarded under the above heading. The compensation awarded by the Tribunal is approved by the High Court, which is not only erroneous in law but also suffers from error in law.

20. The Tribunal ought to have taken the salary of the deceased driver at Rs.6,000/- by taking judicial notice of the fact that the post of a driver is a skilled job. Though the claim of the appellants is Rs.5000/- as monthly salary of the deceased for the purpose of determining the loss of dependency, the actual entitlement of the salary of the deceased should have been taken at Rs.6000/- per month by the Tribunal for awarding just and reasonable compensation, which is the statutory duty of the Tribunal and the Appellate Court. In view of the law laid down by this Court in Santosh Devi vs. National Insurance Company Ltd. & Ors.; 30% of future prospects of the deceased should be added to the monthly income. If 30% is added to the monthly income, it would amount to Rs.7,800/- p.m. From the same, 1/3rd should be deducted towards the personal expenses of the deceased, then the remaining amount would come to Rs.5,200/- per month. The same is multiplied by 12 amounting to Rs.62,400/- which would be the multiplicand. The same must be multiplied by 16 multiplier as the Tribunal has taken the age of the deceased at 35 as mentioned in the post mortem report, which is produced as Exh.5. According to the decision of this Court in Sarla Verm vs. Delhi Transport Corporation Sarla Verma vs. Delhi Transport Corporation, the multiplier of 16 taken by the Tribunal for computation of loss of dependency is correct. If the 16 multiplier is applied to the multiplicand of Rs.62,400/-, it comes to Rs.9,98,400/- which amount is awarded towards the loss of dependency of the appellants."

17. Thus, we hold that the tribunal committed a patent error of law in holding the notional income of the deceased to be Rs. 3000/- whereas in accordance with principles propounded by the Apex Court in the case ofMinu Rout and another Vs. Satya Pradyumna Mohapatra and others (supra)the income of the deceased considering the skilled job of the deceased should be Rs. 6000/- per month.

18. The constitutional bench of the Apex Court in the case of National Insurance Company Limited Versus Pranay Sethi and Others reported in 2017 (4) T.A.C. 637 (S.C.) in sub-paragraph (iii) to (viii) of paragraph 61 has ruled inter-alia; that while determining the income, an addition of 50% of actual salary to the income of the deceased towards future prospects, where the deceased had a permanent job and was below the age of 40 years, should be made. The addition should be 30%, if the age of the deceased was between 40 to 50 years. In case the deceased was between the age of 50 to 60 years, the addition should be 15%. Actual salary should be read as actual salary less tax; in case the deceased was self-employed or on a fixed salary, an addition of 40% of the established income should be the warrant where the deceased was below the age of 40 years. An addition of 25% where the deceased was between the age of 40 to 50 years and 10% where the deceased was between the age of 50 to 60 years should be regarded as the necessary method of computation. The established income means the income minus the tax component; for determination of the multiplicand, the deduction for personal and living expenses, the tribunals and the courts shall be guided by paragraphs 14 to 15 of Sarla Verma, 2009 ACJ 1298 (SC); the selection of multiplier shall be as indicated in the Table in Sarla Verma, 2009 ACJ 1298 (SC) read with para 21 of that judgment; the age of the deceased should be the basis for applying the multiplier; reasonable figures on conventional heads, namely, loss of estate, loss of consortium and funeral expenses should be Rs. 15,000/-, Rs. 40,000/- and Rs. 15,000/- respectively. The aforesaid amounts should be enhanced at the rate of 10% in every three years.

19. Thus in view of the legal principles propounded by the Apex Court in the Constitutional Bench Judement in the case of National Insurance Company Limited Versus Pranay Sethi and Others (supra), we find that while determining the monthly income of the deceased the tribunal should have added 40% of the deceased's established income towards future prospect and the amount awarded by the tribunal under the conventional heads of loss of estate, loss of consortium and funeral expenses is also too meagre and liable to be enhanced.

20. In view of the foregoing discussion, we allow this appeal in part and re-calculate the compensation by applying the principles laid down by the Apex Court in the case of National Insurance Company Limited (supra). As noticed above, the notional income of the deceased was fixed at Rs. 15,000/- per month or Rs. 1,80,000/- p.a. by adding 40% towards future prospects as the deceased was less than 40 years of age, the deemed gross income of the deceased would be 40% of Rs. 15,000/- = Rs. 6,000/- + Rs. 15,000/- i.e. Rs. 21,000/- per month or Rs. 2,54,000/- p.a. After deducting 1/3rd amount (i.e. 21,000-7000) towards the personal and living expenses of the deceased, his contribution to the family is determined as Rs. 14,000/- per month or Rs. 1,68,000/- p.a. After applying the multiplier of 16, the total loss of dependency is assessed at Rs. 26,88,000/-. We further award a sum of Rs. 15,000/- towards funeral expenses and Rs. 40,000/- under the head of loss of consortium. We accordingly increase the compensation awarded to the claimants/appellants by the Tribunal from Rs. 16,87,000/- to Rs. 27,42,000/-. The claimants/appellants shall further be entitled to interest @ 7% p.a. on the increased amount of compensation from the date of filing of the claim.

21. The impugned judgement and award stands modified to the extent indicated hereinabove.

22. The parties shall bear their own costs.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Dr. Kaushal Jayendra Thaker, J.)

1. Heard Sri Serve Singh assisted by Sri Harish Prasad Gupta, learned counsel for the appellants and Sri Dinkar Mani Tripathi, learned counsel for the U.P.S.T.C..

2. This appeal, at the behest of the claimants, challenges the judgment and award dated 04.09.2003 passed by Motor Accident Claims Tribunal/Additional District Judge, Gorakpur (hereinafter referred to as 'Tribunal') in M.A.C.P. No. 03 of 2002.

3. The grounds raised in the memo of appeal for claiming higher compensation are as enumerated in para 4, 5, 6,7 which read as follows:-

"(4). The deceased was business man and has been earning more than 150 per day and was only aged about 35 years, being survived by 2 minor sons, 1 minor daughter, 1 wife, mother and one brother and all are the dependent of the deceased, and there is much loss to the deceased family, after the death of deceased, and the learned Tribunal has ignored this aspect of the matter, while making the award.

(5). The appellants have fully established their case for multiplying the claim according to the earning of the deceased, and of his age, but the learned Tribunal illegally and erroneous did not multiplier the claim of the appellants, hence award is wholly wrong liable be to interfered by the Hon'ble Court.

(6). Only on the grounds of being handicap a various liabilities should not be sifted, as has been done in the impugned award, by the learned Tribunal, hence the impugned award is wholly illegal, erroneous and liable to be interfered by the Hon'ble Court.

(7). The learned Tribunal erroneously and manifestly mis-interpretated the evidence made by the appellants, and recorded of perverse findings of no fault case. Hence the impugned order is wholly illegal, erroneous, and illegal."

The learned Advocate for the appellants has cited the following judgments in the case of Smt. Gulshan Jahan and Others Vs. Om Prakash and Another [2011 (2) ADJ 12 (DB)] decided on 7th January, 2011, Smt. Kaushnuma Begum & Ors. Vs. The New India Assurance Co. Ltd. & Ors [2001 (1) SCC 5 decided on 03.01.2001 and has contended that the finding of the Commissioner of the Motor Accidental Claims Tribunal is bad and has contended that the Tribunal has granted a paltry sum of Rs.55,000/- for the death of person aged 35 and was having his own business of stationary he was survived by six persons and was earning Rs.3,000/- per month. It has further contended that the finding of fact that as the deceased was handicapped and was unable to cross the road it was an act of God and he was person responsible for the accident having taken place. Though the Tribunal believed that the bus was involved in the accident belonging to U.P.S.R.T.C. it granted only Rs.55,000/- as compensation.

4. The principle of negligence enunciated here in below will have to be looked into as the Insurance company in memo of appeal has come with the stand that there was a head on collision and it was a case of contributory negligence and, therefore, there is error apparent on the face of record and erred in not framing any issue on that count.

5. The concept of negligence has been time and again enunciated by different Courts and the word 'negligence' will have to be viewed from the decision in Rylands V/s. Fletcher, (1868) 3 HL (LR) 330 which has been time and again referred by the Courts in India.

6. The term negligence means failure to exercise care towards others which a reasonable and prudent person would in a circumstance or taking action which such a reasonable person would not. Negligence can be both intentional or accidental which is normally accidental. More particularly, it connotes reckless driving and the injured must always prove that the either side is negligent. If the injury rather death is caused by something owned or controlled by the negligent party then he is directly liable otherwise the principle of "res ipsa loquitur" meaning thereby "the things speak for itself" would apply.

7. The term negligence has been discussed time and again. A person who either contributes or is author of the accident would be liable for his contribution to the accident having taken place.

8. The Division Bench of this Court in F.A.F.O. No. 1818 of 2012 (Bajaj Allianz General Insurance Co.Ltd. Vs. Smt. Renu Singh And Others) decided on 19.7.2016 has held as under :

"16. Negligence means failure to exercise required degree of care and caution expected of a prudent driver. Negligence is the omission to do something which a reasonable man, guided upon the considerations, which ordinarily regulate conduct of human affairs, would do, or doing something which a prudent and reasonable man would not do. Negligence is not always a question of direct evidence. It is an inference to be drawn from proved facts. Negligence is not an absolute term, but is a relative one. It is rather a comparative term. What may be negligence in one case may not be so in another. Where there is no duty to exercise care, negligence in the popular sense has no legal consequence. Where there is a duty to exercise care, reasonable care must be taken to avoid acts or omissions which would be reasonably foreseen likely to caused physical injury to person. The degree of care required, of course, depends upon facts in each case. On these broad principles, the negligence of drivers is required to be assessed.

17. It would be seen that burden of proof for contributory negligence on the part of deceased has to be discharged by the opponents. It is the duty of driver of the offending vehicle to explain the accident. It is well settled law that at intersection where two roads cross each other, it is the duty of a fast moving vehicle to slow down and if driver did not slow down at intersection, but continued to proceed at a high speed without caring to notice that another vehicle was crossing, then the conduct of driver necessarily leads to conclusion that vehicle was being driven by him rashly as well as negligently.

18. 10th Schedule appended to Motor Vehicle Act contain statutory regulations for driving of motor vehicles which also form part of every Driving License. Clause-6 of such Regulation clearly directs that the driver of every motor vehicle to slow down vehicle at every intersection or junction of roads or at a turning of the road. It is also provided that driver of the vehicle should not enter intersection or junction of roads unless he makes sure that he would not thereby endanger any other person. Merely, because driver of the Truck was driving vehicle on the left side of road would not absolve him from his responsibility to slow down vehicle as he approaches intersection of roads, particularly when he could have easily seen, that the car over which deceased was riding, was approaching intersection.

19. In view of the fast and constantly increasing volume of traffic, motor vehicles upon roads may be regarded to some extent as coming within the principle of liability defined in Rylands V/s. Fletcher, (1868) 3 HL (LR) 330*. From the point of view of pedestrian, the roads of this country have been rendered by the use of motor vehicles, highly dangerous. 'Hit and run' cases where drivers of motor vehicles who have caused accidents, are unknown. In fact such cases are increasing in number. Where a pedestrian without negligence on his part is injured or killed by a motorist, whether negligently or not, he or his legal representatives, as the case may be, should be entitled to recover damages if principle of social justice should have any meaning at all.*

20. These provisions (sec.110A and sec.110B of Motor Act, 1988) are not merely procedural provisions. They substantively affect the rights of the parties. The right of action created by Fatal Accidents Act, 1855 was 'new in its species, new in its quality, new in its principles. In every way it was new. The right given to legal representatives under Act, 1988 to file an application for compensation for death due to a motor vehicle accident is an enlarged one. This right cannot be hedged in by limitations of an action under Fatal Accidents Act, 1855. New situations and new dangers require new strategies and new remedies.

21. In the light of the above discussion, the view that even if courts may not by interpretation displace the principles of law which are considered to be well settled and, therefore, court cannot dispense with proof of negligence altogether in all cases of motor vehicle accidents, it is possible to develop the law further on the following lines; when a motor vehicle is being driven with reasonable care, it would ordinarily not meet with an accident and, therefore, rule of res-ipsa loquitor as a rule of evidence may be invoked in motor accident cases with greater frequency than in ordinary civil suits (per three-Judge Bench in Jacob Mathew V/s. State of Punjab, 2005 0 ACJ(SC) 1840).

22. By the above process, the burden of proof may ordinarily be cast on the defendants in a motor accident claim petition to prove that motor vehicle was being driven with reasonable care or that there is equal negligence on the part the other side."

9. The deceased was a handicapped person and trying to cross the road and at that juncture met with an accident. The claims Tribunal held that not been able to cross the road and meeting with an accident as he was a handicapped person it was an act of God and therefore held that the deceased was himself negligent and granted the amount under no fault liability to the claimants and added

Rs.5,000/- towards non-pecuniary damages. The question is whether the said accident would fall within the definition of act of God. The answer is no. In this case the driver of the bus has disputed his liability rather the driver of the bus and the owner have come out with a another story that the deceased was hit by some other vehicle and they have been illegally roped in. While going through the record it is clear that the accident occurred by the involvement of the bus as F.I.R. and charge sheet were laid against the driver of the bus. Death occurred due to the involvement of the bus. The deceased being handicapped person the driver of the bus should have taken proper cure and caution in driving the bus on the public road. At the most if we hold the deceased not able to cross the road, he can be held to be 20 per cent negligent whereas a driver driving a bus in such a area should have been cautious which he has failed to follow and therefore, not granting proper compensation is bad in eye of law. The compensation will have to be reevaluated as it cannot be said that the deceased died by the act of God. The decisions cited by the counsel for claimants namely Smt. Gulshan Jahan and Others Vs. Om Prakash and Another (supra) and Smt. Kaushnuma Begum & Ors. Vs. The New India Assurance Co. Ltd. & Ors (supra) will apply in full force and therefore the amount is recalculated.

10. After hearing the learned counsel for the parties and perusing the judgment and order impugned, this Court feels that the income of the deceased, in the year of accident, should have been at least Rs.3,000/- per month namely Rs.36,000/- per year, to which as the deceased was below 35 years of age, 40% of the income i.e. Rs.14,400/- requires to be added as future income which would come to Rs.36,000+14,400=50,400/-. The deduction of 1/3 towards personal expenses of the deceased would be just and proper as he was survived by six dependents. Hence, after deduction of 1/3, the annual datum figure available to the family would be Rs.33,600/-. The multiplier of 16 requires to be granted looking to the age of the deceased is just and proper. Rs.5,000/- granted by the Tribunal under the head of non-pecuniary damages is required to be enhanced. Hence, the claimants are entitled to a total compensation of Rs.33,600X16+30,000= 5,67,600-Rs.1,13,520= Rs.4,54,080/-.

11. However, the rate of interest which is 8% would be 7.5% in view of the latest decision of the Apex Court in National Insurance Co. Ltd. Vs. Mannat Johal and Others, 2019 (2) T.A.C. 705 (S.C.) wherein the Apex Court has held as under :

"13. The aforesaid features equally apply to the contentions urged on behalf of the claimants as regards the rate of interest. The Tribunal had awarded interest at the rate of 12% p.a. but the same had been too high a rate in comparison to what is ordinarily envisaged in these matters. The High Court, after making a substantial enhancement in the award amount, modified the interest component at a reasonable rate of 7.5% p.a. and we find no reason to allow the interest in this matter at any rate higher than that allowed by High Court."

12. In view of the above, the appeal is partly allowed. Judgment and decree passed by the Tribunal shall stand modified to the aforesaid extent. The amount be recalculated and deposited with interest at the rate of 7.5% from the date of filing of the claim petition till the amount is deposited. The amount be deposited within a period of 12 weeks from today. The amount already deposited be deducted from the amount to be deposited.

13. The record and proceedings be send back to the Tribunal forthwith

A. Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 - Deduction - Deceased being bachelor - deduction towards personal and living expenses, ordinarily in the case of a bachelor is 50%.

Held: - Deceased being a bachelor and the claimants being parents, the deduction of 50% should have been made under the head of personal and living expenses. (Para 13)

B. Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 - Multiplier - Multiplier should be based on the age of the deceased and not on the basis of the age of the dependent - Multiplier to be used should be as mentioned in column (4) of the table of the Sarla Verma judgment which starts with an operative multiplier of 18.

Held: - As the age of the deceased at the time of the death was 20 years, the multiplier of 18 ought to have been applied. (Para 15)

4.Ranjana Prakash Vs Divl. Manager (2011) 14 SCC 639

(Delivered by Hon'ble Rakesh Srivastava, J.)

1. List has been revised. No one appears on behalf of the respondent nos.1 and 2.

2. Heard Sri Tarun Kumar Mishra, learned counsel for the appellant and Sri Pankaj Pandey, learned counsel appearing on behalf of respondent nos.3 and 4.

3. This first appeal from order under section 173 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 (for short "Act'), has been filed by the United India Insurance Company Limited against the judgment and award dated 05.05.2005 passed by the Motor Accident Claims Tribunal/Additional District Judge/Special Judge (E.C. Act), Gonda in MACP No.29 of 2004 (Surya Narayan Shukla and another versus Shiva Shankar Mishra and others), whereby a sum of Rs.3,62,000/- along with interest at the rate of 9% has been awarded to the respondent nos.1 and 2.

4. The deceased, Dinesh Kumar Shukla, is the son of the respondent nos.1 and 2. On 02.02.2004, at about 2.30 in the afternoon, the deceased and Shyama Prasad were riding a bicycle on their way home. When they reached Tikri turn, a truck no.UP 62 C 5079, came from the opposite direction and hit the bicycle. As a result of the accident Dinesh Kumar Shukla died on the spot.

5. The parents of the deceased Dinesh Kumar Shukla, filed a claim petition under Section 166 of the Act claiming compensation to the tune of Rs 67,75,000/-. They pleaded that the accident was caused due to rash and negligent driving of the truck, owned by respondent no.3 and driven by respondent no.4 and that, at the time of his death the age of the deceased was 20 years and he was a student of B.Com and had a diploma in computer application and was earning Rs.4,000 per month.

6. By their joint written statement, respondent nos.3 and 4 denied the averments made in the claim petition. It was inter alia stated by them that the alleged accident never took place and that they were falsely implicated on account of some dispute with the police of the local Police Chowki, Katra. The appellant also filed its written statement stating that the driver of the truck did not possess a valid driving license and that the truck was not insured with them and also that the accident was caused due to negligence on the part of the deceased.

7. The tribunal framed the following issues:

(1) क्या दिनांक 2–2–04 को समय लगभग 2.30 बजे दिन विपक्षी सं02 ट्रक संख्या यू0पी0 62 सी 5079 तेज रफ्तार व लापरवाही से चलाता हुआ याची के पुत्र दिनेश कुमार शुक्ला को टक्कर मार दिया जिससे उसकी मौके पर ही दुर्घटना स्थल पर ही मृत्यु हो गई?

(2) क्या चालक के पास वैद्य चालक अनुज्ञापत्र था?

(3) क्या दुर्घटना के समय गत वाहन विपक्षी संख्या 3 के यहॉ बीमित थी और उसे बीमा की शर्तों के अधीन चलाया जा रहा था?

(4) क्या याचीगण किसी प्रतिकर को पाने के हकदार हैं। यदि हॉ तो कितना और किससे?

8. In support of the claim petition the first respondent examined himself as PW 1, Vinod Kumar Upadhyay as PW 2 and Shyama Prasad Pathak, who had witnessed the accident, as PW 3. The respondents nos.1 and 2 also field documentary evidence in support of their case. No one appeared on behalf of respondent nos.3 and 4, and as such, the claim proceeded ex parte against them.

9. After analyzing the evidence, the Tribunal decided issue no.1 in the affirmative and held that the accident was caused due to rash and negligent driving of the truck owned by the third respondent.

10. While dealing with issue no.2, the Tribunal arrived at a finding that the income of the deceased was Rs.3,000/-. It also determined that the deceased was a bachelor. The Tribunal deducted 1/3rd of his monthly salary and determined the loss of earnings to the family at Rs.2,000/-. The Tribunal then applied the multiplier 15 and declared that the claimants are entitled to get compensation of Rs.3,62,000/- along with interest at the rate of 9% per annum from the date of the claim petition.

11. On the issue of deduction towards personal and living expenses in Sarla Verma v. DTC, (2009) 6 SCC 121, the Apex Court has held that:

"31. ... In regard to bachelors, normally, 50% is deducted as personal and living expenses, because it is assumed that a bachelor would tend to spend more on himself. Even otherwise, there is also the possibility of his getting married in a short time, in which event the contribution to the parent(s) and siblings is likely to be cut drastically. Further, subject to evidence to the contrary, the father is likely to have his own income and will not be considered as a dependant and the mother alone will be considered as a dependant. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, brothers and sisters will not be considered as dependants, because they will either be independent and earning, or married, or be dependent on the father."

12. The deduction ordinarily in the case of a bachelor at 50% has been recently approved by a three-Judge Bench decision of the Apex Court in Reshma Kumari v. Madan Mohan, (2013) 9 SCC 65. Paragraph 41 and 42 of the said report are as follows:

"41. The above does provide guidance for the appropriate deduction for personal and living expenses. One must bear in mind that the proportion of a man's net earnings that he saves or spends exclusively for the maintenance of others does not form part of his living expenses but what he spends exclusively on himself does. The percentage of deduction on account of personal and living expenses may vary with reference to the number of dependent members in the family and the personal living expenses of the deceased need not exactly correspond to the number of dependants.

42. In our view, the standards fixed by this Court in Sarla Verma on the aspect of deduction for personal living expenses in paras 30, 31 and 32 must ordinarily be followed unless a case for departure in the circumstances noted in the preceding paragraph is made out."

13. Admittedly, both the parents, namely, the respondent nos.1 and 2 herein have been held to be dependent on the deceased Dinesh Kumar Shukla and therefore, the Tribunal held that they have the right to get the compensation. The Tribunal has made a deduction of 1/3rd only towards personal and living expenses of the deceased. Whereas, in view of the settled legal position, the deceased being a bachelor and the claimants being parents, the deduction of 50% should have been made under the head of personal and living expenses.

14. Though the counsel for the respondent nos.1 and 2 is not present, however, while going through the impugned award it has transpired that the Tribunal has applied the multiplier of 15 on the basis of the age of the parents/ claimants. In Amrit Bhanu Shali v. National Insurance Co. Ltd., (2012) 11 SCC 738, the Apex Court has held as follows:

"15. The selection of multiplier is based on the age of the deceased and not on the basis of the age of the dependent. There may be a number of dependents of the deceased whose age may be different and, therefore, the age of the dependents has no nexus with the computation of compensation."

15. In Sarla Verma (supra) the Apex Court in paragraph 42 of the said report has held that the multiplier to be used should be as mentioned in column (4) of the table of the said judgment which starts with an operative multiplier of 18. As the age of the deceased at the time of the death was 20 years, the multiplier of 18 ought to have been applied. The Tribunal taking into consideration the age of the deceased wrongly applied the multiplier of 15.

16. In Ranjana Prakash v. Divl. Manager, (2011) 14 SCC 639, the Apex Court has laid down that in an appeal filed by the owner / insurer the claimants can defend the quantum of compensation awarded by the Tribunal by pointing out other errors or omissions in the award. Paragraphs 6, 7 and 8 of the report are reproduced below:

"6. We are of the view that the High Court committed an error in ignoring the contention of the claimants. It is true that the claimants had not challenged the award of the Tribunal on the ground that the Tribunal had failed to take note of the future prospects and add 30% to the annual income of the deceased. But the claimants were not aggrieved by Rs 23,134 being taken as the monthly income. There was therefore no need for them to challenge the award of the Tribunal. But where in an appeal filed by the owner/insurer, if the High Court proposes to reduce the compensation awarded by the Tribunal, the claimants can certainly defend the quantum of compensation awarded by the Tribunal, by pointing out other errors or omissions in the award, which if taken note of, would show that there was no need to reduce the amount awarded as compensation. Therefore, in an appeal by the owner/insurer, the appellant can certainly put forth a contention that if 30% is to be deducted from the income for whatsoever reason, 30% should also be added towards future prospects, so that the compensation awarded is not reduced. The fact that the claimants did not independently challenge the award will not therefore come in the way of their defending the compensation awarded, on other grounds. It would only mean that in an appeal by the owner/insurer, the claimants will not be entitled to seek enhancement of the compensation by urging any new ground, in the absence of any cross-appeal or cross-objections.

7. This principle also flows from Order 41 Rule 33 of the Code of Civil Procedure which enables an appellate court to pass any order which ought to have been passed by the trial court and to make such further or other order as the case may require, even if the respondent had not filed any appeal or cross-objections. This power is entrusted to the appellate court to enable it to do complete justice between the parties. Order 41 Rule 33 of the Code can however be pressed into service to make the award more effective or maintain the award on other grounds or to make the other parties to litigation to share the benefits or the liability, but cannot be invoked to get a larger or higher relief. For example, where the claimants seek compensation against the owner and the insurer of the vehicle and the Tribunal makes the award only against the owner, on an appeal by the owner challenging the quantum, the appellate court can make the insurer jointly and severally liable to pay the compensation, along with the owner, even though the claimants had not challenged the non-grant of relief against the insurer. Be that as it may.

8. Where an appeal is filed challenging the quantum of compensation, irrespective of who files the appeal, the appropriate course for the High Court is to examine the facts and by applying the relevant principles, determine the just compensation. If the compensation determined by it is higher than the compensation awarded by the Tribunal, the High Court will allow the appeal, if it is by the claimants and dismiss the appeal, if it is by the owner/insurer. Similarly, if the compensation determined by the High Court is lesser than the compensation awarded by the Tribunal, the High Court will dismiss any appeal by the claimants for enhancement, but allow any appeal by the owner/insurer for reduction. The High Court cannot obviously increase the compensation in an appeal by the owner/insurer for reducing the compensation, nor can it reduce the compensation in an appeal by the claimants seeking enhancement of compensation." (emphasis supplied)

17. The Tribunal has assessed the monthly income of the deceased at Rs.3000/-. The Tribunal has rightly taken into consideration the aforesaid income for computing the compensation. The annual income comes to Rs.36,000/-. If 50% of the said income is deducted towards personal and living expenses of the deceased, the contribution to the family will be Rs.18,000/-. At the time of the accident, the deceased Dinesh Kumar Shukla was a bachelor of about 20 years old. Hence on the basis of the decision in Sarla Verma (supra) applying the multiplier of 18, the amount will come to Rs.3,24,000/-. Besides this amount the claimants have been held entitled to Rs.2,000/- on account of funeral and ritual expenses. Therefore, the total amount comes to Rs.3,26,000/- and the claimants are entitled to get the said amount of compensation instead of the amount awarded by the Tribunal. They would also be entitled to get interest at the rate of 6% per annum from the date of the filing of the claim petition till realization.

18. In view of the above, the appeal is partly allowed. The impugned judgment and award stands modified to the above extent. The amount which has already been received by the respondents nos.1 and 2 shall be adjusted and the rest of the amount be paid at an early date. No order as to cost.

19. The original record shall be returned to the Tribunal forthwith.

6.Om Prakash Verma Vs Smt. Krishna Goel F.A.F.O. No.285 of 2009

(Delivered by Hon'ble Rajnish Kumar, J.)

1. Heard, Sri M. Saeed, learned counsel for the appellant and Sri R.C. sharma, learned counsel for the respondents.

2. The instant first appeal from order has been preferred against the judgment and award dated 07.10.2003 passed by Motor Accident Claims Tribunal/Additional District Judge, Court No.9 in Motor Accident Claim Petition No. 259 of 2001(Gaya Prasad versus smt. K. Trivedi and another) for enhancement of the awarded amount.

3. Brief facts of the case are that the deceased Ashish Kumar,son of the appellant/claimant, had died in an accident by Jeep No. U.P. 78 T 1182 on 19.08.2001. Therefore the claim petition was filed by the appellant/claimant claiming compensation. The respondents had filed the written statement.

4. On the basis of the pleadings of the parties, four issues were framed. After evidence and hearing learned counsel for the parties, learned Tribunal has allowed the claim petition partly and awarded the amount of Rs. 55,000/- as compensation alongwith interest at the rate of 8% per annum, out of which 27500 is to be paid to the appellant/claimant and Rs.27,500/- to his wife, i.e., the mother of the deceased. Being aggrieved by the compensation awarded by learned Tribunal, the present appeal has been filed for enhancement of compensation.

5. Submission of learned counsel for the appellant is that the deceased Ashish Kumar was aged about 14 years at the time of accident and he was studying in Class VIII and was a bright student. There were 6 dependents. If he would have been alive, earned a lot and helped the appellant but the learned Tribunal wrongly and illegally assessed the notional income of the deceased as Rs.15,000/- which should have been higher in view of Kishan Gopal and Another versus Lala; 2013(4) T.A.C.,5 (S.C). He further submitted that the multiplier of 5 has wrongly been applied by the learned Tribunal on the age of the father of the deceased while it should have been applied according to the age of the deceased or if the parents are the claimants, then on the age whose age was less at the time of death and, accordingly, the multiplier is liable to be modified. He further submitted that the lesser amount has been awarded towards conventional heads, namely loss of estate, loss of consortium and loss of funeral expenses, which are also liable to be enhanced. Accordingly, learned counsel for the appellant submitted that the appeal may be allowed and the impugned judgment and award passed by the learned Motor Accident Claims Tribunal may be modified and the amount of compensation be enhanced.

6. Learned counsel for the appellant/claimant relying on the judgment of the Honb'le Apex Court in the case of Reshma Kumari and others versus Madan Mohan and another; (2013) 9 SCC 65 submitted that the multiplier of 15 is liable to be applied in the present case.

7. Per contra, learned counsel for the respondent submitted that the deceased was aged about 14 years, as such, he was minor at the time of death. Therefore the notional income of Rs. 15,000/- has rightly been assessed and the multiplier has rightly been applied on the age of the father. However, relying on the judgment of this Court in the case of Khalil Ahmad and another versus Jitendra Bhushen Pandey and another; F.A.F.O. No.377 of 2001 and Om Prakash Verma versus Smt. Krishna Goel; F.A.F.O. No.285 of 2009 submitted that the appellant is entitled only for a fixed compensation of

8. I have considered the submission of learned counsel for the parties and perused the records.

9. The deceased Ashish Kumar and one Radheylal were going back from Mela in Achalganj on 19.08.2001 at about 5:00 p.m. from a Vikram. When they stepped down from the Vikram near Mawaiya Minor Puliya,Jeep No. 78AT 1182 which was coming from the side of Unnao towards Achalganj smashed the deceased Ashish Kumar, the son of the claimant who died on the same day in the Sadar Hospital, Unnao. On account of the death in the accident, the claim petition was filed which has been allowed partly by the claims tribunal. The factum of accident has not been disputed by anybody and the instant appeal has been filed only for enhancement of the amount of compensation.

10. Admittedly, the deceased was aged about 14 years at the time of accident. The learned Tribunal has assessed the notional income of the deceased as Rs.15,000/- as no evidence was adduced in regard to the income of the deceased. The income has been determined on the basis of Second Schedule of Section 163-A of the Motor Vehicles Act because nothing has been brought on record nor any evidence was adduced in regard to the income of the deceased or about the career of the deceased. Therefore the income has rightly been determined on the basis of the second schedule. The case of Kishan Gopal and another versus Lala(supra) is not applicable on the facts and circumstances of the present case because in that case the deceased was assisting the appellants in their agricultural occupation while in the present case the deceased was doing nothing.

11. The learned Tribunal has allowed the mulitplier of 5 considering the age of father of the deceased while as per settled proposition of law it should be applied on the basis of the age of the deceased. In the case of National Insurance Company Ltd. versus Pranay Sethi and others; (2017) 16 SCC 680 in paragraph 59.7 and M/s Royal Sundaram Alliance Insurance Company Limited versus Mandala Yadagiri Goud and others; (2019) 5 SCC 554, the Hon'ble Apex Court has held that the multiplier should be applied on the age of the deceased.

12. The deceased was aged 14 years of age at the time of accident. Therefore the question arises as to what multiplier should be applied because the Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of Sarla Verma(Smt.) and others versus Delhi Transport Corporation and another; 2009 6 SCC 121 has provided the multiplier in paragraph 42 from the age of 15 years. The Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of Reshma Kumar and ohters versus Madan Mohan (supra) has held in paragraph 43.2 that in cases where the age of the deceased is upto 15 years, irrespective of Section 166 or Section 163-A under which the claim for compensation has been made, multiplier of 15 and the assessment as indicated in the Second Schedule subject to correction as pointed out in Column (6) of the Table in Sarla Verma should be followed. The paragraph 43.2 is reproduced as under:-

"43.2 In cases where the age of the deceased is upto 15 years, irrespective of Section 166 or Section 163-A under which the claim for compensation has been made, multiplier of 15 and the assessment as indicated in the Second Schedule subject to correction as pointed out in Column (6) of the Table in Sarla Verma should be followed."

13. In view of above this Court is of the view that the multiplier of 15 is to be applied in the present case in place of 5.

14. So far as the future prospects are concerned the learned Tribunal has allowed Rs. 2,000 towards the funeral expenses and Rs. 3.000/ towards the loss of consortium, while the Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of National Insurance Company Ltd. versus Pranay Sethi and others (supra) has allowed Rs.15,000/- Rs.40,000/- and Rs. 15,000/- towards loss of estate, loss of consortium and funeral expenses under the conventional heads. The Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of Kishan Gopal and another versus Lala and others(supra) has allowed Rs. 50,000 towards the conventional heads in case of accident on 19.04.1992 in which the parents had lost their son at the age of 10 years. In the present case the accident had occurred on 19.08.2001. Therefore this Court is of the considered view that the appellants are entitled for Rs.15,000/-, Rs.40,000/- and Rs.15,000/- under the conventional heads in view of National Insurance Company Ltd. versus Pranay Sethi and others(supra) in place of Rs.2000/- and Rs.3,000/-.

15. On the basis of above, this Court is of the considered opinion that the compensation determined by the learned Tribunal is insufficient and the assessment should be made on the basis of notional income of Rs.15,000/- and applying the multiplier of 15 alongwith the amount under the conventional heads as indicated above. Therefore the judgment and award passed by the learned Tribunal is liable to be modified and the appellant/ claimant is held entitled to a compensation which is calculated as follows:.

1	Income	Rs.15,000/-
2	After deduction @ 1/3rd	Rs.10,000/-
3	Multiplier(15);10,000/-x15	Rs.1,50,000/-
4	Loss of estate	Rs.15,000/-
5	Loss of consortium	Rs.40,000/-
6	Funeral expenses	Rs.15,000/-
	Total (3+4+5+6)	Rs.2,20,000/-

16. In view of above, the F.A.F.O No.16 of 2004: Gaya Prasad versus Smt. K. Trivedi and another is partly allowed and judgment and award dated 07.10.2003 passed by Additional District Judge, Court No.9/ Motor Accident Claim Tribunal in Motor Accident Claim Petition No. 259 of 2001(Gaya Prasad versus Smt. K. Trivedi and another) stands modified to the extent indicated above in paragraph 15. The appellants are entitled for Rs.2,20,000/- as compensation alongwith interest at the rate of 8% per annum awarded by the Tribunal, which shall be paid by the respondents after adjusting the amount paid, if any, within a period of two months from today.

17. No order as to costs.

18. Office is directed to remit the lower court record to the concerned Tribunal forthwith within a period of four weeks.

A. Family Courts Act- Section 7(1) – Specific Relief Act- Section 34 - Code of Civil Procedure - Section 9- The issue as to whether defendant No.3 is son of Bhairam or Vishwanath would not fall within the realm of the jurisdiction of Family Courts, which are courts of limited jurisdiction. The relief sought would fall under the ambit of Section 34 of the Specific Relief Act, well within the domain of ordinary civil courts. The impugned judgment passed by the appellate court is accordingly set aside. The matter is remitted to the appellate court for deciding the appeal afresh based on its merits in light of the observations made above. (Para 7,8, 10 & 11)

Writ Petition allowed in part (E-8)

List of Cases Cited: -

1. Samar Kumar Roy vs. Jharna Bera, (2017) 9 SCC 591

(Delivered by Hon'ble Manoj Kumar Gupta, J.)

1. Heard counsel for the parties.

2. The instant petition is directed against the order dated 4.4.2019 passed by District Judge, Ghazipur in Misc. Civil Appeal No. 17 of 2018 disposing of the appeal filed by the petitioner with a direction to the trial court to decide issue relating to jurisdiction in the light of the observations made in the order, before proceeding further in the matter. The appeal was directed against the order dated 9.3.2018 passed in Original Suit No. 722 of 2017, whereby the application for temporary injunction filed by the plaintiff-petitioner was rejected. The relief claimed in the suit is for cancellation of sale deed dated 13.10.2016 executed by defendant No.3, Mangala in favour of defendants no. 1 and 2; for permanent injunction restraining the defendants from interfering in the possession of the plaintiff in respect of the suit property or raising constructions over the same without getting the property partitioned; and for declaration that defendant No.3 Mangala is son of late Vishwanath and not Bhairam. The appellate court, while deciding the appeal, has held that the main issue involved in the suit is whether defendant No.3 is son of Bhairam or Vishwanath. It has observed that the said issue would fall within the jurisdiction of Family Court in view of Clause (e) of the Explanation of sub-section (1) of Section 7. In the aforesaid backdrop, the above direction had been issued by the appellate court.

3. Counsel for the petitioner submitted that the issue relating to parentage of defendant No.3 cropped up in relation to title to the suit property. The suit does not involve adjudication of any dispute between spouses nor any dispute arising out of any matrimonial relationship. It also does not involve any declaration as to legitimacy of the defendants. The submission is that the Family Courts are constituted with the object of settlement of family disputes and not of the nature, as has been raised in the suit.

4. On the other hand, learned counsel for the respondents submitted that since the main issue involved is whether defendant No.3 is son of Bhairam or not, therefore, the said issue would fall squarely under Clause (e) of Explanation of sub-section (1) of Section 7 of the Family Courts Act. He further placed reliance upon clause (d) which provides for a suit or proceeding for an order or injunction in circumstances arising out of a matrimonial relationship to be decided by a Family Court.

5. Before proceeding to consider the submissions, it would be apposite to take note of the plaint case. The suit was instituted by the plaintiff-petitioner with the allegation that the suit property belonged to his ancestor Khelawan. He was survived by his son Sundar. Sundar had three sons; Mukhram, Bhairam and Rajdev. Mukhram died issueless. Bhairam had two sons, namely the plaintiff-petitioner and defendant No.2, Subedar. It is alleged that Mangala, defendant No.3 is son of Vishwanath. According to the plaint assertions, father of defendant No.3, Vishwanath was resident of a different village. He had no connection with the family of the plaintiff and his ancestors. Defendant No.3 fraudulently succeeded in getting his name entered in the municipal records showing himself as son of Bhairam and on basis thereof, he illegally transferred the suit property in favour of defendant-respondent 1st set alleging himself to be a co-sharer in the properties left behind by Khelawan and Sundar. In essence, the plaint case was that the defendant No.3 wrongly claimed himself to be co-sharer of the suit property as he is in no manner connected with the family of Sundar and Bhairam.

6. The defendants, on the other hand, have denied the plaint assertions and claim that defendant No.3 is son of Bhairam.

7. No doubt, having regard to the pleadings of the parties and the relief sought, one of the main issues to be decided by the trial court is whether defendant No.3 is son of Bhairam or not. In case it is held that he is son of Bhairam, the plaint case would stand demolished. On the other hand, if it is established that he is son of Vishwanath, then definitely the sale deed executed by him, asserting himself to be a co-sharer in the properties kept behind by Bhairam, would be void.

8. Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code provides that all suits of civil nature except suits of which cognizance is either expressly or impliedly barred, shall be tried by the civil courts. The first Explanation provides that a suit in which right to property is contested is a suit of civil nature, notwithstanding that such right may depend entirely on the decision of questions as to religious rites or ceremonies. The jurisdiction of the civil court to try a suits involving right to property is thus expressly recognised. It is also well settled that in dealing with the question whether a civil court has or has not jurisdiction to entertain a suit, every presumption has to be made in favour of jurisdiction of the civil court, unless there is express or implied bar. The Family Courts Act, 1984 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act') was enacted by the Parliament to provide for the establishment of Family Courts with a view to promote conciliation in, and secure speedy settlement of disputes relating to marriage and family affairs and for matters connected therewith. The statement of objects and reasons, interalia, provides that Family Courts are being setup for settlement of family disputes where emphasis should be laid on conciliation and achieving socially desirable results and adherence to rigid rules of procedure and evidence should be eliminated. One of the object of the legislation was to confer exclusive jurisdiction upon Family Courts in matters relating to:-

"(i) matrimonial relief, including nullity of marriage, judicial separation, divorce, restitution of conjugal rights, or declaration as to the validity of a marriage or as to the matrimonial status of any person;

(ii) the property of the spouses or of either of them;

(ii) declaration as to the legitimacy of any person;

(iv) guardianship of a person or the custody of any minor;

*(v) main*tenance, including proceedings under Chapter IX of the Code of Criminal Procedure;"

9. Section 7 of the Act, lays down the jurisdiction of a Family Court and it provides as follows:-

"7. Jurisdiction.- (1) Subject to the other provisions of this Act, a Family Court shall-

(a)have and exercise all the jurisdiction exercisable by any district court or any subordinate civil court under any law for the time being in force in respect of suits and proceedings of the nature referred to in the explanation; and

(b)be deemed, for the purposes of exercising such jurisdiction under such law, to be a district court or, as the case may be, such subordinate civil court for the area to which the jurisdiction of the Family Court extends. Explanation.-The suits and proceedings referred to in this sub-section are suits and proceedings of the following nature, namely:-

(a) a suit or proceeding between the parties to a marriage for a decree of nullity of marriage (declaring the marriage to be null and void or, as the case may be, annulling the marriage) or restitution of conjugal rights or judicial separation or dissolution of marriage;

(b) a suit or proceeding for a declaration as to the validity of a marriage or as to the matrimonial status of any person;

(c) a suit or proceeding between the parties to a marriage with respect to the property of the parties or of either of them;

(d) a suit or proceeding for an order or injunction in circumstances arising out of a marital relationship;

(e) a suit or proceeding for a declaration as to the legitimacy of any person;

(f) a suit or proceeding for maintenance;

(g) a suit or proceeding in relation to the guardianship of the person or the custody of, or access to, any minor.

(2) Subject to the other provisions of this Act, a Family Court shall also have and exercise-

(a) the jurisdiction exercisable by a Magistrate of the First Class under Chapter IX (relating to order for maintenance of wife, children and parents) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974); and

(b) such other jurisdiction as may be conferred on it by any other enactment."

10. The Explanation to sub-section (1) of Section 7 enumerates the disputes which are in the exclusive jurisdiction of Family Courts. It interalia provides that a suit or proceeding between the parties to a marriage with respect to the property of the parties or of either of them or a suit or proceeding for an order or injunction in circumstances arising out of a matrimonial relationship or a suit or proceeding for a declaration as to the legitimacy of any person is in the exclusive domain of Family Court. There is no dispute as to whether defendant was born out of the wedlock between Bhairam and his wife and he is their legitimate son or not but rather the dispute is whether he is son of Bhairam or Vishwanath, who has no connection with the family of the plaintiff. Thus, the issue of legitimacy is not at all involved, nor Clause (e) of Explanation to sub-section I of section 7 gets attracted. The phrase 'matrimonial relationship' used in Clause (d) of the Explanation to sub-section 1 of section 7 would mean the relationship arising out of marriage between two persons. It is never intended that it would take within its sweep all disputes to property based on lineage of a person. A dispute as to whether A is son of 'X' or 'Y' so as to entitle him to succession of property is definitely not a dispute arising out of a matrimonial relationship.

11. The Supreme in Samar Kumar Roy vs. Jharna Bera, (2017) 9 SCC 591, considered the issue as to whether declaration sought by plaintiff that defendant is not his legally wedded wife and that she has no right to his property could be given by civil court or the suit has to be instituted before the Family Court, in view of the Sections 7 and 8 of the Act. After considering the reports of Law Commission, scheme of the Act, and Section 34 of the Specific Relief Act, the Supreme Court held that:-

"16. On a reading of the aforesaid propositions, it is clear that the examination of the remedies provided and the scheme of the Hindu Marriage Act and of the Special Marriage Act show that the statute creates special rights or liabilities and provides for determination of rights relating to marriage. The Acts do not lay down that all questions relating to the said rights and liabilities shall be determined only by the Tribunals which are constituted under the said Act. Section 8(a) of the Family Courts Act excludes the Civil Court's jurisdiction in respect of a suit or proceeding which is between the parties and filed under the Hindu Marriage Act or Special Marriage Act, where the suit is to annul or dissolve a marriage, or is for restitution of conjugal rights or judicial separation. It does not purport to bar the jurisdiction of the Civil Court if a suit is filed under Section 34 of the Specific Relief Act for a declaration as to the legal character of an alleged marriage. Also as was pointed out, an exclusion of the jurisdiction of the civil courts is not readily inferred. Given the line of judgments referred to by the High Courts, and given the fact that a suit for declaration as to legal character which includes the matrimonial status of parties to a marriage when it comes to a marriage which allegedly has never taken place either de jure or de facto, it is clear that the civil court's jurisdiction to determine the aforesaid legal character is not barred either expressly or impliedly by any law."

12. Applying the principles laid down by the Supreme Court and having regard to the scheme of the Act, the irresistible conclusion is that the view taken by the Appellate Court is not sustainable in law.

13. The issue as to whether defendant No.3 is son of Bhairam or Vishwanath would not fall within the realm of the jurisdiction of Family Courts, which are courts of limited jurisdiction. The relief sought would fall under the ambit of Section 34 of the Specific Relief Act, well within the domain of ordinary civil courts. The impugned judgment passed by the appellate court is accordingly set aside. The matter is remitted to the appellate court for deciding the appeal afresh based on its merits in light of the observations made above.

14. As a result, the petition succeeds in part. No order as to costs

(Para 4, 6 & 7)

Criminal Appeal Rejected (E-6)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Ram Krishna Gautam, J.)

Order on Application to Grant Leave for Filing Criminal Appeal

1. This Criminal Appeal, under Section 378 (4) of Criminal Procedure Code , read with Section 372 of Cr.P.C., alongwith Application to Grant Leave for Filing appeal, has been filed by Ashok Kumar Pandey against State of U.P. and six others, challenging the judgment of acquittal, passed by the Additional Sessions judge, Court No.14, Varanasi, in Sessions Trial No. 363 of 2017, Ashok Kumar Pandey vs. Shitla Prasad Pandey and 5 others, under Section 147, 148, 323/149, 325/149, 504, and 506(2) of Indian Penal Code (in short IPC), Police Station-Rohaniya, District Varanasi.

2. Learned counsel for the applicant argued that the trial court passed the impugned judgment of acquittal, on the basis of incorrect appreciation of facts and evidence placed on record. Testimony of informant PW-1 was fully intact and supported with medical evidence in which medico legal report as well as X-ray report was in full tune with injury of fracture over phalanges, reported, proved by the medical evidence, which stood corroborated by two independent witness, who have proved case of prosecution, but trial court passed judgment of conviction in cross case in which present applicant side has been convicted; against which Criminal Appeal, being Criminal Appeal No.4930 of 2019, Ashok Kumar Pandey vs. State of U.P., has been admitted and record of the case has been summoned, vide order, dated 30.07.2019, wherein judgment of conviction, in Sessions Trial No. 392 of 2003, for offence, punishable, under Sections 307 and 452 of IPC, Case Crime No. 224 of 2002, of Police Station Rohaniya, District Varanasi, has been passed. Hence, leave to file this Criminal Appeal be granted and this Criminal Appeal be also connected with above Criminal Appeal for its disposal.

3. From very perusal of the impugned judgment and contentions made in this Application as well as affidavit, filed in support of the Application, it is apparent that the pendency of the cross case for occurrence of same date, time and place, in between the same parties, was undisputed fact and both of the Sessions Trial were held as cross cases in which one case ended in conviction wherein present applicant and others were held aggressor and convicted against which Criminal Appeal was admitted and is pending. In this case, judgment of acquittal is there.

4. Occurrence, injuries of complainant side, cause of those injuries, were given by accused persons in their statement recorded, under Section 313 of Cr.P.C. and it was the same contention, which was a case of prosecution in cross-case. Meaning thereby, injury over the person of Ashok Kumar Pandey was not disputed, but it was said to be caused by exercise of right of private defence by accused persons, when this assault was made by Ashok Kumar Pandey and his family members, at the time of dispute, which occurred, while depositing sand over the pathway, which was protested by Shitla Prasad Pandey and his family members, but was resisted by Ashok Kumar Pandey and his family members, which resulted in this occurrence, in which a fire arm shot, with intention to kill, was extended, and a case crime number, for offence of attempt to culpable homicide, amounting to murder, punishable under Section 307, coupled with Section 452 of IPC was got registered against Ashok Kumar Pandey and his family members. Those case crime numbers were investigated, which resulted in submission of chargesheet, over which cognizance was taken and cross-cases were held in trial.

5. In cross-case, there occurred conviction against which Criminal Appeal, as above, has been instituted and is pending. Therein, Ashok Kumar Pandey side was held aggressor, who had committed above offences and Shitla Prasad Pandey side was held to be victim of that aggression.

6. One very important fact, which needs to be mentioned, is the testimony of Medical Officer of Jail where Ashok Kumar Pandey was admitted. Wherein this has specifically been mentioned that there was no fracture over the body part, which was put under plaster by the Medical officer of Government Hospital at Varanasi. This was suspected by the Medical officer and, ultimately, he made a report and got the same examined by a team of specialist and it was found that it was a false injury, i.e., Ashok Kumar Pandey, who got this criminal case initiated, by way of an application moved, under Section 156 (3) of Cr.P.C., which, subsequently, stood converted to be a complaint case, was with no injury of fracture over his person at the place, which was put under plaster and it was found by the team of Specialists that there was no such injury and it was proved on record. This was a fact of present case and under all above perspective of law and fact as well as evidences, proved before trial court, this judgment of acquittal was passed. There was a judgment of conviction against Ashok Kumar Pandey and his allies.

7. There is no perversity or illegality in passing of the present impugned judgment. Moreso, this conduct of Ashok Kumar Pandey regarding having an X-ray and plaster, without there being any fracture over his person, reveals the way in which this case was concocted. Hence, there remains no ground for grant of leave to file proposed Criminal Appeal against the judgment impugned.

8. In view of what has been discussed above, Application for Grant of Leave to File Criminal Appeal lacks merit and, therefore, stands rejected accordingly.

A. Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973:- Section 372 - Appeal against acquittal - complainant has preferred the instant appeal after lapse of more than 14 years - When the judgment of acquittal was pronounced, the proviso of Section 372 Cr.P.C. was not in existence. It was incorporated by the legislature only on 31.12.2009 giving right to victim to prefer an appeal against the acquittal of the accused or conviction for a lesser offence or imposing inadequate punishment - Since the amendment has come into force on 31.12.2009, it cannot have any retrospective effect to allow the victim to prefer the appeal against acquittal which was passed by learned trial court against the accused respondents by order dated 21.10.2004. (Para 6, 9, 11, 12 & 13)

Crl. Misc. Application (Leave to Appeal) dismissed (E-6)

1. No one is present on behalf of appellant to address the Court, however, Shri Nripendra Kumar Chaturvedi and Shri Apul Misra learned counsel for complainant are present on behalf of the opposite parties.

2. On the last occasion this Court has passed the following order which is being reproduced hereunder:-

"No one is present on behalf of the appellant, even case is called out in the revised list.

Sri Nrapendra Kumar Chaturvedi as well as Sri Apul Misra are present on behalf of the opposite parties.

Pursuant to the order dated 31.05.2018 the notice was issued to the opposite party to file objection to the delay condonation application.

Learned counsel appearing for the accused/respondents submits that he has prepared the counter affidavit to the delay condonation application filed on behalf of the appellant in respect of inordinate delay of about 14 years in filing the appeal. The appellant's counsel is seeking adjournment on one pretext or the other as such he has not been able to contact him to serve the copy of the objection.

Considering the submission advanced by learned counsel for the opposite party and perused the order sheet, it transpires that learned counsel for the appellant is seeking adjournment on one round or the other as such we are taking on record the counter affidavit filed by learned counsel appearing on behalf of opposite party.

Let the case be listed in the next cause list.

On the next date of listing if the learned counsel for the appellant fails to appear the court shall proceed to decide application itself."

3. The instant Criminal Appeal U/S 372 Cr.P.C. along with an application for Leave to Appeal has been preferred by the appellant against the judgment and order dated 21.10.2004 passed in Sessions Trial No. 03/2003 (State Vs. Deepak Kumar Verma and others) arising out of Case Crime No. 473/2001 under Sections 498A, 304B I.P.C. and 3/4 D.P. Act, Police Station Uttar, District- Firozabad whereby the accused respondents have been acquitted by the learned Additional Sessions Judge, Court No. 1 Firozabad.

4. As there is a report of stamp reporter that the appeal has been filed beyond time by 4868 days, hence notice was issued to the respondents vide order dated 31.05.2018 to the delay condonation application filed by the appellant to condone the delay in filing the appeal.

5. Learned counsel appearing on behalf of accused respondents has made serious objections with regard to the maintainability of the appeal itself.

6. The submission of learned counsel is that against the order of acquittal passed by learned trial court by judgment and order dated 21.10.2004, complainant has preferred the instant appeal on 31.05.2018 after lapse of more than 14 years. When the judgment of acquittal was pronounced, the proviso of Section 372 Cr.P.C. was not in existence which was incorporated by the legislature only on 31.12.2009 giving right to victim to prefer an appeal against the acquittal of the accused or conviction for a lessor offence or imposing inadequate compensation. Since the amendment has came into force on 31.12.2009, it cannot have any retrospective effect to allow the victim to prefer the appeal against acquittal which was passed by learned trial court against the accused respondents by order dated 21.10.2004. The present appeal itself is not maintainable and deserves to be dismissed with cost on this count alone.

7. It is further submitted by the learned counsel that the filing of this appeal with inordinate delay which is not at all maintainable has caused immense mental harassment to the accused respondents who have already been acquitted by the trial court.

8. We have considered the arguments advanced by the learned counsel for the accused respondents. The provision of Section 372 Cr.P.C. has been amended by adding the proviso by virtue of the amendment which has came into force w.e.f. 31.12.2009 Act No. 5 of 2009 which reads thus:-

9. Section 372 Cr.P.C.:-

No appeal shall lie from any judgment or order of a Criminal Court except as provided for by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force:

"Provided that the victim shall have a right to prefer an appeal against any order passed by the Court acquitting the accused or convicting for a lesser offence or imposing inadequate compensation, and such appeal shall lie to the Court to which an appeal ordinarily lies against the order of conviction of such Court."

10. The above proviso is prospective not retrospective as held by the Hon'ble Apex Court recently in the judgment of Mallikarjun Kodagali (Dead) represented through Legal Representatives Vs. State of Karnataka & Ors. reported in 2018 (2) S.C.Cr.R. 1310.

11. In paragraph 74 of the aforesaid citation, Hon'ble Apex Court has held as follows:-

"74. What is significant is that several High Courts have taken a consistent view to the effect that the victim of an offence has a right of appeal under the proviso to Section 372 of the Cr.P.C. This view is in consonance with the plain language of the proviso. But what is more important is that several High Courts have also taken the view that the date of the alleged offence has no relevance to the right of appeal. It has been held, and we have referred to those decisions above, that the significant date is the date of the order of acquittal passed by the Trial Court. In a sense, the cause of action arises in favour of the victim of an offence only when an order of acquittal is passed and if that happens after 31st December, 2009 the victim has a right to challenge the acquittal, through an appeal. Indeed, the right not only extends to challenging the order of acquittal but also challenging the conviction of the accused for a lesser offence or imposing inadequate compensation. The language of the proviso is quite explicit, and we should not read nuances that do not exist in the proviso."

12. The right to appeal is a substantive right. The right to appeal given to victim would be prospective and enforceable with effect from 31st December 2009 only (Act No. 5 of 2009). The proviso under Section 372 Cr.P.C. has not conferred right to the victim retrospectively as such no right accrue to the complainant to derive any benefit.

13. Since the issue is not res integra as such we have not find any merit to entertain this appeal which is not maintainable as the judgement of acquittal has been pronounced prior to the amendment came into force under Section 372 Cr.P.C. giving right to the victim to prefer an appeal against the acquittal. The delay condonation application as well as the appeal sans any merit are hereby dismissed.

it is implicit under Section 407 of the Cr.P.C. that a criminal case can be transferred if it is made to appear that a fair and impartial inquiry or trial could not be had - apprehension of not getting a fair trial should be substantial and not cosmetic - The transfer of a case from one territorial jurisdiction to another territorial jurisdiction is a serious business and the same should not be ordered at the drop of a hat unless substantial compelling facts and circumstances are present. (Delivered by Hon'ble Mohd. Faiz Alam Khan, J.)

1. Heard learned counsel for the applicant and learned AGA for the State as well as Shri Vijay Kumar Tripathi for opposite party no.2 as well as perused the record.

2. This transfer application has been moved by the applicant -Ved Prakash with a prayer to transfer Sessions Trial No. 370 of 2015 (State Vs. Shesh Narayan), arising out of case crime no. 2333 of 2008, under Sections 364/511, 504, 506 IPC relating to Police Station Kotwali, District Sultanpur, pending in the court of Additional Sessions Judge, Court No.1, Sultanpur to any other court of competent jurisdiction within State of U.P.

3. Learned counsel for the applicant while referring to the affidavit filed in support of the transfer application submits that the applicant is a practicing lawyer of this Court since 2003 and is a permanent resident of District Sultanpur but after enrollment with the Bar Council of U.P. in the year 2003, he is continuously residing and practicing at Lucknow. He regularly visits his paternal home at village Raniganj, District Sultanpur for purpose of doing pairvi and giving evidence in the cases.

4. It is further submitted that pertaining to the murder of the father of the applicant a case Crime No. 403 of 1986 under Sections 147,1 48, 149, 302 IPC was registered at Police Station Kotwali Nagar, District Sultanpur. All accused persons of this case after trial by the trial court had been convicted by judgment and order dated 28.11.1987. In Appeal also the High Court sustained the conviction of all the accused persons except Ram Naresh, vide order dated 27.4,2006 passed in Criminal Appeal No. 724 of 1987.

5. It is further submitted that in year 2001 the nephew of the applicant, namely, Ravindra Pratap @ Rinku aged about 10 years was kidnapped and murdered, a criminal case was registered against the accused persons on an application given by the brother of the applicant at Police Station Kotwali Nagar, District Sultanpur.

6. It is next submitted that pertaining to a property dispute he filed a Writ Petition No. 863 of 1993 on behalf of his client, namely, Kalu Ram and an order for maintaining status-quo was passed by the Court, however, opposite party no.2, namely, Shesh Narayan Mishra after purchasing the land in dispute started selling the land by carving plots and on being informed about existence of stay order on 6.9.2008, he (opposite party no.2) by entering into the house of the applicant threatened and assaulted him along with his companions regarding which an FIR was lodged by the applicant at Police Station Kotwali Nagar, District Sultanpur as Case Crime No. 2333 of 2008, under Sections 147, 148, 149, 504, 506, 364 and 511 IPC and the same case is now pending before the Additional Sessions Judge, Court No.1, Sultanpur. It is further alleged that on 14.8.2014 the elder brother of the applicant, who was an Advocate, was murdered by assailants while he was going to Court for pairvi of a case, pertaining to which Case Crime No. 1231 of 2014, under Section 302 IPC was registered at Police Station Kotwali Nagar, District Sultanpur. It is further submitted that vide order dated 9.10.2015 passed in Misc. Bench No. 8636 of 2015, he was provided security for his visits to Sultanpur and the same is being provided to the applicant without charging any costs.

7. It is next submitted that on 23.7.2016 when he (applicant) was returning from the Court after attending the above mentioned matter he was followed by opposite party no.2 and his other companions, he made a complaint to D.G. P. (Prosecution) asking for security and the D.G.P. (Prosecution) directed the Joint Director (Prosecution) to take appropriate action, who entered issued an order dated 3.8.2016 directing the I.G. Zone, Lucknow to provide appropriate security to the applicant.

8. It is further alleged that opposite party no.2 is a history sheeter and he is indulged in criminal activities and is threatening the applicant as well as the witness Kallu to the extent that the witness Kallu has lost his mental balance and he is also trying to influence the applicant.

9. Highlighting the above factual matrix, learned counsel for the applicant submits that the above criminal case is at the stage of recording his evidence and he hds appeared before the court on various dates, however, his evidence could not been recorded. It is further alleged that allurement of some money is being also extended to him by opposite party no.2, therefore, there is no hope of getting fair trial and justice and the above mentioned case must be transferred to any other court of competent jurisdiction within the State of U.P.

10. Learned counsel for the applicant while substantiating his argument relied on Sarasamma @ Saraswathiyamma Vs. State represented by Deputy Superintendent of Police and others, reported in (2018) 7 Supreme Court Cases 339 and Abdul Nazar Madni Vs. State of T.N. and another reported in (2000)6 Supreme Court Cases 204.

11. Learned AGA while opposing the contention of learned counsel for the applicant submits that in pursuance of the order of this Court passed in Misc. Bench No. 8636 of 2015 dated 9.10.2015 admittedly security is being provided to the applicant and therefore there is no need to transfer the case.

12. Learned counsel for opposite party no.2 submits that so far as other criminal cases mentioned by learned counsel for the applicant is concerned the opposite party no.2 is not having any concern with them and only instant criminal case is related to the opposite party no.2 which has been lodged on wrong and concocted facts. It is further submitted that nothing as claimed by the applicant has been done by the opposite party no.2 and all the allegations are false and baseless while referring to paragraph 25 of the affidavit filed in support of transfer application he mentioned that the facts given in this paragraph of attending the trial court by the applicant are wrong and false, as on these dates the case was not fixed for prosecution evidence. Therefore the application has been moved by quoting wrong facts.

13. Having heard learned counsel for the parties and having perused the record, I find that an application pertaining tot he incident mentioned in the transfer application, on the basis of which transfer of the above mentioned case is being sought, was given by the applicant to the Additional Sessions Judge- Ist, Sultanpur on 1.12.2018. A copy of that application has been placed as Annexure No.11 to the affidavit filed in support of the application and the incident described therein is alleged to have happened on 30.7.2016. It is only alleged therein that on that date opposite party no.2 followed the applicant to a Hotel at Trivedi Ganj and also that he was staring towards the applicant. No more overact with regard to the conduct of opposite party no.2 has been alleged in that application and a prayer of only fixing the case only on Saturday and to take the case at 3.00 P.M. in the after-noon session has been made. Another incident which has been mentioned in that application is pertaining to the fact that the opposite party no.2 also approached the brother of the applicant to settle the dispute. He is also stated therein that opposite party no.2 is a hardened criminal and seven criminal cases are pending against him. Record further reveals that the applicant earlier approached this Court and vide order dated 9.10.2015 passed in Misc. Bench No. 8636 of 2015 adequate security was directed to be provided to the applicant and vide order dated 30.10.2015 of District Level Committee, constituted to provide security, an order was passed by the S.P. Sultanpur to provide adequate security to the applicant on his coming to his home town. Apart from this, there is one more letter written by the Joint Director (Prosecution), Lucknow dated 3.8.2016 whereby the Inspector General of Police, Lucknow Zone, was requested to provide security to the applicant.

14. So far as the principles governing the transfer of criminal cases from one District to another District is concerned it is implicit under Section 407 of the Cr.P.C. that a criminal case can be transferred if it is made to appear that a fair and impartial inquiry or trial could not be had. It is further to be seen that the apprehension of not getting a fair trial should be substantial and not cosmetic. The transfer of a case from one territorial jurisdiction to another territorial jurisdiction is a serious business and the same should not be ordered at the drop of a hat unless substantial compelling facts and circumstances are present. The applicant in his application has mentioned various dates in paragraph 25 whereon he stated to have visited the district court, Sultanpur for the purpose of recording of his evidence and nothing as apprehended by him has happened. There is already an order passed by a Division Bench of this Court to provide an adequate security to the applicant and admittedly in one of such criminal case, which has been tried by a court at Sultanpur, accused persons have been convicted. So at this juncture, keeping in view all the facts and circumstances of the case, I do not find it a fit case any order pertaining to transfer of above mentioned criminal case be passed and therefore the prayer of the applicant pertaining to the transfer of the criminal case i.e. Sessions Trial No. 370 of 2015 (State Vs. Shesh Narayan), arising out of case crime no. 2333 of 2008, under Sections 364/511, 504, 506 IPC relating to Police Station Kotwali, District Sultanpur, pending in the court of Additional Sessions Judge, Court No.1, Sultanpur to any other court of competent jurisdiction within State of U.P., is refused and thereby transfer petition is dismissed.

15. However, so far as the apprehension of the applicant with regard to any incident which may be caused by opposite party no.2 is concerned Senior Superintendent of Police, Lucknow and Superintendent of Police, Sultanpur are directed to provide adequate security to the applicant on such dates which have been fixed for his evidence in Sessions Trial No. 370 of 2015, arising out of case crime no. 2333 of 2008, under Sections 364/511, 504, 506 IPC relating to Police Station Kotwali, District Sultanpur.

B. In instant case, accused applicant is the father. He may be having matrimonial dispute with his wife, but the victim of this offence is minor girl of 13 years of age. The alleged offence is committed by victim's own father, who is her guardian, and under the lap of whom, she is protected against all world, but he has sexually assaulted her. (Para 4,5 & 6)

Ist Anticipatory Bail Application rejected
(E-6)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Ram Krishna Gautam, J.)

1. This application for grant of anticipatory bail has been moved by Deepak Chugh in Case Crime No. 250 of 2019, under Sections 323, 506, 498-A, 354(a) I.P.C. read with Section 7/8 POCSO Act, Police Station Govind Nagar, District Kanpur Nagar.

2. Learned counsel for applicant argued that there is a family dispute in between accused and his wife, who were married in year 2001. She went with her kids to her parental house and she was with her paramours, which was never complained by accused to anyone because of family prestige. On 28.06.2019, she along with her siblings went to her parental house and even after request on birthday of applicant on 29.06.2019, she did not turn up. On 04.07.2019 she sent some photographs over whats app. On 09.07.2019 applicant was at Mumbai regarding his business work and he came back on 14.07.2019. He found obscene messages with obscene selfie photos over mobile phone of his wife. This was protested, resulting abuse by her and she demanded Rs.3 crores in lieu of Talaq, otherwise to face dire consequences. She again went to her parental house. Those mobile numbers and name of holders were reported to police by way of application dated 05.08.2019. As a counter blast, this false case for offence punishable under under Sections 323, 506, 498-A, 354(a) I.P.C. read with Section 7/8 POCSO Act has been got registered on 19.08.2019 for alleged occurrence of 05.07.2019, which was much delayed and under concoction, owing to above family dispute. The maximum sentence for offence is five years and by putting applicant in jail her entire prestige will go away, for which his wife is adamant to snatch. Hence, this anticipatory bail application was moved before court of Sessions Judge, Kanpur Nagar, but it was rejected by Special Judge (POCSO Act) / Additional Sessions Judge vide order dated 03.09.2019. Hence, this application.

3. Learned A.G.A. has vehemently opposed bail with this contention that there is accusation of sexual assault against father with his own girl, aged about 13 years. Offence is very heinous. Hence, bail be rejected.

4. Having heard learned counsel for both sides and gone through first information report, it is apparent that this case was got registered by way of presenting an application before Senior Superintendent of Police, whereby case has been registered against applicant for offence punishable under Sections 323, 506, 498-A, 354(a) I.P.C. read with Section 7/8 POCSO Act, for an occurrence of 05.07.2019 and it was registered on 19.08.2019. There is specific accusation of sexual assault by accused applicant with her daughter victim, aged about 13 years and when protested complainant informant was beaten and ousted from her house. She went with her children. There is allegation of persistent occurrence of such type of offence, since last two years and this was occurrence of 05.07.2019, at about 3 A.M., which was complained and this was reported. The statement of victim recorded under Sections 161 and 164 Cr.P.C. is fully intact. In application, moved by accused applicant before Senior Superintendent of Police, Kanpur Nagar, the fact that victim is of 13 years was admitted by accused himself. The application by accused applicant was moved after above occurrence of 05.07.2019, when this protest was there.

5. No doubt, offence punishable under Section 7/8 POCSO Act is punishable with five years of sentence, but the legislation legislated this special Act with a view to protect children from offences of sexual assault, sexual harassment and pornography and provide for establishment of special courts for trial of such offences and for matters connected therewith or incidental thereto. This Act was legislated in furtherance of Article 15 of the Constitution, which, inter alia, confers upon the State powers to make special provisions for children.

Article 39 provides that the State shall in particular directive policy towards securing that the tender age of children are not abused and their childhood and youth are protected against exploitation and they are given facilities to develop in a healthy manner and in conditions of freedom and dignity. This was in furtherance of treaty and covenant adopted under the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Children, which are ratified by India on 11th December, 1992 and data collected by the National Crime Records Bureau shows that there has been increase in cases of sexual offences against children. This is corroborated by the "Study on Child Abuse: India 2007" conducted by the Ministry of Women and Child Development. Moreover, sexual offences against children are not adequately addressed by the existing laws. A large number of such offences are neither specifically provided for nor are they adequately penalised. The interests of the child, both as a victim as well as a witness, need to be protected. Hence, it was felt for such legislation.

6. In present case, accused applicant is the father. He may be having matrimonial dispute with his wife, but the victim of this offence is minor girl of 13 years of age. The alleged offence is committed by victim's own father, who is her guardian, and under the lap of whom, she is protected against all world, but he has sexually assaulted her. It does not require any indulgence by this Court.

7. The anticipatory bail application is accordingly rejected.

REVISIONAL JURISDICTION
CIVIL SIDE

BEFORE

THE HON'BLE ANJANI KUMAR MISHRA, J.

Civil Revision No. 2 of 2004

M/s Kanoria Chemicals and Industries Ltd. ...Plaintiff/Revisionist/Applicant
Versus
M/s Global Drugs (P) Ltd.
...Defendant/Opposite Party

Counsel for the Revisionist:
Sri Surendra Tiwari

Counsel for the Opposite Party:

A. Returning the plaint on the ground that no cause of action arose - breach of a contract for supply of aluminium chloride - payment for supply has not been made - The plaintiff needs to prove the contract - the place from where the aluminium chloride was dispatched to the defendant is not relevant - The place from where the goods were supplied therefore is not a fact which is within the bundle of facts comprising the cause of action of the suit itself.

B. Cause of action are those bundle of facts which need to be traversed in the suit before any relief can be granted to the plaintiff. Any fact which is not relevant for deciding the suit does not constitute the cause of action. In the case at hand all that is required to be established is that goods under the purchase order, placed by the defendant, were supplied but not paid for. The place from where the goods were supplied is not material and for the same reason it is not a relevant fact, constituting the cause of action. (Para 7,8,15,16,17,18,21,22 & 23)

Civil Revision dismissed (E-6)

Precedent followed: -

1. Laxman Prasad Vs Prodigy Electronics Ltd. & anr. (2008) 1 SCC 618

(Delivered by Hon'ble Anjani Kumar Mishra, J.)

1. Heard counsel for the revisionist.

2. The instant revision is directed against the order dated 12.09.2003 passed by the Civil Judge (Senior Division) Sonbhadra.

3. By this order, the Civil Judge (Senior Division), Sonbhadra has returned the plaint of the suit filed by the revisionist for presentation before the appropriate forum on the ground that it did not have jurisdiction to entertain the suit.

4. The plaintiff-revisionist filed a suit for recovery of money on the ground that certain goods had been supplied by it to the defendant.The bills raised in regard to this remained, unpaid. A copy of the plaint of the suit has been filed as Annexure-2 to the affidavit filed in support of the stay application.

5. Counsel for the revisionist has laid emphasis on the averment contained in paragraph 6 of the plaint, wherein it has been averred that the plaintiff on numerous occasions called upon the defendants for payment of the unpaid bills and that, letters were sent demanding the balance payments. In response, the defendant, by letters dated 11.05.2000 and 28.08.2001, assured that the outstanding two bills would be paid within a month.

6. It is also averred that apart from the above, the defendant informed the plaintiff revisionist, vide letter dated 22.09.2001, that the defendant had been registered as a sick Industrial Company before the BIFR and the payment due, would be made soon.

7. The main contention of learned counsel for the revisionist is that the suit has rightly been filed before the Court at Sonbhadra. The contract between the parties was for supply of aluminium chloride which was supplied from the unit of the plaintiff situated at Sonbhadra. Aluminium Chloride being manufactured at the said unit and at no other place.

8. On the basis of the above, the case of the revisionist is that part of cause of action arose at Sonbhadra and in ignoring this aspect of the matter, the trial Court has erred materially.

9. It is also submitted that the various bills, which have been submitted for supply of aluminium chloride under the contract, have not been disputed by the defendants.

10. I have considered the submissions made by the counsel for the revisionist and perused the impugned order.

11. The following facts, which are relevant to decide the controversy raised in this revision are to find illegality and irregularity in the impugned order dated 12.09.2003.

12. The plaintiff M/S Kanoria Chemicals And Industries Ltd. is a company having registered office at Calcutta. An order was placed by the defendant M/s Global Drugs Private Limited for supply of aluminium chloride. The registered office of M/s Global Drugs Private Limited is admittedly situated at Hyderabad while its factory is situated at Medak in Andhra Pradesh. It is also admitted that the purchase order was placed at the plaintiff's Chennai Office.

The aluminium chloride was required to be supplied at Medak in Andhra Pradesh and it was duly supplied there.

13. Apart from the above, the impugned order also refers to the various communication, between the parties. The letters that had been written by the plaintiff were addressed to M/s Global Drugs Private Limited, Chennai Branch. However, it is not clear as to from which place, these letters were dispatched by the plaintiff. However, since these letters/communications were signed by one Sri Mukim, who on the basis of Paper No. 14 Ga, was found to be employed in the Chennai branch of M/s Kanoria Chemicals and Industrial Limited, the plaintiff.

14. In the aforesaid, factual background, the Court below came to the conclusion that with regard to the provisions contained in Section 20 of the Civil Procedure Code, no cause of action arose at Sonbhadra.

15. Counsel for the petitioner has placed reliance upon decision of the Apex Court in Laxman Prasad Vs.Prodigy Electronics Ltd and another, (2008) 1 Supreme Court Cases 618, primarily upon paragraph 46 of the said judgement, which is extracted herein below-

"46. Territorial jurisdiction of a court, when the plaintiff intends to invoke jurisdiction of any court in India, has to be ascertained on the basis of the principles laid down in the Code of Civil Procedure. Since a part of "cause of action' has arisen within the local limits of Delhi as averred in the plaint by the plaintiff Company, the question has to be considered on the basis of such averment. Since it is alleged that the appellant-defendant had committed breach of agreement by using trade mark/trade name in Trade Fair, 2005 in Delhi, a part of cause of action has arisen in Delhi. The plaintiff Company, in the circumstances, could have filed a suit in Delhi. So far as applicability of law is concerned, obviously as and when the suit will come up for hearing, the Court will interpret the cause and take an appropriate decision in accordance with law. It has, however, nothing to do with the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court."

16. In my considered opinion, the judgement cited is not relevant for the controversy involved in the instant revision. This Court while deciding the instant revision, is required to a rule, as to whether, in the facts and circumstances narrated above, any cause of action or part thereof arose at Sonbhadra only then would the suit lie at Sonbhadra.

17. In the judgement cited above, it has been held that although there existed a contract between the parties, specifying the terms of that contract would be interpreted in terms of law prevalent in Hong Kong, however, since part of the cause of action arose in India, the matter would necessarily have to be decided in accordance with the Indian law and not according to the law of Hong kong.

18. I do not find any illegality in the order passed by the trial court, returning the plaint on the ground that no cause of action arose at Sonbhadra.

19. The contract for supply of the materials was entered into Chennai. The materials were supplied at the factory of the defendant at Medak, Andhra Pradesh.

The registered offices of the plaintiff and the defendant are admittedly situated in Calcutta and Hyderabad, respectively. The jurisdiction of the courts at Sonbhadra is being invoked only on the ground that material was produced and supplied from the unit of the plaintiff situated at Sonbhadra on the plea that part of the cause of action arose at Sonbhadra.

20. The place from where these goods were supplied would not materially altered nor would be necessarily require to be look into the suit.

21. The suit in essence is a money suit, filed claiming breach of a contract for supply of aluminium chloride, which was duly supplied but payment for suit supply has not been made or has been made in part only. The plaintiff therefore, needs to allege and prove the contract; that the material has been supplied but payment has not been made. In this context, the place from where the aluminium chloride was dispatched to the defendant is not relevant. It is neither required to be alleged or proved, nor will the said fact materially effect the outcome of the suit. The place from where the goods were supplied therefore is not a fact which is required within the bundle of facts. Comprising the cause of action of the suit itself.

22. Cause of action are those bundle of facts which need to be traversed in the suit before any relief can be granted to the plaintiff. Any fact which is not relevant for deciding the suit does not constitute the cause of action. In the case at hand all that is required to be established is that goods under the purchase order, placed by the defendant, were supplied but not paid for. The place from where the goods were supplied is not material and for the same reason it is not a relevant fact, constituting the cause of action. Therefore, the same cannot be made a ground to claim that part of the cause of action arose at Sonbhadra.

23. In view of the foregoing discussion and since the judgement cited by counsel for the revisionist is not applicable in the facts and circumstances of this case, the impugned order is not found to suffer from any illegality or any manifest or jurisdictional error, warranting interference.

24. The revision is accordingly, dismissed.

A. Held: - It is when dispute pertaining to election was not during the course of election or immediately after counting of votes. It is more so when dispute is about the eligibility of the candidates thus should have been raised during process of election. If no dispute is raised till then, University was under obligation to declare the result. Accordingly, while quashing the order dated 08.02.2018, we allow the writ petition with a direction to the respondent to declare the result of the election. However, it would not preclude the respondent no. 6 or any other candidate to challenge the election by taking appropriate measures, as provided under the law. A reference of dispute to the Central Government can be made in that case.

Writ Petition allowed. (E-8)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Munishwar Nath Bhandari, J. & Hon'ble Alok Mathur, J.)

1. By this writ petition, a challenge has been made to the order dated 08.02.2018 passed by the Registrar of respondent-University cancelling the election of the representative of the University in the Dental Council of India.

2. Learned counsel for the petitioner submits that as per Section 5 of the Dentist Act, 1948 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act of 1948'), the Registrar of University has no competence to cancel the election. In case of dispute, the matter needs to be referred to the Central Government for its decision and in that case, the decision of the Government would be final. In view of above, the impugned order has been passed by the incompetent authority thus, on that ground itself, it deserves to be set aside.

3. Referring to the facts of this case, learned counsel for the petitioner submits a schedule of election was announced by the respondent-University. The date of submission of nomination, its withdrawal and finally the date of declaration of result was given. The notification issued for it makes specific reference of Section 3(d) of the Act of 1948 regarding election of the representative of the University in the Dental Council of India. As per the schedule of election, the result was to be declared on 23.09.2017 at 05.00 pm. The respondent-University adhered to the schedule of election and accordingly after completion of process of the election, the votes were counted on 23.09.2017. The petitioner could get 27 votes out of 49 and the other candidates could get 22 votes. In view of above, even the counting took place but the respondent-University, for reasons best known to them, did not declare formal result. It was withheld going contrary to the programme of election, which was conducted under the University Code. Accordingly, it is not only that cancellation of election is illegal, as the order for it has been passed by the Incompetent Officer but even withholding the result by the University is also illegal. The University should be commanded with a direction to declare the result as the counting took place on 23.09.2017 itself.

4. Learned counsel for the petitioner has made a reference of Annexure 14 dated 04.12.2017 to show that there was no complaint in regard to the election till 23.09.2017, as such, there was no occasion for the University to refer the dispute to the Central Government, as envisaged under Section 5 of the Act of 1948. The document at Annexure 14 shows date of complaint to be dated 12.10.2017 on which a Committee was constituted on 25.10.2017. On the day of declaration of result i.e. 23.09.2017, there was no dispute before the University thus even for the aforesaid reason, Section 5 of the Act of 1948 could not have been invoked by the respondents. The prayer is to allow the writ petition with the grant of relief.

5. Learned counsel appearing for the University has contested the writ petition. He submits that after passing of the impugned order, much water has flown. The University has referred the dispute to the Dental Council of India for its reference to the Central Government. In the light of the aforesaid, the interference in the order impugned herein may not be made or if at all it is set aside, the subsequent proceedings may not be effected as the final decision would now be taken by the Central Government, as provided under Section 5 of the Act of 1948, as a reference of a dispute has been sent to Central Government also.

6. Learned counsel appearing for the University has given brief facts of the case to show that a dispute over the election came before it. It was regarding the eligibility of the petitioner to contest the election. Two Members' Committee was constituted to look into the matter and submit report. After a report, the matter was referred to the Dental Council of India and also to the Central Government. The prayer is accordingly to dismiss the petition.

7. Learned counsel appearing for the respondent no. 4 i.e. Dental Council of India submits that they have not received any complaint/dispute and otherwise whenever dispute over the election is raised, it has to be referred to the Central Government and not to the Dental Council of India.

8. Learned counsel appearing for respondent no. 6 has supported the argument raised by learned counsel for the respondent-University. In addition to the argument of respondent-University, it is stated that a complaint about the eligibility of the petitioner was raised during the course of election itself and on the aforesaid, the impugned order was passed. The prayer is accordingly not to cause interference in the order impugned herein or if at all it is set aside, not in reference of dispute to the Central Government. It is further submitted that even if the prayer made in the writ petition is granted, he may be given liberty to challenge the election.

9. Learned standing counsel as well as counsel for the Union of India have jointly stated that they are not concerned with the issue.

10. We have pondered upon the arguments raised by the representative of the parties and scrutinized the matter carefully.

11. The order dated 08.02.2018 has been challenged on many grounds. The first ground is about the competence of the Registrar of the University to cancel the elections, which were conducted to seek representation of the University in Dental Council of India, as envisaged under Section 3(d) of the Act of 1948. It has not been disputed the Registrar of the University is not competent to cancel the election. Section 5 of the Act of 1948 gives power to the University to refer the dispute to the Central Government but they cannot cancel it. For ready reference, Section 5 of the Act of 1948 is quoted hereinbelow:-

"5. Elections under this Chapter shall be conducted in the prescribed manner, and where any dispute arises regarding any such election, it shall be referred to the Central Government whose decision shall be final."

12. The provision quoted above shows that if a dispute pertaining to the election arises, it shall be referred to the Central Government. In view of the aforesaid provision, the Registrar of the University was not competent to cancel the election and accordingly the impugned order can be quashed on the aforesaid ground itself.

13. We are, however, required to look into the other aspect of the matter.

14. Learned counsel for the petitioner has made reference of the election programme given at Annexure 11 to the writ petition. The perusal of the election programme shows date of declaration of result. For ready reference, the election programme is quoted hereunder:

चुनाव सम्बंधी विवरण निम्नवत् है:–

क्रमांक	विवरण	दिनांक	समय
1.	चुनाव हेतु नामांकन तिथि	21.09.2017	पूर्वान्ह 11.00 बजे से अपरान्ह 4.00 बजे तक
2.	नामांकन वापसी की तिथि	22.09.2017	पूर्वान्ह 11.00 बजे से अपरान्ह 4.00 बजे तक
3.	चुनाव (मतदान)	23.09.2017	पूर्वान्ह 12.00 बजे से अपरान्ह 4.00 बजे तक
4.	मतगणना एवं चुनाव परिणाम	23.09.2017	सांय 5.00 बजे

(संजय कुमार)
कुल सचिव/चुनाव अधिकारी

15. It is not in dispute that election programme was undertaken by the University on the scheduled dates. It is also not in dispute that on 23.09.2017, the result was to be declared. It is however a fact that the result was not formally declared though counting took place where the petitioner is said to have remain successful.

16. The aforesaid issue is relevant for the reason that till the date of declaration of result i.e. 23.09.2017, no complaint about the election was received by the University. Perusal of Annexure 14 reveals a complaint dated 12.10.2017, which is much subsequent to the date of declaration of result.

17. Learned counsel appearing for the University could not explain as to why the result was withheld till receipt of the complaint when it was to be declared on 23.09.2017. They could not show any provision empowering them to withheld the result, once the election commenced, as per the schedule given by them. In view of the above, an inference can be drawn against the University for undue advantage to other party by going against the statutory provisions or send a representation of their choice. The adverse remarks against the Officer who has passed the impugned order could have been made but he is not party in person to the litigation. Thus, we are refraining ourselves to make adverse remark against the Registrar or the Vice-chancellor. The facts on record shows that till the date of declaration of result i.e. 23.09.2017, no complaint was received by the respondent-University.

18. At this stage, we may refer the argument of learned counsel for the respondent no. 6, who stated that complaint was given on the date of declaration of result itself. The argument aforesaid has been raised orally. It is not supported by any of the document and otherwise goes against the document at Annexure 14, where the only complaint received by the University was on 12.10.2017 and not prior to that.

19. Accordingly, we cannot accept the oral statement of learned counsel for respondent no. 6 going contrary to the document. In view of the facts given above, what we find is that non-declaration of the result of the election is wholly illegal. It should have been declared on 23.09.2017 and in case of a dispute thereupon, could have referred to the Central Government but not in the manner it is done in this case.

20. In view of above, while causing interference in the order impugned herein, the respondent-University is directed to declare the result of the election.

21. It is when dispute pertaining to election was not during the course of election or immediate after counting of votes. It is more so when dispute is about the eligibility of the candidates thus should have been raised during process of election. If no dispute is raised till then, University was under obligation to declare the result. Accordingly, while quashing the order dated 08.02.2018, we allow the writ petition with a direction to the respondent to declare the result of the election. However, it would not preclude the respondent no. 6 or any other candidate to challenge the election by taking appropriate measures, as provided under the law. A reference of dispute to the Central Government can be made in that case.

22. In view of the acceptance of the prayer, subsequent schedule given in Annexure 2 for the election is set aside.

A. U.P. Consolidation of Holdings Act, 1953 - Section 9(A)2 - Revision under section 48(1) of the Act - Rule 111 of the Uttar Pradesh Consolidation of Holdings Rules, 1954 - limitation for filing a revision before the Deputy Director of Consolidation under section 48 of the Act - 30 days from the date of the order against which the application is directed .

Held:- The revision was barred by limitation by more than five years - the revision preferred by the private respondent no. 2 has been admitted by the Deputy Director of Consolidation without condoning the delay - It is settled that where a suit, appeal, revision or application is barred by limitation the court has no jurisdiction to pass any order unless the delay is condoned -In case of delay in filing an appeal, revision or application, the court is obliged to consider the explanation for the delay offered by the appellant/revisionist, as the case maybe - It is only after condoning the delay that the court gets jurisdiction to proceed with the matter. 3. Sant Lal Gupta Vs Modern Cooperative Group Housing Society Ltd. & ors. (2010) 13 SCC 336

(Delivered by Hon'ble Rakesh Srivastava, J.)

1. Sri Madan Chandra Dubey, the Deputy Director of Consolidation, District Faizabad has appeared in person. Supplementary affidavit filed on his behalf is taken on record.

2. The officer has stated that he suspected some fraud and as such he admitted the appeal and stayed the operation of the order dated 2.4.2012 passed by the Consolidation Officer. This fact is not borne out from the order under challenge. However, the apology tendered by the officer is accepted. The officer is let off with a warning to be very careful in future.

3. Heard Sri Onkar Pandey, learned counsel for the petitioner, the learned Standing Counsel representing the State-respondents and Sri Badrish Tripathi, learned counsel appearing on behalf of respondent no. 2. In view of the order proposed to be passed, notice to respondent nos. 3 and 4 is dispensed with. With the consent of the counsels present the matter has been heard and is being disposed of at the admission stage itself.

4. It appears that against the order dated 2.5.2012 passed by the Consolidation Officer in Case No. 1752, under section 9(A)2 of the U.P. Consolidation of Holdings Act, 1953 (for short "the Act'), the respondent no. 2 preferred a Revision No. 1194 under section 48(1) of the Act before the Deputy Director of Consolidation, Faizabad.

5. On 10.1.2018, the revision was admitted, the record of the court below was summoned and 26.2.2018 was fixed as the next date and by a non-speaking order the operation of the order dated 2.5.2012 was also stayed. The order dated 10.1.2018 is extracted below:

"आज पत्रावली पेश हुई । निगरानी दर्ज रजिस्टर हो । निगरानीकर्ता को स्थगन के बिंदु पर सुना एवं पत्रावली पर उपलब्ध साक्ष्यों का विधिवत अवलोकन एवं अध्ययन किया । न्यायहित में चकबंदी अधिकारी द्वारा वाद संख्या&171152 में पारित आदेश दिनांक 02-05-2012 का क्रियान्वयन

6. It is this order which is under challenge in this petition.

7. Learned counsel for the petitioner has submitted that there was a delay of more than five years in filing the revision. The counsel submits that without condoning the delay, the revision could not have been admitted and an interim order could not have been passed in favour of the respondent no.2. Even otherwise, the counsel submits the interim order, being a non-speaking order, cannot be sustained.

8. The learned counsel appearing on behalf of respondent no. 2 has supported the order.

9. Under Rule 111 of the Uttar Pradesh Consolidation of Holdings Rules, 1954 the limitation for filing a revision before the Deputy Director of Consolidation under section 48 of the Act is 30 days from the date of the order against which the application is directed. Admittedly, the revision was barred by limitation by more than five years.

10. It is settled that where a suit, appeal, revision or application is barred by limitation the court has no jurisdiction to pass any order unless the delay is condoned. In Noharlal Verma v. Distt. Coop. Central Bank Ltd., (2008) 14 SCC 445 the Apex Court has held as under:

"32. Now, limitation goes to the root of the matter. If a suit, appeal or application is barred by limitation, a court or an adjudicating authority has no jurisdiction, power or authority to entertain such suit, appeal or application and to decide it on merits."

11. In case of delay in filing an appeal, revision or application, the court is obliged to consider the explanation for the delay offered by the appellant/revisionist, as the case maybe. It is only after condoning the delay that the court gets jurisdiction to proceed with the matter.

12. In the case at hand, the revision preferred by the private respondent no. 2 has been admitted by the Deputy Director of Consolidation without condoning the delay. The order impugned is liable to be set aside on this ground alone.

13. That apart the Apex Court has strongly deprecated the practice of granting an interim order without condoning the delay in State of W.B. v. Somdeb Bandyopadhayay, (2009) 2 SCC 694 the Apex Court has held as under:

7. It is to be noticed that even without condoning the delay and entertaining the writ appeal the High Court has passed a series of interim orders. Such a course is impermissible as the appeal was non est in the eye of the law without it being entertained. Admittedly, the delay in preferring the writ appeal was not condoned at the time when the interim orders were passed."

14. Furthermore, the interim order passed by the Revisional Court would show that the interim order which has been passed in favour of respondent no. 2 is a cryptic one. The impugned order merely states that the operation of the order under challenge is being stayed in the interest of justice. There is absolutely no reason or ground mentioned in support of this order. It is no more res integra that every judicial order must contain reasons. In Sant Lal Gupta v. Modern Cooperative Group Housing Society Limited and others, (2010) 13 SCC 336 the Apex Court in paragraph 27 has opined as under:

"27. It is a settled legal proposition that not only administrative but also judicial orders must be supported by reasons recorded in it. Thus, while deciding an issue, the court is bound to give reasons for its conclusion. It is the duty and obligation on the part of the court to record reasons while disposing of the case. The hallmark of order and exercise of judicial power by a judicial forum is for the forum to disclose its reasons by itself and giving of reasons has always been insisted upon as one of the fundamentals of sound administration of the justice delivery system, to make it known that there had been proper and due application of mind to the issue before the court and also as an essential requisite of the principles of natural justice."

15. For the aforesaid reasons, impugned order dated 10.12018 cannot be sustained and is accordingly set aside.

16. The Deputy Director of Consolidation, Faizabad is directed to pass a fresh order in accordance with law in the light of the observations made above expeditiously and without granting unnecessary adjournments to either of the parties.

17. Till the time a fresh order is passed by the Deputy Director of Consolidation, the parties shall maintain status quo and shall not alienate the property in dispute.

Government Appeal No. 334 of 2019

State of U.P. ...Appellant

Counsel for the Appellant:
A.G.A.

Counsel for the Respondent:

A. Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 :- Section 378(3) - application-grant of leave to appeal- if the value of property held is not 10% in excess than the known source of income then that will not be deemed to be inappropriate or disproportionate property.-After analyzing this aspect, the judgment of acquittal has been passed, which is based on the basis of evidence on record. (Para 3 & 4)

Government Appeal rejected (E-6)

Case Law discussed:

1. Krishnand Rao Vs St. of M. P. AIR 1977 SC 796

(Delivered by Hon'ble Ram Krishna Gautam, J.)

1. This appeal u/s 378(3) Cr.P.C. has been proposed by State of U.P. with a prayer for grant of leave to appeal against judgment of acquittal passed by Court of Additional Sessions Judge/ Special Judge (Prevention of Corruption Act), Court No. 2, Varanasi, in S.S.T. No. 7 of 2001, State Vs. Sri Krishna Chandra, under section 13(2) read with 13(1) (E) of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 by U.P. Vigilance Organization, District Allahabad.

2. Learned AGA argued that the learned Trial Judge failed to appreciate facts and law placed before it. On the application of Pradeep Srivastava, Vice Chairman, U.P. Youth Congress (I) to Governor of U.P. an order for enquiry about disproportionate wealth of Sri Krishna Chandra, Dy. Excise Commissioner, Kanpur, was passed and after enquiry accusation was held to be substantiated, which resulted registration of above case under above sections and filing of charge sheet. Cognizance over it was taken and trial was held, wherein evidence was produced on record, but the trial court failed to appreciate facts and law placed before it, thereby passed impugned judgment of acquittal. Hence this application with above prayer.

3. Perusal of judgment reveals that statement of Krishna Chandra was recorded u/s 313 Cr.P.C. in which specific contention was that owing to enmity, this false complaint was filed and it was enquired. But the enquiry was not a correct one. The earning by salary was not properly calculated. Many heads of earning by him was not taken into consideration. Whereas earning of family having independent business was not assessed properly. Earnings of Smt. Manju Chandra, as were given in exhibit Kha 1 to Kha 10, were not properly appreciated. Accused was of no concern with Subhash Chandra. His wife Manju Chandra had purchased properties, detailed in para 92 of the judgment, by her own independent earnings, which included purchase of Rifle etc. These were of her own separate business and earnings. Those documents were submitted before the enquiry officer, but the same were not taken into consideration. Manju Chandra Gas Service, Allahabad, was under proprietorship of Manju Chandra. This earning is in the names of Prateek Chandra and Nisha Chandra. Accounts of that Gas Agency was not taken into consideration, though details of same were submitted before the Government. Accused had examined Manju Chandra as DW1 and himself as DW2. Documentary evidence including Income Tax Return of Smt. Manju Chandra right from 1982 to 1996 as well as of Manju Chandra Gas Service Exhibits Kha 1 to Kha 10 were submitted. Trial court has appreciated those facts. Upon enquiry got conducted under direction of State of U.P. and report filed thereby, which was of State itself and was proved before the Court, were of those fact that earning of Manju Chandra was Rs. 12,59,008/- and expenses were Rs.10,83,936/- i.e. property held within the earning. Moreso, as per law laid down by Apex Court in Krishnand Rao Vs. State of M. P., AIR 1977 SC 796, if the value of property held is not 10% in excess than the known source of income then that will not be deemed to be inappropriate or disproportionate property. After analyzing this aspect, the judgment of acquittal has been passed, which is based on the basis of evidence on record.

4. Under all above facts there remain no ground for grant of leave to appeal.

5. According the application is rejected.

Counsel for the Respondents:

A. Indian Penal Code, 1860 - Sections 376(2)(E), 376(D), 166B, 201, 202, 506(2) & Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 - Section 378(3) - application - grant of leave to appeal-rejection - delay in F.I.R - accusation of commission of rape was against two employees of hospital concerned-No allegation against remaining accused persons - it was not said in the report that it was threat of dire consequences and threat of not treating or providing medical help-the statement of victim u/s 164 Cr.P.C. in which specific accusation of rape is against the two attendants not against doctors who were giving threat-Victim has said that she informed her parent on telephone and her father came there and she was treated by Doctors of the same hospital were very affectionate to the victim- charges levelled against them were not proved by the prosecution- Hence they were acquitted - Overall appreciation of facts and circumstances and reasoning given by the trial court, there appears no illegality or irregularity in the impugned judgment.

B. Informant's daughter was serving as attendant of Dr. Shalini Maheshwari at Ganga Sheel Hospital, D.D. Puram, Bareily. she was on her duty when she was summoned by Shivraj attendant of Dr. Nishant Gupta at first floor and when she reached there, she was bolted inside by Nar Singh and Shivraj, they committed rape. She narrated the occurrence to Dr. Shalini Maheshwari through telephone. There was persistent threat by Dr. Shalini Maheshwari and Dr. Nishant Gupta. Meaning thereby accusation of commission of rape was against two employees of hospital concerned. No allegation against remaining accused persons was there till registration of F.I.R. except extension of persistent threat and it was not said in the report that it was threat of dire consequences and threat of not treating or providing medical help. Rather the same is the statement of victim u/s 164 Cr.P.C. in which specific accusation of rape is against Shivraj and attempt to commit rape is against Narsingh. But there is variance. Victim has said that she informed her parent on telephone and her father came there and she was treated by Dr. Nishant. Dr. Shalini was very affectionate to the victim. Hence after appreciating all facts, the essential ingredients for the charges levelled against them were not proved. (Para 2 & 3)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Ram Krishna Gautam, J.)

1. This appeal has been proposed by State of U.P. under section 378(3) of Cr.P.C. against judgment of acquittal passed by court of Additional Sessions Judge, fifth, Bareilly, on 9.4.2019 in S.T. No. 1051 of 2013, State Vs. Shivraj and others, u/s 376(2)(E), 376(D), 166B, 201, 202, 506(2) I.P.C., P.S. Prem Nagar, District Bareilly, arising out of Case Crime No. 1066 of 2013.

2. Learned AGA argued that the court has convicted Shivraj and Nar Singh and sentenced them for offence punishable u/s 376(2)(E) I.P.C. with ten years R.I. and Rs. 5000/- each and in case of default, one month's additional imprisonment, they have been further sentenced with twenty years imprisonment and fine of Rs. 20,000/- each and in default six months' additional imprisonment for offence punishable u/s 376D I.P.C. with direction for concurrent running of sentences and adjustment of previous imprisonment. But Dr. Nishant, Dr. Shalini, Dr. Dushyant, Manish Vaishnav and Sanket Bali have been acquitted of the charges levelled against them, whereas there was evidence on record with regard to charges framed against them. The trial court failed to appreciate the facts and law brought on record, which resulted this judgment of acquittal of those accused persons. Hence this application with above prayer for grant of leave to appeal.

3. From the very perusal of material on record, it is apparent that F.I.R. (Ext Ka1) was got lodged by informant at P.S. Prem Nagar on 16.7.2013 at 19.00 hours and it was with accusation that informant's daughter, aged about 18 years, was serving as attendant of Dr. Shalini Maheshwari at Ganga Sheel Hospital, D.D. Puram, Bareily. On 14.7.2013 (Sunday) she was on her duty when she was summoned by Shivraj attendant of Dr. Nishant Gupta at first floor and when she reached there, she was bolted inside by Nar Singh and Shivraj, they committed rape with her and while being under injury, she was sent back to her home. She narrated the occurrence then matter was communicated to Dr. Shalini Maheshwari through telephone, the injured was taken to hospital and she was put under treatment. Then after threat for opening leap and making complaint to police was extended. He tried to get case lodged on 15.7.2013, but owing to pressure exercised by accused, it could not be lodged and ultimately it was lodged on 16.7.2013. There was persistent threat by Dr. Shalini Maheshwari and Dr. Nishant Gupta. Meaning thereby accusation of commission of rape was against two employees of hospital concerned. No allegation against remaining accused persons was there till registration of F.I.R. except extension of persistent threat and it was not said in the report that it was threat of dire consequences and threat of not treating or providing medical help. Rather the same is the statement of victim u/s 164 Cr.P.C. in which specific accusation of rape is against Shivraj and attempt to commit rape is against Narsingh. But there is variance. Victim has said that she informed her parent on telephone and her father came there and she was treated by Dr. Nishant. Dr. Shalini was very affectionate to the victim. Hence after appreciating all facts, the essential ingredients for the charges levelled against them were not proved by the prosecution and the trial court came to the conclusion that essential ingredients for the aforesaid charges levelled against them were not made out. Hence they were acquitted of the charges levelled against them vide impugned judgment. Overall appreciation of facts and circumstances and reasoning given by the trial court, there appears no illegality or irregularity in the impugned judgment. Hence this application lacks merit.

4. Accordingly rejected.

A. Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 - Section 407-application-rejection-trial delayed, by getting it transferred – adjournment was sought-non-appearance of counsel and accused on the date given-issue of warrant against accused by court was the ground for transfer.

B. It has been specifically mentioned by the Trial Judge that newly engaged Senior Counsel for defence, has sought an adjournment of the case and given an assurance that he will argue the case on the only date requested by him. This date was given to him. On that particular date, none of the accused appeared nor the counsel appeared, which compelled the court for issuing warrants against the accused persons and this was made a ground for Transfer Application, moved before the court of Sessions Judge, but nowhere it was mentioned in the said Transfer Application that there had been a direction by this Court for expeditious disposal of above Sessions Trial, that too, in a time bound frame. This has neither been mentioned before the court of Sessions Judge, Agra, nor before this Court, in this Transfer Application, which itself goes to show modus and intention of the accused-applicants, who have filed this Transfer Application, to get the trial delayed, by getting it transferred from the court where it is likely to be decided in near future. (Delivered by Hon'ble Ram Krishna Gautam, J.)

1. This Government Appeal has been proposed, under Section 378(3) of Code of Criminal Procedure, with an application for grant of leave to appeal against judgment of acquittal passed by Court of Special-Judge, EC Act/ Additional District and Sessions Judge, Bareilly, in Criminal Appeal No. 67 of 2001 Noor Mohammad vs. State of U.P. , wherein the judgment of conviction and sentence, passed by Court of Judicial Magistrate, North Eastern Railway, Bareilly, has been altered and convicted persons have been acquitted of charge of offence punishable, under Section 3 of Railway Property Unauthorized Occupation Act, with this contention that the Appellate Court failed to appreciate facts and law placed before it, thereby, judgment of acquittal is a result of perversity whereas, learned Trial Magistrate has appreciated facts and law and has passed impugned judgment of conviction and order of sentence made therein.

2. An appeal under Section 374 Cr.P.C. was filed by convict appellants against judgment of conviction and sentence, dated 17.7.2001, passed by the Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate (N.E.R.), Bareilly and it was transferred to above Court of Special-Judge, EC Act/Additional District and Sessions Judge, Bareilly as Criminal Appeal No. 67 of 2001 Noor Mohammad and others vs. State of U.P. wherein, learned First Appellate Judge passed impugned judgment of acquittal against it.

3. Learned AGA has argued that there was a case of recovery of Railway property from place of occurrence kept under 4 gunny bags and it was seen to be thrown by two persons who were consistently identified by the employee of Railway Protection Force. They were Noor Mohammad, Jawahar and one other accused person had also thrown bag having railway property in it and he was subsequently identified in identification parade, hence, there was a huge recovery of property of Railway and witnesses have identified the same during trial whereupon, learned Magistrate had passed judgment of conviction with order of sentence. But First Appellate Judge failed to appreciate facts and law placed before it and on the basis of perversity, passed impugned judgment of acquittal, hence, this appeal with above prayer for grant of leave for filing this appeal.

4. A perusal of impugned judgment reveals that there was no instant arrest of any accused persons nor there was any recovery of stolen article from their possession. Three persons were seen carrying gunny bag over their shoulder and on being enquired by RPF, they had thrown those bags and fled from spot. They could not be apprehended.

5. The RPF personnel recovered those gunny bags in which broken pieces of copper wire with broken and a railway brackets were kept which were said to be railway property but the two witnesses PW-1 and PW-2 who were witness for proving this fact that recovered articles were property of railway have said in their cross-examination that this electric wire was not manufactured by railway, rather it was purchased from private concern and it was available with private concern. Meaning thereby, the same being exclusively of railway and in no circumstance available with any other person, could not be proved beyond doubt.

6. The identification parade was conducted after a considerable delay; that too with no protection that the chance for identifying in between may never exist, was there. Hence, on the basis of above testimony, the First Appellate Judge passed impugned judgment, which was based on evidence on record. The conviction and sentence of Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate was result of perversity, which was corrected by First Appellate Court. The impugned judgment does not suffer from any illegality or irregularity.

7. Hence, no ground for grant of leave to file proposed appeal is there.

8. Accordingly, Application to grant leave for filing appeal, being devoid of merits, stand rejected.

A. U.P. Trade Tax Act, 1948-Section 4-BB, 8-A(2)(b), 29- A(2)-Timing of the claim raised is inconsequential – Assessee must fulfill the conditions to claim set off - The assessing authority rejected the claim of the revisionist-assessee, made in the course of assessment proceedings, for set off of the tax paid on purchase of raw material. The first appeal of the revisionist was allowed.-Tribunal reversed the order - Dismissing both the revisions, the High Court held- It was permissible for the assessee to raise the claim at the stage of the assessment proceedings, however, for such claim to arise and be allowed, assessee must be shown to have fulfilled the conditions for the set off being claimed. (Para 9 & 14)

B. Notwithstanding full compliance made by the assessee, in payment of tax on purchase of raw material and charge of tax on sale of tubular pipes, it lost the right to claim the set off u/s 4-BB, upon opting to charge full tax on the sale of tubular pipes, instead of deducting the tax paid on purchase of raw material from the tax payable on the sale of tubular pipes. (Para 11, 12, 13 & 14)

2. M/s Indian Oil Corpn., Agra Vs St. of U.P. & anr., (1981) UPTC 1248 (Para 7)

3. Commissioner of Sales Tax, U.P., Lucknow Vs M/s G.R. Tibrewal & Co., Kanpur, 1982 UPTC 241 (Para 7)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Saumitra Dayal Singh, J.)

1. These revisions have been filed by the applicant-assessee against the common order passed by the Trade Tax Tribunal, Meerut, dated 7.1.2009, passed in second appeal nos. 273/2003 for A.Y. 1999-2000 (U.P.) and 274/2003 for A.Y. 1999-2000 (Central). By that order, the Tribunal has allowed the appeals filed by the revenue and held the assesssee not entitled to benefit of set off under Section 4-BB of the U.P. Trade Tax Act, 1948 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act').

2. During assessment years in question, the assessee had manufactured tubular poles claiming benefit of notification no. 2339 dated 22.10.1996, read with notification no. 1223 dated 22.5.1998. In the course of the assessment proceedings, the assessee claimed set off of tax paid on purchase of raw materials used in the manufacture of tubular poles. The assessing officer rejected the claim on the reasoning that the assessee had not raised any such claim in its return and, therefore, it was not permissible to grant the same at the stage of assessment. The first appeal filed by the assessee was allowed by the Joint Commissioner (Appeal), by his order dated 19.2.2003, on the reasoning that under the aforesaid notifications, there was no restraint place in law that such set off may be claimed at the stage of filing of return and not later. Insofar as the assessee had not violated the law in charging the tax on the sale of tubular poles, it was held entitled to the set off, as claimed. Upon revenue's appeal, the Tribunal has allowed the same on the reasoning that the scheme of set off cannot be permitted to be used as a handle to retain an amount by the selling dealer, for his personal gain. Insofar as the assessee had made excess realization of 2%, the State was held entitled to retain the same as trustee.

3. Heard Sri Rakesh Ranjan Agrawal, Senior Advocate, assisted by Ms. Pooja Srivastava, learned counsel for the applicant-assesee and Sri B.K. Pandey, learned Standing Counsel for the revenue.

4. The revisions have been pressed on the following questions of law:

"(i) Whether the facts and circumstances of the case, the Tribunal was correct to hold that the assessing authority was justified in forfeiting the amount of the tax under Section 29-A(2) of the Act despite the applicant was entitled to adjustment of tax paid on the purchase of raw material u/s 4-BB of the Act.

(ii) Whether the Tribunal having not reversed the finding of the appellate authority that the provisions of Section 8-A(2)(b) of the Act having not violated, the amount refund can not be forfeited under Section 29-A(2) of the Act.

(iii) Whether the Tribunal having not considered that with raw material purchased after paying the purchase tax was consumed in the manufacture of tubular poles that is notified goods being Iron & Steel as per notification No. 1223 dated 22.05.1998, the assessing was right in denying the set off under Section 4-BB of the Act since it was not claimed in the return but was claimed at the time of the assessment."

5. Learned Senior Counsel would submit, the reasoning of the assessing authority was completely erroneous, inasmuch as, there is no stipulation either under the Act, or under the relevant notifications, whereby the claim for set off must necessarily be made at the stage of filing the return. On the other hand, the first appellate authority had correctly allowed the same as the assessee had not flouted, either the provisions of the Act, or the scheme in either paying 2% tax on purchase of raw materials, or in charging 4% tax on the sale of tubular poles. According to him, since the law stipulated that the amount of tax paid on raw material be set off against the tax paid on sale of tubular poles, the set off ought to have been granted in the course of assessment proceedings.

6. Further, it has been submitted, the Tribunal has completely misdirected itself i reaching the conclusion that, in the garb of claiming set off, the assessee could not be allowed to retain any tax charged for its personal gain. In fact, the Tribunal has not given any reason to reverse the finding recorded by the first appellate authority.

7. Reliance has been placed on the division bench decisions of this Court in M/s Sohan Lal Babu Ram Vs. Commissioner of Sales Tax, U.P., Lucknow & Ors., (1981 STD 121); M/s Indian Oil Corporation, Agra Vs. State of Uttar Pradesh & Anr., (1981 UPTC 1248) and; decision of a learned single judge of this Court in Commissioner of Sales Tax, U.P., Lucknow Vs. M/s G.R. Tibrewal and Co., Kanpur, (1982 UPTC 241), to submit that mere admission of tax liability may not disentitle the assessee from raising a claim of set off.

8. Opposing the revision, learned Standing Counsel would submit, at the relevant time, the assessee did not claim set off and instead he paid full tax on the purchase of raw materials and charged full tax on sale of tubular poles. Having done that, the assessee clearly opted out of the set off scheme, which in any case, did not have mandatory force. Alternatively, it has been submitted that the dispute being canvassed by the assessee is purely academic, inasmuch as, there is no provision for the refund of the tax paid on purchase of raw materials. Having charged full tax on the sale of tubular poles, the assessee cannot claim any refund or adjustment of that amount against any other liability that may be standing against it.

9. Having heard learned counsel for the parties and having perused the record, in the first place, though it is true that the claim for set off may not have been rejected only because the same had not been raised in the return filed by the assessee and theoretically, it was permissible for the assessee to raise that claim at the stage of assessment proceedings, however, for such claim to arise and be allowed, the assessee must be shown to have fulfilled the conditions for the set off being claimed.

10. The set off of tax paid on raw material and packing material used in the manufacture of notified goods is provided under Section 4-BB of the Act. It reads as below:

"4-BB. Set off of tax paid on raw material and packing material in certain cases.

Where tax has been paid on the purchase or sale of raw material or packing material inside the State and such raw material or packing material has been used in manufacture or packing of such goods as are notified by the State Government in this behalf and such goods are sold in the State or in the course of inter State trade or commerce, the amount of tax paid on the purchase or sale or the raw material or packing material shall, subject to such conditions and restrictions as may be specified in the said notification, be deducted from the tax payable on the sale of such goods-

(a) inside the State, to the extent the tax has been paid on the purchase or sale of raw material or packing material from which the goods sold inside the State were manufactured or packed;

(b) in the course of inter State trade or commerce, to the extent the tax has been paid on the purchase or sale of raw material or packing material, from which the goods sold in the course of inter State trade or commerce were manufactured or packed:

Provided that the amount of tax to be deducted under clause (a) or clause (b) shall not exceed the amount of tax payable separately under this Act or the Central Sales Tax Act, 1956."

11. Thus, in the first place, the set off is available with respect to the tax paid on purchase of raw materials used in the manufacture of notified goods. Second, such set off is to be availed by making deduction of that amount from the tax payable on the sale of notified goods. The tax on sale of tubular poles would have become payable at the time of sale of those goods by the assessee and, in any case, at the stage of filing of the monthly/quarterly return, as the case may have been. Therefore, to take the benefit of Section 4-BB of the Act, plainly, the assessee was required to make that deduction, at that stage, and not later. Then, looking at the notification no. 2339 dated 22.10.1996, read with notification no. 1223 dated 22.5.1998, under the conditions for grant of benefit of set off, it was clearly stipulated by way of condition no. 3 that it was permissible to the manufacture (of notified goods) to claim such deduction, by way of an option to the payment of full tax on sale of such goods. It was not compulsary for that manufacturer to necessarily avail set off.

12. Thus, a co-joint reading of the provisions of Section 4-BB of the Act and the notifications leaves no doubt, for the set off to be claimed by the assesee, the deduction of tax paid or purchase of raw material had to be made at it's end at the time of making sale of notified goods i.e. tubular poles. Once the assessee failed to make such deductions, at that stage, no subsequent claim in that regard may have been raised, either at the stage of filing annual return or during the course of the assessment proceedings. Only other situation in which such a claim may have then arisen, could have been if the assessee had always claimed that it had not charged tax on the sale of tubular poles but paid that amount from its own pocket. Clearly, that case does not exist in the present case.

13. Therefore, the reasoning given by the Tribunal apart, it does not appear possible to contemplate a situation where a claim of set off may have been raised by the assessee after it had failed to make a deduction of tax payable on the sale of tubular poles and it had charged full tax @ 4% on sale of tubular poles.

14. In view of the above, the question of law no. 1 is answered thus - notwithstanding full compliance made by the assessee, in payment of tax on purchase of raw material and charge of tax on sale of tubular pipes, it lost the right to claim the set off under Section 4-BB of the Act upon opting to charge full tax on sale of tubular pipes, instead of deducting the tax paid on purchase of raw material from the tax payable on the sale of tubular pipes. The subsequent events of the timing of the claim raised during assessment proceedings remained inconsequential as the scheme of set off was optional and the assessee must be held to have necessarily opted out of it by choosing to charge full tax on sale of tubular pipes.

15. Both the revisions lack merit and are accordingly dismissed, for reasons different from those recorded by the Tribunal.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Rohit Ranjan Agarwal, J.)

1. Heard Sri Aloke Kumar, learned counsel for the petitioner and Sri C. B. Tripathi, learned Special counsel for the respondents-State.

2. Present petition has been filed assailing the order dated 07.03.2019 passed by Additional Commissioner, Grade-I, Commercial Tax, Varanasi Zone-I, Varanasi under Section 29(7) for reassessment for assessment year 2010-11 and notice dated 07.03.2019 issued by Joint Commissioner, (Corporate Circle), Commercial Tax, Varanasi Zone-I, Varanasi which had been issued in consequence of the order of authorisation.

3. According to petitioner the dispute relates to reassessment of assessment year 2010-11. Petitioner is registered proprietorship firm, and is involved in manufacture and sale of chemicals. According to petitioner the chemicals manufactured are commonly known as prepared driers and the same find place at Serial No. 134 of Part-C of Schedule 2 of Value Added Tax (in short 'VAT Act'). The said prepared driers are taxable at the rate of 4% from 01.01.2008. According to petitioner, the petitioner firm was assessed for assessment year 2008-09 and assessment order was passed on 22.10.2011, accepting the sale and tax at 4%. It was on 24.07.2013 that respondent no. 3 had issued a notice to petitioner firm regarding the taxability of prepared driers, which was replied on 25.08.2013 and the proceedings were, thereafter, dropped. According to petitioner assessment was made for the year 2010-11 and assessment order was passed on 13.01.2014 granting benefit to the firm that commodity sold by firm was prepared driers and was taxable under Item No. 134 of Schedule 2, Part-C. In the assessment year of 2011-12, the contention of the petitioner was also accepted as regards prepared driers manufactured and sold by petitioner firm and assessment order was passed on 23.07.2014.

4. According to petitioner, on 07.02.2019, respondent no. 2 exercising power under Sub-section 7 of Section 29 issued notice stating that the goods sold by the petitioner firm are liable to be taxed at the rate of 12.5% and stated that HSN Code 05000039 is for paints and varnishes of all kinds and all materials used in painting and varnishes, and prepared driers manufactured by petitioner was used only in manufacture of paint and varnishes, thus, it falls under the said HSN Code and accordingly 8.5% tax had been left to be imposed on the turnover of prepared driers and permission has been sought for reassessment. Petitioner appeared on the date fixed and filed his reply and submitted that original assessment order was passed after scrutiny of the records and no turnover was assessed to tax at lower rate and as such there was no occasion to grant permission for reassessment on basis of change of opinion. Respondent no. 2 exercising power under Section 29(7) passed the order of authorisation on 07.03.2019.

5. Counsel for the petitioner submitted that the order authorising for reassessment amounts to change of opinion as the question of taxability was never in dispute and the same has been accepted even after recording finding on the same by taking note of HSN Code specially prescribed for prepared driers. He submitted that reassessment cannot be made on the same material which was subject-matter of the original assessment. He relied upon judgment of this Court in case of M/s Vikrant Tyres Ltd. vs. State of U.P. and others, 2005 UPTC 501 that no reassessment can be made by same authority on the same material and if the same was permitted will open flood gate for arbitrary action exposing one to unending process, permitting uncertainty, reopening of closed chapters without assigning good reason, depending upon whims of individuals.

6. He further relied upon a judgment of the Apex Court in case of State of U.P. vs. M/s Aryawart Chawal Udyog and others, (2017) UPTC 262 which is on the question of change of opinion. Relevant Para 30 is extracted hereasunder:-

"30. In case of there being a change of opinion, there must necessarily be a nexus that requires to be established between the "change of opinion and the material present before the Assessing Authority. Discovery of an inadvertent mistake or non-application of mind during assessment would not be a justified ground to reinitiate proceedings under Section 21(1) of the Act on the basis of change in subjective opinion (CIT v. Dinesh Chandra Hon'ble Supreme Court Shah, (1972) 2 SCC 231; CIT v. Nawab Mir Barkat Ali Khan Bahadur, (1975) 4 SCC 360)."

7. He also relied upon the Division Bench judgment of this Court in Varun

Beverages Ltd. Vs. State of U.P. and 2 others, (2016) 62 NTN DX 324 and case of M/s Sterling India vs. State of U.P. and 3 others, (2017) UPTC 379.

8. Per contra, learned Special counsel for the Department submitted that the case of the petitioner was not covered under Article 134, Schedule 2, Part-C but was covered under HSN Code 05000039. He further submitted that it was not change of opinion but was on the basis of an audit held in the Department in which the said fact was pointed out and pursuant to the audit objection, review pertaining to the assessment year 2010-11 was taken. The said fact has been stated in Para Nos. 7 and 14 of the counter affidavit which is extracted hereasunder:-

"7. That there was an audit held in the department in which the aforesaid inadvertence was pointed out and pursuant to the audit objection, review pertaining to the assessment year 2010-11 in respect of petitioner was made and during review of the matter it was found that 13.5% tax ought to have been charged instead of 5% tax inasmuch as Paint Drier comes under the purview of non-clasified category. Hence it has been decided to rectify the aforesaid inadvertence as per provision laid under under Section 29(7) of the Act which provides;

"Where the Commissioner, on his own or on the basis of reason recorded by the assessing authority, is satisfied that it is just and expedient so to do authorize the assessing authority in that behalf, such assessment or re-assessment may be made within a period of eight years after expiry of assessment year to which such assessment or re-assessment relates notwithstanding such assessment or re-assessment may involve a change of opinion.

Provided that it shall not be necessary for the Commissioner to hear the dealer before authorising the assessing authority."

14. That, the contents of paragraph nos. 7,8,9 and 10 of the writ petition are not admitted as stated hence denied, in reply it is submitted that there was an audit held in the department in which the aforesaid inadvertence was pointed out and pursuant to the audit objection, review pertaining to the assessment year 2010-11 in respect of petitioner and during review of the matter it was found that 13.5% tax ought to have been charged instead of 5% tax inasmuch as the Paint Drier comes under the purview of non-classified category. Thereafter, after examining entire facts of the matter, impugned order dated 07.03.2019 has been passed by respondent no. 1 and consequently as show-cause notice dated 07.03.2019 was issued to the petitioner for initiating re-assessment process."*

9. Having heard learned counsel for the parties and perusing the records of the case, we find that in previous as well as in subsequent years the petitioner had been constantly assessed under the heading prepared driers for which he has been taxed at the rate of 5% under the relevant Code by the assessing authority. Earlier in 2013 the notice was also issued to the petitioner which was replied by him and it seems that further proceedings were dropped and no orders were passed. For the relevant assessment year, the averment made in Para Nos. 7 and 14 of the counter affidavit clearly states that the reassessment is being made on the basis of audit objection thus, it is not the case of the Department that any part of the turnover of a dealer for any assessment year or part thereof has escaped assessment to tax, it is only on the basis of the audit objection that the proceedings for reassessment has been initiated by passing orders of authorisation by respondent no. 2 against the petitioner firm.

10. It is well settled that reassessment cannot be made on the same material by the same authority nor if there is any change of opinion, as in the present case there was no fresh material on record on which the authorities proceeded for reassessment, thus the order authorising for reassessment only on the basis of audit objection cannot be sustained. Thus we are of the considered view that the order dated 07.03.2019 passed by respondent no. 2 under Section 29(7) for reassessment of assessment year 2010-11 and notice dated 07.03.2019 issued by respondent no. 3 are unsustainable and are hereby quashed.

11. Writ Petition stands allowed.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Surya Prakash Kesarwani, J.)

1. Heard Sri Some Narayan Mishra, learned counsel for the defendant-tenants/petitioners and Sri Nitin Kumar Agrawal, learned counsel for the plaintiff-landlady/respondent no.3.

Facts:-

2. Briefly stated facts of the present case are that undisputedly, the plaintiff-respondent no.3 is the owner and landlady of a shop bearing Municipal No.185/1, Railway Road, Dibai, Pargana and Tehsil Dibai, District Bulandshahr, which she had purchased by a registered sale-deed dated 5.12.1991. She built three shops in it. First assessment of the disputed property was made in the year 1993. By a registered sale-deed dated 25.2.1997, the plaintiff-landlady/respondent no.3 had sold one shop to one Sri Suresh Chand Gupta, son of Sri Nand Kishore Gupta. She had let out the second shop to Sri Yogendra. The third shop was let out by her to the defendant-tenant/petitioners nos.1 and 2.

3. According to the plaintiff-landlady/respondent no.3, the defendant-tenants/petitioners defaulted in payment of rent from 01.01.2010. Therefore, the plaintiff-landlady/respondent no.3 issued a notice dated 31.3.2010 to the defendant-tenants/petitioners, under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act 1882') whereby she determined the tenancy and demanded arrears of rent. The defendants-tenants/petitioners did not comply with notice. Therefore, she filed S.C.C. Suit No.15 of 2010 (Smt. Maya Devi v. Rakesh Kumar and others) in the court of Judge Small Cause, Bulandshahr. In the aforesaid suit five issues were framed as under:

''1. क्या विवादित दुकान पर उत्तर प्रदेश अधिनियम संख्या 13 सन 1972 के प्राविधान लागू नहीं होते है?

2. क्या दावा वादी मे आवश्यक पक्षकार न बनाये जाने का असंयोजन का दोष है?

3. क्या प्रतिवादी के उपर दिनांक 01.01.2010 से किराया बाकी व बाजिब है और प्रतिवादी द्वारा किराया अदा करने में चूक की है?

4. क्या प्रतिवादी धारा 20(4) उत्तर प्रदेश अधिनियम संख्या 13 सन 1972 का लाभ पाने का अधिकारी है?

5. अनुतोष?''

4. Issue nos. 1,2 and 4 were decided by the Judge Small Cause Court, Bulandshahr by judgment dated 14.1.2016 in favour of the plaintiff-landlady/respondent no.3, while Issue No.3 was decided against her and accordingly the relief was declined.

5. Aggrieved with this judgment, the plaintiff-landlady/respondent no.3 filed S.C.C. Revision No.10 of 2016 (Smt. Maya Devi alias Radha Devi v. Suresh Kumar and another), which was allowed by the District Judge, Bulandshahr by judgment dated 31.10.2017 and the matter was remanded to the court below to decide Issue no.3 afresh and also to decide issue No.6 framed by the revisional court as under:

''क्या वादिनी द्वारा निर्गत नोटिस दिनांकित 31.03.2010 वैध व प्रभावी है?''

6. On remand, the aforesaid S.C.C. Suit No.10 of 2010 was decreed by the Judge Small Causes Court, Bulandshahr by the impugned judgment dated 24.9.2018.

7. Aggrieved with that judgment the defendant-tenants/petitioners filed S.C.C. Revision No.17 of 2018 (Rakesh Kumar and another v. Smt. Maya Devi alias Radha Devi), which has been dismissed by the Additional District Judge (Court No.2), Bulandshahr by the impugned judgment and order dated 23.05.2019.

8. Aggrieved with these two judgments, the defendant-petitioners have filed the present petition under Article 227 of the Constitution of India.

Submissions:-

9. Learned counsel for the defendant-petitioners submits as under:

(i) After giving notice dated 31.3.2010, the S.C.C. suit was filed on 20.4.2010. Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, as applicable in the State of Uttar Pradesh, provides for 30 days notice for filing a suit. Since, the S.C.C. Suit was filed by the plaintiff-landlady/respondent no.3 prior to expiry of 30 days, therefore, the suit itself was not maintainable. Reliance is placed upon the Single Judge judgment of this Court in Mohd. Afzal v. Smt. Ramesh Kumari, 2014(3) ARC 864 (Paragraph-10).

(ii) The findings recorded by the courts below on Issue No.2 regarding non-payment of rent is incorrect, inasmuch as, the rent was being regularly paid by the defendant-tenants/petitioners to the plaintiff-landlady/respondent no.3 and on refusal by her the rent was sent by money-order.

(iii) Since there is conflict between two Single Judge judgments of this Court in Mohd. Afzal Vs. Smt. Ramesh Kumari, 2014(3) ARC 864 (Paragraph-10) and in Hardoi Zila Sahkari Bank Limited, Hardoi Vs. Smt. Sarla Gupta and another, 2010(2) A.R.C. 144 (Paragraph Nos. 25 to 29) on the point of period of notice under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, therefore, the matter deserves to be referred to a larger Bench.

10. Sri Nitin Kumar Agrawal, learned counsel for the plaintiff-respondent no.3 submits as under:

(i) Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, was amended by Parliament by Transfer of Property (Amendment) (Act No.3 of 2003), providing for period of notice of 15 days. Thus, the period of notice provided by U.P. Act No.24 of 1954 for 30 days is not relevant. Since, 15 days notice was given on 31.3.2010 and the suit was filed on 20.4.2010, therefore, the suit was filed well after expiry of the statutory period of notice. Reliance is placed upon a judgment of learned Single Judge in Hardoi Zila Sahkari Bank Limited, Hardoi v. Smt. Sarla Gupta and another, 2010(2) A.R.C. 144.

(ii) The judgment in the case of Mohd. Afzal (supra) relied by the learned counsel for the plaintiff-landlord/respondent no.3 has no reference to the case of Hardoi Zila Sahkari Bank Limited (supra) in which the issue of the period of notice was settled after detail discussion.

(iii) Besides above, the case of the plaintiff-landlady/respondent no.3 is protected by the provisions of Section 106(3) of the Transfer of Property Act.

(iv) In his written submission the defendant-petitioner no.1 Rakesh Kumar, had admitted non payment of rent after 31.12.2009 whereas in his written statement the defendant-petitioner no.2 Suresh Kumar, had alleged the rent was paid for the period from 1.1.2010 to 31.3.2010. Thus, conflicting stand was taken by the defendant-petitioners.

(v) An objection to the period of notice under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 must be specifically raised in the written statement by a tenant and since the petitioners have not raised this point either in the reply to the notice or in the written statement, therefore, this plea can not be entertained at this stage. Reliance is placed upon the judgments of Hon'ble Supreme Court in Dharam Pal Vs. Harbans Singh, 2006 (9) SCC 216 (para 7) and Parwati Bai Vs. Radhika, (2003) 12 SCC 551 (Para 5).

(vi) The tenancy was on month to month basis in view of the provisions of Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 and also in view of the law laid down by a Division Bench of this Court in Food Corporation of India and another Vs. Smt. Nisha Agnihotri, 2016 (9) ADJ 452 (paras 30 and 33), therefore, the period of notice would be 15 days as provided by the amended provisions of Section 106 of the Act, 1882. Reliance is placed upon the judgments of Hon'ble Supreme Court in Sri Janki Devi Bhagat Trust, Agra Vs. Ram Swarup Jain (Dead) by LRs., (1995) 5 SCC 314 (para 6), Dharam Pal Vs. Harbans Singh (2006) 9 SCC 216 (paras 5 & 6) and the single Judge judgment of this Court in Rakesh Kumar Vs. Rakesh Gupta, (2018) 2 ARC 393 (paras 37 and 39).

(vii) The Central Amendment would prevail as to the period of notice to be 15 days under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. Reliance is placed upon the Single Judge Judgment of this Court in Hardoi Zila Sahkari Bank Limited, Hardoi Vs. Smt. Sarla Gupta and another, 2010 (2) A.R.C. 144 (Paragraph Nos. 19 to 25), wherein the period of notice with reference to the amendment made by Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act, (Act No.3 of 2003) as well as the U.P. Amendment made by U.P. Act No.24 of 1954, were specifically considered and it was held that in case of conflict between the Central Act and the U.P. Amendment, the Central Act would prevail in view of the provisions of Article 254 of the Constitution of India. The subsequent amendment made by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act (Act No.3 of 2003) would prevail.

Questions:-

11. With the consent of learned counsels for the parties, the following questions are framed for determination in this petition:-

(a) Under the facts and circumstances of the case what would be the period of notice under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 ?

(b) Whether the amendment made by Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act (Act No.3 of 2003), would prevail over the U.P. Amendment by U.P. Act No.24 of 1954 and consequently, the minimum period of notice would be 15 days after the amendment in Section 106 of the Act, 1882 by Central Act No.3 of 2003?

(c) Whether under the facts and circumstances of the case and in view of Section 21 of the Civil Procedure Code, the defendant-tenant/petitioners can be allowed to raise the question of period of notice when this objection was not taken by them either in their reply to the notice of the landlady or in the written statement filed in SCC Suit No.15 of 2010?

DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

12. Before I proceed to examine the questions as framed above, it would be appropriate to reproduce the provision of Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 as existed prior to the substitution of a new Section 106 by Act No.3 of 2003, the amendment made by U.P. Act XXIV of 1954 in Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 and newly substituted Section 106 by Parliament in the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 by Act No.3 of 2003:-

Originally enacted Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882

*"106. Duration of certain leases in absence of written contract or local usage:- In the absence of a contract or local law or usage to the contrary, a lease of immovable property for agricultural or manufacturing purposes shall be deemed to be a lease from year to year, terminable, on the part of either lessor or lessee, by six months' notice expiring with the end of a year of the tenancy; and a lease of immovable property for any other purpose shall be deemed to be a lease from month to month, terminable, on the part of either lessor or lessee, by fifteen days' notice expiring with the end of a month of the tenancy.

Every notice under this section must be in writing, signed by or on behalf of the person giving it, and either be sent by post to the part who is intended to be bound by it or be tendered or delivered personally to such party, or to one of his family or servants at his residence, or (if such tender or delivery is not practicable) affixed to a conspicuous part of the property."

The amendment made by Section 2 of the U.P. Act No.XXIV of 1954 in Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882

1. The words "expiring with the end of a year of the tenancy" and "expiring with the end of a month of the tenancy", shall be omitted.

2. For the words "fifteen days' notice" the words "thirty days' notice" shall be substituted.

Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 as substituted by Central Act No.3 of 2003

106. Duration of certain leases in absence of written contract or local usage:- (1) In the absence of a contract or local law or usage to the contrary, a lease of immovable property for agricultural or manufacturing purposes shall be deemed to be a lease from year to year, terminable, on the part of either lessor or lessee, by six months' notice; and a lease of immovable property for any other purpose shall be deemed to be a lease from month to month, terminable, on the part of either lessor or lessee, by fifteen days' notice.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, the period mentioned in sub-section (1) shall commence from the date of receipt of notice.

(3) A notice under sub-section (1) shall not be deemed to be invalid merely because the period mentioned therein falls short of the period specified under that sub-section, where a suit or proceeding is filed after the expiry of the period mentioned in that sub-section.

(4) Every notice under sub-section (1) must be in writing, signed by or on behalf of the person giving it, and either be sent by post to the part who is intended to be bound by it or be tendered or delivered personally to such party, or to one of his family or servants at his residence, or (if such tender or delivery is not practicable) affixed to a conspicuous part of the property."

13. In the case of Hardoi Zila Sahkari Bank Ltd., Hardoi vs. Smt. Sarla Gupta, 2010 (80) ALR 799, an Hon'ble Single Judge referred to the provision of Section 106 of the Act, 1882 as originally enacted, the amendment by U.P. Act No.XXIV of 1954 and the newly substituted Section 106 by Central Act No.3 of 2003 and held that after amendment by the Central Act, the minimum period of notice under Section 106 of the Act, 1882, is fifteen days. The relevant portion of the judgment of Hardoi Zila Sahkari Bank Ltd. (supra) (Paras-20, 21, 22 and 26), are reproduced below:

"20. Presumably, the Parliament with a view to introduce a uniform law throughout the country avoiding defect found in practice passed the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act, 2002. This object would be frustrated if the argument that both the U.P. Act No. No.24 of 1954 and the Amending Act, 2002 should co-exist as the U.P. Act No. of 1954 has not been omitted. By State Amendment i.e. U.P. Act No. 24 of 1954 the period of notice of "fifteen days" as prescribed in Section 106 of the Transfer of the Property Act was substituted by the words "thirty days" but by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act, 2002 the entire 106 Section occurring in the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 has been substituted by a new Section prescribing therein the period of notice as fifteen days. Therefore, in view of the settled law, the Central Amendment Act would prevail over the U.P. Act No. 24 of 1954.

21. It may also be noted that though the notice to quit was sent by the respondents to the revisionist on 4.11.2004 providing 15 days time to vacate the premises but, admittedly, the suit was instituted by the revisionists in the year 2005, which is admittedly, much after 15 days time, provided in the notice.

22. Even otherwise as sub-Section 3 of Section 106 has been brought on the statute book by means of Amendment Act, 2002, it specifically provides that the notice under sub-Section 3 of Section 106 of the Act shall not deem to be not valid merely because the period mentioned therein falls short of the period specified under that sub-section, where a suit or proceeding is filed after the expiry of the period mentioned in that sub-section. Thus by fixation of law, proceedings cannot be vitiated on the ground of defective notice.

26. In view of the above discussions, the provisions of the U. P. Act No. 24 of 1954 cannot be allowed to operate only because it has received the Presidential assent when the entire provision of Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act has been substituted in question is directly in conflict with the Central Act."

(Emphasis supplied by me)

14. A contrary view has been taken by a coordinate bench of this court in Mohammad Afzal vs. Smt. Ramesh Kumari, 2014 (3) ARC 864 (Paras-9, 10 and 11), as under:

"9. The revised section 106 of the TP Act still provides for 15 days notice for determination of monthly tenancy. Therefore, the notice period for determining the tenancy under Section 106 of the T.P. Act remains the same/unchanged despite the amendment of 2002.

10. The said notice period as provided under Section 106 of the TP Act was amended to 30 days in its application to the State of U.P. Since there is no change in the notice period by the Transfer of Property Amendment Act of 2002, the notice period as it stood originally and amended in its applicability to the State of U.P. would continue to hold the field. In other words, in the State of U.P. 30 days notice is mandatory for determining the month to month tenancy.

11. In the instant case, the notice gives only 15 days time for determining the tenancy of the petitioner. Therefore, the notice ex-facie appears to be invalid."

(Emphasis supplied by me)

15. Thus, in the aforesaid two judgments, conflicting views have been taken on the point of minimum period of notice under Section 106 of the Act, 1882. Therefore, the matter deserves to be referred to a larger bench, on the following questions:

(a) Under the facts and circumstances of the case what would be the minimum period of notice under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 as substituted by the Central Act No.3 of 2003?

(b) Whether the amendment made by Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act (Act No.3 of 2003), would prevail over the U.P. Amendment by U.P. Act No.24 of 1954 and consequently, the minimum period of notice would be 15 days?

16. While referring the above noted two questions to a larger bench, it would be appropriate to mention some judgments of this Court and of Hon'ble Supreme Court.

17. Section 106 of the Act, 1882 as originally enacted, is in two parts. The first part is not relevant for the purposes of the present case. The second part provides for notice of fifteen days "expiring with the end of a month of the tenancy" in respect of lease of immovable property for any purpose other than agricultural or manufacturing purposes. The words "by fifteen days' notice" is qualified by the words "expiring with the end of a month of the tenancy". This provision was considered by a Division Bench of this Court in Bradley vs. Atkinson, ILR (1885) 7 All 596 : 1885 SCC OnLine All 89 in which His Lordship Hon'ble Mr. Justice Mahmood, interpreted the words "fifteen days" to imply a fixation of the shortest period allowed by the Section; and the word "expiring" to mean the terms of notice must be such as to make it capable of expiring according to law at the right time, so as to render it safe for the tenant to quit co-incidentally with the end of a month of the tenancy, without incurring any liability to payment of rent for any subsequent period. The Division Bench found that as per Section 106 of the Act 1882, the notice to quit dated 11th December, 1882 was expiring on 10th January, 1883.

18. It appears that because of two phrases as afore-noted used in Section 106 of the Act, 1882, there was confusion with respect to the minimum period of notice, therefore, Section 106 of the Act, 1882 was amended by U.P. Act No.XXIV of 1954 whereby the words "fifteen days' notice" were substituted by the words "thirty days' notice" and the phrase "expiring with the end of a month of the tenancy" was omitted. Section 106 of the Act, 1882 as then existing, was substituted by a new Section 106 by Central Act No.3 of 2003 enacted by Parliament, which received assent of the President on 31.12.2002 and published in the Gazette of India Extra., Part-II, Section 1, dated 1st January, 2003. Thus, this amended provision uniformly provides for minimum fifteen days' notice in the matter of month to month tenancy of an immovable property for the purposes other than agricultural or manufacturing purposes. After substitution of new Section 106 of the Act, 1882, no amendment has been brought by Uttar Pradesh legislature as was brought to amend the originally enacted Section 106 of the Act, 1882 by U.P. Act No.XXIV of 1954.

19. In Pt. Rishikesh and another vs. Salma Begum (Smt.), (1995) 4 SCC 718 (Paras-15, 18 and 21), Hon'ble Supreme Court considered provisions of Article 254 of the Constitution of India, amendment of Order XV Rule 5, C.P.C. by U.P. Civil Laws (Reforms and Amendment) Act, 1976, U.P. Civil Laws (Amendment) Act 37 of 1972 and U.P. Civil Laws (Amendment) President's Act 19 of 1973 and the amendment made by Parliament in C.P.C. by Central (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976 and held, as under:

"15. Clause (2) of Article 254 is an exception to Clause (1). If law made by the State Legislature is reserved for consideration and received assent of the President though the State law is inconsistent with the Central Act, the law made by the Legislature of the State prevails over the Central Law and operates in that State as valid law. If Parliament amends the law, after the amendment made by the State Legislature has received the assent of the President, the earlier amendment made by the State Legislature, if found inconsistent with the Central amended Law, both Central law and the State Law cannot co-exist without colliding with each other. Repugnancy thereby arises and to the extent of the repugnancy the State Law becomes void under Article 254(1) unless the State Legislature again makes law reserved for the consideration of the President and received the assent of the President. Full Bench of the High Court held that since U.P. Act 57 of 1976 received the assent of the President on 30.12.1976, while the Central Act was assented to on 09.09.1976, the U.P. Act made by the State Legislature, later in point of time it is a valid law.

18. It is true that CPC, the principal Act No. 5 of 1908 as amended by the Central Act and the pre-existing State amendment or a provision made by a High Court was intended to be consistent so that the procedure would uniformly be efficacious and expeditious in adjudicating the substantive civil rights of the parties. It, thereby manifested its intention that there should be amendment to the Principal Act by the Central Act to a particular Section or a Rule or sub-rule or a provision in an Order in the Schedule. If the Principal Act, as so amended, and the pre-existing State amendment or a provision made by the High Court is found to be inconsistent with the amendment brought under the Central Act, then to the extent of inconsistent pre-existing amendments made by State Legislature or a provision made by the High Court becomes void by operation of clause (1) of Art. 254. By operation of sub-section (1) of section 97 of the Central Act, it stands repealed unless State Act is passed, reserved for consideration and received the assent of the President under clause (2) of Article 254. Section 1(2) of the Central Act visualises that the Central Government may bring into operation different provisions in the Central Act at different dates by a notification published in a Gazette. As a matter of fact, three different notifications were published in the official gazette bringing diverse provisions of the Amendment Act into operation from three different dates. All the provisions except amended Sections 28, 34 and 148A were brought into force on 01.02.1977. Sections 28 and 148A were brought into force with effect from 01.02.1977 and Section 34 was brought into force with effect from 01.07.1977. The legislative business done by the appropriate State Legislature cannot be reduced to redundance by the executive inaction or choice by the Central Government by issuing different dates for the commencement of different provisions of the Central Act. The Constitution, therefore, made a clear demarcation between making the law and commencement of the law which, therefore, bears relevance for giving effect to Article 254.

21. The condition precedent to bring about repugnancy should be that there must be an amendment made to the Principal Act under the Central Act and the previous amendment made by a State legislature or a provision made by a High Court must occupy the same field and operate in a collision course. Since the State Act as incorporated by Act 37 of 1972 and the Explanations to Rule 5 by the Act 57 of 1976, Rule 5 was not occupied by the Central Act in relation to the State of U.P., they remain to be a valid law. We may clarify at once that if the Central Law and the State Law or a provision made by the High Court occupy the same field and operate in collision course, the State Act or the provision made in the Order by a High Court being inconsistent with or in other words being incompatible with the Central Act, it becomes void unless it is re-enacted, reserved for consideration and receives the assent of the President after the Central Act was made by the Parliament i.e. 10.09.1976."

(Emphasis supplied by me)

20. The aforesaid judgment in the case of Pt. Rishikesh (supra) has been affirmed by a Constitution Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court in State of Kerla and others vs. Mar Appraem Kuri Comapny Limited, (2012) 7 SCC 106 (paras-5, 78, 79 and 97.1), as under:

"5. The statement of law laid down in Pt. Rishikesh (supra) was as under (SCC P.729. para-17):

"17... As soon as assent is given by the President to the law passed by the Parliament it becomes law. Commencement of the Act may be expressed in the Act itself, namely, from the moment the assent was given by the President and published in the Gazette, it becomes operative. The operation may be postponed giving power to the executive or delegated legislation to bring the Act into force at a particular time unless otherwise provided. The Central Act came into operation on the date it received the assent of the president and shall be published in the Gazette and immediately on the expiration of the day preceding its commencement it became operative. Therefore, from the mid-night on the day on which the Central Act was published in the Gazette of India, it became the law. Admittedly, the Central Act was assented to by the President on 9-9-1976 and was published in the Gazette of India on 10-9-1976. This would be clear when we see the legislative procedure envisaged in Articles 107 to 109 and assent of the President under Article 111 which says that when a Bill has been passed by the House of the People, it shall be presented to the President and the President shall either give his assent to the Bill or withhold his assent therefrom. The proviso is not material for the purpose of this case. Once the President gives assent it becomes law and becomes effective when it is published in the Gazette. The making of the law is thus complete unless it is amended in accordance with the procedure prescribed in Articles 107 to 109 of the Constitution. Equally is the procedure of the State Legislature. Inconsistency or incompatibility in the law on concurrent subject, by operation of Article 254, clauses (1) and (2) does not depend upon the commencement of the respective Acts made by the Parliament and the State Legislature. Therefore, the emphasis on commencement of the Act and inconsistency in the operation thereafter does not become relevant when its voidness is required to be decided on the anvil of Article 254(1). Moreover the legislative business of making law entailing with valuable public time and enormous expenditure would not be made to depend on the volition of the executive to notify the commencement of the Act. Incompatibility or repugnancy would be apparent when the effect of the operation is visualised by comparative study."

78. To sum up, Articles 246(1), (2) and 254(1) provide that to the extent to which a State law is in conflict with or repugnant to the Central law, which Parliament is competent to make, the Central law shall prevail and the State law shall be void to the extent of its repugnancy. This general rule of repugnancy is subject to Article 254(2) which inter alia provides that if a law made by a State legislature in respect of matters in the Concurrent List is reserved for consideration by the President and receives his/ her assent, then the State law shall prevail in that State over an existing law or a law made by the Parliament, notwithstanding its repugnancy.

79. The proviso to Article 254(2) provides that a law made by the State Legislature with the President's assent shall not prevent Parliament from making at any time any law with respect to the same matter including a law adding to, amending, varying or repealing the law so made by a State Legislature. Thus, Parliament need not wait for the law made by the State Legislature with the President's assent to be brought into force as it can repeal, amend, vary or add to the assented State law no sooner it is made or enacted. We see no justification for inhibiting Parliament from repealing, amending or varying any State Legislation, which has received the President's assent, overriding within the State's territory, an earlier Parliamentary enactment in the concurrent sphere, before it is brought into force. Parliament can repeal, amend, or vary such State law no sooner it is assented to by the President and that it need not wait till such assented to State law is brought into force. This view finds support in the judgment of this Court in State of Orissa v. M.A. Tulloch and Co. reported in (1964) 4 SCR 461.

97.1. On timing, we hold that, repugnancy arises on the making and not commencement of the law, as correctly held in the judgment of this Court in Pt. Rishikesh and Another v. Salma Begum (Smt) [(1995) 4 SCC 718]."

(Emphasis supplied by me)

21. In Engineering Kamgar Union vs. Electro Steel Castings Ltd. and another, (2004) 6 SCC 36 (Paras-15 to 24), Hon'ble Supreme Court considered the question of repugnancy and the provisions of Section 254 of the Constitution of India and held that two different Acts produce two different legal results, a conflict will arise.

22. In Dharappa vs. Bijapur Coop. Milk Producers Societies Union Ltd., (2007) 9 SCC 109 (Para-12), Hon'ble Supreme Court held that repugnancy is said to arise when : (i) there is clear and direct inconsistency between the Central and the State Act; (ii) such inconsistency is irreconcilable, or brings the State Act in direct collision with the Central Act or brings about a situation where obeying one would lead to disobeying the other.

23. In Animal Welfare Board of India vs. A Nagaraja and others, (2014) 7 SCC 547 (Paras-75 to 79), Hon'ble Supreme Court held that in order to decide the question of repugnancy, it must be shown that the two enactments contain inconsistent and irreconcilable provisions, therefore, they cannot stand together or operate in the same field.

24. For all the reasons afore-stated, particularly in view of afore-noted conflicting views taken by two Benches of this Court in two decisions namely Mohd. Afzal (supra) and Hardoi Zila Sahkari Bank Limited (supra), the matter is referred to a larger bench to answer the following questions:

(a) Under the facts and circumstances of the case what would be the minimum period of notice under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 as substituted by the Central Act No.3 of 2003?

(b) Whether the amendment made by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act (Central Act No.3 of 2003), would prevail over the U.P. Amendment by U.P. Act No.24 of 1954 and consequently, the minimum period of notice would be 15 days?

25. Let the papers be placed before Hon'ble the Chief Justice to constitute a larger bench to decide the afore-noted questions.

Bail Application dismissed (E-6)

Precedent followed:

1. Neeru Yadav Vs St. of U.P. in Criminal Appeal No.1272 of 2015

(Delivered by Hon'ble Karuna Nand Bajpayee, J.)

1. This is the second bail application filed on behalf of applicant Arvind Rajak @ Vasu seeking his release on bail in Case Crime No.68 of 2018, u/ss 457, 380, 411 I.P.C., Police Station-Kakadev, District-Kanpur Nagar. First bail application of the applicant was rejected by this Court vide order dated 21.12.2018.

2. Heard learned counsel for the applicant and learned A.G.A. and also perused the record.

3. Counsel for the applicant has not raised any fresh argument but has insisted that a second look should be given to the facts of the case. The period of detention has also been pointed out.

4. Perusal of the earlier bail order shows that primarily the bail application was rejected because of a very long criminal history showing the involvement of applicant in not less than 33 cases which were registered against him. Merits of the case cannot be looked into again and again just because some further time has lapsed. There is therefore no reason to take a different view in the matter. While dealing with an accused of such kind this Court cannot loose perspective of the likelihood of the witnesses or evidence being tampered with and being adversely influenced under the coercive clout of criminality of the accused. The involvement of the applicant in three dozen criminal cases is not an ordinary circumstance and cannot be lightly ignored. It is not a usual feature to find people getting involved or being charged for criminal offences in such large number. When an accused with such kind of chequered criminal history is let loose, he finds unrestricted opportunities to wield his coercive powers and tamper with the evidence. The prospect of a fair trial naturally may get prejudicially affected and the possibility of prosecution evidence remaining intact comes under high peril. It is not needed but to make the factual situation clear the relevant portion of the order passed by this Court while rejecting the first bail application may be extracted herein below :

"Learned A.G.A. has opposed the prayer for bail and has submitted that the applicant is having criminal history of not less than 33 criminal cases and the applicant has been found to have been involved multiple cases of theft and robbery. The details of which have been given as follows :

Further submission is that the chequered history or the criminal antecedents of accused are sufficient to indicate that the accused is a habitual offender and in case he is released on bail, under the coercive influence of his criminality it will be difficult for the witnesses to depose independently without fear. It is further submitted that in all likelihood the release of the accused shall impair the prospects of a fair trial. It is next submitted that it is also very obvious that a person of this criminal background is also very likely to indulge himself in the activities which shall be detrimental to the society at large. Further submission is that the delinquents of such nature wield enormous criminal clout which in consequence very obviously affects a free trial. Therefore, in the facts and circumstances of the case, the accused should not be released on bail. Learned A.G.A. also relied upon the Apex Court decision Neeru Yadav vs. State of U.P. in Criminal Appeal No.1272 of 2015 decided on 29.9.2015 to emphasis upon the relevance of criminal history in matters of bail."

5. In the case of Neeru Yadav vs. State of U.P. in Criminal Appeal No.1272 of 2015 decided on 29.9.2015 the Apex Court had the occasion to reflect upon the criminal history of a particular accused and the observations made by the Apex Court in that regard may be apt to recall in this context. The relevant extracts of the aforesaid case may be quoted herein below :

"1. The present appeal, by special leave, on a summary glance may appear that a victim who might have an axe to grind against the accused, the respondent no.2 herein, and further to wreck his vengeance has approached this Court seeking cancellation of his bail, possibly being emboldened by the inaction of the State authorities who have chosen to maintain sphinx like silence or decided to assume the stagnated posture of a splendid sculpture of Rome, and invigorated by the thought that he can singularly carry the crusade, without any support, for he has a cause to vindicate by valiantly exposing the legal infirmities in the order passed by the High Court admitting the 2nd respondent to bail and also unconceal the lackadaisical attitude of the State, but on a keener scrutiny the initial impression melts away and the perversity of the order impugned gets unrolled. Be it stated, at a narrow level it may look like a combat between two individuals, but when analytical scrutiny is done and the State is compelled to wake up from its slumber, the unveiling of facts reveal the contestation between the accord and the discord, the scuffle betwixt the sacrosanctity and the majesty of law on one hand and the maladroit ingenious efforts to get the benefit by the abuse of process of the Court on the other. The analysis has to be made, that being an imperative command, between the honest nidification and the surreptitious edifice.

2. Mr. Pradeep Kumar Yadav, learned counsel for the appellant, with all the distress and the intellectual agony at his command, has submitted that the High Court without appropriate analysis and even without being fully apprised of the fact situation, solely on the basis of parity, as if it is the only foundation or for that matter, the comet that has come off to shine, has enlarged the respondent no.2 on bail totally being oblivious that no accused, however influential he may be or clever he thinks to be, cannot be allowed to nullify the sanctity and purity of law and jettison the age old values "truth in action" and "the firm and continuous desire to render to every one which is due", the two fundamental pillars of justice. The plea, submits Mr. Yadav, apart from cleverness also shows an attempt of the nonchalant mind of the respondent No 2 to engage in fertile imagination possibly thinking that the ground of parity is the real structure of palladium to bring the nemesis of the prosecution and put the Court in a situation to choose between Scylla and Charybdis. And, at this juncture, we must state that both the appellant and the State (though at a later stage) have become Argus-eyed and destroyed the ingenious foundation so astutely built by the accused.

3. ..... It was contended before the High Court that an omnibus role had been ascribed to him and the other accused persons that they had indulged in general firing as a consequence of which one person had died, for he had received three gun shot injuries. It was also contended that there was no credible evidence against the accused persons. The real plank of submission before the High Court, as is perceptible, was that prayer for bail in respect of 11 accused persons including Mitthan Yadav had already been allowed, and there was no justification to deny him the said benefit as he was similarly placed.

4. The prayer for bail was resisted by the Public Prosecutor contending, inter alia, that there was indiscriminate firing by the accused person causing fatal injuries. The High Court, after hearing both the parties, has passed following order:-

"In view of above facts, considering the nature of allegation, severity of punishment and period of detention, without expressing any opinion on merit, it is a fit case for bail.

Let the applicant Budhpal @ Buddhu be enlarged on bail on his furnishing a personal bond with two heavy sureties each in the like amount to the satisfaction of court concerned in case crime no. 237 of 2013 under Section 147, 148, 149, 302, 307, 394, 411, 454, 506, 120-B, 34 I.P.C. Police Station Kavi Nagar, District Ghaziabad with the following conditions:

(i) The applicant will not tamper with the evidence during the trial.

(ii) The applicant will not pressurize/intimidate the prosecution witness.

(iii) The applicant will appear before the trial court on the date fixed, unless personal presence is exempted.

In case of breach of any of the above conditions, the court below shall be at liberty to cancel the bail." The said order is the subject matter of assail in the present appeal by special leave.

5. At the outset we are obliged to clarify that it is not an appeal seeking cancellation of bail in the strictest sense. It actually calls in question the legal pregnability of the order passed by the High Court. The prayer for cancellation of bail is not sought on the foundation of any kind of supervening circumstances or breach of any condition imposed by the High Court. The basic assail is to the manner in which the High Court has exercised its jurisdiction under Section 439 CrPC while admitting the accused to bail. To clarify, if it has failed to take into consideration the relevant material factors, it would make the order absolutely perverse and totally indefensible. That is why there is a difference between cancellation of an order of bail and legal sustainability of an order granting bail. [See State of U.P. v. Marmani Tripathi[1], Puran v. Rambilas[2], Narendra K. Amin v. State of Gujrat[3], and Prakash Kadam v. Ramprasad Vishwanah Gupta[4].]

7. .....

8. It is interesting to note that learned counsel for the appellant and the learned counsel for the State submitted that the respondent no.2 is still in jail despite the order of bail as he is involved in so many cases. We will take up the said issue at a later stage. It is submitted by Mr. Yadav, learned counsel for the appellant that despite the factum of criminal history pointed out before the High Court, it has given it a glorious ignore which the law does not countenance. The solitary and the singular grievance which is propounded with solidity that the High Court should have dwelt upon the same and thereafter decided the matter. Mr. Dash, learned senior counsel (though the State has not moved any application for setting aside the order of bail granted by the High Court for the reasons which are unfathomable) unhesitatingly accepted the said submission. In the additional affidavit, an independent chart has been filed by the State and we find that apart from the present case, there are seven cases pending against the respondent no.2. ....."

10. .....

12. In Prasanta Kumar Sarkar v. Ashis Chatterjee [8], while dealing with the court's role to interfere with the power of the High Court to grant bail to the accused, the Court observed that it is to be seen that the High Court has exercised this discretion judiciously, cautiously and strictly in compliance with the basic principles laid down in catena of judgments on that point. The Court proceeded to enumerate the factors:-

"9. ... among other circumstances, the factors [which are] to be borne in mind while considering an application for bail are:

(i) whether there is any prima facie or reasonable ground to believe that the accused had committed the offence;

(ii) nature and gravity of the accusation;

(iii) severity of the punishment in the event of conviction;

(iv) danger of the accused absconding or fleeing, if released on bail;

(v) character, behaviour, means, position and standing of the accused;

(vi) likelihood of the offence being repeated;

(vii) reasonable apprehension of the witnesses being influenced; and

(viii) danger, of course, of justice being thwarted by grant of bail."

13. We will be failing in our duty if we do not take note of the concept of liberty and its curtailment by law. It is an established fact that a crime though committed against an individual, in all cases it does not retain an individual character. It, on occasions and in certain offences, accentuates and causes harm to the society. The victim may be an individual, but in the ultimate eventuate, it is the society which is the victim. A crime, as is understood, creates a dent in the law and order situation. In a civilised society, a crime disturbs orderliness. It affects the peaceful life of the society. An individual can enjoy his liberty which is definitely of paramount value but he cannot be a law unto himself. He cannot cause harm to others. He cannot be a nuisance to the collective. He cannot be a terror to the society; and that is why Edmund Burke, the great English thinker, almost two centuries and a decade back eloquently spoke thus:-

"Men are qualified for civil liberty, in exact proportion to their disposition to put moral chains upon their own appetites; in proportion as their love to justice is above their rapacity; in proportion as their soundness and sobriety of understanding is above their vanity and presumption; in proportion as they are more disposed to listen to the counsel of the wise and good, in preference to the flattery of knaves. Society cannot exist unless a controlling power upon will and appetite be placed somewhere and the less of it there is within, the more there must be without. It is ordained in the eternal constitution of things that men of intemperate minds cannot be free. Their passions forge their fetters[9].

14. E. Barrett Prettyman, a retired Chief Judge of US Court of Appeals had to state thus:-

"In an ordered society of mankind there is no such thing as unrestricted liberty, either of nations or of individuals. Liberty itself is the product of restraints; it is inherently a composite of restraints; it dies when restraints are withdrawn. Freedom, I say, is not an absence of restraints; it is a composite of restraints. There is no liberty without order. There is no order without systematised restraint. Restraints are the substance without which liberty does not exist. They are the essence of liberty. The great problem of the democratic process is not to strip men of restraints merely because they are restraints. The great problem is to design a system of restraints which will nurture the maximum development of man's capabilities, not in a massive globe of faceless animations but as a perfect realisation, of each separate human mind, soul and body; not in mute, motionless meditation but in flashing, thrashing activity.[10]"

15. This being the position of law, it is clear as cloudless sky that the High Court has totally ignored the criminal antecedents of the accused. What has weighed with the High Court is the doctrine of parity. A history- sheeter involved in the nature of crimes which we have reproduced hereinabove, are not minor offences so that he is not to be retained in custody, but the crimes are of heinous nature and such crimes, by no stretch of imagination, can be regarded as jejune. Such cases do create a thunder and lightening having the effect potentiality of torrential rain in an analytical mind. The law expects the judiciary to be alert while admitting these kind of accused persons to be at large and, therefore, the emphasis is on exercise of discretion judiciously and not in a whimsical manner.

17. .....

18. ..... we may repeat with profit that it is not an appeal for cancellation of bail as the cancellation is not sought because of supervening circumstances. The annulment of the order passed by the High Court is sought as many relevant factors have not been taken into consideration which includes the criminal antecedents of the accused and that makes the order a deviant one. Therefore, the inevitable result is the lancination of the impugned order.

19. Resultantly, the appeal is allowed and the order passed by the High Court is set aside. ....."

6. The perusal of aforesaid case law reveals that a very strict view against the accused on the point of bail has been adopted by the Hon'ble Supreme Court for the reason of the accused having a shady past blemished with criminal antecedents. The Apex Court therefore, had proceeded to cancel the bail that had already been granted by the High court on the ground of parity with co-accused without giving due consideration to the criminal history of the accused. It may not be out of place to mention here that in the case of Neeru Yadav (supra) the accused was said to have a criminal history of only seven cases out of which ofcourse two cases were that of murder. But even a fleeting glance on the criminal history of the present accused would show that he appears to have been involved in almost similar kind of offences of committing lurking trespass, of committing theft and possessing theft property in such large number that he may be termed to be an incorrigible offender beyond all possibilities of reformation or corrective redemption. Even the present case at hand, in which the applicant seeks his bail relates to the offence under Sections 457 and 380 I.P.C. and the contents of the F.I.R. would show that at the time of incident the informant's family had gone to attend the marriage and the informant had also gone to Lucknow in connection with some matter and after having returned from there, he found his gate closed from inside which aroused suspicion. Somehow he managed his entry in his house from the roof of his neighbour and then he found that the window had been broken and the articles were thrown hither and thither, safe was found opened and it was discovered that the licensee pistol and a lot of gold jewellery and cash had been stolen away. During the course of investigation the accused was arrested and on being questioned by the police, he spilled the beans and made shocking disclosures about the enormous number of crimes of almost similar nature committed by him. Huge amount of recoveries were effected at his instance, the details of which have been narrated in Annexure No.3 which is memo of recovery and which relate to large number of thefts committed by him. Shocking number of thefts committed by the applicant and the huge number of consequential recoveries of highly valuable jewellery of gold and silver and cash does not leave any doubt at least at this stage that there is no dearth of incriminating evidence available against him pointing towards his guilt and guilty mind. Prima facie at this stage, unless the conclusion of the trial shows otherwise later on, the accused appears to be a menace to the society and a peril overhanging all the citizens who ceaselessly toil to earn an honest living. The recognized considerations germane on the point to decide whether an accused ought to be released on bail or not also includes the probability of the accused absconding or fleeing from the course of justice, if released on bail. His character, behaviour, means, position and standing in the society are also relevant. The likelihood of the offence being repeated has also been recognized by the Hon'ble

Apex Court as a relevant consideration. The enormous recoveries of gold and silver articles and also that of cash at the instance of applicant cannot be said to be either frivolous or planted at least at this stage. It is not difficult to see that the involvement of applicant in different criminal offences over a period of time speaks about the delinquency and depraved nature of the offender and in the considered opinion of this Court with such long criminal history in the background, it does not appear judicially prudent to release the applicant on bail.

7. For all these reasons therefore, this Court does not see any good fresh ground to take a different view in the matter than the one that has already been taken by this Court earlier.

8. Second bail application thus stands dismissed.

Precedent followed: -

1. Writ Tax No. 80 of 2016, Writ Tax No. 168 of 2016 (Para 20)

2. Writ Tax No. 546 of 2016 (Para 21)

3. Shri Balaji Enterprises Vs. C.C.T. U.P. Lucknow, Sales/Trade Tax Revision No. 496 of 2015, decided on 23.11.2015 (Para 24)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Piyush Agrawal, J.)

1. By means of present writ petition the petitioner has prayed for quashing of the orders dated 31st March, 2017 for the assessment year 2012-13 and 2013-2014 both under U.P. Vat Act as well as under Central VAT Act.

2. Heard Mr. Ravi Kant, Senior Advocate assisted by Mr. Nishant Mishra and Mr. C.B. Tripathi, special counsel for the State of U.P.

3. The petitioner is a company incorporated under the provision of Indian Companies Act, 1956. Petitioner an online Agency engaged in marketing and selling of consumer goods is registered under U.P. Value Added Tax, Act 2008 (hereinafter referred to as 'Act 2008') and Central Sales Tax Act, 1956 (hereinafter referred to as 'CST Act'). The business of petitioner is that it buys goods from various dealers across the country and sells the same to other dealers in the State of U.P. as alleged throughout India. Apart from business and trading of goods petitioner is also engaged in providing warehousing and various other services to sellers registered on the portal www. flipkart. com wherein, petitioner manages inventory, packaging and invoicing for said sellers.

4. Under the registration documents of petitioner under Act 2008 and CST Act his address was mentioned as Cabin No. 2 First Floor, G-50 Sector-3, Noida,.

5. The petitioner have changed its address from the present address to D-510-513, Buffer Godown Compound, Devi Mandir Road, Dasna, Ghaziabad.

6. Thereafter, the petitioner intimated the respondent for change/amendment of the address in the registration certificate instead of the amending and passing order on the said application and ex-parti provincial assessment orders were passed for the assessment year 2012-13 (4) U.P. under Act 2008 and CST Act.

7. On the basis of an ex-parte assessment order certain amounts were also withdrawn from the Bank amount of the petitioner.

8. The petitioner had preferred a writ petition No. 80 and 168 of 2016 and the same was allowed and the ex-parte assessment orders were quashed with heavy cost of two lac.

9. Thereafter, on 31st March, 2017 again an ex-parte assessment orders were passed for assessment year 2012-13 and 2013- 14 both under Act 2008 and CST Act and the said assessment order have been passed ex-parte without any service of notice upon the petitioner or opportunity of being heard provided therein.

10. Learned senior counsel of the petitioner submits that this is a 3rd round of litigation forcing the petitioner to approach this Hon'ble Court as the respondents are bent upon to serve the notice not on the new address intimated to them but on the old/earlier address that too notice by affixation in gross violation of the provision of Rule 72 of the U.P. VAT Rules.

11. It is submitted that the impugned orders have been passed by the respondents are wholly without jurisdiction and gross violation of principle of natural justice.

12. It is further argued that the assessment orders for the assessment year 2012-13 both under Act 2008 and CST Act are being passed after the expiry of period of limitation prescribed under Section 29 (6) of the Act and therefore the orders are liable to be set aside.

13. Learned counsel further submits that the normal limitation starts from 31st March, 2013 which ends on 31st March, 2016 but as per limitation prescribed under Section 29(6) of the Act ends on 30th September, 2016. Since, the impugned orders have been passed on 31st March, 2017 and the assessment orders were received on 12.10.2017, therefore, the assessment orders are vitiated and are liable to be set aside as barred by limitation.

14. Learned counsel for the respondent could not justify the action of the respondent passing the orders for the assessment year 2012-13 both under Act 2008 and CST Act in question after the expiry of period of limitation as provided under Section 29(6) of the Act.

15. In view of above mentioned facts that the limitation as prescribed under Section 29(6) of Act 2008 for the assessment year 2012-13 has expired. On 13th September, 2016 and the impugned orders both under Act 2008 and CST Act for assessment year 2012-13 have been passed on 31st March, 2017 which are apparently much beyond the period of limitation prescribed therein. Therefore, the impugned orders for the assessment year 2012-13 both under Act 2008 and CST Act are hereby quashed.

16. The learned Senior Counsel now raised an objection for the order passed for the assessment year 2013-14 both under the Act 2008 and CST Act.

17. It is submitted that in spite of the fact that the petitioner's address have been changed and the respondent were duly intimated about the said change of address, the respondents neither serve the copy of notice upon the petitioner on its new address nor any intimation was given before passing of the impugned order dated 31st March, 2017 for the disputed assessment year.

18. It is further argued that even though the complete procedure have been prescribed under Rule 72 of U.P. VAT Rules about the service of notice before taking any action against the petitioner but the same has not been complied with and in gross violation of the said Rule the notice of assessment in question have been served by affixation which is not permissible under the Act 2008 and Rules.

19. Learned counsel for the respondents have supported the impugned order and tried to justify the action of the respondent in passing the assessment order.

20. We have perused the record of the case before proceeding further it may be pointed out that in earlier two round of litigation the similar question arose about the service of notice on the earlier address and not on the new address from where the petitioner is doing its business and this Hon'ble Court has deprecated the method adopted by the respondent by not only quashed the orders but also imposed heavy cost upon the respondent. The

Hon'ble Court in the case of petitioner while allowing the Writ Nos. 80 and 168 of 2016 have observed as under:

"22. The respondents have tried to justify the assessment orders contending that proper service was made by refusal as well as by affixation and there was no illegality in the service of the summons. It was also urged that the petitioner has a remedy of filing an appeal against the assessment orders and that it was not necessary to invoke the extraordinary jurisdiction of this Court under Article 226 of the Constitution of India.

23. Having heard the learned counsel for the parties, we are of the opinion that the rule of alternative remedy is not a bar for entertaining the writ petition. No doubt it is a rule of discretion but in the instant case, we are of the opinion that there would be a travesty of justice if we relegate the petitioner to the alternative remedy of an appeal. We are of the opinion that justice is required to be done at the earliest. We find that there is a total abdication by the respondents in adhering to the process of service of summons under Rule 72 of the Rules. Rule 72 of the Rules has been ignored and a procedure which is not known to law has been adopted. For facility, the Rule 72 of the Rules is extracted hereunder:-

24. Rule 72(a) of the Rules provides that the service of summons is required to be made on a dealer or a person concerned in person or his agent. In the instant case, the report of process server indicates that there was no Firm at the Noida address. At the Ghaziabad address, the process server met one person, who refused to divulge his name but clearly indicated as to which person would receive the notice. The process server, however, indicates service by refusal. In our opinion, the report of the process server is wholly illegal. There is no finding that the person who refused to accept the notice was a dealer or a person concerned in person or an agent empowered to accept the notice. In the absence of any report to this effect we are of the opinion that there is no valid service by refusal.

29. The recall application for recall of the assessment order was rejected by the assessing authority on the ground that the application was filed beyond the stipulated period of 30 days since service of the assessment order by affixation was made on 17.12.2015 at Noida. The Assessing Authority had also rejected the recall application on the ground that the admitted tax of Rs. 3.3 crore was not deposited which is a mandatory requirement as per Section 32 of the Act. On this issue, we are of the opinion that Assessing Authority committed a manifest error in rejecting the recall application. For facility, section 32 is extracted hereunder:-

35. Before parting, we must observe the manner in which the respondents have proceeded with the assessment and recovered the amount from the petitioner's Bank account in haste is deplorable and in gross violation of the provisions of the Act. We find that for the assessment years 2011-12, 2013-14 and 2014-15 ex-parte assessment orders were made without adequate service of notices upon the petitioner. These assessment proceedings were set aside in appeal on the short ground that the service of the summons were sent at the address where the petitioner was no longer carrying on its business. Inspite of this knowledge, the respondents chose deliberately to serve the notice for provisional assessment for the period April to October, 2015 upon the petitioner at the Noida address knowing fully well that the petitioner was not carrying any business from the Noida address. The respondents knew very well that the petitioner had shifted its place of business from Noida to Ghaziabad as they made a futile attempt to serve the notice at Ghaziabad but later for the reasons best known to them, chose deliberately to serve the notice by affixation at the Noida address. Such tactics adopted by the assessing authority in getting the service effected upon the petitioner was in gross violation of Rule 72 of the Rules.

36. We also find that the entire exercise of service was done within four days without taking recourse to the other mode of service, namely simultaneously service by registered post with acknowledgement due. The assessment order indicates that the first and last date of hearing of the assessment proceedings was 10.12.2015 and that the assessment order was passed on 15.12.2015. The counter affidavit reveals that the assessment order was served by attachment at the Noida address. This was done deliberately by the respondents so that the respondents could withdraw the amount through garnishee notices by exerting pressure upon the bank authorities. The Court gets an uncanny feeling that a deliberate attempt was made by the respondents to withdraw the money from the petitioner's bank account through dubious mean by passing ex-parte assessment orders and not allowing it to be served validly upon the petitioner. If in this cavalier fashion the Commercial Tax Department functions and withdraws huge sums of money without valid service, it would be difficult for big business houses to carry on their business. Such business houses would be forced to shift their business outside the State of Uttar Pradesh.

37. Consequently, the petitioners are entitled for cost. The writ petitions are allowed with cost amounting to Rs. 2,00,000/- (Rupees two lakhs only), which will be paid by the Commercial Tax Department to the petitioner within two weeks from the date of filing of a certified copy of this order. If the amount is not paid, it would be open to the petitioner to move an appropriate application in this petition."

21. Thereafter, again a writ Petition No. 546 of 2016 was allowed with a cost being imposed on respondent of Rs. 50,000/. The Hon'ble Court has observed us under:

"16. We however required him to tell us as to how respondent 1 could dare to pass further assessment orders, when earlier orders passed by him were declared without jurisdiction by this Court by referring to the similar application of petitioner for change of business address. In reply thereto a very bulky counter affidavit has been filed separately by respondent 1. Despite he could not explain as to what was the occasion for any confusion when the needs were very clearly disclosed and decided in Courts' judgment dated 29.02.2016 and why respondent 1 was in so such a hurry so as to pass the impugned assessment orders on 04.05.2016.

18. In these facts and circumstances we are satisfied that here is a forced litigation by unmindful illegal act on the part of respondent 1 and realizing the same he has also withdrawn the impugned orders and also considered the fact he is an authority which was already adversely commenced by this Court in its order dated 29.02.2016 still he did not care to such observations. It is again a fit case where respondent 1 himself would be saddled with cost by this litigation. Since the impugned order of assessment have already been recalled by order dated 23.07.2016 in this regard no further order is required but we hold that respondent 1 being guilty of compelling and forcing second round of litigation upon petitioner must be saddled with cost which we quantify to Rs. 50,000/-.

19. We also direct Principal Secretary, Trade Tax, U.P. Government to look into the manner in which respondent 1 has functioned in this case and despite strictures and penal cost imposed by this Court in earlier judgment dated 29.02.2016 and also directing Commissioner Trade Tax to get an inquiry conducted against erring officials, respondent 1 has not cared to mend his ways to conduct but has proceeded to harass a dealer like petitioner and appropriate disciplinary action be taken at the earliest and finalise the same. It may also be considered by Principal Secretary, Trade Tax, U.P. Government as to whether, respondent 1 is a person fit to be assigned such important quasi-judicial functions."

22. Admittedly, the two judgments shows the working of the departmental authorities and the manner in which they are working is not in the interest of either parties.

23. The case in hand also service of notice has been made by affixation on the earlier address of the petitioner in spite of the fact being within their knowledge that the petitioner have changed the place of business to the new address but still with a mind set of passing the order hurriedly passed an ex-parte order under Act 2008 and CST Act creating huge demand against the petitioner.

24. This Hon'ble Court in the case of Sri. Balaji Enterprises vs. Commissioner Commertial Tax U.P. Lucknow Sales/Trade Tax Revision No. 496 of 2015 decided on 23rd November, 2015 to interpret as to how under Rule 72 the notice is to be served and held as under:

"The record reveals that a notice through process server was sent to the assessee revisionist but the same was not accepted and the service was deemed to be sufficient by refusal. However, there is nothing on record to show that any notice of the proceedings was sent to the assessee revisionist by registered post.

Rule 72 of the Rules framed under the Act provides for the mode of service of notice of the proceedings under the Act.

In addition to the service of notice of the proceedings through process server Sub-Rule (h) of Rule 72 provides that the authorities shall simultaneously issue notice, order or summon for service by post.

The aforesaid Sub-Rule (h) of Rule 72 of the Rules clearly envisages that in addition to the personal service through process server, sending of notice by registered post is mandatory.

This mandatory provision has not been followed in the present case as is evident from the record produced.

In view of the aforesaid facts and circumstances, the contention of assessee revisionist that he was not served with any notice of the proceedings has force. Accordingly, as the service of notice by post is mandatory and in addition to service by process server, the above question is answered in favour of the assessee revisionist and against the revenue holding that the authority was not competent to cancel the registration of the assessee/revisionist without issuing notice to him by registered post simply on the basis of service of process server by refusal."

25. The Division Bench judgement in the case of petitioner itself and Sri Balaji Enterprises (supra) a clear procedure for service on notice has been prescribed which has not been followed by the respondent in the case in hand.

26. The record further reveals that the notice by affixation has been made on the earlier address of the petitioner even without satisfying the conditions as mentioned in the Rule. Even after service of notice by affixation, no such report has been brought on record as provided under the Rules.

27. In spite of the fact being within the knowledge of the respondent that the petitioner has changed the place of business to the new address still notice by affixation has been made in the earlier address. This fact is also came to the notice of this Court in earlier two rounds of litigation filed by the petitioner in Writ Nos. 80 and 168 of 2016 and Writ No. 546 of 2016 which has been allowed with the cost of Rs. 2 lac and Rs. 50,000/-.

28. The record further reveals that the impugned order has been passed in gross violation of the provision of the Act and without proper service of notice upon the petitioner. The said fact could not also be disputed by the learned counsel for the respondent.

29. In view of the facts and circumstances of the case as stated above, the impugned order dated 31.3.2017 for the assessment year 2013-14 under the U.P. Act 2008 and CST Act are hereby set aside.

30. It is made clear that respondents are permitted to initiate the proceeding by issuing notice at the current address of the petitioner, if any, in accordance with law.

31. The writ petition is accordingly allowed.

A. Contempt of Courts Act, 1971- Section 19 - Delay in payments by appellant - wilfully and deliberately disobeying the orders of the High Court - the subsequent payments clearly establish that the said payments were wilfully and deliberately delayed for more than four and a half years - the appellant has substantially contributed obstructions for more than four and a half years - subsequent payments, therefore, do not absolve the appellant of the contempt that was earlier committed - the officers who succeeded the appellant were also punished. Hence, the non-compliance of the judgment is clearly established and therefore the conviction and punishment have to be upheld. (Para 4, 5, 7, 16, 22, 24 to 36)

Contempt Appeal Disposed of (E-6)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Amreshwar Pratap Sahi, J. & Hon'ble Pramod Kumar Srivastava, J.)

1. Heard Sri Shashi Nandan, learned Senior Counsel for the appellant and Sri R.B. Tripathi, learned counsel for the respondent no. 2.

2. This contempt appeal under Section 19 of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 assails the conviction and punishment awarded by the learned Single Judge in Contempt Petition No. 1487 of 2001 whereby the appellant was sentenced to two months simple imprisonment with a fine of Rs. 2000/- and in case of default to further undergo one month imprisonment. A direction was given to send the copy of the order to the Chief Secretary, Government of Uttar Pradesh, Secondary Education, U.P. Lucknow with the hope that the matter would also be dealt with administratively against the appellant.

3. The conviction was brought home on account of the charge that was framed against the appellant for showing cause as to the wilful and deliberate violation, and defiance, of the judgment and order of a learned Single Judge of this Court dated 21st February, 2000 in Writ Petition No. 2022 of 1995 as confirmed by a division bench in Special Appeal No. 295 of 2000 vide judgment dated 19th April, 2000. While proceeding to frame charges, the learned Single Judge took notice of a communication dispatched by the appellant under her signatures dated 9th May, 2000 which is extracted hereinunder:-

4. The learned Single Judge found not only the said letter to be contemptuous but also found the affidavits that were filed in the proceedings to be further fortifying the charge of wilful and deliberate disobedience and an attitude of the appellant not to comply with the directions of the Court. The learned Single Judge came to the conclusion that it was the appellant who while acting as District Inspector of Schools, being the drawing and disbursing officer, had created hurdles in the execution of the order with a reprehensive defiance and it was her action to resist payments that were due as is evident from the letter dated 9th May, 2000 which clearly indicated her intention to "set the cat among the pigeons" which resulted in wilful defiance and non-compliance of the order of the learned Single Judge for four and a half years.

5. The learned Single Judge thereafter also appears to have taken notice of the career of the appellant and described her as a veteran of contempt matters with about 60 contempt petitions pending against her.

6. Sri Shashi Nandan has then invited the attention of the Court to the facts of the case which in a nutshell as under.

7. Phuleshwar who was a Class IV employee of an Intermediate College raised a claim in relation to his reinstatement and payment of salary. Writ Petition No. 2022 of 1995 was filed by the Principal of the Institution contending that salary was being claimed by Phuleshwar on the strength of an alteration in the date of birth as a result whereof Phuleshwar would receive the same for a period of extra 10 years. This challenge raised in the writ petition by the Principal of the College, who is the appointing authority of a Class IV employee under the U.P. Intermediate Education Act, 1921 was rejected and the writ petition was dismissed on 21st February, 2000 with a further direction to the Principal and the District Inspector of Schools - II, the respondent no. 3 therein to reinstate Phuleshwar, the respondent no. 4 in the writ petition, in service and pay his entire arrears of salary within a period of two months from the date of production of a certified copy of the order.

8. The Principal of the Institution aggrieved by the said judgment of the learned Single Judge preferred Special Appeal No. 295 of 2000 and the same was also dismissed on 19th April, 2000. Copies of the said judgments are on record.

9. The said judgment was pressed into service for compliance by the recipient of the salary upon which the appellant Smt. Maya Niranjan wrote the letter dated 9th May, 2000 that has been extracted hereinabove.

10. The said letter taking notice of the judgment of the High Court categorically states that the Hon'ble Judges hearing the special appeal have dismissed the same and as a consequence thereof Sri Phuleshwar would be entitled for salary without doing work w.e.f. 1.8.1994 and the department would have to compulsorily pay the same which would amount to a misutilization of government funds. The letter further recites that the matter is being forwarded for further examination and action for which appropriate instructions may be issued by the Director of Education to whom the letter was addressed.

11. Thereafter the letter recites that since the matter relates to a fake and a forged date of birth having been manipulated increasing the period to 10 years, the same would also amount to an unnecessary burden on the State Exchequer. In such a situation, decision be taken for appropriate action and instructions be issued to her office so that further action be taken in compliance thereof.

12. It is admitted that the appellant was also holding charge of the post of District Inspector of Schools - I as well as District Inspector of Schools - II dealing with all institutions in the district of Allahabad both Boys and Girls. The institution where Phuleshwar was working was admittedly a Girls Institution, namely Jagat Taran Girls Intermediate College and was under a direct control of the District Inspector of Schools - II. The powers for disbursement of salary are conferred on the District Inspector of Schools in relation to employees of aided Secondary institutions under the Uttar Pradesh High Schools and Intermediate Colleges (Payment of Salaries of Teachers and other Employees) Act, 1971. The appellant was thus under a statutory obligation to ensure payments to the employee.

13. Learned counsel for the appellant pointed out that the appellant was holding charge of these two posts even though she was working as a Deputy Director of Education, and she handed over charge of District Inspector of Schools - I on 4th August, 2000 and District Inspector of Schools - II on 3rd October, 2000. Thus on the date when the judgment was delivered and even thereafter when the letter dated 9th May, 2000 was written, the appellant continued to hold charge as the District Inspector of Schools - II as well. It may be reiterated that District Inspector of Schools - II was the respondent no. 3 in the writ petition. Thus the responsibility of obedience to the orders of the High Court was clearly on the appellant on the delivery of the judgment and which fact is also evident from the letter dated 9th May, 2000 written by the appellant herself seeking instructions in the matter.

14. Since the payment was not released for a fairly long time, the employee was left with no option but to file a contempt application no. 522 of 2001 arraying therein four officials. It may be remembered that the contempt was filed much after the appellant had handed over charge to the new incumbents of the office of District Inspector of Schools - I and District

Inspector of Schools - II, namely Smt. Santwana Tiwari and Smt. Farhana Siddiqui. Sri Satyanarain Srivastava was the Finance and Accounts Officer in the year 2001 when the said contempt application was filed arraying these persons.

15. It appears that thereafter another contempt application was filed being Contempt Application No. 1487 of 2011 where the appellant Smt. Maya Niranjan was arrayed as opposite party. Thus the appellant was also sought to be proceeded against and after notices were issued both contempt matters proceeded together but later on the contempt petition of the appellant appears to have been not taken up when the earlier contempt application no. 522 of 2001 came to be heard against the officials referred to hereinabove.

16. It may be also noticed that the contempt petitions in both matters were heard by the same learned Single Judge and decided by him. Contempt Petition No. 522 of 2001 was ultimately decided on 20th September, 2004 holding Smt. Farhana Siddiqui and Sri Satyanarain Srivastava of having wilfully and deliberately disobeyed the judgment referred to hereinabove and they were sentenced with two months imprisonment coupled with fine and further compensation was awarded keeping in view the alleged non-payments to Sri Phuleshwar.

17. It may be however noticed that before the delivery of the said judgment, in the contempt filed against the appellant namely Contempt Petition No. 1487 of 2001, charges were framed against her on 11th August, 2004. This contempt was taken up thereafter and the judgment was delivered giving rise to this appeal on 5th November, 2004 whereby the appellant has been convicted and sentenced as referred to hereinabove.

18. Contempt Appeal No. 16 and Contempt Appeal No. 17 of 2004 were filed by Smt. Farhana Siddiqui and Satyanarain Srivastava arising out of the judgment dated 20th September, 2004.

19. In the matter of the appellant the present appeal was filed as a defective appeal no. 11 of 2004 now given a regular number as Appeal No. 37 of 2006 in which an interim order was passed staying the operation of the judgment on 5.11.2004. Against the said interim order passed in this appeal Phuleshwar filed Special Leave to Appeal No. 819 of 2005 before the Apex Court that was dismissed on 24th January, 2005.

20. This appeal remained pending, but the two appeals which were filed by Farhana Siddiqui and Satyanarain Srivastava against their convictions and sentence, were taken up and were decided by a division bench of this Court on 15th September, 2005.

21. This appeal has remained pending for 10 years thereafter.

22. The judgment of conviction and sentence against Farhana Siddiqui and Satyanarain Srivastava was upheld in the above mentioned appeals with a modification to the effect that the conviction was founded on valid grounds but the extreme punishment of imprisonment of two months was held not to be desirable on the facts as brought before the Court. Accordingly, while upholding the conviction, the division bench suitably modified the sentence by reducing the sentence of imprisonment. Rest of the sentence was maintained. A copy of the said judgment has been placed by Sri Shashi Nandan before us.

23. Sri Shashi Nandan has then advanced his submissions in this appeal contending that firstly the letter dated 9th May, 2000 is an interdepartmental letter written by the appellant in terms of the instructions contained in the circular of the Director dated 21st April, 1993. He has invited the attention of the Court, particularly to Paragraph 1 of the said circular which is extracted hereinunder:-

"1– न्यायालयों द्वारा वादों/रिट याचिकाओं के प्रसंग में यदि भुगतान के एक पक्षीय आदेश जारी किये गये हों तो तत्काल पूरी तथ्यात्मक स्थिति से सम्बन्धित न्यायालयों में प्रार्थना–पत्र देकर शासकीय अधिवक्ता के माध्यम से आदेश संशोधित कराने की कार्यवाही तत्परता से की जाय। यदि विभागीय अधिकारी द्वारा न्यायालय द्वारा दिये गये अवसर का लाभ नहीं उठाया जाता है और शासन का पक्ष न्यायालय में समय से प्रस्तुत न करने के कारण एक पक्षीय निर्णय होता है तो उसके लिए सम्बन्धित अधिकारी/कर्मचारी दोषी माने जायेंगे तथा उनके विरूद्ध कठोर कार्यवाही की जायगी। यदि न्यायालय के आदेश का अनुपालन तत्काल किया जाना अपेक्षित हो तो न्यायालीय आदेश की सत्यापित प्रति भेजते हुए सम्पूर्ण स्थिति को दर्शाते हुए धनावंटन की मांग निर्धारित प्रक्रिया से की जानी चाहिए। यदि मामले में पुनर्विचारार्थ प्रत्यावेदन/अपील करने की अवाश्यकता समझी जायगी तो उसके लिए समस्त अभिलेख/पत्रावलियॉ विशेष वाहक के माध्यम से प्रेषित करके आवश्यक आदेश/निर्देश निदेशालय से समय से प्राप्त करेंगे। ऐसे मामलों में विलम्ब के लिये कोई कारण अथवा आधार मान्य नहीं होगा।"

24. He submits that it is in view of such interdepartmental instructions that the appellant in good faith sought instructions from the Director of Education for making payments to Phuleshwar. He submits that the said letter was only seeking instructions and was in no way intended or designed to wilfully and deliberately flout the directions of the judgment of the learned Single Judge or the Division Bench. He therefore submits that this letter does not in any way convey any perception of a wilful and deliberate disobedience so as to constitute a civil contempt making it punishable under the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971. In addition to this, he also urges that the entire judgment of the learned Single Judge does not record any specific finding or reason so as to bring the act of the appellant within the fold of deliberate and wilful disobedience.

25. The second contention of Sri Shashi Nandan is that the entire judgment of the learned Single Judge is also overwhelmingly capped with certain perceptions about the officer and her functioning as well as her involvement in other contempt matters which was neither the basis of the charge nor could it had been taken into account for having punished the appellant. He submits that it appears that the said perception also has probably weighed with the learned Single Judge heavily to bring about the punishment of imprisonment.

26. The third argument of Sri Shashi Nandan is that even assuming though not admitting that disobedience was allegedly committed by the appellant and there was some default in payment to Sri Phuleshwar then in that event the judgment of the division bench in contempt appeal no. 16 and contempt appeal no. 17 of 2004 dated 15.9.2005 should be taken into account at least to reduce the punishment, particularly with regard to the sentence of imprisonment. He therefore submits that the incident of the alleged disobedience being at par with that of Farhana Siddiqui and Satyanarain Srivastava, this Court may not be justified in upholding the sentence of imprisonment, as a coordinate bench has deleted the said sentence after taking into account the circular dated 21.4.1993 of the Director, and the interdepartmental procedure. He contends that the validity of such actions on the basis of the circular has been upheld in that case and to that extent the same reasoning should be adopted for the purpose of setting aside the imposition of sentence on the appellant.

27. The fourth argument of Sri Shashi Nandan is that the presumption drawn by the learned Single Judge of deliberately and wilfully forestalling any attempt of payment by the appellant is also not justified, inasmuch as, unless the funds were released by the Directorate, the payment was not possible and which actually took place during the pendency of these proceedings under the order of the Director of Education dated 31st July, 2004 whereafter the entire dues to the employee were paid on 2nd August, 2004.

28. The submission of Sri Shashi Nandan, therefore, is that when the learned Single Judge proceeded to frame the charges on 11th August, 2004 against the appellant the judgment had already been complied with, with payment to Sri Phuleshwar on 2nd August, 2004 prior to that. He therefore submits that this mitigating circumstance does not appear to have been taken into account while imposing the punishment on the appellant.

29. Having heard Sri Shashi Nandan and having considered the submissions raised, the first question is as to whether the learned Single Judge has arrived at any conclusion of wilful and deliberate disobedience or not. To this extent, we clearly find a clear recital contained in the judgment after discussion of the entire material on record that the act of the appellant including the contents of the letter dated 9th May, 2000 and her affidavits filed on record before the learned Single Judge clearly resulted in wilful defiance and non compliance of the order for four and a half years, though it was to be complied within one month. This satisfaction has been categorically recorded by the learned Single Judge at internal page 16 of the impugned judgment. The contention therefore of Sri Shashi Nandan that the learned Single Judge has not recorded any such finding or satisfaction does not appear to be correct.

30. The second question is about the argument advanced as to whether the letter dated 9th May, 2000 and its contents are a mere communication seeking instructions or they do convey any wilful or deliberate disobedience. We have hereinabove appropriately to the best of our ability translated the contents of the letter highlighted above and we find in no unequivocal terms that the appellant has time and again asserted in the letter that the payment as a result of the judgment of the High Court would amount to misutilization of government funds on account of the alleged manipulation in the date of birth of the employee Phuleshwar which would result ultimately in an unnecessary burden on the State Exchequer. We are amazed at this expression of the officer who was clearly trying to sit in appeal and give an opinion as if she was under some authority to reverse what had been directed to be delivered under the judgments of this Court in the writ jurisdiction. The expressions used in the letter clearly establish that the appellant was not seeking instructions for compliance but was suggesting a loss that was to be caused on account of the judgment. The appellant, who was the drawing and disbursing officer obliged to make payments, instead of compliance was resisting payment and proceeding not as per the judgment but was seeking a direction from the Director without even referring to the circular of 1993, as if the Director could have exercised his authority contrary to the judgment of the High Court.

31. The recitals contained in the said letter were therefore clearly designed to obviate the execution of the judgment of the High Court and which fact has been correctly construed by the learned Single Judge in the impugned judgment. We, therefore, find that the letter dated 9th May, 2000 is not only unhappily worded but is also a clear indication of the intent of the appellant to wilfully and deliberately forestall the execution of the judgment which is a clear defiance and therefore constitutes a civil contempt as defined under Section 2(c) read with Section 12 of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971. The learned Single Judge was, therefore, absolutely justified in framing the charge and arriving at the conclusion that the act of the appellant amounted to wilful and deliberate disobedience, inasmuch as, this is admitted on record that she on the said date was already holding charge of District Inspector of Schools - II.

32. The contention next raised by Sri Shashi Nandan is about the perceptions of the learned Single Judge in relation to the conduct and service and career of the appellant. It is correct that the same was not a matter of charge that was to be tried but that was a matter of record and that was also indicated in the judgment of the learned Single Judge which facts have not been explicitly denied. The institution of contempt petitions against the appellant does reflect on her attitude in either not understanding the orders of the High Court or her being incapable of trying to understand the judicial orders which in our opinion cannot be said to be an irrelevant consideration for the purpose punishing her for wilful and deliberate disobedience. Her bold and open expressions, therefore, amount to an obstinate act in trying to create obstructions in the implementation of judicial orders wilfully and deliberately. It is a different matter that the officer may have been exonerated in any other matter but this reflects on the career of an officer who is enjoined with the duty to comply with the judgment of the High Court especially where the officer has been arrayed as a party respondent and directions have been issued. The said perceptions of the learned Single Judge therefore may not have been necessary to prove the charge but they were absolutely necessary for the consideration of the imposition of punishment.

33. Coming to the argument of subsequent compliance of the directions of the High Court and the payments made prior to the framing of the charge against the appellant, suffice it to say that a delay in the framing of the charge cannot be a ground or an excuse to absolve the appellant of her act of having committed the contempt in the year 2000 itself. The delay in the framing of the charge or the payments having been made is not a relevant factor for judging the commission of an act by the appellant of wilfully and deliberately disobeying the orders of the High Court. To the contrary, the subsequent payments clearly establish that the said payments were wilfully and deliberately delayed to the recipient who was entitled to receive the same under a valid judgment of this Court towards which the appellant has substantially contributed obstructions. The same was delayed for more than four and a half years for which the appellant was also responsible in the circumstances indicated above. It is for this reason that the officers who succeeded the appellant namely Farhana Siddiqui and Satyanarain Srivastava were also punished and their punishment has been upheld by the division bench. This factor also therefore clearly traverses against the appellant and not in her favour. The subsequent payments, therefore, do not absolve her of the contempt that was earlier committed.

34. We now come to the submission raised by Sri Shashi Nandan regarding the sentence of imprisonment and compared with that in the case of Farhana Siddiqui and Satyanarain Srivastava. We have carefully perused the judgment of the division bench dated 15.9.2005 and we find that the division bench while deleting the sentence of imprisonment of the aforesaid two officers has taken notice of the communication sent by them pleading justification on the strength of the circular dated 21st April, 1993. We have not been able to find any adverse observation by the division bench in relation to the language utilised by the aforesaid two officers in the letters sent by them to the Director to be offensive or contemptuous. The finding recorded is that the said officers had sent letters only for guidance and financial release and disbursement of payments under the circular dated 21st April, 1993 which was justified. There is no finding recorded by the division bench that the said contemnors had used any such language which can be compared with that of the appellant as expressed in her letter dated 9th of May, 2000. No such material has been placed before us. Consequently, the contention of Sri Shashi Nandan that the said factors should be taken into account keeping in view the judgment of the division bench does not on parity appeal to us at all. The reason being that the contents of the letter dated 9th May, 2000 has been found by us to be clearly contemptuous and intended to disobey the orders of this Court which does not appear to be in the case of Farhana Siddiqui and Satyanarain Srivastava.

35. Now coming independently to the issue as to whether the sentence should be reduced or not, for the reasons indicated not only hereinabove but also in the judgment of the division bench dated 15th September, 2005 the non compliance of the judgment is clearly established and therefore the conviction and punishment has to be upheld. However, on the facts and circumstances of the present case we while upholding the conviction of the appellant reduce the sentence of imprisonment only to a period of one month. For this the reasons, apart from the contents of the letter dated 9.5.2000, are also that this officer was found by the learned Single Judge to have returned back after a couple of months managing her stay at Allahabad that has been narrated in the judgment. Her conduct cannot be compared with that of the other officers who have been punished. The appellant therefore deserves the extreme punishment of imprisonment as well. The appeal stands disposed of with the said modification.

36. Learned counsel for the appellant prayed that sometime may be granted as the appellant may seek her remedy against our judgment before a higher forum. We, therefore, provide that the our judgment delivered today, resulting in the coming into effect of the punishment order shall remain suspended for a period of fifteen days. In the event the appellant does not succeed in getting any further redressal within fifteen days, she shall surrender to serve out the sentence thereafter.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Surya Prakash Kesarwani, J.)

1. Heard Sri Atul Dayal, learned Senior Advocate assisted by Sri Ayush Khanna, learned counsel for the defendant-revisionist and Sri Manish Tandon, learned counsel for the plaintiff-respondent.

Facts:-

2. Briefly admitted facts of the present case are that the plaintiff-respondent is the owner and landlord of House No.76/184, Sabji Mandi, Kanpur Nagar, which is bounded by east, west and south side by public lane and on the northern side by House No.76/183. An open portion of the said house measuring 9 feet x 9 feet with four pucca tanks (nad) for feeding of cattles and enclosed by boundary wall was let out by the landlord-respondent to the tenant-revisionist on a monthly rent of Rs.1000/-. The tenant-revisionist defaulted in payment of rent. Therefore, the landlord-respondent issued a notice dated 18.06.2016 by registered post, whereby he determined the tenancy and demanded arrears of rent from the tenant-revisionist. The notice was served and yet neither the rent was paid nor the tenanted portion was vacated by the tenant-revisionist. Therefore, the landlord-respondent filed SCC Suit No.67 of 2016 (Ram Kumar Yadav and another Vs. Munnu Yadav) which was decreed by the Additional District Judge/Judge Small Cause, Court No.13, Kanpur Nagar, by the impugned judgment and decree dated 27.03.2019. In the aforesaid SCC Suit, six issues were framed. The issue no.1 regarding landlord-tenant relationship was decided by the court below holding that the respondent is the landlord of the disputed accommodation of which the revisionist is the tenant. The issue no. 2 was framed on the point as to whether provisions of U.P. Act 13 of 1972 are applicable? The averments made by the landlord that the provisions of U.P. Act 13 of 1972 are applicable was not specifically denied by the tenant-revisionist. Therefore, it was held that provisions of U.P. Act 13 of 1972 are applicable. The issue No.3 was framed on the point of default in payment of rent. The court below held that the tenant-revisionist defaulted in payment of rent. The issue no.4 was framed as to whether the tenant-revisionist is entitled for the benefit of the provisions of Section 20(4) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972 ? The court below held that since arrears of rent was not paid by the tenant-revisionist on the first date of hearing, therefore, the benefit of Section 20(4) of the Act is not available to the tenant-revisionist. The issue no.5 was framed as to whether the notice determining the tenancy was validly given. The court below recorded the finding that the tenancy was determined by a valid notice. The issue no.6 was framed as to grant of relief. On the basis of findings of fact recorded on issue nos. 1 to 5 the court below found that the SCC Suit deserves to be decreed.

3. Aggrieved with the impugned judgment and decree dated 27.03.2019, the tenant-revisionist has filed the present revision under Section 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act,1887 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act, 1887).

Submission on behalf of tenant-revisionist

4. Sri Atul Dayal, learned counsel for the tenant-revisionist submits as under:-

(i) The impugned judgment dated 27.03.2019, passed by the Additional District Judge/Judge Small Cause Court No.13, Kanpur Nagar, is without jurisdiction inasmuch as the portion let out by the landlord-respondent to the tenant-revisionist is an open accommodation which is not a building within the meaning of Section 3(i) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972 and, therefore, the Judge Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction under Section 15 of the Act, 1887, to take cognizance of such a suit for eviction of tenant of an open land which stand ousted by Clause 4 of the 2nd Schedule to Section 15 of the Act, 1887. Reliance is placed upon judgments of this Court in Krishna Bhagwan Vs. District Judge, Bareilly and others, 1999(2) ARC 248 (Para Nos.6 to 11), Raj Kishore Tandon and others Vs. District Judge, Etawah and others, 2006(1) ARC 880 (Para 4) and the judgment of Hon'ble Supreme Court in Surya Kumar Govindjee Vs. Krishnammal and others, (1990) 4 SCC 343 (Para 17).

(ii) Since, the disputed property is not a building, therefore, under Section 15 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887, the Judge Small Cause Court, lacked inherent jurisdiction to entertain the S.C.C. Suit No.67 of 2016. When a court lacks inherent jurisdiction, Section 21 C.P.C. shall have no application. Reliance is placed upon judgments of Hon'ble Supreme Court in Harshad Chiman Lal Modi Vs. DLF Universal Ltd. and Another, (2005) 7 SCC 791 (Para Nos. 30 to 33) and in Hasham Abbas Sayyad Vs. Usman Abbas Sayyad and others, (2007) 2 SCC 355 (Paragraph Nos. 22 and 23).

Submission on behalf of landlord-respondent

5. Sri Manish Tandon, learned counsel for the landlord-respondents submits as under:-

(i) The accommodation let out by the landlord-respondent to the tenant-revisionist is part and parcel of House No.76/184, Sabji Mandi, Kanpur Nagar, which is a building within the meaning of Section 3(i) of of U.P. Act 13 of 1972.

(ii) Without prejudice to the above, the tenant-revisionist has not taken any objection as has now been taken in the submissions aforenoted, either in his written statement or at any stage before the court below. Therefore, such an objection can not be allowed to be taken before this Court in revision under Section 25 of the Act, 1887. Reliance is placed upon the judgment of Hon'ble Supreme Court in Om Prakash Agarawal Vs. Vishan Dayal and another, 2018 (3) ARC 652 (Paragraph Nos. 56, 59, 61 and 62) and a judgment of this Court in Madhyamik Shiksha Parishad Vs. IInd Additional District Judge, Allahabad, (2010) 2 ARC 396 (Paragraph Nos. 10,11 and 12).

6. The learned counsel for the tenant-revisionist has not made any other submissions before me except those aforenoted.

Discussion and findings

7. The submission made by learned counsels for the parties give rise to the following questions for determination in this revision:-

(a) Whether a small roofless portion of House No.76/184, Sabji Mandi, Kanpur Nagar, with four pucca tanks for feeding cattle and surrounded by boundary wall let out by the landlord-respondent to the tenant-revisionist, is a building within the meaning of Section 3(i) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972 ?

(b) Whether the objection on the point of jurisdiction raised by the tenant-revisionist for the first time in the present revision can not be allowed to be raised in view of the provisions of Section 21 of Civil Procedure Code ?

Question No.(a)

8. The word "building" has been defined in Section 3(i) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972, as under:-

"In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires-

i) "Building", means a residential or non-residential roofed structure and includes-

(i) any land (including any garden), garages and out-houses, appurtenant to such building ;

(ii) any furniture supplied by the landlord for use in such building ;

(iii) any fittings and fixtures affixed to such building for the more beneficial enjoyment thereof ;"

9. Section 15 of the Act, 1887, provides for jurisdiction of Courts of Small Causes. Second Schedule to Section 15 (1) of the Act 1887, provides for suits excepted for the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes. Clause 4 of the 2nd Schedule to Section 15(1) of the Act, 1887, is relevant for the purposes of present case which is reproduced below:-

"Section 15(4)- a suit for the possession of immovable property or for the recovery of an interest in such property, but not including a suit by a lessor for the eviction of a lessee from a building after the determination of his lease and for the recovery from him of compensation for the use and occupation of that building after such determination of lease.

Explanation- For the purposes of this Article, the expression 'building' means a residential or non-residential roofed structure, and includes any land (including any garden), garages, out-houses, appurtenant to such building, and also includes any fittings and fixtures affixed to the building for the more beneficial enjoyment thereof."*

10. In the case of Harish Chandra and another Vs. Mohd. Ismail and others, (1990)4 SCC 493 (para 4), Hon'ble Supreme Court observed that open land would not be a building within the meaning of expression "building" under Section 3(i) of the U.P. Act 1972. In Sube Deen and others Vs. Satyawati Devi and another 1996 (28) ALR 415, a learned Single Judge of this Court held that "Adda" land used for sale of animals would not be a building within the meaning of Section 3(i) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972. In Ashok Kapil Vs. Sana Ullah (Dead) and others (1996) 6 SCC 342 (paras 6,10 & 11) Hon'ble Supreme Court held that a structure without roof cannot fall within the ambit of the definition of building under Section 3(i) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972, but where a structure remained a roofed building when it became vacant and the roof was later dismantled by the owner, so on the date of allotment order it remained roofless, would constitute a building. In paras 10 & 11 of the judgment in Ashok Kapil (supra), Hon'ble Supreme Court held as under:-

"10. Jurisdiction of the District Magistrate, therefore, is in respect of a building which is either vacant or which "has fallen vacant" or is about to fall vacant. If a structure was a building as per the definition at the time when it fell vacant, the District Magistrate, no doubt, gets jurisdiction to initiate proceedings for passing allotment order. But would he lose jurisdiction merely because the structure became roofless subsequently? No doubt, if we go by the definition in Section 3(i) stricto sensu, the structure without roof will cease to be building. But a roofless structure can still continue to be building outside the fixed borders of the definition. It is now necessary to notice that Section 3 of the Act, which contains all the definition clauses, prefaces with the words "unless the context otherwise requires". Thus the legislature which fixed contours for different expressions through the definition clauses has also provided sufficient play at the joints for contextual adaptations. In other words, contextual variations are not impermissible under the Act if such variations are necessary to achieve the object of the enactment. Outside the definition in Section 3 of the Act the word 'building' need not necessarily be a roofed structure for even roofless structures are, sometimes, used as buildings in certain circumstances.

*11. Stroud's Judicial Dictionary (Vol.I of the 5th edn.) states that "what is a building must always be a question of degree and circumstances". Quoting from Victoria City Corpn. V. Bishop of Vancouver Island (1921)2 AC 384, (AC at p. 390), the celebrated lexicographer commented that " the ordinary and natural meaning of the word building includes the fabric and the ground on which it stands". In black's Law dictionary (5th Edn) the meaning of the building is given as "A structure or edifice enclosing a space within its walls, and usually, but not necessarily, covered with a roof" (emphasis supplied) The said description is recognition of the fact that roof is not necessary and indispensable adjunct for a building because there can be roofless buildings. So a building, even after losing the roof, can continue to be a building in its general meaning. Taking recourse to such general meaning in the present context would help to prevent a mischief."

(Emphasis supplied by me)

11. In Krishna Bhagwan's case (supra) Hon'ble Single judge held that a suit for eviction of a tenant of an open land is beyond the jurisdiction of Small Cause Courts. In the said case an open land was let out. In Raj Kishore Tandon (supra), Hon'ble Single Judge explained the words "appurtenant" as used in Section 3(i) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972, and held as under:-

"3. Under Section 3(i) of the Act building is defined to mean a residential or non-residential roofed structure and includes-

(i) any land (including any garden) garages and out houses, appurtenant to such building;

4. Land appurtenant means so much land, which is necessary for proper enjoyment of the constructed portion. If in any land of several acres a small accommodation is constructed, the said constructed accommodation cannot be allotted alongwith the entire land of several acres.

6. According to the allegations in the writ petition the portion, which has been allotted, contains the construction over an area of about 200 square yards and the open land, which is shown to have been allotted and mentioned in the map, annexed alongwith Form B is about 20 bighas. Inspector had reported that servant quarters were in possession of other persons. Even those servant quarters have also been included in Form B. Inspector further found that Chaukidar employed by landlord was in possession of the portion in dispute.

7. In my opinion firstly the land, which has been allotted could never be allotted as the entire land can not be said to be the land appurtenant. It was virtually allotment of open land, which is not permissible. Secondly the allotment order is utterly illegal as no notice to the landlord was given after declaration of vacancy and before allotment as required by Rule 9 (3) of the Rules framed under the Act. Vacancy declaration and allotment was made by one and the same order. Rule 9(3) of the Rules framed under the Act is mandatory. The purpose of the said rule is to provide opportunity to the landlord to file release application if he so desires. The allotment order was therefore utterly illegal (vide R.L.Poddar Vs. A.D.J 2003 (2) ARC 629, C.K.Nagarkar Vs. A.D.J 2004 (2) ARC 349 and Kusum Lata Yadav Vs. A.D.J 2004 (2) ARC 789)."

(Emphasis supplied by me)

12. In Govardhan Goyal and others Vs. Rishi Raj Singhal, 2013 (96) ALR 806 (Paras 23 to 28), a Bench of this Court held as under:-

"23. It is settled in law that the jurisdiction of a court has to be determined on the basis of the plaint allegations alone and on the defence taken in written statement. In Abdulla Bin Ali Vs. Galappa AIR 1985 SC 577 it has been clearly laid down that allegations in the plaint alone are relevant for deciding about the jurisdiction of the court. Thus, in view of the plaint allegations, the suit is for eviction from a building and for damages for its use and occupation. Accordingly, it is not excluded from the jurisdiction of the Small Causes Court.

24. It is but natural that when the landlord allowed a building to be put up on the open plot of land the character of the premises let out would automatically change with the raising of the constructions over it and the plot of land would not remain an open piece of land.

25. A learned Single Judge of this Court in M/s. Kedar Nath Baij Nath and others Vs. Shri Ram Chandraji, Shri Jankiji, Shri Lakshmanji, Virajman Mandir and others 1991(1) ARC 420 has clearly laid down that a suit for eviction of a tenant in respect of the property where initially land alone was leased out but over which a building was constructed with the permission of the landlord, would be cognizable by a court of small causes.

26. In Sardar Gurcharan Singh Vs. Ist Additional District Judge, Kanpur and others 1994(1) ARC 546 His Lordship of this Court held that where a suit is filed treating the property as a building seeking eviction of the tenant, the suit would lie before the Court of Small Causes.

27. In simple terms, the nature of the property from which the eviction is claimed in the suit is material and not the nature of the property that may have been let out for the purposes of determining the jurisdiction of the Small Causes Court.

28. In view of the above, the revisionists can not escape from the jurisdiction of the Small Causes Court as the suit is essentially one for their eviction from the 'building' and not simplicitor from the land leased out."
(Emphasis supplied by me)

13. In Ichchapur Industrial Co-operative Society Ltd. Vs. the Competent Authority, Oil & Natural Gas Commission & Anr. , (1997)2 SCC 42 (para 27), Hon'ble Supreme Court observed that where the definition clause is preceded by the words "unless the context otherwise requires", the definition has to be interpreted in the light of the context in which it is used. The aforesaid phrase has been similarly interpreted by Hon'ble Supreme Court in cases arising from rent matters. In K.V. Muttu Vs. Angamuthu Ammal (1997) 2 SCC 53 (paras 10 to 13), Damadi Lal Vs. Parashram (1976) 4 SCC 855 (para 12) and Ashok Kapil (supra).

14. The word "means" and "includes" used in Section 3(i) of the Act implies that the definition is exhaustive with respect to "residential or non residential roofed structure" unless the context otherwise requires but it is illustrative with respect to the inclusion part given in sub clauses i, ii and iii. The phrase "unless the context otherwise requires" indicates that while construing, interpreting and applying the definition clause, the Court has to keep in view the legislative mandate and intent and to consider whether the context requires otherwise. Where the definition is preceded with the phrase "unless the context otherwise requires" the connotation is that normally the definition as given in Section should be applied and given effect to but it may be departed from if the context otherwise requires.

15. From bare perusal of the definition of "building" in Section 3(i) of the U.P. Act 13 of 1972, it is clear that unless the context otherwise requires, "building" means a residential or non residential roofed structure and includes any land (including any garden), garages and out-houses, appurtenant to such building; any furniture supplied by the landlord for use in such building and any fittings and fixtures affixed to such building for the more beneficial enjoyment thereof. As held by Hon'ble Supreme Court in Ashok Kapil (supra) a structure or edifice enclosing a space within its walls, and usually, but not necessarily, covered with a roof is a building. Roof is not necessary and indispensable adjunct for a building because there can be roofless buildings. The "Building" as defined in Section 3 (i) is a residential or non-residential roofed structure and includes any land (including any garden), garages and out-houses, appurtenant to such building. Therefore, an open land including any garden, garages and out-houses, appurtenant to a roofed structure for its beneficial engagement shall be a building within the meaning of Section 3(i) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972.

16. In the present set of facts the small accommodation let out by the landlord-respondent to the defendant-revisionist is an integral part of the building bearing municipal No.76/184, Sabji Mandi, Kanpur Nagar. Therefore, the disputed accommodation, even though is roofless; is part of the house in question. Consequently, the disputed accommodation let out by landlord-respondent to the tenant-revisionist is "building" as defined under Section 3(i) of the U.P. Act 13 of 1972. Question no. (a) is answered accordingly.

17. In view of my answer to the question (a) there is no need to decide question (b) yet it would be suffice to observe that admittedly the competence of the court below to decide the SCC Suit in question was not raised by the tenant-revisionist before the court below. Therefore, in view of the provisions of Section 21 of the Civil Procedure Code and the law settled by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Om Prakash Agarawal (supra), such an objection can not be raised at this stage in Revision under Section 25 of the Act, 1887, inasmuch as such an objection could have been taken by the tenant-revisionist in the Court of first instance at the earliest possible opportunity.

18. For all the reasons aforestated, it is held that the disputed accommodation is a building within the meaning of Section 3(i) of the U.P. Act 13 of 1972 which was let out by the landlord-respondent to the tenant-revisionist and the tenant-revisionist defaulted in payment of rent resulting in determination of tenancy. Therefore, the SCC Suit for eviction has been lawfully decreed by the impugned judgment. The findings recorded by the court below on the issues before it are the findings of fact which do not suffer from any perversity. Therefore, these findings of fact can not be interfered with.

19. For all the reasons aforestated, I do not find any merit in this revision. Therefore, the revision is dismissed. However, there shall be no order as to costs.

APPELLATE JURISDICTION
CIVIL SIDE

BEFORE

THE HON'BLE DR. KAUSHAL JAYENDRA THAKER, J.

FAFO No. 3730 of 2008

National Insurance Company ...Appellant
Versus
Smt. Pushpa Devi & Ors.
...Claimants/Opposite Parties

Counsel for the Appellant:
Sri Radhey Shyam

Counsel for the Opposite Parties:
Sri Pradyumn Kumar

A. Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 - Section 163-A – Murder - when claim maintainable - 'murder simpliciter', claim not maintainable - but if the death was a result of an act to ensure commission of another act of felony, while the vehicle was in use, then claim would be maintainable.

Held:-If the Court comes to a conclusion that it was a case of 'murder simpliciter' that is, where the perpetrators of the crime had the intention of committing murder only, then, the claim under Section 163-A of the Motor Vehicles Act would not be maintainable – But, if the Court comes to a conclusion that it was a case of an accidental murder that is where the perpetrators of the act did not have any motive against victim but the death was a result of an act to ensure commission of another act of felony, while the vehicle was in use, then, the claim under Section 163A of the Motor Vehicles Act would be maintainable. (Para 14)

Just because the truck was not looted, it cannot be said that the claim petition was not maintainable. It is proved that the vehicle was involved and just because he was murdered, it cannot be a ground for rejection of the claim petition -- incident occurred due to use of Motor Vehicle -- The deceased was a driver on the said vehicle and was on duty and during the course of employment, this incident occurred. (Delivered by Hon'ble Dr. Kaushal Jayendra Thaker, J.)

1. Heard Sri Radhey Shyam, learned counsel for the appellant and Sri Pradyumn Kumar, learned counsel for the respondent-claimants. None appeared on behalf of owner.

2. This appeal, at the behest of the National Insurance Co. Ltd., challenges the judgment and award dated 4.9.2008 passed by Motor Accident Claims Tribunal/Special Judge, Mainpuri (hereinafter referred to as 'Tribunal') in

M.A.C.P. No. 268 of 2002 awarding a sum of Rs.1,77,000/- with interest at the rate of 8% as compensation in favour of the respondent-claimants.

3. Factual scenario as it emerges for the purpose of this Court is that the deceased and one another person was found dead in Truck No. UP-84 2403 when they were going to load iron rods from Kanpur to Mainpuri. At about 12.45 p.m. on 7.6.2002, the owner was informed about this fact and he lodged a First Information Report. The claimants preferred claim petition claiming that the deceased was 35 years of age and was earning Rs. 4500/- per month and they had become destitute and, therefore, claimed Rs.17,50,000/- with 18% rate of interest.

4. The respondent-owner appeared before the Tribunal, accepted the age of the deceased, that the deceased was employed at his place, his vehicle was insured with Insurance Company and that his driver had proper driving license. The Insurance Company appeared before the Tribunal and filed its reply of negation contending that no cause of action arose against them that the deceased was not 35 years of age as his age certificate was not filed, that there was breach of policy condition.

5. The Tribunal on 31.1.2006 framed four issues and returned the findings in favour of the claimants and against the Insurance Company holding that the claim petition was maintainable and allowed the same on the basis of evidence of P.W.1 and P.W.2 and held that the deceased was in employment. The witness withstood the cross-examination by Insurance Company. The Tribunal placed reliance on the decision of the Apex Court in Case of Rita Devi (Infra) and held in favour of the claimants. As far issue No. 2 is concerned, there is no dispute that the vehicle was insured, it had proper permit and that the documents were in order and, therefore, the said contention has not been raised. As for as issue No. 3 relating to license of the deceased-driver is concerned. the Insurance Company has disputed its liability contending that the driving license was fake as proved in M.A.C.P. No. 280 of 2002 and they should be exonerated. In view of this, the appeal requires to be decided.

6. The learned counsel for the appellant has contended that the murder cannot be said to be giving cause of action to file a claim under the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 (hereinafter referred to as 'Act, 1988'). It is further contended that the compensation of Rs. 1,77,000/- is on the higher side. The truck was neither looted and despite that the Tribunal wrongly decided in favour of the claimants. It is further submitted that the license of the deceased-driver was not produced. It is further submitted that in Motor Accident Claims No. 280 of 2002 arising out of the same accident, the Tribunal held that the license was fake. This aspect should have been considered by the Tribunal.

7. Sri Pradyumn Kumar, learned counsel for the claimants has relied on the decisions in Rita Devi and others Vs. New India Assurance Co. Ltd. and another, (2000) 5 SCC 113, Oriental Insurance Co. Ltd. Vs. Smt. Mainaz and Others, 2014 (3) T.A.C. 408 (All.) and Kalim Khan and others Vs. Fimidabee and others, 2018 (3) T.A.C. 337 (SC) to contend that as per the provisions of Section 166 of the Act, 1988, the involvement of the vehicle is proved. There is no breach of policy conditions and as contended that the compensation awarded requires to be re-evaluated as no amount under the head of future loss of income has been granted and that the amount under the head of non pecuniary damages is on the lower side.

8. So as to appreciate the contentions raised by the counsels for the parties, this Court feels that the provision of Sections 147 and 166 of the Act, 1988 be reproduced here which are as follows:

"147 Requirements of policies and limits of liability. --

(1) In order to comply with the requirements of this Chapter, a policy of insurance must be a policy which--

(a) is issued by a person who is an authorised insurer; and

(b) insures the person or classes of persons specified in the policy to the extent specified in sub-section (2)--

(i) against any liability which may be incurred by him in respect of the death of or bodily injury to any person, including owner of the goods or his authorised representative carried in the vehicle] or damage to any property of a third party caused by or arising out of the use of the vehicle in a public place;

(ii) against the death of or bodily injury to any passenger of a public service vehicle caused by or arising out of the use of the vehicle in a public place:
Provided that a policy shall not be required--

(i) to cover liability in respect of the death, arising out of and in the course of his employment, of the employee of a person insured by the policy or in respect of bodily injury sustained by such an employee arising out of and in the course of his employment other than a liability arising under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (8 of 1923) in respect of the death of, or bodily injury to, any such employee--

(a) engaged in driving the vehicle, or

(b) if it is a public service vehicle engaged as conductor of the vehicle or in examining tickets on the vehicle, or

(c) if it is a goods carriage, being carried in the vehicle, or

(ii) to cover any contractual liability.

Explanation. --For the removal of doubts, it is hereby declared that the death of or bodily injury to any person or damage to any property of a third party shall be deemed to have been caused by or to have arisen out of, the use of a vehicle in a public place notwithstanding that the person who is dead or injured or the property which is damaged was not in a public place at the time of the accident, if the act or omission which led to the accident occurred in a public place.

(2) Subject to the proviso to sub-section (1), a policy of insurance referred to in sub-section (1), shall cover any liability incurred in respect of any accident, up to the following limits, namely:--

(a) save as provided in clause (b), the amount of liability incurred;

(b) in respect of damage to any property of a third party, a limit of rupees six thousand:

Provided that any policy of insurance issued with any limited liability and in force, immediately before the commencement of this Act, shall continue to be effective for a period of four months after such commencement or till the date of expiry of such policy whichever is earlier.

(3) A policy shall be of no effect for the purposes of this Chapter unless and until there is issued by the insurer in favour of the person by whom the policy is effected a certificate of insurance in the prescribed form and containing the prescribed particulars of any condition subject to which the policy is issued and of any other prescribed matters; and different forms, particulars and matters may be prescribed in different cases.

(4) Where a cover note issued by the insurer under the provisions of this Chapter or the rules made thereunder is not followed by a policy of insurance within the prescribed time, the insurer shall, within seven days of the expiry of the period of the validity of the cover note, notify the fact to the registering authority in whose records the vehicle to which the cover note relates has been registered or to such other authority as the State Government may prescribe.

(5) Notwithstanding anything contained in any law for the time being in force, an insurer issuing a policy of insurance under this section shall be liable to indemnify the person or classes of persons specified in the policy in respect of any liability which the policy purports to cover in the case of that person or those classes of persons"

166. Application for compensation.--

(1) An application for compensation arising out of an accident of the nature specified in sub-section (1) of section 165 may be made--

(a) by the person who has sustained the injury; or

(b) by the owner of the property; or

(c) where death has resulted from the accident, by all or any of the legal representatives of the deceased; or

(d) by any agent duly authorised by the person injured or all or any of the legal representatives of the deceased, as the case may be: Provided that where all the legal representatives of the deceased have not joined in any such application for compensation, the application shall be made on behalf of or for the benefit of all the legal representatives of the deceased and the legal representatives who have not so joined, shall be impleaded as respondents to the application.

(2) Every application under sub-section (1) shall be made, at the option of the claimant, either to the Claims Tribunal having jurisdiction over the area in which the accident occurred, or to the Claims Tribunal within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the claimant resides or carries on business or within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the defendant resides, and shall be in such form and contain such particulars as may be prescribed: Provided that where no claim for compensation under section 140 is made in such application, the application shall contain a separate statement to that effect immediately before the signature of the applicant.[] 3(4) The Claims Tribunal shall treat any report of accidents forwarded to it under sub-section (6) of section 158 as an application for compensation under this Act."

9. The decision in National Insurance Company Limited Vs. Smt. Kusuma Devi, 2007 T.A.C. 729 (All.) relied on by the counsel for the claimant before the Tribunal and nothing in the rebuttal has been proved by the Insurance Company. The owner in his written statement contended that the vehicle was being driven by a qualified driver and, therefore, the said ground that the driver did not have proper driving license cannot be accepted. The Tribunal has held that it was the duty of the Insurance Company to prove the negative. The Tribunal has rightly relied on the judgment in Smt. Kusuma Devi (Supra) as the deceased had died. The widow submitted that she did not have the duplicate copy of the driving license.

10. It is further contended that the owner in his reply has seen the license of the deceased and the judgment in M.A.C.P. No. 280 of 2002 was never placed before the Tribunal nor any rebuttal evidence was laid before the Tribunal. The submission here about M.A.C. P. No. 280 of 2002 cannot be found from the record of the Tribunal and just because in that matter some adverse inference was drawn, in this matter, the said cannot be made applicable unless it is proved that the driver did not have proper driving license or that the findings of M.A.C.P. No. 280 of 2002 were pressed into service. I do not think that the finding of the Tribunal required to be interfered with. The Insurance Company could have very well proved the negative. As far as the policy is concerned, the driver was covered in the said policy. There was proper permit. Just because the license was not produced by the claimants and a so called verification report of one Vineet Jain was produced without examining him on oath, a copy of the verification report and the appended photocopy of license of Chhavi Singh goes to show the license was issued by R.T.O., Mainpuri and the report of licensing authority of Agra was produced which shows that licensing authority from Agra had not issued license in name of Chhavi Singh. The Judgment of this Court in the Case of Smt. Kusma Devi (Supra) has been rightly relied by the Tribunal.

11. I am supported in my view by the decision in Oriental Insurance Company Limited Vs. Poonam Kesarwani and others, 2008 LawSuit (All) 1557 wherein the Court has held as under:

"9. The question is whether the letter/certificate issued by Regional Transport Officer, Raipur (Chhatisgarh) can be considered to be a public document as defined in section 74 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, which required no proof or it was required to be proved by the person producing it before the tribunal by examining witnesses? A public document is a document that is made for the purpose of the public making use of it. When a public officer is under a duty to make some entries in the official book or register, the entries made therein are admissible in evidence to prove the truth of the facts entered in the official book or register. The entries are evidence of the particular facts which was the duty of the officer to record. The law reposes confidence in the public officer entrusted with public duties and the law presumes that public officers will discharge their duties with responsibility. A driving licence is issued under Chapter II of the Act. Section 26 of the Act makes it mandatory for the State Government to maintain a register known as State Register of Driving Licence. The entries with regard to issuance or renewal of driving licence by the licensing authorities which contains particulars of licence and the licence holder are entered by the Regional Transport Officer/the licensing authority in discharge of their official duty enjoined by law. The State Register of Driving Licence is record of the acts of public officers. The State Register of Driving Licence is a public record. It can be inspected by any person. We are of the considered opinion that the State Register of Driving Licence is a public document as defined by Section 74 of the Evidence Act.

10. Section 76 of the Evidence Act gives the right to obtain a certified copy of a public document which any person has a right to inspect on payment of fee. A certified copy of the entries made in the public record is required to be issued on payment of fee in Form-54 as laid down by Rule 150(2). Form-54 being a certified copy of a public document, namely, the State Register of Driving Licence, need not be proved by examining a witness. Once a certified copy of the entries made in the register maintained under section 26(1) read with Rule 23 is issued in Form-54 it is admissible in evidence under 77 of the Evidence Act, and no further proof of Form-54 by oral evidence by examining witnesses is required.

11. In the case in hand the information has not been furnished by the registering authority in Form-54. It had been provided in the following manner which is extracted below:-

"(Hindi matter omitted)

Sri M. Ibrahim

12. The aforesaid information is in the form of a letter written to the investigator appointed by the insurance company. It cannot be deemed to be a certificate or certified copy in Form-54 of the Rules. Deposit of fee would not convert the letter into a certificate under Rule 150. Therefore, the aforesaid letter issued by Regional Transport Officer, Raipur (Chhatisgarh) was required to be proved by the insurance company before the tribunal by oral evidence by examining witnesses. The insurance company had failed to lead any evidence to prove the aforesaid letter by examining witnesses before the tribunal. The tribunal rightly refused to place reliance on the letter dated 20.4.2005.

13. The learned counsel for the appellant has urged that the application filed by the insurance company before the tribunal on 19.7.2008 was illegally rejected. The application filed by the appellant under Order 12 Rule 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the effect that the claimant and the owner of the vehicle may be directed to either admit or deny the letter dated 20.4.2005 was rightly rejected by the tribunal on 19.7.2008 as the burden of proof was on the insurance company to prove that the driving licence of the driver of the offending truck was fake but the insurance company failed to discharge its burden. There is yet another to uphold the order of the tribunal dated 19.7.2008. Under Rule 221 of The Uttar Pradesh Motor Vehicle Rules, 1998 only some of the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure had been applied to the summary proceedings before the Motor Accident Claims Tribunal. The provisions of Order 12 Rule 2 having not been made applicable to the proceedings before the tribunal, the application filed by the insurance company was not maintainable.

14. The learned counsel for the appellant has lastly urged that the application filed by the appellant under Section 170 of the Act had illegally been rejected on 2.9.2006 by the tribunal and the appellant is also challenging this order in the appeal. We have examined the relief claimed in this appeal but we do not find that order dated 2.9.2006 had been challenged by the appellant. After the application under Section 170 was rejected it was open to the appellant to challenge the order under the supervisory jurisdiction of this Court under Article 227 of the Constitution of India. But the order dated 2.9.2006 cannot be challenged in an appeal, as an appeal under Section 173(1) of the Act lies only against the award of the Motor Accident Claims Tribunal and the order under Section 170 not being an award, no appeal would be maintainable against such an order.

15. For the aforesaid reasons, we do not find any merit in this appeal. The appeal fails and is accordingly dismissed."

12. I am even supported in my view by the decision in Ram Chandra Singh Vs. Rajaram and Others, AIR 2018 SC 3789 wherein it has been held that the Insurance Company did not examine any witness and did not come out with a case that the owner of the vehicle was aware that the license of the driver was a doubtful license and, therefore, it cannot be said that there was any breach of policy condition as envisaged in Section 147 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988.

13. Just because the truck was not looted, it cannot be said that the claim petition was not maintainable. It is proved that the vehicle was involved and just because he was murdered, it cannot be a ground for rejection of the claim petition.

14. This Court in Smt. Mainaz and Others (Supra) has held as under:

9. To answer the aforesaid question it would be useful to examine the decision of the apex court in Rita Devi's case (supra) which has been relied by the Tribunal. In Rita Devi's case, the facts of the case were that an auto rickshaw driver was murdered in the process of stealing the auto-rickshaw. The question before the apex court was as to whether the death of auto rickshaw driver was on account of an accident arising out of the use of motor vehicle and, if so, whether a claim under section 163-A of the Motor Vehicle Act was maintainable. While deciding the said case, the apex court observed that from a reading of the provisions of section 163-A, a victim or his heirs are entitled to claim from the owner / Insurance Company a compensation for death or permanent disablement suffered due to accident arising out of the use of the motor vehicle, without having to prove wrongful act or neglect or default of any one. It was observed that if it is established by the claimants that the death or disablement was caused due to an accident arising out of the use of motor vehicle then they will be entitled for payment of compensation. As to whether murder, in a given situation, could be said to be caused due to an accident arising out of the use of motor vehicle, the apex court observed as follows:-

"10. The question, therefore is, can a murder be an accident in any given case? There is no doubt that "murder", as it is understood, in the common parlance is a felonious act where death is caused with intent and the perpetrators of that act normally have a motive against the victim for such killing. But there are also instances where murder can be by accident on a given set of facts. The difference between a "murder" which is not an accident and a "murder" which is an accident, depends on the proximity of the cause of such murder. In our opinion, if the dominant intention of the Act of felony is to kill any particular person then such killing is not an accidental murder but is a murder simpliciter, while if the cause of murder or act of murder was originally not intended and the same was caused in furtherance of any other felonious act then such murder is an accidental murder."

Thereafter, the apex court proceeded to hold as follows:-

"14. Applying the principles laid down in the above cases to the facts of the case in hand, we find that the deceased, a driver of the autorickshaw, was dutybound to have accepted the demand of fare-paying passengers to transport them to the place of their destination. During the course of this duty, if the passengers had decided to commit an act of felony of stealing the autorickshaw and in the course of achieving the said object of stealing the autorickshaw, they had to eliminate the driver of the autorickshaw then it cannot but be said that the death so caused to the driver of the autorickshaw was an accidental murder. The stealing of the autorickshaw was the object of the felony and the murder that was caused in the said process of stealing the autorickshaw is only incidental to the act of stealing of the autorickshaw. Therefore, it has to be said that on the facts and circumstances of this case the death of the deceased (Dasarath Singh) was caused accidentally in the process of committing theft of the autorickshaw.

18. In the instant case, as we have noticed the facts, we have no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that the murder of the deceased (Dasarath Singh) was due to an accident arising out of the use of motor vehicle. Therefore, the trial court rightly came to the conclusion that the claimants were entitled for compensation as claimed by them and the High Court was wrong in coming to the conclusion that the death of Dasarath Singh was not caused by an accident involving the use of motor vehicle."

10. In the light of the law laid down by the apex court, in the instant case, what is, therefore, to be seen is whether from the evidence brought on record, it is proved that the death of Naseem Khan was as an incident of loot/ robbery/ dacoity, that is an "accidental murder", or "murder simpliciter". If this Court comes to a conclusion that it was a case of murder simpliciter that is, where the perpetrators of the crime had the intention of committing murder only, then, the claim under Section 163-A of the Motor Vehicles Act would not be maintainable. But, if this Court comes to a conclusion that it was a case of an accidental murder that is where the perpetrators of the act did not have any motive against victim but the death was a result of an act to ensure commission of another act of felony, while the vehicle was in use, then, the claim under Section 163A of the Motor Vehicles Act would be maintainable.

15. In that view of the aforesaid factual data, the contention that the petition was not maintainable cannot be accepted because there is an involvement of vehicle. The incident occurred due to use of Motor Vehicle. The deceased was a driver on the said vehicle and was on duty and during the course of employment, this incident occurred. Hence, the said ground fails and the findings of the Tribunal are upheld.

16. The Motor Vehicles Act is a beneficial piece of legislation. It has been time and again held that trappings of civil and criminal proceedings cannot be applied in a very strict manner. I am fortified in my view by the decisions in Sunita and others Vs. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corporation and Another, 2019 LawSuit (SC) 190, Mangla Ram Vs. Oriental Insurance Company Limited and Others, 2018 (5) SCC 656 and Vimla Devi and others Vs. National Insurance Company Limited and another, (2019) 2 SCC 186

17. The compensation is ordered to be reassessed in view of the submission of Sri Pradyumn Kumar and in view of the decision in F.A.F.O. No.2389 of 2016 (National Insurance Co. Ltd. Vs. Smt. Vidyawati Devi And 2 Others) decided on 27.7.2016.

18. The deceased was 35 years of age at the time of accident and was survived by 6 dependants. The Tribunal has granted a sum of Rs.1,77,000/- with 8% rate of interest. The Tribunal considered the income of the deceased to be Rs.15,000/- per year and deducted 1/3rd holding that he would be spending that much amount on himself and granted multiplier of 17 and added Rs. 7,000/- for non-pecuniary damages. This amount requires to be re-evaluated. A driver in the year 2002 when the accident occurred can be safely held to be earning Rs.3,000/- per month. The owner did not give any certificate about his income, hence, Rs.3000/- per month would be proper amount. The submission counsel for the appellant that his age should be considered to be 50 years cannot be accepted as the Tribunal has relied on the post-mortem report at Exhibit 19/G. Hence his as considered by the Tribunal to be 35 years requires to be accepted and no fault can be found on this finding of fact by the Tribunal.

19. Hence, the income of the deceased is held to be Rs.3,000/- per month namely Rs.36,000/- per year, to which as the deceased was below 40 years of age, 40 % of the income i.e. Rs. 14,400/- requires to be added as future income of the deceased in view of the decision in National Insurance Company Limited Vs. Pranay Sethi and Others, 2017 0 Supreme (SC) 1050 which would come to Rs.36,000+ 14,400 = 50,400/-. Deduction towards his personal expenses would be 1/3rd as he was survived by six dependants out of which three were minor. Hence, after deduction of 1/3rd, the annual datum figure available to the family would be Rs.33,600/-. As the deceased was in the age bracket of 31-35, the applicable multiplier would be 16 in view of the decision of the Apex Court in Sarla Verma Vs. Delhi Transport Corporation, (2009) 6 SCC 121. In addition to that, Rs.70,000/- is granted under the head of non-pecuniary damages in view of the decision in Pranay Sethi (Supra). Hence, the claimants are entitled to a total compensation of Rs.33,600 x 16 + 70,000 = 6,07,600/-.

20. However, the rate of interest which is 8% would be 7.5% in view of the latest decision of the Apex Court in National Insurance Co. Ltd. Vs. Mannat Johal and Others, 2019 (2) T.A.C. 705 (S.C.) wherein the Apex Court has held as under :

"13. The aforesaid features equally apply to the contentions urged on behalf of the claimants as regards the rate of interest. The Tribunal had awarded interest at the rate of 12% p.a. but the same had been too high a rate in comparison to what is ordinarily envisaged in these matters.

The High Court, after making a substantial enhancement in the award amount, modified the interest component at a reasonable rate of 7.5% p.a. and we find no reason to allow the interest in this matter at any rate higher than that allowed by High Court."

21. In view of the above, the appeal is partly allowed qua interest. The cross objection is allowed. The amount be deposited within 12 weeks from today with interest at the rate of 7.5% from the date of filing the of claim petition till the amount is deposited.

22. Record and proceedings be sent back to the Tribunal forthwith.

APPELLATE JURISDICTION
CIVIL SIDE

BEFORE

THE HON'BLE DR. KAUSHAL JAYENDRA THAKER, J.

FAFO No. 851 of 1989

New India Assurance Company Ltd.
... Appellant
Versus
Smt. Murti Devi & Anr. ...Respondents

Counsel for the Appellant:
Sri Brijesh Chandra Naik

Counsel for the Respondents:

A. Motor Vehicles Act, 1939 - Section 95 read with Section 92 (A) & Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 - Section 147 of is pari materia to Section 95.

Held: - Learned Tribunal has threadbare discussed the difference in a contract of minimum liability contract as well as of statutory liability and in this case it is proved that where liability is not limited by cogent evidence from the policy itself that for 29 passengers, extra premium of Rs. 348/- was charged. Third party insurance of Rs. 75/- was also charged, and therefore, in light of the decision of those days, the submission that policy was for limited purpose and liability was only Rs.15,000/- cannot be accepted. (Para 5)

Appeal Fails (E-5)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Dr. Kaushal Jayendra Thaker, J.)

1. Heard Sri B. C. Naik, learned counsel for the appellant.

2. By way of this appeal the Insurance Company has felt aggrieved by the judgment and decree dated 10th May, 1989 in Motor Accident Claim Petition No. 92 of 1984 passed by Motor Accident Claims Tribunal/Additional District Judge, Allahabad granting a sum of Rs.33,000/-.

3. Brief facts available from the record are that on 02.07.1984 accident occurred when the deceased was going on his bicycle at that point of time a Truck came rashly and negligently and dashed him and caused his death. Accident is not in dispute, and therefore, the claim petition was filed by the claimant against the driver and owner as well as Insurance Company of offending vehicle. Tribunal after hearing the parties and after taking into account the evidence on record allowed the claim petition and awarded a sum of Rs. 33,000/- in favor of the claimant.

4. The main plank of submission is that under Section 95 (2) Motor Vehicles Act, 1939, the liability of the Insurance Company was limited to Rs. 15,000/- only and the Tribunal has misread the cover-note and therefore, it is submitted that Tribunal committed an error in holding that as extra premium of Rs. 348/- was charged, the liability was unlimited, and as separate charge for the passengers was taken, therefore, it is submitted that this finding is bad as no extra premium was charged for passengers and liability was only to Rs. 15,000/-.

5. The learned Tribunal has threadbare discussed the difference in a contract of minimum liability contract as well as of statutory liability and in this case it is proved that where liability is not limited by cogent evidence from the policy itself that for 29 passengers, extra premium of Rs. 348/- was charged. Third party insurance of Rs. 75/- was also charged, and therefore, in light of the decision of those days, the submission that policy was for limited purpose and liability was only Rs.15,000/- cannot be accepted.

6. Section 95 reads with Section 92 (A) of Motor Vehicles Act, 1939 reads as follows:-

(4) A policy shall be of no effect for the purposes of this Chapter unless and until there is issued by the insurer in favour of the person by whom the policy is effected a certificate of insurance j[* * *] in the precribed form and containing the prescribed particulars of any conditions subject to which the policy is issued and of any other prescribed matters; and different forms, particulars and matters may be prescribed in different cases.

[(4A) Where a cover note issued by the insurer under the provisions of this Chapter or the rules made thereunder is not followed by a policy of insurance within the prescribed time. the insurer shall, within seven days of the expiry of the period of the validity of the cover note, notify the fact to the registering authority in whose records the vehicle to which the cover note relates has been registered or to such other authority as the State Government may prescribe.]

(5) Notwithstanding anything elsewhere contained in any law, a person issuing a policy of insurance under this section shall be liable to indemnify the person or classes of persons specified in the policy in respect of any liability which the policy purports to cover in the case of that person or those classes of persons.

(3) In any claim for compensation under sub-section (1), the claimant shall not be required to plead and establish that the death or permanent disablement in respect of which the claim has been made was due to any wrongful act, neglect or default of the owner or owners of the vehicle or vehicles concerned or of any other person.

7. Section 147 of Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 which is pari materia to Section 95 reads as follows:-

"147 Requirements of policies and limits of liability. --

(1) In order to comply with the requirements of this Chapter, a policy of insurance must be a policy which--

(ii) against the death of or bodily injury to any passenger of a public service vehicle caused by or arising out of the use of the vehicle in a public place:

(b) in respect of damage to any property of a third party, a limit of rupees six thousand:

(5) Notwithstanding anything contained in any law for the time being in force, an insurer issuing a policy of insurance under this section shall be liable to indemnify the person or classes of persons specified in the policy in respect of any liability which the policy purports to cover in the case of that person or those classes of persons.

149. Duty of insurers to satisfy judgments and awards against persons insured in respect of third party risks.--

(1) If, after a certificate of insurance has been issued under sub-section (3) of section 147 in favour of the person by whom a policy has been effected, judgment or award in respect of any such liability as is required to be covered by a policy under clause (b) of sub-section (l) of section 147 (being a liability covered by the terms of the policy) 1[or under the provisions of section 163A] is obtained against any person insured by the policy, then, notwithstanding that the insurer may be entitled to avoid or cancel or may have avoided or cancelled the policy, the insurer shall, subject to the provisions of this section, pay to the person entitled to the benefit of the decree any sum not exceeding the sum assured payable thereunder, as if he were the judgment debtor, in respect of the liability, together with any amount payable in respect of costs and any sum payable in respect of interest on that sum by virtue of any enactment relating to interest on judgments.

(2) No sum shall be payable by an insurer under sub-section (1) in respect of any judgment or award unless, before the commencement of the proceedings in which the judgment or award is given the insurer had notice through the Court or, as the case may be, the Claims Tribunal of the bringing of the proceedings, or in respect of such judgment or award so long as execution is stayed thereon pending an appeal; and an insurer to whom notice of the bringing of any such proceedings is so given shall be entitled to be made a party thereto and to defend the action on any of the following grounds, namely:--

(a) that there has been a breach of a specified condition of the policy, being one of the following conditions, namely:--

(i) a condition excluding the use of the vehicle--

(a) for hire or reward, where the vehicle is on the date of the contract of insurance a vehicle not covered by a permit to ply for hire or reward, or

(b) for organised racing and speed testing, or

(c) for a purpose not allowed by the permit under which the vehicle is used, where the vehicle is a transport vehicle, or

(d) without side-car being attached where the vehicle is a motor cycle; or

(iii) a condition excluding liability for injury caused or contributed to by conditions of war, civil war, riot or civil commotion; or

(b) that the policy is void on the ground that it was obtained by the non-disclosure of a material fact or by a representation of fact which was false in some material particular.

(3) Where any such judgment as is referred to in sub-section (1) is obtained from a Court in a reciprocating country and in the case of a foreign judgment is, by virtue of the provisions of section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (5 of 1908) conclusive as to any matter adjudicated upon by it, the insurer (being an insurer registered under the Insurance Act, 1938 (4 of 1938) and whether or not he is registered under the corresponding law of the reciprocating country) shall be liable to the person entitled to the benefit of the decree in the manner and to the extent specified in sub-section (1), as if the judgment were given by a Court in India: Provided that no sum shall be payable by the insurer in respect of any such judgment unless, before the commencement of the proceedings in which the judgment is given, the insurer had notice through the Court concerned of the bringing of the proceedings and the insurer to whom notice is so given is entitled under the corresponding law of the reciprocating country, to be made a party to the proceedings and to defend the action on grounds similar to those specified in sub-section (2).

(4) Where a certificate of insurance has been issued under sub-section (3) of section 147 to the person by whom a policy has been effected, so much of the policy as purports to restrict the insurance of the persons insured thereby by reference to any condition other than those in clause (b) of sub-section (2) shall, as respects such liabilities as are required to be covered by a policy under clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 147, be of no effect: Provided that any sum paid by the insurer in or towards the discharge of any liability of any person which is covered by the policy by virtue only of this sub-section shall be recoverable by the insurer from that person.

(5) If the amount which an insurer becomes liable under this section to pay in respect of a liability incurred by a person insured by a policy exceeds the amount for which the insurer would apart from the provisions of this section be liable under the policy in respect of that liability, the insurer shall be entitled to recover the excess from that person.

(6) In this section the expression "material fact" and "material particular" means, respectively a fact or particular of such a nature as to influence the judgment of a prudent insurer in determining whether he will take the risk and, if so, at what premium and on what conditions, and the expression "liability covered by the terms of the policy" means a liability which is covered by the policy or which would be so covered but for the fact that the insurer is entitled to avoid or cancel or has avoided or cancelled the policy.

(7) No insurer to whom the notice referred to in sub-section (2) or sub-section (3) has been given shall be entitled to avoid his liability to any person entitled to the benefit of any such judgment or award as is referred to in sub-section (1) or in such judgment as is referred to in sub-section (3) otherwise than in the manner provided for in sub-section (2) or in the corresponding law of the reciprocating country, as the case may be. Explanation.--For the purposes of this section, "Claims Tribunal" means a Claims Tribunal constituted under section 165 and "award" means an award made by that Tribunal under section 168."

8. Section 166 of Motor Vehicles Act reads as under:-

(2) Every application under sub-section (1) shall be made, at the option of the claimant, either to the Claims Tribunal having jurisdiction over the area in which the accident occurred, or to the Claims Tribunal within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the claimant resides or carries on business or within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the defendant resides, and shall be in such form and contain such particulars as may be prescribed:

Provided that where no claim for compensation under section 140 is made in such application, the application shall contain a separate statement to that effect immediately before the signature of the applicant.

(3) [ * ]

(4) The Claims Tribunal shall treat any report of accidents forwarded to it under subsection (6) of section 158 as an application for compensation under this Act."

9. I am fortified in my view by the judgment, and therefore, this appeal fails and is dismissed. There is no question of depositing further amount as while entertaining this appeal, the appellant was directed to deposit the entire amount. The interim relief shall stand vacated.

A. National Security Act, 1980 – Preventive Detention - Grounds of detention do not indicate that the mob was organized by the petitioners or that there was anything done by the petitioners - Solitary incident- Satisfaction to be recorded on the basis of cogent material that the detenu on being released on bail is likely to indulge in activity prejudicial to the maintenance of public order- Absence of such material- Preventive detention of the petitioners is not justified and is liable to be set aside.
(Para 12 & 13)

The incident reflected a mob activity triggered by a road accident in which a person had died. It is not the case in the grounds of detention that the petitioners had with a view to embarrass the administration planned or organized the mob action. The grounds though reflect petitioners' participation in the mob but do not indicate that the mob was organized by the petitioners or that there was anything distinguishable done by the petitioners in that mob action than what was done by other participants.

There is no cogent material on the basis of which, based on a solitary incident of the nature cited in the grounds of detention, satisfaction could be drawn that the petitioners on being released on bail would indulge in activity that would be prejudicial to the maintenance of public order. As it is well settled that to preventively detain a person, who is already in judicial custody, satisfaction, amongst others, is also to be recorded on the basis of cogent material that the detenu on being released on bail is likely to indulge in activity prejudicial to the maintenance of public order, in absence of existence of such material, the preventive detention of the petitioners is not justified and is liable to be set aside.

Consequently, all the three habeas corpus petitions are allowed. The detention orders, dated 16th April, 2019, passed by District Magistrate, Etah against the aforesaid three petitioners are hereby quashed. The petitioners shall be set at liberty forthwith unless wanted in any other case.

Habeas Corpus Petitions allowed (E-3)

Case law relied upon/discussed: -

1. Attorney General for India Vs Amratlal Prajivandas & ors. reported in 1994 (5) SCC 54

2. Surya Prakash Sharma Vs St. of U.P. & ors. 1994 (Supp.) (3) SCC 195

3. Yogendra Murari Vs St. of U.P.& ors. (1988) 4 SCC 559

(Delivered by Hon'ble Manoj Misra, J. & Hon'ble Mrs. Manju Rani Mishra, J.)

1. These three habeas corpus petitions question detention orders, dated 16th April, 2019, separately passed against the petitioners by the District Magistrate, Etah in exercise of powers under Section 3(2) read with Section 3(3) of the National Security Act, 1980 (for short the Act, 1980).

2. Today, counter affidavit of respondents 2 and 4 have been filed by the learned AGA in each of the three petitions, which have been taken on record. The learned counsel for the petitioners stated that he does not wish to file reply to those affidavits and has prayed that the petitions be heard finally.

3. As the petitioners are co-accused and the detention order separately passed against them are based on identical grounds, with the consent of learned counsel for the parties, these petitions are being decided by a common judgment and order.

4. We have heard Sri Upendra Upadhyay for all three petitioners; Sri Deepak Mishra, learned A.G.A. for the State as well as the other state-officers including the detaining authority; Sri S.K. Srivastava for the Union of India in Habeas Corpus Petition No. 731 of 2019; Sri Surendra Nath Chauhan for the Union of India in Habeas Corpus Petition No. 732 of 2019; and Sri Kameshwar Singh for the Union of India in Habeas Corpus Petition No. 734 of 2019; and have perused the record.

5. A perusal of the record would reveal that detention orders dated 16th April, 2019 were separately passed against the petitioners by the District Magistrate, Etah (the Detaining Authority) in exercise of power under Section 3(2) read with Section 3(3) of the Act, 1980 with a view to prevent the petitioners from indulging in activity that might be prejudicial to the public order. The grounds of detention, which are common to all the petitioners, reflect that the detention order has been passed with reference to the activity of the petitioners in the company of several other accused persons in an incident dated 22nd March, 2019 which gave rise to case crime No.0056 of 2019 at police station Awagarh, district Etah, under Sections 147, 148, 149, 341, 307, 332, 353, 427, 336, 436 and 188 IPC and Section 7 Criminal Law Amendment Act. The record reflects that prior to that incident, in a road accident, a person had died. This resulted in mass protest by the public including road blockade. To remove the road blockade, police force was deployed. The allegation is that a large gathering of persons comprising 12 named accused including the petitioners with 100 odd other persons attacked the police force and damaged / burnt police vehicle. It is stated that the petitioners were duly identified along with twenty-thirty others and their participation in the incident was substantiated from statement of the witnesses. It is alleged that the said road blockade and mob activity disturbed the public order. By citing that the petitioners have applied for bail in the said case and are likely to be released on bail, with a view to prevent the petitioners from acting in a manner prejudicial to the public order, the detention order was passed.

6. The contention of learned counsel for the petitioners is that the petitioners have no previous criminal history; that from a solitary incident of the nature which has given rise to Case Crime No.0056 of 2019 it cannot be presumed that the petitioners on being released on bail would repeat such activity that would be prejudicial to the public order therefore the order of preventive detention is not legally sustainable. It has been submitted that the purpose of preventive detention is to prevent the detenu from indulging in activity that is prejudicial to the maintenance of public order or security of the State or maintenance of essential services and civil supplies. It has been urged that since it is to prevent a person from repeating such activity, the past activity has to be considered for the purpose of ascertaining the propensity of that person whether he would repeat such activity. It has been submitted that admittedly there were 12 named accused including the petitioners in the first information report. The list of names, after investigation, expanded to twenty-thirty persons. Otherwise, more than 100 persons were there, who allegedly participated in the incident of road-block and arson, but the detention order has been passed only against three persons, namely, the petitioners, whereas no detention order was passed against the rest of the accused, which clearly suggests that from the nature of the incident it could not have been logically inferred that the persons involved were likely to repeat such act. It was urged that the incident, as narrated in the first information report, did not disclose an organized criminal activity, rather, it appeared to be a mob reaction to an accident. Hence, from such an incident it could not have been inferred that the petitioners had mental pre-disposition to repeat such acts. It has been submitted that mob psychology is spontaneous and such incidents are not planned and there is nothing on record that the incident was planned or orchestrated by the petitioners. More over, the first information report and the other material attributes common role to all. In the alternative it has been contended that even if the detention was justified for a limited period in view of the forthcoming elections, its extension is not justified, post the elections. It has been submitted that the detention order after confirmation was initially for three months only but, unnecessarily, it has been extended up to six months.

7. Learned AGA submitted that the first information report as also the grounds of detention sufficiently demonstrate that on account of mob action the public order was disturbed as police personnel were also injured and police vehicle was burnt. He has submitted that such mob activity needs to be dealt with an iron hand and therefore the detention order is justified even though the petitioners may not have previous criminal history.

8. Having considered the rival submissions, before we address the issues raised, it would be apposite for us to notice the legal position as to when an order of preventive detention can lawfully be passed on a solitary act of the detenu. In this regard, it would be useful for us to notice the decision of nine-judges Bench of the Apex Court in Attorney General For India vs Amratlal Prajivandas and others reported in 1994 (5) SCC 54. In paragraph 48 of the judgment, as reported, the apex court has held as follows:-

"48. Now, it is beyond dispute that an order of detention can be based upon one single ground. Several decisions of this Court have held that even one prejudicial act can be treated as sufficient for forming the requisite satisfaction for detaining the person. In Debu Mahato v. State of W.B. it was observed that while ordinarily-speaking one act may not be sufficient to form the requisite satisfaction, there is no such invariable rule and that in a given case one act may suffice. That was a case of wagon-breaking and having regard to the nature of the Act, it was held that one act is sufficient. The same principle was reiterated in Anil Dey v. State of W. B. It was a case of theft of railway signal material. Here too one act was held to be sufficient. Similarly, in Israil SK v. District Magistrate of West Dinajpur. and Dharua Kanu v. State of W.B. single act of theft of telegraph copper wires in huge quantity and removal of railway fish-plates respectively was held sufficient to sustain the order of detention. In Saraswati Seshagiri v. State of Kerala , a case arising under COFEPOSA, a single act, viz., attempt to export a huge amount of Indian currency was held sufficient. In short, the principle appears to be this: Though ordinarily one act may not be held sufficient to sustain an order of detention, one act may sustain an order of detention if the act is of such a nature as to indicate that it is an organised act or a manifestation of organised activity. The gravity and nature of the act is also relevant. The test is whether the act is such that it gives rise to an inference that the person would continue to indulge in similar prejudicial activity. That is the reason why single acts of wagon-breaking, theft of signal material, theft of telegraph copper wires in huge quantity and removal of railway fish- plates were held sufficient. Similarly, where the person tried to export huge amount of Indian currency to a foreign country in a planned and premeditated manner, it was held that such single act warrants an inference that he will repeat his activity in future and, therefore, his detention is necessary to prevent him from indulging in such prejudicial activity. If one looks at the acts the COFEPOSA is designed to prevent, they are all either acts of smuggling or of foreign exchange manipulation. These acts are indulged in by persons, who act in concert with other persons and quite often such activity has international ramifications. These acts are preceded by a good amount of planning and organisation. They are not like ordinary law and order crimes. If, however, in any given case a single act is found to be not sufficient to sustain the order of detention that may well be quashed but it cannot be stated as a principle that one single act cannot constitute the basis for detention. On the contrary, it does. In other words, it is not necessary that there should be multiplicity of grounds for making or sustaining an order of detention.

(Emphasis Supplied)

9. In Surya Prakash Sharma v. State of U.P and others : 1994 (Supp.) (3) SCC 195, the petitioner was already in jail in connection with a murder case. The petitioner had no criminal history though there was a solitary case of broad day light murder registered against him. The argument raised before the apex court was that on the basis of that solitary case against the detenu, there could be no apprehension in the mind of the detaining authority that the detenu on being released would indulge in any such activity that would be prejudicial to the maintenance of public order. The apex court found that there was no cogent material placed before the court or before the detaining authority to enable an inference that the detenu on being released on bail would indulge in such offence that would be a threat to public order. The apex court, accordingly, quashed the order of detention and, while doing so, in paragraphs 5 and 6, as reported, observed as follows:

"5.The question as to whether and in what circumstances an order for preventive detention can be passed against a person who is already in custody has had been engaging the attention of this Court since it first came up for consideration before a Constitution Bench in Rameshwar Shaw v. District Magistrate, Burdwan, [1964] 4 SCR 921. To eschew prolixity we refrain from detailing all those cases except that of Dharmendra Suganchand Chelawat v. Union of India, AIR (1990) SC 1196 wherein a three Judge Bench, after considering all the earlier relevant decisions including Rameshwar Shaw (supra) answered the question in the following words:

"The decisions referred to above lead to the conclusion that an order for detention can be validly passed against a person in custody and for that purpose it is necessary that the grounds of detention must show that (i) the detaining authority was aware of the fact that the detenu is already in detention: and (ii) there were compelling reasons justifying such detention despite the fact that the detenu is already in detention. The expression "compelling reasons" in the context of making an order for detention of a person already in custody implied that there must be cogent material before the detaining authority on the basis of which it may be satisfied that (a) the detenu is likely to be released from custody in the near future and (b) taking into account the nature of the antecedent activities of the detenu, it is likely that after his release from custody he would indulge in prejudicial activities and it is necessary to detain him in order to prevent him from engaging in such activities."

6. When the above principles are applied to the facts of the instant case, there is no escape from the conclusion that the impugned order cannot be sustained. Though the grounds of detention indicate the detaining authority's awareness of the fact that the detenu was in judicial custody at the time of making the order of detention, the detaining authority has not brought on record any cogent material nor furnished any cogent ground in support of the averment: made in grounds of detention that if the aforesaid Surya Prakash Sharma is released on bail 'he may again indulge in serious offences causing threat to public order", (emphasis supplied), To put it differently, the satisfaction of the detaining authority that the detenu might indulge in serious offences causing threat to public order, solely on the basis of a solitary murder, cannot be said to be proper and justified."

10. In Yogendra Murari v. State of U.P. and others : (1988) 4 SCC 559, the apex court had the occasion to deal with a submission whether the detention order could be considered discriminatory on the ground of non-detention of co-accused in the same incident. Rejecting the claim of discrimination, raised on behalf of the petitioner, in paragraph 9 of the judgment, the apex court observed as follows:-

"9. There is no merit whatsoever in the petitioners grievance of discrimination on the ground that the other co- accused persons have not been detained. The role of the petitioner and that of the others are not identical and the reasonable apprehension as to their future conduct must depend on the relevant facts, and circumstances which differ from individual to individual. It would have been wrong on the part of the detaining authority to take a uniform decision in this regard only on the ground that the persons concerned are all joined together as accused in a criminal case."

11. From the decisions noticed above, what is clear is that though ordinarily a solitary act may not be sufficient to sustain an order of preventive detention but where that act is of such a nature that it is reflective of, or has manifestation of, an organized criminal activity, or is so grave that it reflects the propensity of that person to repeat such an act, then even a solitary act could well be made basis for passing an order of preventive detention.

12. In the instant case, we find that the incident reflected a mob activity triggered by a road accident in which a person had died. In this mob action hundreds of persons had participated but no one died. It is not the case in the grounds of detention that the petitioners had with a view to embarrass the administration planned or organized the mob action. The grounds though reflect petitioners' participation in the mob but do not indicate that the mob was organized by the petitioners or that there was anything distinguishable done by the petitioners in that mob action than what was done by other participants. When a mob reacts, the action is triggered by sudden surge of emotions which become uncontrollable. Largely, mob actions are unorganized and therefore by mere participation in a mob the propensity of its participant that he would repeat such act cannot ordinarily be inferred. Had it been a case in the grounds of detention that the petitioners had organized the mob action with a view to disrupt public order or had committed some such act which distinguishes their case from the rest and is suggestive of their mental make up or propensity to repeat such act, things would have been different. But here the petitioners were mere participants who, by chance, were identified along with twenty to thirty more persons though hundreds of persons had participated. Moreover, it is not a case of communal violence. Communal violence stand on a different footing inasmuch as it reflects upon the mental predisposition of its participant. Thus, looking to the facts of the case as also that the petitioners have no previous criminal history, we are of the considered view that there is no cogent material on the basis of which, based on a solitary incident of the nature cited in the grounds of detention, satisfaction could be drawn that the petitioners on being released on bail would indulge in activity that would be prejudicial to the maintenance of public order. As it is well settled that to preventively detain a person, who is already in judicial custody, satisfaction, amongst others, is also to be recorded on the basis of cogent material that the detenu on being released on bail is likely to indulge in activity prejudicial to the maintenance of public order, in absence of existence of such material, the preventive detention of the petitioners is not justified and is liable to be set aside.

13. Consequently, all the three habeas corpus petitions are allowed. The detention orders, dated 16th April, 2019, passed by District Magistrate, Etah against the aforesaid three petitioners are hereby quashed. The petitioners shall be set at liberty forthwith unless wanted in any other case. There is no order as to costs.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Irshad Ali, J.)

1) Heard Sri Manish Kumar, learned Senior Counsel assisted by Sri Atul Kumar Dwivedi, learned counsel for the petitioner and to the learned Additional Chief Standing Counsel on behalf of State respondent.

2) In spite of service of notice, no one has appeared on behalf of respondent Nos.2 and 3.

3) Factual matrix of the case is that the petitioner purchased a portion of the building including the disputed shop in occupation of respondent No.2 on 16.08.1988. A notice was issued to the respondent No.2 on 28.10.1991 under Section 106 of the Transfer of Properties Act and thereafter, an application under Section 21(1)(a) of U.P. Act No.13 of 1972 was filed for release of the disputed shop on 03.09.1994. The respondent No.2 filed written statement on 13.09.1995. The prescribed authority after hearing the parties and taking into consideration the contents of the release application as well as the written statement filed by the respondents by taking notice of the ingredients required to be considered, passed an order for release of the shop on 18.05.1996. The respondent No.2 preferred an appeal against the order passed by the prescribed authority, which was allowed dismissing the application for release filed under Section 21(1)(a) of U.P. Act No.13 of 1972.

4) Assailing the order passed by the appellate authority, submission of learned Senior Counsel for the petitioner is that the appellate Court while passing the impugned order has ignored the finding returned by the prescribed authority on the bonafide requirement and comparative hardship of the petitioner. In support of submission advanced on the point of bonafide requirement and comparative hardship, learned Senior Counsel for the petitioner has placed reliance upon certain judgments, which are as under:

i) Anil Bajaj and another Vs. Vinod Ahuja; 2014 (15) SCC 610, paragraph Nos.6 to 8.

ii) Radhey Shayam Agarwal Vs. Addl. District and Sessions Judge, Court No.13 Lucknow and another; 2006 (24) LCD 1141, paragraph Nos.16 to 18.

iii) Zareena Haider and others Vs. Special Judge E.C. Act/ADJ, Lucknow and others; 2013 (31) LCD 2396, paragraph Nos.12, 16 to 18.

iv) Dr. Iqbal Ahmad Vs. 2nd Additional District Judge, Ballia and another; 2005 (23) LCD 221, paragraph No.10, 12, 13 and 14.

v) Krishna Kumar Rastogi Vs. Sumitra Devi; (2014) 9 SCC 309, paragraph No.9.

5) He further submitted that the appellate court has misread the provisions contained under Rule 17 framed under the Act of 1972. He submitted that Rule 17 of the Act applies in the case, wherein application has been moved under Section 21(1)(b) of the Act of 1972. Thus, his submission is that the provisions referred while passing the impugned order is not attracted to the present facts and circumstances of the case.

6) He next submitted that the respondent No.2 was offered that after construction of the shop, he will be provided one shop to run his business of Dentist and the same was refused by him, thus, the appellate court on wrong premises has proceeded to allow the appeal and dismissed the release application.

7) He further submitted that the appellate court cannot suggest to the landlord to run his business at other place taking into consideration the suggestion of the tenant to run his business.

8) Learned Senior Counsel for the petitioner further invited attention of this Court on the written statement filed by the respondent No.2; annexure No.3 to the writ petition and pointed out that it is admitted case of the respondent No.2 that the petitioner and his two sons are running the business at Gallamandi, thus, his submission is that the appellate court while passing the impugned order has ignored the admission of the tenant in the written statement.

9) In view of the above, his submission is that, the appellate court has committed gross illegality in passing the impugned order, therefore, the same is not sustainable in law.

10) I have considered the submission advanced by learned counsel for the petitioner and perused the material on record as well as the law reports relied upon by learned Senior Counsel for the petitioner and the counter affidavit filed by learned counsel for respondent Nos.2 and 3.

11) To resolve the controversy involved in the present writ petition, the provisions contained under Section 21(1)(a) of U.P. Act No.13 of 1972 is being quoted below:

"21. Proceeding for release of building under occupation of tenant. - (1)(a) that the building is bona fide required either in its existing form or after demolition and new construction by the landlord for occupation by himself or any member of his family, or any person for whose benefit it is held by him, either for residential purposes or for purposes of any profession, trade or calling, or where the landlord is the trustee of a public charitable trust, for the objects of the trust."

12) On its perusal, it is evident that while considering the release application, the prescribed authority has to consider the bonafide requirement, comparative hardship and irreparable loss and injury.

13) The prescribed authority while dealing with the matter of release application, on perusal of the evidence and material on record, passed the order holding that the petitioner has made out a case for release of shop and in comparison of the tenant, the bonafide requirement and comparative hardship are in favour of the landlord.

14) In support of submission advanced, learned Senior Counsel for the petitioner relied upon certain judgments, which are as under:

i) Anil Bajaj and another Vs. Vinod Ahuja (Supra):

"6. In the present case it is clear that while the landlord (appellant No. 1) is carrying on his business from a shop premise located in a narrow lane, the tenant is in occupation of the premises located on the main road which the landlord considers to be more suitable for his own business. The materials on record, in fact, disclose that the landlord had offered to the tenant the premises located in the narrow lane in exchange for the tenanted premises which offer was declined by the tenant. It is not the tenant's case that the landlord-appellant No. 1 does not propose to utilize the tenanted premises from which eviction is sought for the purposes of his business. It is also not the tenant's case that the landlord proposes to rent out/keep vacant the tenanted premises after obtaining possession thereof or to use the same is any way inconsistent with the need of the landlord. What the tenant contends is that the landlord has several other shop houses from which he is carrying on different business and further that the landlord has other premises from where the business proposed from the tenanted premises can be effectively carried out. It would hardly require any reiteration of the settled principle of law that it is not for the tenant to dictate to the landlord as to how the property belonging to the landlord should be utilized by him for the purpose of his business. Also, the fact that the landlord is doing business from various other premises cannot foreclose his right to seek eviction from the tenanted premises so long as he intends to use the said tenanted premises for his own business.

7. The grounds on which leave to defend was sought by the tenant and has been granted by the High Court runs counter to the fundamental principles governing the right of a tenant to contest the claim of bonafide requirement of the suit premises by the landlord under the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958. Even assuming the assertions made by the tenant to be correct, the same do not disclose any triable issue so as to entitle the tenant to grant of leave to defend.

8. We are, therefore, of the view that the impugned order dated 20.09.2012 of the High Court of Delhi is not legally sustainable. We, accordingly, set aside the same and allow this appeal and restore the order dated 02.09.2011 passed by the learned Additional Rent Controller, Delhi."

ii) Radhey Shayam Agarwal Vs. Addl. District and Sessions Judge, Court No.13 Lucknow and another (Supra):

"16. The tenant Puttan Lal was required to demonstrate before this Court by passing a specific order as to what efforts he had made to find out alternative accommodation for his residential or commercial purpose since November, 1988 when the release application was filed. He has filed an affidavit dated 5.4.2006 indicating that he cannot afford to pay more than Rs. 100 as against Rs. 20 per month presently being paid as rent for any other shop in the nearby locality and that he failed to get a shop at this rent. He has reiterated in the affidavit that the landlord is having sufficient residential accommodation and shops in the city of Lucknow, which fact has been denied by the petitioner. As per Sri S.M.K. Chaudhary, learned Counsel for the petitioner, several shopping and residential complexes have come up in New Hyderabad. Nishatganj and adjoining areas. Besides, several residential colonies of U.P. Housing and Development Board, Lucknow Development Authority and other cooperative societies have come up in the nearby areas. Land for housing and commercial use is available to the public and can be purchased through loans on lower rate of interest offered by the nationalized and co-operative banks. These facilities ought to have been availed by the tenant, opposite party No. 2. There is no force in the submission of Sri M.S. Kotwal, learned Counsel for opposite party No. 2 that no accommodation was available to the tenant and that he cannot afford to pay more than Rs. 20 per month. The Hon'ble Supreme Court of India and this Court in recent decisions, as in B.C. Bhutada v. G.R. Mundada and Salim Khan v. IVth Additional District Judge. Jhansi 2006 (1) ARC 588, have held that where the tenants did not show what efforts they made to search alternative premises, it is sufficient to tilt the balance of hardship against them. Even under Rule 10(3) of the Rules the tenant has failed to demonstrate whether he had filed any application to the appropriate authority for allotment of another accommodation.

Thus, despite an opportunity being given by this Court, the respondent No. 2 has failed to demonstrate his serious efforts, if any, made for finding out alternative accommodation or submission of any such allotment application as provided under Rule 10(3) of the Rules. Thus, the question of comparative hardship ought to have been decided by the appellate authority against the tenant. The judgment and order passed by the appellate court Is, therefore, wholly erroneous and unsustainable in law. I find support in my view from the Judgments of the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India as in 2005 (2) ARC 793.

17. The appellate authority has also ignored the finding of the learned prescribed authority that the landlord has a right to use the premises for expanding his business and augment his income vide Gaya Prasad v. Pradeep Srivastava (2001) 2 SCC 604. The Hon'ble Supreme Court in another Judgment in Ragavendra Kumar v. Firm Prem Machinery and Co. , has held that it is a settled position of law that the landlord is the best Judge of his requirement for residential or business purpose and he has got complete freedom in the matter. In the said case, the plaintiff landlord wanted the eviction of the tenant from the suit premises for starting his business as it was suitable and it cannot be faulted. Similar views have been expressed in G.C. Kapoor v. Nand Kumar Bhasin and Ors. This Court in Smt. Nirmala Tandon and Ors. v. Xth Additional District Judge, Kanpur Nagar and Ors. 1996 (2) ARC 409 : 1997 (1) AWC 2.59 (NOC) and Shree Chand Gupta v. XVIIIth Additional District Judge, Meerut and Ors. , has also dealt with the issue that a finding of fact may be interfered with when it is based on account of wrong application of principle of law relevant thereto or relevant material has not been taken into consideration, or a finding is otherwise arbitrary or perverse. These elements are present in this case. I find force in the submissions made by Sri S.M.K. Chaudhary, learned Counsel for the petitioner which are squarely covered by the case-laws cited by him. as referred to above. On the other hand, the decisions cited by Sri M. Section Kotwal, learned Counsel for the opposite party No. 2, as referred to above, cannot be applied in the present set of circumstances.

18. In the opinion of this Court, the view taken by the appellate authority is highly erroneous in law. The tenant is already having in his possession a portion of the building for residential purpose. It is an uncontroverted fact that he has purchased a double-storyed House No. 9. Gopi Nath Building, R.B.L. Road, Lucknow where he and his family are residing or if not residing, he can continue in the portion of the building which is still under his occupation. He has not searched alternative accommodation. These facts by itself are sufficient to decide the question of comparative hardships against the tenant. The Hon'ble Supreme Court of India in the case of Siddalingama v. M. Shenoy 2002 (46) ALR 18 (SC), has held that the entire Rent Control Act is basically meant for the benefit of the tenant and provision of release on the ground of bona Jlde need is the only provision which treats the landlords with some sympathy."

iii) Zareena Haider and others Vs. Special Judge E.C. Act/ADJ, Lucknow and others (Supra):

"12. This finding of the lower appellate court is utterly erroneous in law. Bona fide need does not mean dire need vide Dattatraya Laxman Kamble v.

Abdul Rasul Moulali Kotkunde & Anr., AIR 1999 SC 2226. Landlords cannot be compelled to use verandas as rooms to fulfil their need so that tenant may continue to enjoy possession of the tenanted accommodation. Verandahs are not built to be used as rooms etc. Supreme Court in Sarla Ahuja v. United India Insurance Company Limited, AIR 1999 SC 100 has held that tenant cannot dictate the landlord as to how he should satisfy his need without disturbing the tenant. Same view has been taken in the following authorities:

(i) Prativa Devi v. T.V. Krishnan, 1996 (5) SCC 353

(ii)Ragavendra Kumar v. Firm Prem Machinary & Co., AIR 2000 SC 534

(iii) R.C. Tamrakar and anr. v. Nidi Lekha, AIR 2001 SC 3806 (para-10)

(iiv) Dinesh Kumar Vs. Yusuf Ali, AIR 2010 SC 2679 (para-8).

16. Regarding comparative hardship, the lower appellate court held that the tenants were using their residential house at Pan Dariba for running printing and publishing business hence they had no alternative accommodation and as their family consisted of 16 members, hence they would be thrown on street in case of eviction. Prescribed Authority had held that tenants were quite wealthy and were paying very good income tax. All these aspects were not touched by the lower appellate court.

17. There cannot be any doubt, looking to the number of family members and their professions, that the landlords required additional accommodation. Tenants were having a residential house but they were using the same for commercial purposes. The house in dispute is situate at a famous busy road, hence the area where it is situate is more beneficial for advocates chamber. As held by the Supreme Court in "Chandrika Prasad v. Umesh Kumar Verma" AIR 2002 SC 108 a less advantageous accommodation available to the landlord is no ground to reject the release application for a more advantageous accommodation in occupation of tenant. In the said case, accommodation was required for establishing clinic for doctor son-in-law of the landlord. The Supreme Court held that the fact that the father of the son-in-law of the landlord possessed a house in a less important area was immaterial.

18. Supreme Court in Badrinarayan Chunilal Bhutada v. Gonindram Ramgopal Mundada, AIR 2003 SC 2713 : 2003 (2) SCC 320 (para-8) has held that bona fide requirement of landlord implies an element of necessity. The necessity is a necessity without regard to the degree of which it may be. Degree of urgency or the intensity of felt need assumes significance for the purpose of comparative hardship."

iv) Dr. Iqbal Ahmad Vs. 2nd Additional District Judge, Ballia and another (Supra):

"10. The main emphasis of the lower appellate court was on the fact that landlord could not show that his medical practice was of such scale which required more accommodation. Even a Doctor having small number of patients per day is entitled to have reasonable accommodation for his clinic. Judicial notice may be taken of the fact that often allopathic medicines, which are prescribed by doctors, may be purchased from any shop. However, Homeopathic doctors invariably give medicines to the patients by themselves. No such shop may be found in any city where Homeopathic medicines are sold to the patients on the prescription. The tenant suggested that shop A could be partitioned and in one portion landlord, doctor could check the patients and writ prescriptions and from the other portion his compounder could give medicines to patients. This suggestion was self serving. Tenant has got no business to dictate the landlord as to how he can squeeze his need in smaller portion.

12. Regarding the shop taken on rent by the tenant, the lower appellate court accepted the version of the tenant that he was using the said shop as godown. If the tenant is using a shop as godown, it is his look (out). In such situation it can not be said that the said shop is not available to the tenant. As the tenant has already got another shop on rent, hence question of comparative hardship has to be decided against him. Rule 16(2) (b) which is quoted below is squarely attracted to the fact of the case.

"Rule 16(2)(b):- Where the tenant has available with him suitable accommodation to which he can shift his business without substantial loss there shall be greater justification for allowing the application."

13. Even otherwise tenant did not bring on record any evidence to show that he made any efforts to purchase or take on rent any alternative accommodation after filing of release application. It was also very relevant for deciding the question of comparative hardship against the tenant (vide AIR 2003 SC 2713).

14. Alongwith written arguments filed by learned counsel for tenant respondent No.2, copy of an affidavit of landlord petitioner sworn on 17.1.2001 filed by him before Assistant Registrar, Funds (sic-Firms), Societies and Chits, Varanasi Division, Varanasi in file No.B-3064 has been filed. In para 9 of the said affidavit it was stated that Javed Iqbal Ansari (son of petitioner) is head master of Hazrat Aasi Junior High School. No notice can be taken of the copy of a document, which is filed alongwith written written arguments. The said copy has not been filed alongwith any affidavit. Even if for the sake of arguments it is accepted that the son of landlord is head master in some school still the fact remains that tenant has categorically admitted that in the shop shown by letter C in the map landlord has installed Photostat and lamination machines. If the statement of the tenant that son of the landlord is head master in school is taken to be correct then it would mean that landlord himself is carrying on the business of making copies from Photostat machine and laminating the documents from lamination machine. If the landlord in addition to his medical practice in Homeopathy has started the said business also, then he can not be put to disadvantage due to that. Tenant himself repeatedly asserted that landlord was not having good medical practice. In view of this no fault can be found with the landlord if he starts additional business for augmenting his income. Learned counsel for tenant respodent also argued that during the pendency of writ petition landlord petitioner got vacated some of his shops from his previous tenant and let out the same to other tenants. For this argument no foundation has been laid in the form of any affidavit hence it cannot be considered."

v) Krishna Kumar Rastogi Vs. Sumitra Devi (Supra):

11. In Mohd. Ayub v. Mukesh Chand, while interpreting the above provisions of law, this Court has observed in para 15 as under: (SCC p. 159)

" 15. It is well settled the landlord's requirement need not be a dire necessity. The court cannot direct the landlord to do a particular business or imagine that he could profitably do a particular business rather than the business he proposes to start. It was wrong on the part of the District Court to hold that the appellants' case that their sons want to start the general merchant business is a pretence because they are dealing in eggs ?????Similarly, length of tenancy of the respondent in the circumstances of the case ought not to have weighed with the courts below."

15) In the case of Anil Bajaj and another Vs. Vinod Ahuja (Supra) relied upon by learned counsel for the petitioner, the landlord was carrying on business from a shop premises located in a narrow lane, whereas the tenant was in occupation of the premises located on the main road, which the landlord considers to be more suitable for his own business. The landlord offered to the tenant the premises located in the narrow lane in exchange of the tenant's premises, which was declined by the tenant. The tenant contended that the landlord has several other shops and houses, from where he is carrying out his business and suggested that he can run his shop in other available shops to him.

16) After considering the material evidence on record, the court held that the tenant cannot dictate to the landlord as to how the property belonging to the landlord should be utilized by him for the purpose of his business. It was further recorded that the landlord is doing business from various other premises cannot forclose his right to seek eviction from the tenanted premises so long as he intends to use the tenanted premises for his own business.

17) In the case in hand, the landlord offered to the tenant that after construction of the shop, he will be provided one shop to run his business of dentist and the tenant refused the same and suggested to the landlord to run his business at some other place, which was accepted by the appellate Court.

18) In view of the above, the ratio of the judgments referred herein above, is fully applicable to the present facts and circumstances of the case, therefore, this Court is of the opinion that the tenant cannot suggest to the landlord to run his business from some other place.

19) In the case of Radhey Shayam Agarwal Vs. Addl. District and Sessions Judge, Court No.13 Lucknow and another (Supra), the question was that since the application for release was filed, what effort had been made to find out alternative accommodation for residential or commercial purposes since the date the release application was filed. The claim was setup by the tenant that the landlord is having sufficient residential accommodation and shops in the city of Lucknow, which was denied by the petitioner-landlord. Considering the judgment of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of B.C. Bhutada v. G.R. Mundada and Salim Khan v. IVth Additional District Judge. Jhansi 2006 (1) ARC 588, it was held that where the tenant did not show the effort made to search alternative premises, it is sufficient to tilt the balance of hardship against him. The tenant failed to establish that he filed any application to the appropriate authority for allotment of another accommodation.

20) In the present case, the appellate authority has failed to appreciate that the tenant has ever tried to search out any other alternative accommodation during pendency of the release application. Thus, in the opinion of the Court, the appellate authority is highly erroneous in law in proceeding to pass the impugned order.

21) In other two judgments in the cases of Zareena Haider and others Vs. Special Judge E.C. Act/ADJ, Lucknow and others (Supra) and Dr. Iqbal Ahmad Vs. 2nd Additional District Judge, Ballia and another (Supra), the court has proceeded to hold that the landlord cannot be compelled by the tenant to run his shop in an accommodation, which is not feasible to run the shop/business. Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Badrinarayan Chunilal Bhutada v. Gonindram Ramgopal Mundada, AIR 2003 SC 2713 : 2003 (2) SCC 320 has held that the bona fide requirement of landlord implies an element of necessity. The necessity is a necessity without regard to the degree of which it may be. Degree of urgency or the intensity of felt need assumes significance for the purpose of comparative hardship.

22) The appellate court in the present case, in spite of considering the hardship of the landlord, has proceeded to suggest on otherwise considerations to fulfill the need of the landlord. The counter affidavit filed by learned counsel for respondent Nos.2 and 3 supports the contents made in the written statement filed before the prescribed authority as well as before the appellate court, which denies the offer made by the landlord to provide one shop after construction of the shop to run business to the tenant of dentist, which was refused by the respondent Nos.2 and 3. This act of the tenant cannot be justified in law.

23) On over all consideration and on perusal of the material on record as well as the judgments referred herein above, it is well established that the appellate court has committed manifest error of law in dismissing the release application and allowing the appeal. The appellate court has not considered the finding recorded by the prescribed authority in allowing the application for release of the shop and by ignoring the same has proceeded to pass the impugned order. The appellate court has mis-read the applicability of the provisions of Rule 17 framed under U.P. Act No.13 of 1972 and has wrongly applied to the facts and circumstances of the present case. Rule 17 of the Act of 1972 applies, in case the application has been moved on the ground that the building is in dilapidated condition and after its demolition fresh construction shall be made.

24) The judgment and order passed by the appellate court suffers from apparent illegality and cannot be sustained. In view of the observation made above, the impugned order dated 12.08.2004 being not sustainable in law is hereby set aside.

25) The writ petition succeeds and is allowed. It is, however, directed that the opposite parties shall vacate the disputed premises/shop within the period specified by the prescribed authority under the order dated 18.05.1996.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Dr. Kaushal Jayendra Thaker, J.)

1. Heard Sri R.K. Porwal, learned counsel for the appellants for the appeals and Sri Nripendra Misra, learned counsel for the respondents in both the appeals.

2. Both these appeals, at the behest of the claimants, challenges the judgment and award dated 30.09.2003 passed by Motor Accident Claims Tribunal/Special Judge (E.C.) Act, Etawah (hereinafter referred to as 'Tribunal') in M.A.C.P. No. 45 of 2000 and M.A.C.P. No.44 of 2000.

3. Brief facts of the litigation are that on 28.11.1999 at about 05 p.m. on Mathura Agra road near village Mahuaa the deceased was plying his scooter bearing No. D.L. 8 C 3277 and Prem Singh and his minor son were going at that time a Tata Sumo Bearing No. M.P. 7 H 4155 coming from Agra driven rashly and negligently drag with the scooter. Jagmohan and his son met with serious injuries and during the treatment they summoned to the death. F.I.R. was lodged charge sheet was led against the driver of Tata Sumo. The owner of the driver of Tara sumo did not appear and qua them the litigation proceeded ex-parte. The insurance company took its defence contending that on the scooter there were three persons plying the scooter. The vehicle though was insured with them there was breach of policy condition.

4. The Tribunal framed four issues in both the matters and rejected both the claim petitions holding the driver of the scooter solely responsible for the accident. It is this finding of fact which is assailed by the appellants.

5. It would be necessary for us to decide the question of negligence as for the pillion rider it was a case of composite negligence and that it is submitted that the scooter driver was driving the scooter on its correct side as he had to cross the divider and as he had to go in the same lane as the side which was his correct side the site map shows that it was Tata Sumo which came on its extreme right and the accident was so grave that the driver and the pillion driver met with serious injuries and therefore it cannot be said that the driver of the scooter was negligent. It is further submitted that the driver of the sumo did not step into the witness box.

6. The principle of negligence enunciated here in below will have to be looked into as the Insurance company in memo of appeal has come with the stand that there was a head on collision and it was a case of contributory negligence and, therefore, there is error apparent on the face of record and erred in not framing any issue on that count.

7. The concept of contributory negligence has been time and again evolved, decided and discussed by the courts.

8. The term negligence means failure to exercise care towards others which a reasonable and prudent person would in a circumstance or taking action which such a reasonable person would not. Negligence can be both intentional or accidental which is normally accidental. More particularly, it connotes reckless driving and the injured must always prove that the either side is negligent. If the injury rather death is caused by something owned or controlled by the negligent party then he is directly liable otherwise the principle of "res ipsa loquitur" meaning thereby "the things speak for itself" would apply.

9. The term contributory negligence has been discussed time and again a person who either contributes or is author of the accident would be liable for his contribution to the accident having taken place. The Apex Court in Pawan Kumar & Anr vs M/S Harkishan Dass Mohan Lal & Ors decided on 29 January, 2014 has held as follows:

7. Where the plaintiff/claimant himself is found to be a party to the negligence the question of joint and several liability cannot arise and the plaintiff's claim to the extent of his own negligence, as may be quantified, will have to be severed. In such a situation the plaintiff can only be held entitled to such part of damages/compensation that is not attributable to his own negligence. The above principle has been explained in T.O. Anthony (supra) followed in K. Hemlatha & Ors. (supra). Paras 6 and 7 of T.O. Anthony (supra) which are relevant may be extracted hereinbelow:

"6. "Composite negligence" refers to the negligence on the part of two or more persons. Where a person is injured as a result of negligence on the part of two or more wrongdoers, it is said that the person was injured on account of the composite negligence of those wrongdoers. In such a case, each wrongdoer is jointly and severally liable to the injured for payment of the entire damages and the injured person has the choice of proceeding against all or any of them. In such a case, the injured need not establish the extent of responsibility of each wrongdoer separately, nor is it necessary for the court to determine the extent of liability of each wrongdoer separately. On the other hand where a person suffers injury, partly due to the negligence on the part of another person or persons, and partly as a result of his own negligence, then the negligence on the part of the injured which contributed to the accident is referred to as his contributory negligence. Where the injured is guilty of some negligence, his claim for damages is not defeated merely by reason of the negligence on his part but the damages recoverable by him in respect of the injuries stand reduced in proportion to his contributory negligence.

7. Therefore, when two vehicles are involved in an accident, and one of the drivers claims compensation from the other driver alleging negligence, and the other driver denies negligence or claims that the injured claimant himself was negligent, then it becomes necessary to consider whether the injured claimant was negligent and if so, whether he was solely or partly responsible for the accident and the extent of his responsibility, that is, his contributory negligence. Therefore where the injured is himself partly liable, the principle of "composite negligence" will not apply nor can there be an automatic inference that the negligence was 50:50 as has been assumed in this case. The Tribunal ought to have examined the extent of contributory negligence of the appellant and thereby avoided confusion between composite negligence and contributory negligence. The High Court has failed to correct the said error."

10. The Division Bench of this Court in F.A.F.O No. 1818 of 2012 (Bajaj Allianz General Insurance Co. Ltd. Vs. Smt. Renu Singh And Others) decided on 19.7.2016 which has held as under:

"17. It would be seen that burden of proof for contributory negligence on the part of deceased has to be discharged by the opponents. It is the duty of driver of the offending vehicle to explain the accident. It is well settled law that at intersection where two roads cross each other, it is the duty of a fast moving vehicle to slow down and if driver did not slow down at intersection, but continued to proceed at a high speed without caring to notice that another vehicle was crossing, then the conduct of driver necessarily leads to conclusion that vehicle was being driven by him rashly as well as negligently.

18. 10th Schedule appended to Motor Vehicle Act contain statutory regulations for driving of motor vehicles which also form part of every Driving License. Clause-6 of such Regulation clearly directs that the driver of every motor vehicle to slow down vehicle at every intersection or junction of roads or at a turning of the road. It is also provided that driver of the vehicle should not enter intersection or junction of roads unless he makes sure that he would not thereby endanger any other person. Merely, because driver of the Truck was driving vehicle on the left side of road would not absolve him from his responsibility to slow down vehicle as he approaches intersection of roads, particularly when he could have easily seen, that the car over which deceased was riding, was approaching intersection.

19. In view of the fast and constantly increasing volume of traffic, motor vehicles upon roads may be regarded to some extent as coming within the principle of liability defined in Rylands V/s. Fletcher, (1868) 3 HL (LR) 330. From the point of view of pedestrian, the roads of this country have been rendered by the use of motor vehicles, highly dangerous. 'Hit and run' cases where drivers of motor vehicles who have caused accidents, are unknown. In fact such cases are increasing in number. Where a pedestrian without negligence on his part is injured or killed by a motorist, whether negligently or not, he or his legal representatives, as the case may be, should be entitled to recover damages if principle of social justice should have any meaning at all.

20. These provisions (sec.110A and sec.110B of Motor Act, 1988) are not merely procedural provisions. They substantively affect the rights of the parties. The right of action created by Fatal Accidents Act, 1855 was 'new in its species, new in its quality, new in its principles. In every way it was new. The right given to legal representatives under Act, 1988 to file an application for compensation for death due to a motor vehicle accident is an enlarged one. This right cannot be hedged in by limitations of an action under Fatal Accidents Act, 1855. New situations and new dangers require new strategies and new remedies.

21. In the light of the above discussion, we are of the view that even if courts may not by interpretation displace the principles of law which are considered to be well settled and, therefore, court cannot dispense with proof of negligence altogether in all cases of motor vehicle accidents, it is possible to develop the law further on the following lines; when a motor vehicle is being driven with reasonable care, it would ordinarily not meet with an accident and, therefore, rule of res-ipsa loquitor as a rule of evidence may be invoked in motor accident cases with greater frequency than in ordinary civil suits (per three-Judge Bench in Jacob Mathew V/s. State of Punjab, 2005 0 ACJ(SC) 1840).

22. By the above process, the burden of proof may ordinarily be cast on the defendants in a motor accident claim petition to prove that motor vehicle was being driven with reasonable care or that there is equal negligence on the part the other side."

11. The insurance company has failed to prove that accident occurred due to carrying of person as pillion rider. In absence of such a finding, the insurance company having not proved factum of negligence on the part of the scooterist, cannot be benefited. The negligent act must contribute to the accident having taken place. The Apex Court recently has considered the principles of negligence in case of Archit Saini and Another Vs. Oriental Insurance Company Limited, AIR 2018 SC 1143.

12. The Apex Court in Khenyei Vs. New India Assurance Company

Limited & Others, 2015 Law Suit (SC) 469 has held as under:

"4. It is a case of composite negligence where injuries have been caused to the claimants by combined wrongful act of joint tort feasors. In a case of accident caused by negligence of joint tort feasors, all the persons who aid or counsel or direct or join in committal of a wrongful act, are liable. In such case, the liability is always joint and several. The extent of negligence of joint tort feasors in such a case is immaterial for satisfaction of the claim of the plaintiff/claimant and need not be determined by the by the court. However, in case all the joint tort feasors are before the court, it may determine the extent of their liability for the purpose of adjusting inter-se equities between them at appropriate stage. The liability of each and every joint tort feasor vis a vis to plaintiff/claimant cannot be bifurcated as it is joint and several liability. In the case of composite negligence, apportionment of compensation between tort feasors for making payment to the plaintiff is not permissible as the plaintiff/claimant has the right to recover the entire amount from the easiest targets/solvent defendant.

14. There is a difference between contributory and composite negligence. In the case of contributory negligence, a person who has himself contributed to the extent cannot claim compensation for the injuries sustained by him in the accident to the extent of his own negligence;whereas in the case of composite negligence, a person who has suffered has not contributed to the accident but the outcome of combination of negligence of two or more other persons. This Court in T.O. Anthony v. Karvarnan & Ors. [2008 (3) SCC 748] has held that in case of contributory negligence, injured need not establish the extent of responsibility of each wrong doer separately, nor is it necessary for the court to determine the extent of liability of each wrong doer separately. It is only in the case of contributory negligence that the injured himself has contributed by his negligence in the accident. Extent of his negligence is required to be determined as damages recoverable by him in respect of the injuries have to be reduced in proportion to his contributory negligence. The relevant portion is extracted hereunder :

"6. 'Composite negligence' refers to the negligence on the part of two or more persons. Where a person is injured as a result of negligence on the part of two or more wrong doers, it is said that the person was injured on account of the composite negligence of those wrong-doers. In such a case, each wrong doer, is jointly and severally liable to the injured for payment of the entire damages and the injured person has the choice of proceeding against all or any of them. In such a case, the injured need not establish the extent of responsibility of each wrong-doer separately, nor is it necessary for the court to determine the extent of liability of each wrong-doer separately. On the other hand where a person suffers injury, partly due to the negligence on the part of another person or persons, and partly as a result of his own negligence, then the negligence of the part of the injured which contributed to the accident is referred to as his contributory negligence. Where the injured is guilty of some negligence, his claim for damages is not defeated merely by reason of the negligence on his part but the damages recoverable by him in respect of the injuries stands reduced in proportion to his contributory negligence.

7. Therefore, when two vehicles are involved in an accident, and one of the drivers claims compensation from the other driver alleging negligence, and the other driver denies negligence or claims that the injured claimant himself was negligent, then it becomes necessary to consider whether the injured claimant was negligent and if so, whether he was solely or partly responsible for the accident and the extent of his responsibility, that is his contributory negligence. Therefore where the injured is himself partly liable, the principle of 'composite negligence' will not apply nor can there be an automatic inference that the negligence was 50:50 as has been assumed in this case. The Tribunal ought to have examined the extent of contributory negligence of the appellant and thereby avoided confusion between composite negligence and contributory negligence. The High Court has failed to correct the said error."

13. The Apex Court in National Insurance Co. Ltd. Vs Challa Bharathamma & Ors reported in [2004 (8) SCC 517] has dealt with the breach of policy conditions by the owner when the insurer was asked to pay the compensation fixed by the tribunal and the right to recover the same was given to the insurer in the executing court concerned if the dispute between the insurer and the owner was the subject-matter of determination for the tribunal and the issue has been decided in favour of the insured. The same analogy can be applied to the instant cases as the liability of the joint tort feasor is joint and several. In the instant case, there is determination of inter se liability of composite negligence to the extent of negligence of 2/3rd and 1/3rd of respective drivers. Thus, the vehicle - trailor-truck which was not insured with the insurer, was negligent to the extent of 2/3rd. It would be open to the insurer being insurer of the bus after making payment to claimant to recover from the owner of the trailor-truck the amount to the aforesaid extent in the execution proceedings. Had there been no determination of the inter se liability for want of evidence or other joint tort feasor had not been impleaded, it was not open to settle such a dispute and to recover the amount in execution proceedings but the remedy would be to file another suit or appropriate proceedings in accordance with law.

What emerges from the aforesaid discussion is as follows :

(i) In the case of composite negligence, plaintiff/claimant is entitled to sue both or any one of the joint tort feasors and to recover the entire compensation as liability of joint tort feasors is joint and several.

(ii) In the case of composite negligence, apportionment of compensation between two tort feasors vis a vis the plaintiff/claimant is not permissible. He can recover at his option whole damages from any of them.

(iii) In case all the joint tort feasors have been impleaded and evidence is sufficient, it is open to the court/tribunal to determine inter se extent of composite negligence of the drivers. However, determination of the extent of negligence between the joint tort feasors is only for the purpose of their inter se liability so that one may recover the sum from the other after making whole of payment to the plaintiff/claimant to the extent it has satisfied the liability of the other. In case both of them have been impleaded and the apportionment/ extent of their negligence has been determined by the court/tribunal, in main case one joint tort feasor can recover the amount from the other in the execution proceedings.

(iv) It would not be appropriate for the court/tribunal to determine the extent of composite negligence of the drivers of two vehicles in the absence of impleadment of other joint tort feasors. In such a case, impleaded joint tort feasor should be left, in case he so desires, to sue the other joint tort feasor in independent proceedings after passing of the decree or award."

14. While going through the record it is clear that the Tribunal has materially erred in coming to the conclusion that the driver of the scooter was driving the scooter in rash and negligent manner. The reasoning given are not germane and are not proved by the driver of the Tata Sumo while seeing the site plan it is clear that the correct side of the scooter was the one where he was driving, though the road is divided by divider the side which was the correct side was not open to public and the scooter driver and other vehicles had to ply the vehicles on the side where the deceased was driving the said scooter. In this case the driver of the Tata Sumo has been charge sheeted. He has not stepped into the witness box and the impact shows that the scooterist was 10 per cent negligent. The Tata Sumo was trying to overtake another vehicle which is clear from evidence. The Sumo tried to overtake came on the right side which was not meant for it and that is how the accident occurred. There is no rebuttal evidence and therefore also this court while relying on the site plan and the judgment in Archit Saini and Another (supra) holds that the driver of the Tata Sumo who caused the fatal accident was the main author of the accident having taken place whereby two persons died which shows the impact with which Tata Sumo must have dashed the scooter hence the driver of Tata Sumo is held to be 90 percent negligent.

15. In view of the judgment in the case of F.A.F.O. No.534 of 1995 (Brahma Dutta Sharma Vs. Umesh Sharma and Others) decided on 30.01.2019 wherein para 14 , it has been held as follows:

"14. The finding of the Tribunal are perverse. The tempo being a bigger vehicle as no legal evidence has been produced to show that the claimant had contributed to the accident. Tribunal has not given proper reasons for holding him negligent whether he had taken permission to come Jhansi or not is of no relevance and it has not been brought on record that because he has left place of service, he was negligent. The conclusive proof negligence is of against the tempo driver, therefore, the tribunal committed manifest error in holding the appellant first contributory negligent and coupling with no proper reply for leaving the head quarter. There is no evidence about the motorcycle being driven negligently by the appellant at the time of accident. The Respondent did not produce any such evidence and there is a charge sheet against the tempo driver which prima-facie pointed towards the negligence of the appellant. Thus the finding of contributory negligence cannot be sustained. I am supported in my view in Mangla Ram Versus Oriental Insurance Company Limited, (2018) 5 SCC 656. "

16. Holding that the claim petitions were wrongly dismissed. The question is should this court remand the matter to the tribunal or decide the same here as the record is before this court while going though the judgment it is clear that the tribunal had calculated what would be the compensation available in M.A.C.P. No.44 of 2000 and 45 of 2000 but as the petitions being rejected no amount of compensation was ordered to be paid by any of the respondents holding that the claimants could file claim petitions for recovery against the owner and driver of the scooter though for the pillion rider it was a case of composite negligence.

17. In view of Bithika Mazumdar Vs. Sagar Pal (2017) 2 SCC 748 wherein it has been held that compensation claim petition which remained undecided for nine years and the record was before the Apex Court, the Apex Court decided the quantum.

Similarly, this court feels that as sixteen years have elapsed from filing of claim appeal and that the record is before this court instead of directing the parties to go before the tribunal only for the re-assessment of compensation which could cause further delay and will also cause further loss to the destitute family. This court in Brahma Dutta Sharma Vs. Umesh Sharma and Others (supra) has taken similar view and therefore I without remanding the matter as the principles for determination of compensation are well settled venture to recalculate the amount of compensation to be paid to the appellants in both these appeals decide the compensation here."

18. It is submitted by learned counsel for the appellant that the Tribunal has though wanted to reject the claim petition has considered and decided on quantum the income in Claim Petition No.44 of 2000 and 45 of 2000 of the deceased to be Rs. 2,000/- per month and has held that sum of Rs.4,08,000/- for loss of income in case of Bitti and has added another Rs.5,000/- in case of deceased Prem Singh. Law as it held that deceased driver of scooter negligent rejected both the claim petitions.

19. In case of Jagmohan his income has been considered to Rs.3,000/- as the deceased had a shop of preparing sweet in Delhi and has deducted 1/3 and granted a sum of Rs.4,32,000/- as the deceased was 25 years of age.

20. The amount is being re-evaluated in both the matters. The accident occurred in the year 2000. The income of the deceased in both the matters can be safely considered to be Rs.3,000/- as considered by the Tribunal however a sum of Rs.12,000/- will have to be added. Hence, the amount would be Rs.4,200/- per month. 1/3 will have to be deducted hence the amount available to the family would be Rs.3,000/- per month meaning thereby Rs.36,000 x 17 +40,000= 6,52,000/- in case of F.A.F.O No. 3189 of 2003 and in F.A.F.O. No. 3188 of 2003 Rs.36,000X18=40,000=6,88,000/-.

21. However, the rate of interest which is 6% would be 7.5% in view of the latest decision of the Apex Court in National Insurance Co. Ltd. Vs. Mannat Johal and Others, 2019 (2) T.A.C. 705 (S.C.) wherein the Apex Court has held as under :

"13. The aforesaid features equally apply to the contentions urged on behalf of the claimants as regards the rate of interest. The Tribunal had awarded interest at the rate of 12% p.a. but the same had been too high a rate in comparison to what is ordinarily envisaged in these matters. The High Court, after making a substantial enhancement in the award amount, modified the interest component at a reasonable rate of 7.5% p.a. and we find no reason to allow the interest in this matter at any rate higher than that allowed by High Court."

22. In view of the above, the appeal is partly allowed. Judgment and decree passed by the Tribunal shall stand modified to the aforesaid extent. The amount be calculated and deposited with interest at the rate of 7.5% from the date of filing of the claim petition till the amount is deposited. The amount be deposited within a period of 12 weeks from today.

23. As far as the claimants of F.A.F,O No.3189 of 2003 who are the heirs of Prem Singh and who had preferred M.A.C.P. No. 45 of 2000 can recover the amount from any of the tort-fessor as Prem Singh was a pillion rider and the insurance company may recover 10 per cent from the insurance company and owner of the scooter. F.A.F. No. 3188 of 2003 the owner and the insurance company of the Tatasumo to deposit 90 per cent of the awarded amount as driver Jagmohan is held to be 10 per cent negligent and that amount will have to be deducted.

24. The record and proceedings be send back to the Tribunal forthwith.

A. Income Tax Act, 1961- Sections 11, 12, 12 AA, 254, 260 (A) - Tribunal can pass order directing Commissioner to grant registration, if satisfied with the material already on record - To decide contradictory views of regarding the issue - whether Income Tax Appellate Tribunal while hearing Appeal in a matter where registration U/S 12 AA has been denied by Commissioner, can itself pass an order directing Commissioner to grant registration or should leave the matter to be considered afresh by Commissioner, giving rise to further litigation - matter has been referred to Full Bench- Answering the reference, the High Court held-An appeal before the Tribunal is a continuation of original proceedings-The words "as it thinks fit" used in relation to the power of the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal in Section 254(1) are of widest amplitude and confer very wide jurisdiction on the appellate authority- Where the words of Statute are clear without any ambiguity, there is no scope for the courts to

(Delivered by Hon'ble Manish Mathur, J.)

1. This Full Bench has been constituted in terms of the reference order dated 18.01.2019 passed by Division Bench in the case of Commissioner of Income Tax Exemption U.P. State Construction and Infrastructure vs. M/s. Reham Foundation Kandhari Lane, Behind Islamia College, Lal Bagh, Lucknow vide order dated 18.01.2019. The questions referred are as folllows:-

"(i) Whether Income Tax Appellate Tribunal while hearing Appeal in a matter where registration under Section 12AA has been denied by Commissioner Income Tax can itself pass an order directing Commissioner to grant registration or should leave the matter to be considered by Commissioner Income Tax to consider matter afresh giving rise to further litigation in the matter;

(ii) Whether co-extensive Appellate jurisdiction conferred upon Income Tax Appellate Tribunal being a last court of fact can be read to confer upon it similar powers as been exercised by authorities below whose orders are considered in Appeals by Tribunal."

2. It was on an Appeal preferred by the Revenue under Section 260 (A) of Income Tax Act, 1961 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act of 1961'). The Appeal was preferred to challenge the order of the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal, which directed registration of the Trust under Section 12AA (1)(b) of the Act of 1961 within a period of sixty days, failing which it would deemed to have been registered. The challenge to said direction was made by the Revenue in reference to the judgment of the Division Bench in Income Tax Appeal No. 112 of 2013: Commissioner of Income Tax, Meerut vs. M/S. A.R. Trust Meerut decided on 04.09.2017 wherein it was held that the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal itself cannot direct for registration of a Trust, without recording satisfaction, as contemplated under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961.

3. Learned counsel for the Revenue submits that power for registration of a Trust or an Institution under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961 has been given to the Commissioner. Those powers cannot be exercised by the Tribunal. If at all on the scrutiny of the case in Appeal, a case is made out for registration of a Trust, it needs to be remanded back to the Commissioner. The direction for registration of the Trust under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961 cannot be given by the Tribunal itself. It is for the reason that registration of the Trust under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961 is subject to the satisfaction of the Commissioner about the genuineness of activities of the Trust. In absence of recording of satisfaction of the Commissioner about the object and activities of a Trust, a direction for registration would be illegal. It is for that reason alone, the Division Bench of this Court in the case of M/s. A.R. Trust Meerut (supra) caused interference in the order of the Tribunal, where direction was given for registration of the Trust within a period of sixty days.

4. In the subsequent judgment in the case of M/s. Yamuna Expressway Industrial Development Autority (supra), a divergent view was taken by the Court. If a direction for registration of a Trust is given without recording satisfaction, it would be opposed to Section 12AA of the Act of 1961. The prayer is accordingly to answer the Reference against the assessee and in favour of the Revenue. It is after holding that the Appellate Tribunal is not competent to direct for registration of a Trust under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961, rather it should remand the case to the Commissioner for the aforesaid.

5. The argument raised by learned counsel for the Revenue has been opposed by learned counsel appearing for the assessee. It is submitted that after the rejection of an application for registration of a Trust under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961, if refusal is without considering any material, then on Appeal, after considering the issue and recording satisfaction, the Tribunal can direct for registration of the Trust. It is not only for the reason that such power exists with the Tribunal pursuant to Section 254 of the Act of 1961 but even to take the order of the Tribunal to its logical conclusions.

6. It is stated that if application for registration is rejected by the Commissioner after recording a perverse finding then on an Appeal, it can be corrected after taking a proper view and recording satisfaction, as required under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961, to direct for registration of the Trust. If the required satisfaction is recorded by the Appellate Tribunal, then remand of the matter would be nothing but an empty formality, as the Commissioner cannot take a view different then taken by the Appellate Tribunal. The registration of the Trust needs to be granted if the Appeal is allowed by the Tribunal after recording its satisfaction, as required under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961. In view of above, the Tribunal can itself issue a direction for registration of the Trust. The Tribunal can even remand the case in given circumstance when the Commissioner has rejected the application on hyper technical grounds and interference therein is made. The matter can be remanded back to the Commissioner to record its satisfaction, as required under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961. In view of above, the adjudication of the issue before the Tribunal can be with a direction to register the Trust under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961 or remand of the case. The prayer is to answer the Reference holding that Tribunal is having powers to direct for registration of a Trust under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961 or to remand the case to the Commissioner to record its satisfaction, as required under the Act. The direction of the Tribunal for registration of the Trust would however to be on recording such satisfaction and not otherwise. The prayer is accordingly to answer the Reference by holding that Appellate Tribunal is having the power to direct for registration of the Trust or alternatively to remand the case to the commissioner.

7. In counter, the counsel for the assessee has relied upon the judgment of Division Bench in the case of Income Tax Appeal No. 107 of 2016: Commissioner of Income Tax (Exemption), Lucknow vs. M/s. Yamuna Expressway Industrial Development Authority, decided on 21.04.2017. In the said case, the Division Bench held that powers of the Tribunal are co-extensive to that of the Commissioner under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961. Thus, it can direct for registration of a Trust/Institution. A reference of Section 254 of the Act of 1961 was given to show power of the Tribunal. The Division Bench therein found the Tribunal to be competent to direct for registration of a Trust. Taking into consideration the conflicting view, now we need to decide the questions raised before us and otherwise quoted herein above.

8. We have considered the rival submission of the parties and perused the record.

9. The issue before the larger Bench is in reference to Section 12AA of the Act of 1961, thus, it would be gainful to refer the provisions aforesaid. It is quoted hereunder for ready reference:-

"Procedure for registration.

12AA. (1) The Principal Commissioner or Commissioner, on receipt of an application for registration of a Trust or institution made under clause (a) or clause (aa) or clause (ab) of sub-section (1) of Section 12A, shall--

(a) call for such documents or information from the Trust or institution as he thinks necessary in order to satisfy himself about the genuineness of activities of the Trust or institution and may also make such inquiries as he may deem necessary in this behalf; and

(b) after satisfying himself about the objects of the Trust or institution and the genuineness of its activities, he--

(i) shall pass an order in writing registering the Trust or institution;

(ii) shall, if he is not so satisfied, pass an order in writing refusing to register the Trust or institution, and a copy of such order shall be sent to the applicant:

Provided that no order under sub-clause (ii) shall be passed unless the applicant has been given a reasonable opportunity of being heard.

(1A) All applications, pending before the Principal Chief Commissioner or Chief Commissioner on which no order has been passed under clause (b) of sub-section (1) before the 1st day of June, 1999, shall stand transferred on that day to the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner and the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner may proceed with such applications under that sub-section from the stage at which they were on that day.

(2) Every order granting or refusing registration under clause (b) of sub-section (1) shall be passed before the expiry of six months from the end of the month in which the application was received under clause (a) or clause (aa) or clause (ab) of sub-section (1) of section 12A.

(3) Where a Trust or an institution has been granted registration under clause (b) of sub-section (1) or has obtained registration at any time under section 12A [as it stood before its amendment by the Finance (No. 2) Act, 1996 (33 of 1996)] and subsequently the Principal Commissioner or Commissioner is satisfied that the activities of such Trust or institution are not genuine or are not being carried out in accordance with the objects of the Trust or institution, as the case may be, he shall pass an order in writing cancelling the registration of such Trust or institution:

Provided that no order under this sub-section shall be passed unless such Trust or institution has been given a reasonable opportunity of being heard.*

(4) Without prejudice to the provisions of sub-section (3), where a Trust or an institution has been granted registration under clause (b) of sub-section (1) or has obtained registration at any time under section 12A [as it stood before its amendment by the Finance (No. 2) Act, 1996 (33 of 1996)] and subsequently it is noticed that the activities of the Trust or the institution are being carried out in a manner that the provisions of sections 11 and and 12 do not apply to exclude either whole or any part of the income of such Trust or institution due to operation of sub-section (1) of section 13; then the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner may, by an order in writing, cancel the registration of such Trust or institution:

Provided that the registration shall not be cancelled under this sub-section, if the Trust or institution proves that there was a reasonable cause for the activities to be carried out in the said manner."*

10. A perusal of Section 12AA of the Income Tax Act shows that the Principal Commissioner or the Commissioner, on receipt of an application for registration of a Trust or an institution, may call for such document or information as he thinks necessary to satisfy himself about the genuineness of the activities of the Trust or the Institution, as it deems necessary. After calling for such an information and satisfying himself about the object and genuineness of the activities of the Trust, he shall pass an order for registering the Trust or the Institution or in the alternate, refuse such registration. In view of the aforesaid provision, the registration of the Trust is subject to satisfaction of the Commissioner, not only over the genuineness of the activities of the Trust, but also about the objects of the Trust or the Institution. In view of above, the registration of the Trust requires satisfaction of the Commissioner. In case the Commissioner is satisfied with the genuineness of the activities and even the objects, he can register the Trust under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961 and in case the Commissioner is not satisfied or refuses registration, then the Appeal lies to the Tribunal to challenge such order under Section 254 of the Act, 1961.

11. In such case, the Appellate Tribunal needs to adjudicate the issue raised before it because it is the last court of facts. The exemption under Sections 11 & 12 of the Act of 1961 can be sought only after registration of the Trust, thus satisfaction of the Commissioner before registration has been given importance. In view of above, the argument of the learned counsel for the Revenue is that unless such a satisfaction, as envisaged under Section 12AA of the Act of 1961 is recorded by the Commissioner, a direction for its registration should not be given by the Tribunal. As against the aforesaid, the argument of learned counsel for the assessee is that if Tribunal is satisfied about the genuineness of the activities and the object then it can direct for registration.

12. Hon'ble the Supreme Court in case of Shiv Shakti Cooperative Housing Society versus Swaraj Developers and others reported in (2003) 6 SCC 659 has considered the scope of an Appeal although in terms of Sections 96 and 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 but the basic premise culled out from the pronouncement of Hon'ble the Supreme Court is that an Appeal is essentially continuation of original proceedings which is provided for only by statute and is not a necessary part of procedure in an action. The relevant paragraphs of the judgment is as follows:-

16. An Appeal is essentially continuation of the original proceedings and the provisions applied at the time of institution of the suit are to be operative even in respect of the Appeals. That is because there is a vested right in the litigant to avail the remedy of an Appeal. As was observed in K. Kapen Chako v. Provident Investment Co. (P) Ltd. [(1977) 1 SCC 593 : AIR 1976 SC 2610] only in cases where vested rights are involved, a legislation has to be interpreted to mean as one affecting such right to be prospectively operative. The right of Appeal is only by statute. It is (sic not a) necessary part of the procedure in an action, but "the right of entering a superior court and invoking its aid and interposition to redress the error of the court below. It seems absurd to denominate this paramount right part of the practice of the inferior Tribunal". (Per Lord Westbury, See: Attorney General v. Sillem [33 LJ Ex 209 : 10 LT 434 : 10 HLC 704, 724 : 11 ER 1200] , ER p. 1209.) The Appeal, strictly so called, is "one in which the question is, whether the order of the court from which the Appeal is brought was right on the materials which that court had before it" (Per Lord Devuil Ponnammal v. Arumogam [1905 AC 383, 390] . The right of Appeal, where it exists, is a matter of substance and not of procedure (Colonial Sugar Refining Co. v. Irving [1905 AC 369 : (1904-07) All ER Rep Ext 1620 : 92 LT 738 (PC)])."

"17. Right of Appeal is statutory. Right of Appeal inhered in no one. When conferred by statute it becomes a vested right. In this regard there is essential distinction between right of Appeal and right of suit. Where there is inherent right in every person to file a suit and for its maintainability it requires no authority of law, Appeal requires so. As was observed in State of Kerala v. K.M. Charia Abdulla and Co. [AIR 1965 SC 1585] the distinction between right of Appeal and revision is based on differences implicit in the two expressions. An Appeal is continuation of the proceedings; in effect the entire proceedings are before the Appellate Authority and it has the power to review the evidence subject to statutory limitations prescribed. But in the case of revision, whatever powers the revisional authority may or may not have, it has no power to review the evidence, unless the statute expressly confers on it that power. It was noted by the four Judge Bench in Hari Shankar v. Rao Girdhari Lal Chowdhury [AIR 1963 SC 698] that the distinction between an Appeal and a revision is a real one. A right of Appeal carries with it a right of rehearing on law as well as fact, unless the statute conferring the right of Appeal limits the rehearing in some way, as has been done in second Appeals arising under the Code. The power of hearing revision is generally given to a superior court so that it may satisfy itself that a particular case has been decided according to law. Reference was made to Section 115 of the Code to hold that the High Court's powers under the said provision are limited to certain particular categories of cases. The right there is confined to jurisdiction and jurisdiction alone."

13. With regard to interpretation of statute, it is settled law that statute is an edict of the legislature and where the words of statute are clear without any ambiguity and the intention of the legislature is clearly conveyed, there is no scope for the court to innovate or take upon itself the task of altering the statutory provisions by breathing into the provisions, words which have not been expressly incorporated by the legislature.

14. It is only in case where the words of statute are ambiguous or a reading of which clearly indicates that it is a case of 'casus omissus' that the court can interpret the provisions incorporated in statute. Hon'ble the Supreme court referring to various pronouncements in the case of Bharat Aluminium Company versus Kaiser Aluminium Technical Services Inc. reported in (2012) 9 SCC 552 has held that the court must proceed on the footing that the legislature intended what it has said. Even where there is a 'casus omissus' it is for the others than the courts to remedy the defect. The relevant paragraph in the case of Bharat Aluminium Company (supra) is as follows:-

"65. Mr Sorabjee has also rightly pointed out the observations made by Lord Diplock in Duport Steels Ltd. [(1980) 1 WLR 142 : (1980) 1 All ER 529 (HL)] In the aforesaid judgment, the House of Lords disapproved the approach adopted by the Court of Appeal in discerning the intention of the legislature; it is observed that: (WLR p. 157 C-D)

"... the role of the judiciary is confined to ascertaining from the words that Parliament has approved as expressing its intention what that intention was, and to giving effect to it. Where the meaning of the statutory words is plain and unambiguous it is not for the Judges to invent fancied ambiguities as an excuse for failing to give effect to its plain meaning because they themselves consider that the consequences of doing so would be inexpedient, or even unjust or immoral. In controversial matters such as are involved in industrial relations there is room for differences of opinion as to what is expedient, what is just and what is morally justifiable. Under our Constitution it is Parliament's opinion on these matters that is paramount."

(emphasis supplied)

In the same judgment, it is further observed: (WLR p. 157 F)

"... But if this be the case it is for Parliament, not for the judiciary, to decide whether any changes should be made to the law as stated in the Acts...."

(emphasis supplied)"

15. With regard to taxing statute, it has been held that the courts have to apply strict rule of interpretation. When the competent legislature mandates taxing certain person/certain objects in certain circumstances, it can not be expanded/interpreted to include those, which were not intended by the legislature. The aforesaid has been held by Hon'ble the Supreme Court in the case of Commissioner of Customs (Import) Mumbai versus Dilip Kumar and Company and others reported in (2018) 9 SCC 1. The relevant paragraphs in the aforesaid judgment of Dilip Kumar and Company and others(supra) is as follows:-

"21. The well-settled principle is that when the words in a statute are clear, plain and unambiguous and only one meaning can be inferred, the courts are bound to give effect to the said meaning irrespective of consequences. If the words in the statute are plain and unambiguous, it becomes necessary to expound those words in their natural and ordinary sense. The words used declare the intention of the legislature."

"24. In construing penal statutes and taxation statutes, the Court has to apply strict rule of interpretation. The penal statute which tends to deprive a person of right to life and liberty has to be given strict interpretation or else many innocents might become victims of discretionary decision-making. Insofar as taxation statutes are concerned, Article 265 of the Constitution ["265. Taxes not to be imposed save by authority of law.-- No tax shall be levied or collected except by authority of law."] prohibits the State from extracting tax from the citizens without authority of law. It is axiomatic that taxation statute has to be interpreted strictly because the State cannot at their whims and fancies burden the citizens without authority of law. In other words, when the competent Legislature mandates taxing certain persons/certain objects in certain circumstances, it cannot be expanded/interpreted to include those, which were not intended by the legislature."

"25. At the outset, we must clarify the position of "plain meaning rule or clear and unambiguous rule" with respect to tax law. "The plain meaning rule" suggests that when the language in the statute is plain and unambiguous, the court has to read and understand the plain language as such, and there is no scope for any interpretation. This salutary maxim flows from the phrase "cum inverbis nulla ambiguitas est, non debet admitti voluntatis quaestio". Following such maxim, the courts sometimes have made strict interpretation subordinate to the plain meaning rule [Mangalore Chemicals and Fertilisers Ltd. v. CCT, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 21] , though strict interpretation is used in the precise sense. To say that strict interpretation involves plain reading of the statute and to say that one has to utilise strict interpretation in the event of ambiguity is self-contradictory."

16. The principles with regard to 'casus omissus' and its implementation have also been dealt with by Hon'ble the Supreme Court in the case of Shiv Shakti Cooperative Housing Society (supra) in which the relevant paragraphs are as follows:-

"19. It is a well-settled principle in law that the court cannot read anything into a statutory provision which is plain and unambiguous. A statute is an edict of the legislature. The language employed in a statute is the determinative factor of legislative intent. Words and phrases are symbols that stimulate mental references to referents. The object of interpreting a statute is to ascertain the intention of the legislature enacting it. (See Institute of Chartered Accountants of India v. Price Waterhouse [(1997) 6 SCC 312 : AIR 1998 SC 74] .) The intention of the legislature is primarily to be gathered from the language used, which means that attention should be paid to what has been said as also to what has not been said. As a consequence, a construction which requires for its support, addition or substitution of words or which results in rejection of words as meaningless has to be avoided. As observed in Crawford v. Spooner [(1846) 6 Moo PCC 1 : 4 MIA 179] courts cannot aid the legislatures' defective phrasing of an Act, we cannot add or mend, and by construction make up deficiencies which are left there. (See State of Gujarat v. Dilipbhai Nathjibhai Patel [(1998) 3 SCC 234 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 737 : JT (1998) 2 SC 253] .) It is contrary to all rules of construction to read words into an Act unless it is absolutely necessary to do so. [See Stock v. Frank Jones (Tipton) Ltd. [(1978) 1 All ER 948 : (1978) 1 WLR 231 (HL)]] Rules of interpretation do not permit courts to do so, unless the provision as it stands is meaningless or of a doubtful meaning. Courts are not entitled to read words into an Act of Parliament unless clear reason for it is to be found within the four corners of the Act itself. (Per Lord Loreburn, L.C. in Vickers Sons and Maxim Ltd. v. Evans [1910 AC 444 : 1910 WN 161 (HL)] , quoted in Jumma Masjid v. Kodimaniandra Deviah [AIR 1962 SC 847] .)"

"23. Two principles of construction -- one relating to casus omissus and the other in regard to reading the statute as a whole -- appear to be well settled. Under the first principle a casus omissus cannot be supplied by the court except in the case of clear necessity and when reason for it is found in the four corners of the statute itself but at the same time a casus omissus should not be readily inferred and for that purpose all the parts of a statute or section must be construed together and every clause of a section should be construed with reference to the context and other clauses thereof so that the construction to be put on a particular provision makes a consistent enactment of the whole statute. This would be more so if literal construction of a particular clause leads to manifestly absurd or anomalous results which could not have been intended by the legislature. "An intention to produce an unreasonable result", said Danckwerts, L.J. in Artemiou v.

Procopiou [(1966) 1 QB 878 : (1965) 3 All ER 539 : (1965) 3 WLR 1011 (CA)] (All ER p. 544 I), "is not to be imputed to a statute if there is some other construction available". Where to apply words literally would "defeat the obvious intention of the legislation and produce a wholly unreasonable result", we must "do some violence to the words" and so achieve that obvious intention and produce a rational construction. Per Lord Reid in Luke v. IRC [1963 AC 557 : (1963) 1 All ER 655 : (1963) 2 WLR 559 (HL)] where at AC p. 577 (All ER p. 664 I) he also observed: "This is not a new problem, though our standard of drafting is such that it rarely emerges."

17. A conspectus of the aforesaid judgments make it amply clear that statutory interpretation particularly with regard to taxing statutes has to be strict and only in accordance with the unambiguous words used in the statute. The intention of the legislature in incorporating or leaving out certain words is necessarily required to be seen.

18. The words 'as it thinks fit' used in relation to the powers of the Appellate Tribunal exercisable under Section 254(1) of the Act, 1961 is of the widest amplitude. The said expression confers a very wide jurisdiction enabling the Appellate authority to take an entirely different view on the same set of facts.

19. The terminology ' as it thinks fit' in relation to the powers of the Appellate authority have been considered by Hon'ble the Supreme Court in the case of Babu Lal Nagar versus Shree Synthetics Limited and others reported in 1984 (supp) SCC 128. The relevant paragraph of the judgment is as follows:

"16. Section 66(1) of the Act provides that the Industrial Court omitting the portion not relevant for the present purpose, may call for and examine the record of such case and pass order in reference thereto as it thinks fit. If the Industrial Court has the jurisdiction to pass any order in reference to a case called for by it as it thinks fit, obviously it can come to a conclusion on the same set of facts different from the one to which the Labour Court had arrived. It was however urged that this jurisdiction of wide amplitude has been cut down by the proviso which provides that the Industrial Court shall not vary or reverse any order of the Labour Court under Section 66(1) unless -- (i) it is satisfied that the Labour Court has -- (a) exercised jurisdiction not vested in it by law; or (b) failed to exercise a jurisdiction so vested; or (c) acted in exercise of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity. It was urged that these clauses so circumscribe and cut down the jurisdiction of the Industrial Court under Section 66 as to be on par with Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The main part of Section 61 (sic 66) clearly spells out the jurisdiction of the Industrial Court to pass any order in reference to the case brought before it as it thinks fit. The expression "as it thinks fit" confers a very wide jurisdiction enabling it to take an entirely different view on the same set of facts. The expression "as it thinks fit" has the same connotation, unless context otherwise indicates, "as he deems fit" and the latter expression was interpreted by this Court in Raja Ram Mahadev Paranjype v. Aba Maruti Mali [AIR 1962 SC 753 : 1962 Supp (1) SCR 739] to mean to make an order in terms of the statute, an order which would give effect to a right which the Act has elsewhere conferred. Is this jurisdiction so circumscribed as to bring it on par with Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure? Proviso does cut down the ambit of the main provision but it cannot be interpreted to denude the main provision of any efficacy and reduce it to a paper provision. Both must be so interpreted as to permit interference which if not undertaken there would be miscarriage of justice. Sub-clause (c) of the first proviso to Section 66(1) will permit the Industrial Court to interfere with the order made by the Labour Court, if the Labour Court has acted with material irregularity in disposal of the dispute before it. If the finding recorded by the Labour Court is such to which no reasonable man can arrive, obviously, the Industrial Court in exercise of its revisional jurisdiction would be entitled to interfere with the same even if patent jurisdictional error is not pointed out."

20. Upon a perusal of the powers of the Appellate authority as indicated in section 254(1) of the Act, 1961, it can be seen that the widest jurisdiction has been conferred upon the Appellate authority in the wisdom of the legislature. The said power has not been proscribed in any manner whatsoever.

21. Hon'ble the Supreme Court in the case of Clariant International Limited and another versus Securities and Exchange Board of India reported in (2004) 8 SCC 524 has held that once the jurisdiction of the Appellate authority is not fettered by statute, it exercises all the jurisdiction. It has also been held that the limits to jurisdiction of the Appellate authority would have been stated explicitly in the statute had that been the intention of legislature.

The relevant paragraphs of the judgment in the case of Clariant International Limited (supra) are as follows;-

"73. Had the intention of Parliament been to limit the jurisdiction of the Tribunal, it could say so explicitly as it has been done in terms of Section 15-Z of the Act whereby the jurisdiction of this Court to hear the Appeal is limited to the question of law."

"74. The jurisdiction of the Appellate Authority under the Act is not in any way fettered by the statute and, thus, it exercises all the jurisdiction as that of the Board. It can exercise its discretionary jurisdiction in the same manner as the Board."

22. In view of the aforesaid judgments of Hon'ble the Supreme Court, it is clearly evident that the provisions of the Act 1961 have to be interpreted strictly in accordance with what it explicitly states. Once the legislature in its wisdom has not fettered the jurisdiction of the Appellate Tribunal, it would not be appropriate for the courts to put fetters upon such jurisdiction since doing so would amount to doing violence to the specific provisions of statute.

23. A perusal of Section 254 of the Act of 1961 shows that the Appellate Tribunal is given power to pass such orders, as it thinks fit. The powers given under Section 254 of the Act of 1961 is to be read along with other provisions of the Act. Section 12AA of the Act of 1961 requires satisfaction about the genuineness of the activities and the objects of a Trust before its registration by the Commissioner. The arguments of learned counsel for Revenue in reference to the requirement of satisfaction on the genuineness of activities of a Trust is to be exercised by the Commissioner and that the Tribunal should not direct registration of Trust unless satisfaction, as envisaged under Section 12 (AA) of the Act, 1961 is recorded, is only partly correct.

24. Upon consideration of the judgments referred to herein above, we are of the considered opinion that in case where the Commissioner has refused to accept the application for registration of Trust after recording its finding on the basis of material on record before him holding that the activities and object of the Trust are not genuine and the Appellate Tribunal on the basis of the same material on record comes to the conclusion that the order of the Commissioner is perverse since it has been passed ignoring, misconstruing or misinterpreting such evidence, then it can direct registration of the Trust without remanding the matter to the Commissioner.

25. Remand of the case to the Commissioner in the said circumstance after recording of satisfaction by the Appellate Tribunal about the genuineness of objects and activities of the Trust, on the basis of material on record, would be an empty formality because the Commissioner in such a case can not go against the specific finding recorded by the Appellate Tribunal.

26. In view of the unfettered power of the Appellate Tribunal in terms of section 254 (1) of the Act, 1961 the Tribunal can very well record its satisfaction on the genuineness of the activities and object of the Trust and can very well direct registration of the Trust without remand of case to the Commissioner in case such satisfaction is recorded on the basis of documents and material already available on record at the stage of examination by Commissioner.

27. However it would be a different matter where the Appellate Tribunal records such satisfaction on the basis of material or documentary evidence which was not available before the Commissioner while exercising his powers under Section 12 (AA) of the Act, 1961, which is our opinion would require remand.

28. Remand to the Commissioner can also be affected in a case where the Commissioner rejects the application on a technical ground without recording its opinion on facts or genuineness of the activities and object of the Trust but the Tribunal finds ground for rejection on such technical ground thereby reopening the issue of recording satisfaction in terms of Section 12 (AA) of the Act, 1961.

29. In view of the aforesaid discussion, it is clear that the power and jurisdiction of the Appellate Tribunal under Section 254(1) of the Act, 1961 is unfettered thereby enabling the Appellate Tribunal to direct registration of the Trust at its level itself but the same is not open as a matter of course and such power is to be exercised only in circumstances indicated herein above.

30. The said onus on the Appellate Tribunal to remand the matter in cases indicated herein above is also in view of the strict interpretation of the powers of the Commissioner under Section 12 (AA) of the Act, 1961 because if the Appellate Tribunal is given such wide powers to direct registration of Trust in all or any circumstances, it would render the provisions of Section 12(AA) otiose, which again can not be the intention of legislature.

31. In view of the above the answer to questions referred are answered as under:-

(i) The income tax Appellate Tribunal while hearing an Appeal under Section 254(1) in a matter where registration under Section 12(AA) has been denied by Commissioner income tax can itself pass an order directing commissioner to grant registration in case the income tax Appellate Tribunal disagrees with the satisfaction of the Commissioner on the basis of material already on record before the Commissioner.

However the said power is not to be exercised as a matter of course and that remand to the Commissioner income tax is to be made where the income tax Appellate Tribunal records a divergent view on the basis of material which has been filed before the Appellate Tribunal for the first time.

Remand for determination of question regarding grant of registration to a Trust would also be necessitated in cases where the registration application has been rejected by the Commissioner income tax on technical grounds without recording his satisfaction as contemplated under Section 12 (AA) of the Act, 1961 and such decision is overturned by the income tax Appellate Tribunal.

(ii) The power of the Appellate Tribunal are co-extensive with the power of the Commissioner under Section 12 (AA) of the Act, 1961 subject to what has been indicated herein above. However order for registration can be issued only after recording satisfaction with regard to genuineness of activities of the Trust as provided under Section 12 (AA) of the Act, 1961.

32. In view of the aforesaid the reference is answered.

33. The Registry is directed to place Appeals before the appropriate court dealing with the matter.

A. U.P. Urban Buildings (Regulation of Letting, Rent and Eviction) Act. 1972- SCC Suit for arrears of rent, damages and ejectment of tenant- SCC Revision under Section 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887 - application under Order 15 Rule 5 CPC - striking off defence on failure to deposit admitted rent etc. (Para 3,4 ,7 & 23)

Held:- The power to strike off defence is discretionary at the instance of court concerned and that it is not mandatory for the court to automatically allow the application for striking off defence - mere failure to pay rent on part of tenant is not enough to justify an order striking off defence and it is only a wilful failure or deliberate default that can call for exercise of the extra ordinary power vested in court. The defence has been struck off - default in deposit of admitted amount of rent as contemplated under second part of Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. was continuous - explanation of illness given by tenant-opposite party without adequate evidence to corroborate the same would definitely fall within the meaning of wilful default. The revisional court without interfering with the findings of fact recorded by the trial court erred in law in setting aside the order of trial court for striking off defence. (Para 33 ,34, 35)

(Delivered by Hon'ble Manish Mathur, J.)

1. Heard Sri Ravi Nath Tilhari, learned counsel for the petitioner and Sri S.K.Mehrotra, learned counsel assisted by Ms.Priyam Mehrotra, learned counsel appearing on behalf of opposite party no.1. Opposite party no.2, Additional District Judge being merely a proforma opposite party is not represented.

2. Under challenge is the order dated 30.08.2018 passed by III Additional Sessions Judge, Unnao in SCC Revision No.04/2018 (Jainul Islaam @ Gop v. Maseehamasi Farookhi) whereby revision filed against order dated 17.05.2018 striking off defence of tenant-opposite party on application of petitioner-landlord has been allowed.

3. As per averments made in this petition filed under Article 227 of the Constitution of India, petitioner-landlord filed SCC Suit No.8/2009 for arrears of rent, damages and ejectment of tenant-opposite party with respect to three shops numbered 369, 370, 371 situate in Mohalla Taki Nagar, opposite Central Bank, Pargana, Tahsil and District Unnnao. It has been stated that tenancy of the shops in question was at the rate of Rs.700/- per month for each shop apart from water tax. The landlord was compelled to file suit when monthly rent with effect from June 2008 till April 2009 was not paid by tenant. The tenancy was determined by registered notice dated 27.04.2009 in which arrears of rent and water tax was also demanded along with vacation of the shops in question. However, despite aforesaid notice when arrears of rent were not paid, petitioner-landlord was compelled to file the suit.

4. Tenant-opposite party having put in appearance in suit proceedings, filed his written statement on 07.05.2010 admitting tenancy but denying the rate of rent at the rate of Rs.700/- per shop for any period prior to April 2007 although admitting aforesaid rate of rent with effect from April 2007. Liability for payment of water tax was also denied.

5. Subsequently, the SCC Suit was dismissed in default of appearance on 30.08.2011 and was restored to its original number only on 25.09.2014 whereafter tenant-opposite party filed application dated 23.01.2015 (Paper No.56-Ga) to deposit rent with effect from August 2011 till January 2015 amounting to Rs.88,200/-. Another application (Paper No.61-Ga) was filed to deposit rent for the months of February 2015 till April, 2015 including water tax and interest at the rate of 9% per annum amounting to Rs.5040/-.

6. Aforesaid applications were allowed by means of order dated 23.08.2017 permitting tenant to deposit rent/arrears of rent/water tax and interest at his own risk.

7. However, it has been stated that despite said order, tenant did not comply with the same and no such deposit as envisaged in the order was made by tenant. Owing to the said fact, petitioner-landlord filed application dated 1.5.2017(Paper No.C-70) under Order 15 Rule 5 CPC seeking the striking off defence of tenant-opposite party for failing to comply with the provisions. Petitioner-landlord filed another application on 30.10.2017 (Paper No.C-86) stating that tenant had not deposited rent with effect from April 2011 and that an amount of more than Rs.2,00,000/- towards rent and water tax was outstanding. A prayer for striking off defence as per the earlier application was also made.

8. Pursuant to aforesaid applications by petitioner-landlord, tenant opposite party filed another application dated 16.12.2017 (Paper No.91-Ga) stating that the due amount could not be deposited owing to ill-health of tenant and permission was sought to deposit Rs.50,000/- out of due amount, with assurance that rest amount would be deposited at the earliest. The application was thereafter allowed vide order dated 16.12.2017 permitting tenant-opposite party to deposit the amount at his own risk. It has been stated that even thereafter, deposit as permitted was not made.

9. Subsequently vide order dated 17.05.2018, application (no.C-70) was allowed striking off defence of tenant-opposite party against which SCC Revision No.4 of 2018 was filed and has been allowed vide impugned order dated 30.08.2018 resulting in the filing of the present petition under Article 227 of the Constitution of India.

10. Learned counsel appearing on behalf of petitioner-landlord has submitted that a bare perusal of order dated 17.05.2018 will make it clear that the circumstances indicated in said order left the court with no other option but to strike off defence of tenant-opposite party particularly in view of the fact that twice applications for deposit of rent were allowed by the SCC Court, firstly on 23.08.2017 and subsequently on 16.12.2017 but despite said permission being granted by court, no deposit was made by tenant which would definitely come within the meaning of the term 'willful default'. It has been submitted that the learned revisional Court had no occasion to disturb the order dated 17.05.2018, particularly when no different opinion has been expressed by revisional court for differing with reasons indicated by the SCC Court. It has been submitted the finding recorded by revisional court that tenant/opposite party has deposited rent on various occasions is not based on any cogent evidence on record and is also completely against the finding recorded by the SCC Court to the effect that no deposit was made by tenant-opposite party despite orders thereto.

11. The learned counsel has relied upon the decision of Hon'ble the Supreme Court in Bal Gopal Maheshwari and others v. Sanjeev Kumar Gupta reported in (2013) 8 SCC 719 regarding the scope of powers of this Court under Article 227 of the Constitution of India. He has further relied on the judgment rendered by Hon'ble the Supreme Court in Trilok Singh Chauhan v. Ram Lal (Dead) through LRs and others reported in (2018) 2 SCC 566. Reliance has also been placed on the judgment in Bimal Chand Jain v. Gopal Agarwal reported in (1981) 3 SCC 486; Haider Abbas v. Additional District Judge (Court No.3), Allahabad and ors reported in 2006(1) ARC 341 as well as decision of this Court in Shailendra Sharma and another v. Amit Bansal (Dr.) reported in 2017 (5) ADJ 239 with regard to striking off defence and the provisions of Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. as applicable in the State of U.P.

12. Learned counsel appearing on behalf of tenant-opposite party has rebutted arguments advanced by learned counsel for the petitioner with the submission that arrears of rent along with interest etc. had been deposited by tenant-opposite party on the first date of hearing which was prior to its dismissal in default of appearance in the year 2011. It has been submitted that the suit itself was dismissed in default of appearance on 30.08.2011 and was subsequently restored only after three years on 25.09.2014. As such, there was no occasion for tenant-opposite party to make any deposit within aforesaid three years. It has been submitted that subsequently as soon as the suit was restored, tenant-opposite party himself filed application dated 23.1.2015 seeking to deposit rent for the period August 2011 till January 2015. Another application for deposit of rent for the period of February 2015 till April 2015 was also made by tenant-opposite party at his own instance. The said applications were allowed vide orders dated 23.08.2017 but could not be complied with owing to illness of tenant-opposite party. It was in such extenuating circumstance that deposit of rent could not be made which has, rightly been condoned by the revisional court. Learned counsel for the opposite parties has relied upon the judgments rendered in Shailendra Sharma and another v. Dr. Amit Bansal, reported in 2017(35) LCD 1521; Rajendra Kumar Verma and another v. Padma Jindal and another, reported in 2006 (1) ARC 764; Shiv Balak Singh v. Additional District Judge XI, Lucknow reported in 2014 (2) ARC 552, Dina Nath (D) by LRs & another v. Subhash Chand Saini & others, rendered by Hon'ble the Supreme Court in Civil Appeal No.4563 of 2014 as well as Santosh Mehta v. Om Prakash reported in (1980) 3 SCC 610 regarding striking off defence.

13. Heard learned counsel for the parties and perused the record.

14. It is admitted between the parties that the dispute in question pertains only to the second part of Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. pertaining to continuous regular deposits being made during pendency of suit proceedings and that deposits made on first date of hearing as provided in the first part under Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. are not in question.

15. Regarding the same, it is seen that the suit was filed in 2009 in which written statement was filed on 07.05.2010 but suit having been dismissed in default of appearance on 30.08.2011 was thereafter restored to its original number only on 25.09.2014 whereafter tenant-opposite party filed application dated 23.01.2015 for deposit of rent from August 2011 to January 2015 and by a separate application for deposit of rent from February 2015 till March 2015. Despite opposition by petitioner-landlord, said applications were allowed vide order dated 23.08.2017 permitting tenant-opposite party to make the deposit at his own risk. Subsequently another application for deposit of rent was filed after filing of application under Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. on 01.05.2017. The said application was also allowed vide order dated 16.12.2017. Thereafter defence had been struck off vide order dated 17.05.2018 specifically recording aforesaid facts and particularly indicating that despite permission granted for deposit of rent vide orders dated 23.08.2017 and 16.12.2017, no deposit as prayed for and directed was made by tenant-opposite party. The SCC Court on the basis of aforesaid facts came to the conclusion that default in deposit of rent by tenant-opposite party was willful, necessitating striking off defence under Order 15 Rule 5 of C.P.C.

16. The revisional court vide the impugned order has upset the order of SCC Court permitting tenant-opposite party to make deposits within a period of one month. It is to be seen that the order of revisional court is conditional and that in the event of tenant-opposite party not making deposit as indicated by the revisional court, the revision was directed to be considered dismissed.

17. It has been submitted by learned counsel for tenant-opposite party that in pursuance of directions of the revisional court, deposit was made as directed.

18. For proper appreciation of dispute in question, it would be necessary to refer to provisions of Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. as applicable in the State of Uttar Pradesh, which are quoted hereunder :

"Order XV : Disposal of the Suit at the first hearing :

2…….

3……....

4……....

5. Striking off defence on failure to deposit admitted rent etc.--

(1) In any suit by a lessor for the eviction of a lessee after the determination of his lease and for the recovery from him of rent or compensation for use and occupation, the defendant shall, at or before the first hearing of the suit, deposit the entire amount admitted by him to be due together with interest thereon at the rate of nine per centum per annum and whether or not he admits any amount to be due, he shall throughout the continuation of the suit regularly deposit the monthly amount due within a week from the date of its accrual, and in the event of any default in making the deposit of the entire amount admitted by him to be due or the monthly amount due as aforesaid, the court may subject to the provisions of sub-rule (2), strike off his defence.

Explanation 1.--

The expression 'first hearing' means the date for filing written statement or for hearing mentioned in the summons or where more than one of such dates are mentioned, the last of the dates mentioned.

Explanation 2.--

The expression 'entire amount admitted by him to be due' means the entire gross amount, whether as rent or compensation for use and occupation, calculated at the admitted rate of rent for the admitted period of arrears after making no other deduction except the taxes, if any' paid to a local authority in respect of the building on lessor's account and the amount, if any, deposited in any court under section 30 of the U. P. Urban Buildings (Regulation of Letting, Rent and Eviction) Act. 1972.

Explanation 3.--

The expression 'monthly amount due' means the amount due every month, whether as rent or compensation for use and occupation at the admitted rate of rent, after making no other deductions except the taxes, if any, paid to a local authority in respect of the building on lessor's account.

(2) Before making an order for striking off defence, the court may consider any representation made by the defendant in that behalf provided such representation is made within 10 days, of the first hearing or, of the expiry of the week referred to in sub-section (1), as the case may be.

(3) The amount deposited under this rule may at any time be withdrawn by the plaintiff:

Provided that such withdrawal shall not have the effect of prejudicing any claim by the plaintiff disputing the correctness of the amount deposited :

Provided further that if the amount deposited includes any sums claimed by the depositor to be deductible on any account, the court may require the plaintiff to furnish security for such sum before he is allowed to withdraw the same."

19. A perusal of order dated 17.05.2018 striking off defence indicates that the trial court exercised its discretion to do the same in view of the fact that deposit of rent etc. had been permitted to be made by tenant twice vide orders dated 23.08.2017 and 16.12.2017 on the applications preferred by tenant himself but when compliance of neither of the orders was made, defence was struck off holding that such default is willful on the part of tenant.

20. Perusal of impugned order dated 30.08.2018 passed by the revisional court however indicates that findings recorded by trial court pertaining to willful default on the part of tenant has not been interfered with. The only ground on which tenant opposite party was granted indulgence was after appreciating his submission with regard to illness and the fact that there was no occasion for tenant-opposite party to have made any deposit towards rent from August 2011 till September 2014 due to the suit having been dismissed in default of appearance.

It was in these circumstances that the order of trial court was interfered with and tenant-opposite party was granted an opportunity to deposit rent which admittedly has been done in pursuance of such directions.

21. The decision in Bal Gopal Maheshwari(supra) relied upon by learned counsel for the petitioner noticing the provisions of Order XV Rule 5 C.P.C. as applicable in the State of Uttar Pradesh and judgment of Hon'ble the Supreme Court in Bimal Chand Jain(supra) has held that the discretion exercisable by trial court with regard to striking off defence is not compulsory and is in the realm of discretion to be exercised by the trial court upon consideration of facts and circumstances of the case. It has been held that interference with regard to the power to strike off written statement can be exercised only in case it was perverse or the court below has exceeded or failed to exercise the jurisdiction. Shailendra Sharma(supra) also relies upon judgment of Hon'ble the Supreme Court rendered in Bimal Chand Jain(supra) which has held as follows:-

"6. It seems to us on a comprehensive understanding of Rule 5 of Order 15 that the true construction of the Rule should be thus. Sub-rule (1) obliges the defendant to deposit, at or before the first hearing of the suit, the entire amount admitted by him to be due together with interest thereon at the rate of nine per cent per annum and further, whether or not he admits any amount to be due, to deposit regularly throughout the continuation of the suit the monthly amount due within a week from the date of its accrual. In the event of any default in making any deposit, "the court may subject to the provisions of sub-rule (2) strike off his defence". We shall presently come to what this means. Sub-rule (2) obliges the court, before making an order for striking off the defence to consider any representation made by the defendant in that behalf. In other words, the defendant has been vested with a statutory right to make a representation to the court against his defence being struck off. If a representation is made the court must consider it on its merits, and then decide whether the defence should or should not be struck off. This is a right expressly vested in the defendant and enables him to show by bringing material on the record that he has not been guilty of the default alleged or if the default has occurred there is good reason for it. Now, it is not impossible that the record may contain such material already. In that event, can it be said that sub-rule (1) obliges the court to strike off the defence? We must remember that an order under sub-rule (1) striking off the defence is in the nature of a penalty. A serious responsibility rests on the court in the matter and the power is not to be exercised mechanically. There is a reserve of discretion vested in the court entitling it not to strike off the defence if on the facts and circumstances already existing on the record it finds good reason for not doing so. It will always be a matter for the judgment of the court to decide whether on the material before it, notwithstanding the absence of a representation under sub-rule (2), the defence should or should not be struck off. The word "may" in sub-rule (1) merely vested power in the court to strike off the defence. It does not oblige it to do so in every case of default."

22. Thus it can be seen that power to strike off defence is not to be exercised by treating it to be a statutory mandate. Since exercise of such power inflicts severe penal consequences, the court has discretion not to strike off defence if on facts it finds good reason for not doing so. Therefore, the power should be exercised after consideration of the facts and circumstances appearing on the record and, in the event of there being a representation, after considering the representation.

23. Once the court concerned has exercised its discretion regarding striking off defence, an aggrieved party has remedy of filing revision under Section 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887 but the revisional court has very limited power to interfere with the discretion so exercised by court concerned. Such limited grounds for interference have already been explained by Hon'ble the Supreme Court in Trilok Singh Chauhan(supra). In the said decision, it has been held that interference in exercise of jurisdiction under Section 25 of the said Act can be only when the findings are perverse, based on no material, upon taking into consideration the inadmissible evidences or without consideration of relevant evidence. The relevant paragraph of the said judgment is quoted as follows:

"25. There are very limited grounds on which there can be interference in exercise of jurisdiction Under Section 25; they are, when (i) Findings are perverse or (ii) based on no material or (iii) Findings have been arrived at upon taking into consideration the inadmissible evidences or (iv) Findings have been arrived at without consideration of relevant evidences."

24. Upon application of aforesaid judgments, it is clear that the trial court has absolute discretion to pass appropriate orders regarding striking off defence upon an application so made by the landlord. The discretion once exercised can be interfered with by the revisional authority only on limited grounds. In the present case, it can be seen that the revisional court has not at all interfered with the findings of fact recorded by the trial court. None of the grounds indicated by Hon'ble the Supreme Court in Trilok Singh Chauhan(supra) has been followed by revisional court while passing the impugned order. As such it can be said that the impugned order has been passed against the principles enunciated by Hon'ble the Supreme Court.

25. Another aspect to be considered is whether the discretion exercised by the trial court in striking off defence has been exercised judicially upon consideration of material facts or not. The trial court judgment clearly indicates that tenant-opposite party has committed wilful default in adhering to the second part of Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. particularly since tenant-opposite party was twice given opportunity to make deposit of the admitted amount of dues but the said benefit was not availed of and deposit as required to be made in terms of the order of trial court was not made. It was in these circumstances that the trial court held default on part of tenant-opposite party to be wilful, thereby striking off defence.

26. Hon'ble the Supreme Court in Atma Ram v. Shakuntala Rani reported in 2005 (7) SCC 211 has held that in Rent Control legislation, if tenant wishes to take advantage of beneficial provisions of the Act, he must strictly comply with the requirements indicated therein. The relevant paragraph of the said decision is as follows:

"19. It will thus appear that this Court has consistently taken the view that in the Rent Control legislations if the tenant wishes to take advantage of the beneficial provisions of the Act, he must strictly comply with the requirements of the Act. If any condition precedent is to be fulfilled before the benefit can be claimed, he must strictly comply with that condition. If he fails to do so he cannot take advantage of the benefit conferred by such a provision."

27. The aforementioned position was reiterated by a Division Bench of this Court in Haider Abbas(supra), which reads as follows:-

"23. The aforesaid decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Atma Ram, (supra)emphasizes that if the tenant wishes to take advantage of the beneficial provisions of the Rent Control Act, he must strictly comply with the requirements and if any condition precedent is required to be fulfilled before the benefit can be claimed, the tenant must strictly comply with that condition failing which he cannot take advantage of the benefit conferred by such a provision. It has further been emphasised that the rent must be deposited in the Court where it is required to be deposited under the Act and if it is deposited somewhere else, it shall not be treated as a valid payment/tender of the rent and consequently the tenant must be held to be in default."

"24. In view of the aforesaid principles of law enunciated by the Supreme Court in the aforesaid case of Atma Ram, (supra), it has to be held that the tenant must comply with the requirements of Order XV, Rule 5, C.P.C. and make the deposits strictly in accordance with the procedure contained therein. A deposit which is not made in consonance with the aforesaid Rule cannot enure to the benefit of the tenant and,therefore, only that amount can be deducted from the "monthly amount" required to be deposited by the tenant during the pendency of the suit which is specifically mentioned in Explanation 3 to Rule 5(1) of Order XV, C.P.C."

"25. It, therefore, follows that the amount due to be deposited by the tenant through out the continuation of the suit has to be deposited in the Court where the suit is filed otherwise the Court may strike off the defence of the tenant since the deposits made by the tenant under section 30(1) of the Act after the first hearing of the suit cannot be taken into consideration."

28. The aforesaid view with regard to tenant being obliged to strictly comply with requirements of the Act in order to avail advantage of beneficial provisions has been reiterated by this Court in a number of judgments following the aforesaid judgments of Hon'ble the Supreme Court and this Court.

29. In the present case, it is quite clear that tenant opposite party failed to make compliance of provisions of Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. despite adequate opportunity being provided for the same by the trial court.

30. Upon application of the judgments indicated hereinabove, it is quite clear that tenant-opposite party was a wilful defaulter and deliberately failed to comply with the provisions of Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. due to which his defence was correctly struck off by the trial court and that the order passed by the revisional court, being against the judgments rendered by Hon'ble the Supreme Court regarding powers and jurisdiction of interference, is also vitiated.

31. So far as judgments relied upon by learned counsel for tenant-opposite party are concerned, the case of Shailendra Sharma and another v. Dr. Amit Bansal(supra) has followed the dictum of Hon'ble the Supreme Court in Bimal Chand Jain(supra) in which it has been held that the power to strike off defence is not mandatory but discretionary at the instance of court concerned. To the same effect is another judgment relied upon by learned counsel for tenant-opposite party in Santosh Mehta v. Om Prakash(supra).

32. There is no dispute regarding proposition that power exercisable under Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. is not mandatory but discretionary at the instance of court concerned. In the instant case, the trial court has clearly recorded a finding that tenant-opposite party is a wilful defaulter since it failed to comply with provisions of Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. not once but twice upon applications filed by tenant opposite party itself. As such its discretion was exercised in the facts and circumstances of the case which would clearly be in accordance with the dictum of Hon'ble the Supreme Court.

33. Learned counsel appearing for tenant-opposite party has also relied upon the judgment of Hon'ble the Supreme Court in Dina Nath (D) by LRs & another v. Subhash Chand Saini & others, (supra) in which again it has been held that the power to strike off defence is discretionary at the instance of court concerned and that it is not mandatory for the court to automatically allow the application for striking off defence. It has also been held that mere failure to pay rent on part of tenant is not enough to justify an order striking off defence and it is only a wilful failure or deliberate default that can call for exercise of the extra ordinary power vested in court.

34. In the present case the trial court has clearly recorded a finding of fact that there was wilful and deliberate default on part of tenant-opposite party in complying with the provisions of Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. thereby requiring it to exercise its discretion of striking off defence. The aforesaid judgments also therefore would not be of any help to learned counsel for tenant-opposite party.

35. In the present case, it can be seen that tenant-opposite party was allowed to make deposit of admitted amount of rent firstly in August 2017 and thereafter in December 2017. The defence has been struck off subsequently in May, 2018. As such it can be seen that the default in deposit of admitted amount of rent as contemplated under second part of Order 15 Rule 5 C.P.C. was continuous and, therefore, the explanation of illness given by tenant-opposite party without adequate evidence to corroborate the same would definitely fall within the meaning of wilful default. The revisional court without interfering with the findings of fact recorded by the trial court erred in law in setting aside the order of trial court for striking off defence without adhering to the principles enunciated by Hon'ble the Supreme Court regarding exercise of revisional power.

36. In view of the aforesaid, the petition is allowed setting aside the judgment and order dated 30.08.2018 passed in SCC Revision No.04/2018 (Jainul Islaam @ Gop v. Maseehamasi Farookhi).

Counsel for the Respondents:

A. U.P. Panchayat Raj Act, 1947 - Sections -11E, 95(1)(g), 5A & 6A- Constitution of India - Article 243 (O) - the case of petitioner is of disqualification u/s.11-E – barring him from contesting the election to the office of Gram Pradhan as- on the date of filing nomination he was functioning as an elected member of Kshetra Panchayat-this defect dis-entitled the petitioner to contest the election and to hold the office in question-renders the holding of office of Gram Pradhan by the petitioner void ab-initio.

Held : - any interference by this Court would restore and perpetuate an illegality and would encourage others to violate the law contained in Section 11-E in the belief that they would get away with it- For these reasons this Court declines to exercise its equitable, discretionary and extra ordinary jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India in the facts and circumstances of the case and does not interfere with the impugned order, as, substantial justice has been done in the matter. Consequently, the petitioner shall not be entitled to continue as Gram Pradhan of Gram Panchayat Barauli. Interim order granted earlier stands vacated.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Rajan Roy, J.)

1. Heard Sri Apoorva Tewari learned counsel for the petitioner, Ms Aparita Bansal for the State Election Commission and Sri Anuj Garg learned standing counsel.

2. This writ petition has been filed under Article 226 of the Constitution of India challenging an order passed by the District Magistrate/District Election Officer on 30.07.2016 under Section 11-E of the U.P. Panchat Raj Act, 1947 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act, 1947') wherein he has held that the petitioner was not qualified for contesting the election to the office of Gram Pradhan Village Barauli, District Hardoi, as, on the date of filing nomination he was functioning as an elected member of Kshetra Panchayat Barauli. Accordingly he has held that the office of Gram Pradhan Barauli is deemed to be vacant requiring a fresh process of election.

3. The facts of the case are that the petitioner admittedly was a member of Kshetra Panchayat Barauli and his tenure was till 17.03.2016. He filed his nomination for contesting election to the office of Gram Pradhan while he was still continuing as a member of Gram Panchayat. On 13.12.2015 the result of the election to the office of Gram Pradhan was declared and he took oath of office on 19/20.12.2015. Even at the cost of repetition it needs to be stated that it is the admitted factual position that on both the dates i.e. on the date of filing of nomination and on the date of taking oath of office of Gran Pradhan, he continued to function as an elected member of of Kshetra Panchayat Barauli. A complaint was made by one Aneeta Mishra that on account of holding office of member, Kshetra Panchayat, petitioner was ineligible to contest the election to the office of Gram Pradhan, therefore, the election was bad and he should be restrained from functioning as Gram Pradhan. Prior to this complaint i.e. on 09.02.2016, the petitioner is stated to have resigned from office of MEMBER, Kshetra Panchayat. The contention of the counsel for the petitioner is that this resignation was not actuated by detection of any dis-qualification but was a voluntary act on the part of the petitioner. Ms. Aneeta Mishra then filed a writ petition before this Court bearing no. 12466 (MB) of 2016 seeking a writ of quo warranto. The said writ petition was disposed of on 30.03.2016 in the following terms:-

"Shri Manoj Kumar Mishra, Advocate has filed Vakalatnama on behalf of opposite party no.6. The same is taken on record.

This petition has been filed with the following prayers:-

(a) To issue a writ, order or direction in the nature of quo warranto for removal of Sri Rajendra Kumar Son of Sri Ram Kumar from Office of Village Pradhan of Village Panchayat-Barauli, Block-Kachauna, District-Hardoi.

(b) To issue a writ order or direction in the nature of Mandamus commanding the opposite party no.3 to pass an order for declaration of the post of Village Pradhan of Village Panchayat-Barauli, Block-Kachauna, District-Hardoi as Vacant in view of Section 11(E) of Uttar Pradesh Panchayat Raj Act, 1947.

chequered(c) To issue a writ, order or direction in the nature of Mandamus commanding the opposite party no.2 to issue a notification for holding a fresh election for Office of Village Pradhan of Village Panchayat-Barauli, Block-Kachauna, District Hardoi.

(d) To issue a writ, order or direction in the nature of Mandamus commanding the opposite party no.4 to declare the proceedings followed by decisions taken by the opposite party no.6

as void since he was elected for the post of Pradhan of Village Panchayat-Barauli, Block-Kachauna, District-Hardoi.

(e) To issue any other order or direction which this Hon'ble Court may deem just and proper in the facts and circumstances of the case.

(f) Award cost of the writ petition in favour of the petitioner against the opposite party, forthwith to impart due justice.

The representation of other person contained in Annexure-4 was disposed of by the District Magistrate. Though it is stated by counsel for the petitioner that in the representation, the petitioner has taken grounds in respect of disqualification of opposite party no.6 from the office held by him.

Learned counsel for the petitioner further submits that it is incumbent upon District Magistrate to consider and dispose of the representation and decide the issue in accordance with law but the District Magistrate is not paying any attention to the representation.

In the aforesaid circumstances, the writ petition is disposed of with direction to the District Magistrate to consider and dispose of the representation preferred by the petitioner within a period of two months."

4. The aforesaid order was passed after hearing the parties including the petitioner herein, who had put in appearance. The petitioner who was the opposite party no.6 therein did not challenge the aforesaid order of the High Court.

5. In pursuance to the aforesaid complaint Ms. Aneeta Mishra moved a representation before the District Magistrate and it is this representation which has been decided by the said officer on 30.07.2016 which is impugned herein.

6. It is not out of place to mention that Ms. Aneeta Misra moved an application for being impleaded as an opposie party in this petition but it was rejected on the ground that a complainant was not a necessary party.

7. The contention of Sri Tewari learned counsel for the petitioner is firstly that the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to pass such an order even in his capacity as District Election Officer or for that matter in pursuance to the direction issued by the High Court, as a District Election Officer becomes functus-officio once the election result is declared and in this regard, he has relied upon a Division Bench judgment reported in (1995) 2 UPLBEC 771 (Smt. Ram Kanti vs. District Magistrate, Hamirpur and others) and connected matters, wherein, the aforesaid preposition of law has been laid down. The same principle has been reiterated in a subsequent decision reported in 2006 (1) ALJ 417 (DB) (Sunita Patel vs. State of U.P. & others) albeit in the context of Kheshtra Panchayat election.

8. Learned counsel for the petitioner further contends that if the legislature has not conferred jurisdiction on a particular authority in respect of a particular subject then such jurisdiction cannot be conferred by consent or even by the order of the Courts and the Court cannot issue direction to an incompetent authority to decide a dispute is well settled.

9. Contention of the learned counsel is that once the petitioner was elected as Gram Pradhan, in view of the provisions contained in Article 243(o) of the Constitution to the effect "notwithstanding anything in the constitution, no election to any Panchayat shall be called in question except by Election Petition presented to such authority in such manner as is provided for under any law made by the legislation", as, the challenge in essence was to the election of the petitioner as Gram Pradhan, the only remedy available was in terms of an Election Petition under Section 12-C(1) of the Act, 1947 but no Election Petition was filed and the period of limitation prescribed for the same having expired, the writ petition for issuance of quo warranto filed by Aneeta Mishra also having been disposed of, in the absence of any challenge to petitioner's election by filing an Election Petition, there was no other remedy available to any aggrieved person, nor was there any provision in the Act, 1947 or in the Constitution of India under which any authority including the District Magistrate could divest the petitioner of the office of Gram Pradhan in the manner it had been done.

10. This apart, Sri Apoorva Tewari learned counsel for the petitioner contended that reference to Section 11-E(2) of the Act, 1947 in the impugned order is misconceived for the reason that the said provision is attracted only in an eventuality where after a person has been elected as Gram Pradhan, he, is elected subsequently to another office, which is not the case here. Furthermore, he says that in this view of the matter there is no question of 'deemed vacancy' of the office held by the petitioner.

11. According to him, even if an election petition had been filed the defence would be open to the petitioner that Section 12-C does not apply to the facts of the present case as it does not fall in any of the eventualities mentioned therein, including 'voidance' of election and that even such 'viodance' is required to be declared by the Courts, even if, in collateral proceedings, and the District Magistrate could not have done so. He also submitted that requirement of the Election being 'materially affected' would still not be satisfied. In this context he also invited the attention of the Court to Rule 4(3)(a) of the U.P. Pachayat Raj (Settlement of Election) Disputes Rules, 1997 to contend that casual vacancy can be declared by the Sub Divisional Officer i.e. the Prescribed authority that too only in a proceeding for setting aside the election, therefore, the District Magistrate had no power to do so and has exceeded his jurisdiction.

12. Ms. Aparajita Bansal learned counsel appearing for Election Commission has invited the attention of the Court to sub Section 3 of Section 11-E, however sub section 3 relates to the first election under the Act, 1947, therefore, the same does not apply in this case as it was not the first election under the Act. She also submitted that so far as Section 11-D of the Act, 1947 is concerned the Rules have been framed for vacancy of the office but in respect of Section 11-E no such Rules have been framed, therefore, once the disqualification is detected the office becomes automatically vacant and all that the District Magistrate has done is to declare it to be so. She also submitted that the remedy of an Election Petition under Section 12-C(1) was not available in this case as in fact there was no challenge to the election, what was pointed out by the complainant was the ineligibility of the petitioner to hold two offices at the same time.

13. Sri Anuj Garg learned standing counsel submitted arguments on the same line as Ms Aparajita Bansal.

14. As per Section 11-E(1) of the Act, 1947 a person shall be disqualified for being elected to or holding the office of Pradhan or member of Gram Panchayat or a Panchayat or a Nyaya Panchayat, if he is (a) a member of parliament or of the State Legislature; or (b) member, Pramukh or Up-pramukh of a Kshettra Panchayat; or (c) member, Adhyaksha or Upadhyaksha of a Zila Panchayat; or Adhyaksha or Upadhyaksha of any co-operative society.

15. As regards the first contention of learned counsel for the petitioner, the legal position is well settled that once the result of the election has been declared the District Magistrate/District Election Officer becomes functus officio. The District Magistrate thereafter has power to take a decision for removal of Pradhan under Section 95(1)(g) of the Act, 1947. The Court does not find any ground mentioned in Section 95(1)(g) or under Section 5-A of the Act, 1947 as being available in this case for availing the remedy under Section 95(1)(g) of the Act, 1947 and Section 6-A of the Act, 1947. The disqualification mentioned in Section 11-E is not mentioned in Section 5-A nor as a ground for removal under Section 95(1)(g) of the Act, 1947. An Election petition assuming it would have been maintainable on the ground that the result of the election had been materially affected by improper acceptance or rejection of petitioner's nomination or by gross failure to comply with the provisions of the Act or the Rules framed thereunder, as, while holding the office of member of Kshetra Panchayat he could not have filed the nomination paper for Election to the office of Gram Pradhan, the fact of the matter is that no Election petition was filed by any aggrieved person instead a writ of quo warranto was filed which was disposed of as already stated. Now the question to be considered is whether merely because an Election Petition was not filed against the petitioner, who admittedly was disqualified from being elected or holding the office of Gram Pradhan in view of the provisions contained in Section 11-E(1) of the Act, 1947, should he be allowed to continue in office because the District Magistrate who has passed the impugned order did not have jurisdiction to do so and this Court in exercise of its extra ordinary jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution should be a mute-spectator to a void and illegal act and should dismiss this petition on this ground thereby sustaining and perpetuating an apparent illegality.? While it is true that so far as elections are are concerned, in view of the provisions contained in Article 243(O), the remedy is by way of an Election Petition but there is a decision to the effect of the Supreme Court reported in (1999) 4 SCC 526 (K. Venkatachalam vs. A. Swamickan and another) wherein their Lordship at the Supreme Court have said that Article 243 (O) of the Constitution by itself may not per-se bar judicial review which is the basic structure of the Constitution but ordinarily such jurisdiction would not be exercised, there may be some cases where a writ petition would be entertained. Reference may also be made to another decision reported in (2005) 8 SCC 383

(Karnek Singh vs. Charanjit Singh) wherein their Lordships of the Supreme Court held as under:-

"29. In view of the judgment of this Court in the case of Election Commission of India v. Saka Vankata Rao it may be that action under Article 192 could not be taken as the disqualification which the appellant incurred was prior to his election. Various decisions of this Court, which have been referred to by the appellant that jurisdiction of the High Court under Article 226 is barred challenging the election of a returned candidate and which we have noted above, do not appear to apply to the case of the appellant now before us. Article 226 of the Constitution is couched in widest possible term and unless there is clear bar to jurisdiction of the High Court its powers under Article 226 of the Constitution can be exercised when there is any act which is against any provision of law or violative of constitutional provisions and when recourse cannot be had to the provisions of the Act for the appropriate relief. In circumstances like the present one bar of Article 329(b) will not come into play when case falls under Articles 191 and 193 and whole of the election process is over. Consider the case where the person elected is not a citizen of India. Would the Court allow a foreign citizen to sit and vote in the Legislative Assembly and not exercise jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution?

30. We are, therefore, of the view that the High Court rightly exercised its jurisdiction in entertaining the writ petition under Article 226 of the Constitution and declared that the appellant was not entitled to sit in Tamil Nadu Legislative Assembly with consequent restraint order on him from functioning as a member of the Legislative Assembly. The net effect is that the appellant ceases to be a member of the Tamil Nadu Legislative Assembly. Period of the Legislative Assembly is long since over. Otherwise we would have directed respondent No. 2, who is Secretary to Tamil Nadu Legislative Assembly, to intimate to Election Commission that Lalgudi Assembly constituency seat has fallen vacant and for the Election Commission to take necessary steps to hold fresh election from that Assembly Constituency. Normally in a case like this Election Commission should invariably be made a party.

31. When leave to appeal was granted to the appellant by this Court operation of the impugned judgment was suspended. Respondent No. 2 shall intimate to the State Government as to for how many days the appellant sat as a member of the Legislative Assembly and it would be for the State Government to recover penalty from the appellant in terms of Article 193 of the Constitution.

32. This appeal is dismissed with costs."

16. In the present case the one fact which makes a difference is the admitted case of the petitioner himself about his disqualification under Section 11-E of the Act. i.e. the admission of the fact that on the date of filing nomination for election to the office of Gram Pradhan and taking oath he was a member of Kshetra Panchayat then under Section 11-E he was disqualified not only from being elected but also from holding the office of Pradhan as is evident from the language used in the provision. Based on this indisputable factual scenario the irresistible conclusion is that he was disqualified to contest the election of Gram Pradhan under Section 11-E. Furthermore, as already stated, the Court finds that Section 11-E did not only disqualify him from being elected but also from holding the office of Pradhan. Even otherwise, in view of the aforesaid admitted factual scenario while it is true that the District Election Office had become functus-officio after declaration of the election result and the District Magistrate could not have declared the election of the petitioner to be void, this Court finds what the District Magistrate has done is only to reiterate the obvious based on the provisions contained in Section 11-E in view of the indisputable facts before him. The consequence of it is a vacancy on the office of Gram Pradhan. Merely because he has referred to Section 11-E(2) can not be a ground for interference by this Court under Article 226 of the Constitution. A hyper-technical approach in this regard is not warranted. Even assuming that the District Magistrate did not have power in this regard, if interference with his order revives an apparent illegality this Court would decline to do so if substantial justice has been done as is the case here. Reference may be made to the decision reported in AIR 1996 SC 828 (Godde Venkateswara Rao vs Government Of Andhra Pradesh) wherein their Lordships of the Supreme Court of India sustained the decision of the High Court exercising its discretion refusing to interfere with an order of Government, which it did have power and jurisdiction to pass, as it would have restored an illegal order. The Supreme Court held as under:-

"In those circumstances, was it a case for the High Court to interfere in its discretion and quash the order of the Government dated April 18, 1963? If the High Court had quashed the said order, it would have restored an illegal order--it would have given the Health Centre to a village contrary to the valid resolution passed by the Panchayat Samithi. The High Court, therefore, in our view, rightly refused to exercise its extra ordinary discretionary power in the circumstances of the case.

In the result, the appeal is dismissed, but, in the circumstances of the case, without costs."

17. On the same line there is another decision of the Supreme Court reported in (1999) 6 SCC 237 (M. C. Mehta v. Union of India and others) wherein it was held that the Court can refuse to exercise its discretion of striking down an order, if such striking down will result in restoration of another order passed earlier in favour of the petitioner and against the opposite parties in violation of principle of natural justice or it is otherwise not in accordance with law. A reference was also made therein to another decision of the Supreme Court on the same line reported in (1988) 1 SCC 40 (Mohd. Shwale vs. III ADJ).

18. Reference may also be made to a Division Bench Judgment of this Court reported in (1990) 2 UPLBEC 983 (Om Prakash vs. U.P. Secondary Education Service Commission Allenganj Allahabad and others) wherein, this Court declined to interfere in a decision taken without jurisdiction, as, substantial justice had been done in the matter. Reference may also be made to a decision of the Supreme Court reported in (1994) 2 SCC 481 (State of Maharashtra and others vs. Prabhu) wherein, the Supreme Court disapproved interference by the High Court in exercise of its equity jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution where more harm is likely to be caused to a society by such interference than good as it would shake the confidence and faith of the society in the system and would be prone to encouraging even the honest and sincere to deviate from their path. It held that it was the responsibility of the High Court as custodian of the Constitution to maintain the social balance by interfering where necessary for the sake of justice and refusing to interfere where it is against the social interest and public good. Their Lordships also observed as under:-

"Even assuming that the construction placed by the High Court and vehemently defended by the learned counsel for respondent is correct should the High Court have interfered with the order of Government in exercise of its equity jurisdiction. The distinction between writs issued as a matter of right such as habeas corpus and those issued in exercise of discretion such as certiorari and mandamus are well known and explained in countless decisions given by this Court and English Courts. It is not necessary to recount them. The High Court exercise control over Government functining and ensure obedience of rules and law by enforcing proper, fair and just performance of duty. Where the Government or any authority posses an order which is contrary to rules or law it becomes amenable to correction by the courts in exercise of writ jurisdiction. But one of the principle inherent in it is that the exercise of power should be for the sake of justice. One of the yardstick for it is if the quashing of the order results in greater harm to the society then the court may restrain from exercising the power."

19. Reference may also be made to another decision of the Supreme Court reported in AIR 1957 SC 227 (A.M. Allison and another vs. B.L. Sen and others) wherein a plea of lack of jurisdiction was taken yet the Supreme Court upheld the decision of the High Court by observing that proceedings by way of certiorari are "not of Course" (vide Halsbury's Laws of England', Hailsham Edition, Vol.9 paras 1480 and 1481, pp. 877-878). The High Court of Assam had the power to refuse the writs if it was satisfied that there was no failure of justice and that the Supreme Court could refused to interfere in appeals directed against such order of the High Court under Article 226 unless it was satisfied that the justice of the case required it. In the said case the Supreme Court held that it was not satisfied that it requires interference.

20. In the instant case any interference by this Court would restore and perpetuate an illegality and would encourage others to violate the law contained in Section 11-E in the belief that they would get away with it.

21. Sri Tewari in a desperate effort to protect the interest of his client attempted to argue that the defect was curable but on being confronted with the provisions contained in Section 11-E, he let go, as, the defect dis-entitled the petitioner to contest the election in the first place and also to hold the office in question and was too fundamental to be cured. It renders the holding of office of Gram Pradhan by the petitioner void ab-initio.

22. For these reasons this Court declines to exercise its equitable, discretionary and extra ordinary jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India in the facts and circumstances of the case and does not interfere with the impugned order, as, substantial justice has been done in the matter. Consequently the petitioner shall not be entitled to continue as Gram Pradhan of Gram Panchayat Barauli. Interim order granted earlier stands vacated.

23. This judgment shall not be treated as an affirmation of the powers of the District Magistrate/District Election Officer to pass such orders, but as a refusal by this Court to exercise its discretionary and equity jurisdiction for the above reasons.

24. Till elections to the office of Gram Pradhan of Gram Panchayat Barauli are held the District Magistrate shall make interim arrangement in terms of Section 12-J of the Act, 1947.

25. For these reasons the writ petition is dismissed.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Irshad Ali, J.)

1) Heard Sri N.K. Seth, learned Senior Counsel assisted by Sri Vijay

Krishna, learned counsel for the petitioner and to Sri Shiwa Kant Tiwari, learned counsel for respondent Nos.2 to 5.

2) By means of the present writ petition, the petitioner is challenging the order passed by respondent No.1 dated 27.05.2015 permitting the additional evidence to be adduced at appellate stage in the shape of sale deed.

3) Factual matrix of the case is that respondent Nos.2 to 5 filed release application under Section 21(1)(A) of U.P. Act No.13 of 1972 against the petitioner for vacating the premises of 308/55 Jauhari Mohalla, Chowk, Lucknow. The petitioner filed written statement denying the title of respondent Nos.2 to 5 and asserted that the premises is owned by Sri Radha Krishna Mandir (Lala Shyam Lal Girdhari Lal Agarwal) and the rent is being paid to the Manager of the Jankidas Puran Chand Trust and in support thereof, filed rent receipt issued by the trust.

4) The respondent Nos.2 to 5 filed affidavit and the petitioner also filed his affidavit. The prescribed authority after leading evidence and recording statement, allowed the release application against the petitioner vide order dated 31.07.2014.

5) Feeling aggrieved, the petitioner filed appeal under Section 22 of U.P. Act No.13 of 1972 before the District Judge, Lucknow, which has been admitted and transferred to the Court of Additional District Judge, Court No.15, Lucknow for disposal. The respondent Nos.2 to 5 filed an application for taking copy of the sale deed as additional evidence under Order 41 Rule 27 CPC. The Additional District Judge vide impugned order dated 27.05.2015 allowed the application, which has been impugned in the present writ petition.

6) Submission of learned Senior Counsel for the petitioner is that under the provisions of Order 41 Rule 27 CPC, there are exceptions, which have not been explained in the application that how the fact in regard to sale deed came into knowledge of respondent Nos.2 to 5 and due to non disclosure of this fact, the order passed on the application is illegal. The appellate court has also not recorded finding on the point of Order 41 Rule 27(aa) CPC and has proceeded to allow the application. Thus, the submission is that without explaining the due diligence in not bringing on record the additional evidence, the application would not have been allowed. In support of his submission, he placed reliance upon following judgments:

(i) Rajkali Vs. State of U.P. and others; 2014 (1) JCLR 494, paragraph Nos.4, 7, 8 and 9, (ii) Kailash Chandra Vs. Additional District Judge, Sitapur; 2013 (2) ARC 797 and the last judgment has been produced, which was noticed by the Additional District Judge while passing the impugned order i.e. Union of India Vs. Ibrahim Uddin and another; 2012 (8) SCC 148, para 36, 39 to 46, 48, 52 and 53.

7) On the other hand, learned counsel for respondent Nos.2 to 5 submitted that in the application moved under Section 41 Rule 27 CPC, it has been disclosed that the respondents applied for certified copy of the sale deed and after obtaining it, they moved the application for taking as additional evidence.

8) He further submitted that the Additional District Judge has recorded finding in regard to due diligence in regard to non filing of sale deed at the trial stage, therefore, his submission is that there is no illegality or infirmity in the order under challenge by the petitioner.

9) He next submitted that Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Union of India (Supra) has considered the ingredients required permitting additional evidence to be adduced at appellate stage and taking notice of that, the judgment was passed by the Additional District Judge by recording cogent reasons, thus, the writ petition being misconceived is liable to be dismissed.

10) Having heard the rival contentions advanced by learned counsel for the parties, I perused the material on record as well as the impugned order under challenge in the writ petition and the judgments relied upon by learned counsel for the petitioner.

11) To resolve the controversy involved in the present writ petition, the provisions contained under Order 41 Rule 27 CPC is being quoted below:

"27. Production of additional evidence in Appellate Court - (1) The parties to an appeal shall not be entitled to produce additional evidence, whether oral or documentary, in the Appellate Court. But if -

(a) the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has refused to admit evidence which ought to have been admitted, or

[(aa) the party seeking to produce additional evidence, establishes that notwithstanding the exercise of due deligence, such evidence was not witin his knowledge or could not, after the exercise of due diligence, be produced by him at the time when the decree appealed against was passed, or]

(b) the Appellate Court requires any document to be produced or any witness to be examined to enable it to pronounce judgment, or for any other substantial cause, the Appellate Court may allow such evidence or document to be produced, or witness to be examined.

(2) Wherever additional evidence is allowed to be produced by an Appellate Court, the Court shall record the reason for its admission."

12) On perusal of the provisions referred herein above, it is apparent on the face of it that there are three contingencies, which are required to be taken into consideration while accepting the additional evidence.

13) The judgments relied upon by learned Senior Counsel for the petitioner on the point involved in the matter are as under:

(i) Rajkali Vs. State of U.P. and others (Supra) :

"4. The second relief claimed in this writ petition is against the impugned order dated 10.07.2013, whereby the appellate court has dismissed the application 19Ga of the appellant petitioner filed under Order XLI Rule 27 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Learned counsel for the petitioner has submitted that although there is no mention of the sale deed dated 27.01.2006 in the plaint nor nay relief has been sought against the said sale deed, the additional document which the petitioner appellant wanted to bring on record under order XLI Rule 27 of the Code of Civil Procedure has direct relation with the unregistered agreement of sale of 1999, which was assailed in the suit itself. He therefore, states that by rejection of the application Under Order XLI Rule 27 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the court below has committed an illegality. He does not dispute that the appeal is still pending.

7. The second ground for which the application under Order XLI Rule 27 of the Code of Civil procedure has been rejected is that the Khatauni which is sought to be brought on record relating to the sale deed of 2006 does not find mention in the plaint and there is no recitation about the sale deed of 2006 in the plaint as such the Khatauni based thereupon has no relevance in the present appeal, hence cannot be admitted in evidence. It has also been recorded that only such document can be taken as an additional evidence at the appellate stage which enable the court to effictively decide the real controversy between the parties. However, since there is no pleading relating to the sale deed of 2006 then the Khatauni relating thereto cannot be admitted in evidence.

8. No error can be found in the view taken by the appellate court in the impugned order dated 23.08.2008, whereby the application 19Ga of the appellant petitioner under Order XLI Rule 27 of the Code of Civil Procedure has been rejected. There is no merit in this writ petition. It is accordingly dismissed.

9. No order is passed as to costs."

(ii) Kailash Chandra Vs. Additional District Judge, Sitapur (Supra):

"The scrutiny of said provision indicates that the parties to appeal shall not be entitled to produce additional evidence whether oral or documentary in the appellate Court except under three circumstances; (i) when the Trial Court whose decree is under challenge in appeal has refused to admit evidence which ought to have been admitted, (ii) when the party seeking additional evidence, establishes before the appellate Court that in spite of exercise of due diligence, such evidence was not within his knowledge or could not, after the exercise of due diligence, be produced by him before the Trial Court and (iii) when the appellate Court requires any document to be produced or any witness to be examined to enable it to pronounce judgment, or for any other substantial clause.

The case of petitioner at the most can be examined under exception no. (ii) as given above.

Learned counsel for petitioner has laid great stress on his argument that once he had pleaded before the Trial Court about the said evidence and the said evidence could not be produced, he should be allowed to produce the said evidence at the stage of appeal.

The scope of Order XLI Rule 27 of the Code has been examined in detail by the Apex Court in the case of Union of India Vs. Ibrahim Uddin and Another (supra) wherein the Apex Court has categorically held that in case there is inadvertence on the party of any party or there was inability to understand the legal issue involved or due to wrong advice of a pleader or negligence of a pleader or that a party did not realize the importance of a document does not constitute a "substantial cause" within the meaning of this rule. The mere fact that certain evidence is important, is not in itself a sufficient ground for admitting that evidence in appeal.

It is to be observed that the appellate Court should not ordinarily allow new evidence to be adduced in order to enable a party to raise a new point in appeal. It is the onus on the part of the party who wants to rely on evidence to prove it at the relevant time. In case a party has failed to discharge the onus, the Court cannot in such a case permit the said party to improve his case by producing additional evidence.

In the case of Vimal Chand Ghevarchan Jain and others (supra), reliance on which has been placed by learned counsel for petitioner, the Apex Court has no doubt observed that once the written statement was permitted to be amended the additional evidence pursuant thereto was also permitted to be adduced. The first appellate Court had a duty to properly appreciate the evidence in the light of the pleadings of the parties. It is true that when a pleading is amended, it takes effect from the date when the original one is filed.

The appellate Court in exercise of its discretionary jurisdiction and subject to fulfillment of the conditions under Order XLI Rule 27 of the Code may allow the parties to adduce additional evidence. However, it does not mean that the application under Order XLI Rule 27 of the Code can be allowed in routine manner. The Court has to be satisfied while allowing such application as to whether the ingredients of Order XLI Rule 27 of the Code are fulfilled or not.

As such, even if the petitioner had mentioned in his pleadings before the Trial Court about the said evidence but the same was not produced at the stage of evidence, the same could not be allowed to be brought on record at the appellate stage by moving application under Order XLI Rule 27 of the Code.

In the given facts and circumstances of the case in hand, I am of the view that the application moved under Order XLI Rule 27 could not have been allowed by the appellate Court, as such, I do not find any infirmity or illegality in the order impugned. "

(iii) Union of India Vs. Ibrahim Uddin and another (Supra) para 39 to 46, 48, 52 and 53:

"36. The general principle is that the Appellate Court should not travel outside the record of the lower court and cannot take any evidence in appeal. However, as an exception, Order XLI Rule 27 CPC enables the Appellate Court to take additional evidence in exceptional circumstances. The Appellate Court may permit additional evidence only and only if the conditions laid down in this rule are found to exist. The parties are not entitled, as of right, to the admission of such evidence. Thus, provision does not apply, when on the basis of evidence on record, the Appellate Court can pronounce a satisfactory judgment. The matter is entirely within the discretion of the court and is to be used sparingly. Such a discretion is only a judicial discretion circumscribed by the limitation specified in the rule itself. (Vide: K. Venkataramiah v. A. Seetharama Reddy, Municipal Corpn. Of Greater Bombay v. Lala Pancham, Soonda Ram v. Rameshwarlal and Syed Abdul Khader v. Rami Reddy.

39. It is not the business of the Appellate Court to supplement the evidence adduced by one party or the other in the lower Court. Hence, in the absence of satisfactory reasons for the non- production of the evidence in the trial court, additional evidence should not be admitted in appeal as a party guilty of remissness in the lower court is not entitled to the indulgence of being allowed to give further evidence under this rule. So a party who had ample opportunity to produce certain evidence in the lower court but failed to do so or elected not to do so, cannot have it admitted in appeal. (Vide: State of U.P. v. Manbodhan Lal Srivastava and S. Rajagopal v. C.M. Armugam.

40. The inadvertence of the party or his inability to understand the legal issues involved or the wrong advice of a pleader or the negligence of a pleader or that the party did not realise the importance of a document does not constitute a "substantial cause" within the meaning of this rule. The mere fact that certain evidence is important, is not in itself a sufficient ground for admitting that evidence in appeal.

41. The words "for any other substantial cause" must be read with the word "requires" in the beginning of sentence, so that it is only where, for any other substantial cause, the Appellate Court requires additional evidence, that this rule will apply, e.g., when evidence has been taken by the lower Court so imperfectly that the Appellate Court cannot pass a satisfactory judgment.

41. Whenever the appellate Court admits additional evidence it should record its reasons for doing so. (Sub-rule 2). It is a salutary provision which operates as a check against a too easy reception of evidence at a late stage of litigation and the statement of reasons may inspire confidence and disarm objection. Another reason of this requirement is that, where a further appeal lies from the decision, the record of reasons will be useful and necessary for the Court of further appeal to see, if the discretion under this rule has been properly exercised by the Court below. The omission to record the reasons must, therefore, be treated as a serious defect. But this provision is only directory and not mandatory, if the reception of such evidence can be justified under the rule.

43. The reasons need not be recorded in a separate order provided they are embodied in the judgment of the appellate Court. A mere reference to the peculiar circumstances of the case, or mere statement that the evidence is necessary to pronounce judgment, or that the additional evidence is required to be admitted in the interests of justice, or that there is no reason to reject the prayer for the admission of the additional evidence, is not enough comp1iance with the requirement as to recording of reasons.

44. It is a settled legal proposition that not only administrative order, but also judicial order must be supported by reasons, recorded in it. Thus, while deciding an issue, the Court is bound to give reasons for its conclusion. It is the duty and obligation on the part of the Court to record reasons while disposing of the case. The hallmark of order and exercise of judicial power by a judicial forum is for the forum to disclose its reasons by itself and giving of reasons has always been insisted upon as one of the fundamentals of sound administration of the justice - delivery system, to make it known that there had been proper and due application of mind to the issue before the Court and also as an essential requisite of the principles of natural justice. The reason is the heartbeat of every conclusion. It introduces clarity in an order and without the same, the order becomes lifeless. Reasons substitute subjectivity with objectivity. The absence of reasons renders an order indefensible/unsustainable particularly when the order is subject to further challenge before a higher forum. Recording of reasons is principle of natural justice and every judicial order must be supported by reasons recorded in writing. It ensures transparency and fairness in decision making. The person who is adversely affected must know why his application has been rejected. (Vide: State of Orissa v. Dhaniram Luhar, State of Uttaranchal v. Sunil Kumar Singh Negi, Victoria Memorial Hall v. Howrah Ganatantrik Nagrik Samity and Sant Lal Gupta v. Modern Coop. Group Housing Society Ltd).

45. In City Improvement Trust Board v. H. Narayanaian, while dealing with the issue, a three judge Bench of this Court held as under: (SCC p. 20, para 28)

"28. We are of the opinion that the High Court should have recorded its reasons to show why it found the admission of such evidence to be necessary for some substantial reason. And if it found it necessary to admit it an opportunity should have been given to the appellant to rebut any inference arising from its insistence by leading other evidence."

(Emphasis added)

A similar view has been reiterated by this Court in Basayya I. Mathad v. Radrayya S. Mathad.

46. A Constitution Bench of this Court in K. Venkataramiah, while dealing with the same issue held: (AIR p. 1529, para 13)

"13. It is very much to be desired that the courts of appeal should not overlook the provisions of clause (2) of the Rule and should record their reasons for admitting additional evidence..... The omission to record reason must, therefore, be treated as a serious defect. Even so, we are unable to persuade ourselves that this provision is mandatory."

(Emphasis added)

In the said case, the court after examining the record of the case came to the conclusion that the appeal was heard for a long time and the application for taking additional evidence on record was filed during the final hearing of the appeal. In such a fact-situation, the order allowing such application did not vitiate for want of reasons.

48. To sum up on the issue, it may be held that application for taking additional evidence on record at a belated stage cannot be filed as a matter of right. The court can consider such an application with circumspection, provided it is covered under either of the prerequisite condition incorporated in the statutory provisions itself. The discretion is to be exercised by the court judicially taking into consideration the relevance of the document in respect of the issues involved in the case and the circumstances under which such an evidence could not be led in the court below and as to whether the applicant had prosecuted his case before the court below diligently and as to whether such evidence is required to pronounce the judgment by the appellate court. In case the court comes to the conclusion that the application filed comes within the four corners of the statutory provisions itself, the evidence may be taken on record, however, the court must record reasons as on what basis such an application has been allowed. However, the application should not be moved at a belated stage.

52. Thus, from the above, it is crystal clear that application for taking additional evidence on record at an appellate stage, even if filed during the pendency of the appeal, is to be heard at the time of final hearing of the appeal at a stage when after appreciating the evidence on record, the court reaches the conclusion that additional evidence was required to be taken on record in order to pronounce the judgment or for any other substantial cause. In case, application for taking additional evidence on record has been considered and allowed prior to the hearing of the appeal, the order being a product of total and complete non-application of mind, as to whether such evidence is required to be taken on record to pronounce the judgment or not, remains inconsequential/inexecutable and is liable to be ignored.

53. In the instant case, the application under Order XLI Rule 27 CPC was filed on 6.4.1998 and it was allowed on 28.4.1999 though the first appeal was heard and disposed of on 15.10.1999. In view of law referred to hereinabove, the order dated 28.4.1999 is just to be ignored."

14) On perusal of the aforesaid judgments, it is well established that the additional evidence can be placed at appellate stage; if the trial court has refused to take additional evidence which ought to have been admitted, the party seeking to produce additional evidence, establishes that notwithstanding the exercise of due diligence, such evidence was not within his knowledge or could not, after the exercise of due diligence, be produced by him at the time when the decree appealed against was passed orthe Appellate Court requires any document to be produced or any witness to be examined to enable it to pronounce judgment, or for any other substantial cause.

15) On perusal of the provisions contained under Order 41 Rule 27(aa) CPC and the judgments referred herein above, it is apparent that respondent Nos.2 to 5 have no-where disclosed the due diligence in as much as how they came to know about the sale deed and could not file the same before the trial court. No reasons whatsoever has been stated in the application, thus, the appellate court while considering the application has failed to appreciate the ingredients, which are required to be considered under Order 41 Rule 27 CPC.

16) On bare perusal of the order impugned, it is evident that the appellate court has not recorded satisfaction in allowing the application under Order 41 Rule 27 CPC.

17) After thoughtful consideration of the provisions contained under Order 41 Rule 27 CPC and the judgment placed before the Court, this Court is of the opinion that the Additional District Judge has committed manifest error of law in passing the impugned order. The Additional District Judge has failed to appreciate the ingredients under Order 41 Rule 27 (aa) CPC and has proceeded to allow the application in a very cursory manner.

18) In view of the above, the impugned order dated 27.05.2015 is hereby set aside.

19) The writ petition succeeds and is allowed.

20) The Additional District Judge, Lucknow is directed to reconsider the application filed by respondent Nos.2 to 5 and to pass appropriate order in accordance with law as per observation made above and to decide the same within a period of six months from the date of production of a certified copy of this order.

21) The parties are, however, restrained to seek unnecessary adjournments in the matter.

22) No order as to costs.

A. Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 - O-XXI, Rules - 105 & 106 - petition-filed by a decree holder –whose application-rejected vide order impugned herein-by Executing Court-in his absence -though expressly not saying that the dismissal is in default.- the date was not fixed for hearing-the order is found to be manifestly illegal and liable to be set aside.

Held: - It was certainly not a date that was fixed for hearing the application within the meaning of sub-rule (2) of Rule 105 of Order XXI C.P.C. Thus, the order dismissing the Execution Application on 16.4.2010 cannot be said to be an order passed in exercise of jurisdiction under Order XXI Rule 106 of the Code. That being so, a restoration application, or an application to set aside the order 16.4.2010 is not at all one made under Rule 106 of Order XXI, so as to attract the bar of limitation, under Sub-rule (3). It is clearly an application under Section 151 CPC to which the rule of limitation, under Sub-rule (3) of Rule 106 of Order XXI, does not apply. Since, the impugned order dated 23.1.2019 proceeds entirely on the basis that the application is barred by limitation, which cannot be condoned treating it in manifest error to be an application under Order XXI Rule 106 of the Code, the impugned order aforesaid passed by the learned IVth Additional District Judge/Special Judge E.C. Act, Bulandshahar is manifestly illegal and liable to the set aside.

(Delivered by Hon'ble J.J. Munir, J.)

1. This petition under Article 227 of the Constitution has been brought by a decree holder to set aside an order passed by the IVth Additional District and Sessions Judge/Special Judge (E.C. Act), Bulandshahar dated 16.04.2010, in Execution Case No. 20 of 2004, dismissing the petitioner's Execution Application in his absence, though expressly not saying that the dismissal is in default. Further challenge is laid to an order dated 23.01.2019, passed by the Court aforesaid, rejecting an application under Section 5 of the Limitation Act, filed in aid of an application under Order IX Rule 4 read with Order XXI Rule 106 and Section 151 C.P.C. seeking to set aside the order dated 16.04.2010, dismissing the Execution Application in default of the decree holder.

2. Heard Sri Uma Kant Mishra, learned counsel for the petitioner and Sri Sunil Kumar Mishra, learned counsel appearing on behalf of respondent Nos. 2 and 3.

3. The question that falls for consideration in this petition is: whether an Execution Application dismissed in default on a day when it is not set down for hearing but for orders or some other proceeding, can be restored with aid of Section 5 of the Limitation Act, through an application made for the purpose, beyond the non condonable limitation of 30 days prescribed under Order XXI Rule 106(3) Code of Civil Procedure?

4. The issue has come up in the context of proceedings arising from two references made to the District Judge of Bulandshahar under Section 18 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 (for short, 'the Act'). The references aforesaid were a sequel to acquisition of certain land of the petitioner comprising Khasra No. 875/1 of Khata No. 206, admeasuring 2 Bigha and Khasra Nos. 874/2 and 875/3 both part of Khata No. 206, admeasuring a total of 7 Bigha 10 Biswa, located in the erstwhile village of Kasna, Pargana Dankaur, District Bulandshahar, and now falling in the district of Gautam Buddh Nagar. The aforesaid land is hereinafter referred to as the 'land in dispute'. The land in dispute was acquired by the State through a Notification under Section 4(1) of the Act, dated 03.03.1989, followed by a declaration under Section 6(1), dated 31.03.1989. Possession of this land appears to have been taken by the State on 03.07.1990 and an Award of compensation was made by the Special Land Acquisition Officer, Bulandshahar on 26.11.1990. The Special Land Acquisition Officer awarded compensation at four different rates per Bhigha of acquired land, according to four different classes of land, that comprised the land in dispute.

5. Aggrieved by the Award of the Special Land Acquisition Officer, the petitioner moved him to make a reference to the District Judge under Section 18 of the Act. Two separate references were made by the Special Land Acquisition Officer, one relating to Khasra No. 1875/1 and the other relating to Khasra No. 874/2 and 875/3; the first of the two references was numbered on the file of the learned District Judge as LAR No. 103/1992, and the second as LAR No. 511/1992. Both references were transferred and assigned to the Additional District Judge, Court No. 2, Bulandshahar before whom these came up for determination on 17.12.2003.

6. Both references were heard together and decided by a common judgment and award of the date last mentioned, whereby both references were accepted. The references were accepted in terms that determining the land in dispute to be industrial in nature on the date of acquisition, compensation that was awarded by the Special Land Acquisition Officer @ of quantification per Bigha, the learned Judge determined it @ Rs. 65 per square yard. It was also awarded that the compensation payable shall carry interest from the date of Notification under Section 4(1) to the date of transfer of possession @ 12% per annum. It was also ordered that on the enhanced compensation worked out in terms of the award of the Reference Court, statutory entitlement of solatium @ 30% would be worked out. It was further ordered that on the entire enhanced amount of compensation, including solatium added to it from the date of taking over possession until one year afterwards, the decree holder would be entitled to 9% per annum in interest and, thereafter, on the entire sum of compensation interest would be payable @ 15 % per annum.

7. From the judgment and award of the Additional District Judge in LAR No. 103/1992 a First Appeal was carried to this Court by respondent no. 3, that is to say, the U.P.S.I.D.C. Ghaziabad, who are the beneficiaries of the acquisition. The aforesaid Appeal was a defective appeal and was numbered as First Appeal No. 580 (Defective) of 2004. The said Appeal was dismissed vide an order dated 24.07.2006.

8. It is the petitioner's case that during the aforesaid period of time, the petitioner filed for execution of the awards passed by the Additional District Judge under Section 18 of the Act, but those proceedings of execution remained in limbo because of the pendency of the defective First Appeal hereinbefore referred to by the petitioner that was until its decision on 26.07.2006, pending before this Court. It is the petitioner's case that the Execution Application aforesaid was dismissed in default on 16.04.2010, a fact of which the petitioner was never informed by his counsel at any point of time. It is specifically said in paragraph 9 of the petition that the petitioner came to know about the order dated 16.04.2010, relating to dismissal of his Execution Application from the office of respondent no. 3, for the first time, on 01.06.2017 when he demanded payment of compensation in terms of the award. It is asserted that immediately on the day following, that is, 02.06.2017, the petitioner went to his counsel's residence, that is to say, the residence of Sri Mahipal Singh, a resident of District Ghaziabad. After inquiry, he informed the petitioner that by some inadvertent error, he missed noting the date it in his diary, that fell on 16.04.2010. The petitioner was informed with regret that it was on that account the Execution Application came to be dismissed in default, in the petitioner's absence, on 16.04.2010. It was in this background that the petitioner was given to understand by his counsel that he could not inform the petitioner about the factum of dismissal of his Execution Application in default, or could he advise the petitioner to move for a recall of the said order. It is pointed out with much emphasis by the learned counsel for the petitioner that on the petitioner's request, the learned counsel appearing for him in Execution Application, Sri Mahipal Singh, Advocate initially agreed to file his own affidavit or an affidavit of his clerk in support of the application seeking recall of the order of dismissal in default, but lateron, for reasons best known to him, filed a restoration application on 05.10.2017 supported by an affidavit of the petitioner. The recall application was accompanied by a delay condonation application, also supported by the said affidavit. It is asserted that the petitioner is almost an illiterate person. He was entirely dependent on the learned counsel whom he had instructed to pursue the matter on his behalf. Though, it is averred that his counsel could not explain the delay properly, and, on that account, the delay condonation application came to be rejected by means of the impugned order dated 23.01.2019, and resultantly, his application to set aside the order dated 16.04.2010, dismissing the Execution Application in default, learned counsel for the petitioner, at the hearing, has candidly pointed out that the application to set aside the order dated 16.04.2010 was rejected on ground that an application to set aside an order made ex parte or in default disposing of an execution application, is governed by the provisions of Order XXI Rule 106 CPC, where by virtue of provisions of Order XXI Rule 106 (3) CPC, there is an uncondonable limitation of 30 days to set aside such an order. It is also pointed out that the Court below held that the provisions of Section 5 of the Limitation Act have no application to an Execution Application decided ex parte or in default under Order XXI, where Order XXI Rule 106 CPC is a complete Code. It was also held by the Executing Court that the provisions of Section 151 CPC that were pressed into service on the petitioner's behalf, seeking to set aside the order dated 16.04.2010, passed in the execution case dismissing it in default, were inapplicable. This course of action, too, was based on the same reasoning that Order XXI Rule 106 CPC is a compete Code governing an application to set aside orders dismissing an Execution Application in default or proceeding ex parte, where Section 151 CPC has no application.

9. Learned counsel for the respondent, Sri Sunil Kumar Mishra has supported the order impugned passed by the Court below precisely adopting the reasoning subscribed to by the Court below in passing that order. In short, the submission is that once an Execution Application is dismissed in default, an application, to set such an order, has to be brought within the condonable limit of 30 days under Order XXI Rule 106 (3) of the Code. If it is brought beyond that date, the application to set aside an order made ex parte in execution proceedings, is not maintainable as the delay cannot be condoned. It is also argued that there being a special provision under the Code governing limitation in terms of the Rule 106(3) of Order XXI, Section 5 of the Limitation Act cannot be pressed into service nor can the provisions of Section 151 CPC called in aid.

10. Learned counsel for the petitioner, Sri Uma Kant Mishra has drawn the attention of the Court to a certain distinction in law, regarding the stage of proceedings in an execution, when an order, dismissing the Execution Application in default, is passed and its ramifications on the right of the decree holder to apply for a restoration of the Execution Application, vis-a-vis limitation prescribed under Order XXI Rule 106 (3) CPC. It is submitted by Sri Uma Kant Mishra, learned counsel for the petitioner that Order XXI Rule 106 (3) CPC comes into play, or so to speak, Rule 106 of Order XXI, as such, is applicable when the Execution Application dismissed in default or proceeded ex parte is set down for hearing. It does not apply if the Execution Application is fixed before the Court for some other purpose, such as for some other steps being taken, or disposal of some office report regarding service, or disposal of some miscellaneous application. He has drawn the attention of the Court to the order dated 27.03.2010, which shows that a receipt bearing paper no. 24 BC has been filed on behalf of the decree holder. The order further shows that 16.04.2010 was the date fixed for disposal. He emphasized that 16.04.2010 was not a date fixed for hearing in the Execution Application. Learned counsel for the petitioner, therefore, submits that once the case was not set down for hearing, Order XXI Rule 106 CPC would not at all be attracted, and so also the non-condonable limitation prescribed under sub Rule (3) of Rule 106 of Order XXI. It is pointed out by the learned counsel for the petitioner that in the event of dismissal of an Execution Application, when it is not set down for hearing but some other purpose or step in proceedings, the power to recall or set aside, is to be drawn from Section 151 CPC and not Order XXI Rule 106 CPC. Once that is the case, as the one here, the Executing Court has gone utterly wrong in invoking Order XXI Rule 106 CPC to hold the petitioner's application to set aside, along with the delay condonation application to be not maintainable on ground that sub-Rule (3) of Rule 106 of Order XXI does not contemplate the power to condone delay.

11. This Court has considered the submissions advanced on both sides and carefully perused the record. A perusal of the order sheet indeed shows that going by the three orders preceding the one dated 16.04.2010, when the Execution Application was dismissed for non prosecution, the case was successively posted for disposal. The two orders passed on 31.10.2009 and 30.10.2010 show that the decree holder was not present when the case was called on, but was granted seven days' time to take steps. On each of the two days last mentioned, the Execution Application was posted for disposal. 'Disposal' would be referable to the service report. On 27.03.2010, that is to say, the date preceding the order dated 16.04.2010 dismissing the Execution Application, the following order was passed:

"आज पेश हुआ। D.H की ओर से रजि. रसीद २४ BC दाखिल हुई । वास्ते निस्तारण १६.०४.१० को पेश हो।"

12. It is thus evident that on 16.04.2010, when the case was dismissed in default, though those words are not expressly employed, the Execution Application was posted for disposal and not set down for hearing. There is no quarrel about the issue that on 16.04.2010, the case was dismissed in default and not on merits, though the words 'in default' have not been specifically used. The parties have not been at issue about the nature of the order dated 16.04.2010 being one in default, either before this Court or before the Court below. Even otherwise, a reading of the order made on 16.4.2010 does not spare as much as a hint showing it to be an order made on merits. It is clearly an order dismissing the execution proceedings in default or non prosecution. It would be profitable to refer to the provisions of Order XXI Rule 106 CPC, which are quoted in extenso:

106. Setting aside orders passed ex parte, etc-(1) The applicant, against whom an order is made under sub-rule (2) of Rule 105 or the opposite party against whom an order is passed ex parte under sub-rule (3) of that rule or under sub-rule (1) of Rule 23, may apply to the Court to set aside the order, and if he satisfies the Court that there was sufficient cause for his non-appearance when the application was called on for hearing, the Court shall set aside the order on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it things fit, and shall appoint a day for the further hearing of the application.

(2) No order shall be made on an application under sub-rule (1) unless notice of the application has been served on the other party.

(3) An application under sub-rule (1) shall be made within thirty days from the date of the order, or where, in the case of an ex parte order, the notice was not duly served, within thirty days from the date when the applicant had knowledge of the order.

13. A perusal of sub-Rule (1) of Rule 106 of Order XXI shows that the first postulate that attracts the power under Rule 106 is that the order must be one made under Sub-rule (2) of Rule 105 of Order XXI, or under Sub-rule (3) of Rule 105 last mentioned, or under Sub-rule (1) of Rule 23 of Order XXI of the Code. The second postulate is that anyone, who invokes the provisions of Rule 106 of Order XXI, must satisfy the Court that there was sufficient cause for his non appearance when the Execution case was called on for hearing, almost to borrow the phraseology of the statute. It needs further exploration as to what pre-condition, the first postulate to invoke the provisions of Rule 106, envisages. A reference to the provisions of Rule 105 of Order XXI would be apposite. Rule 105 of Order XXI reads thus:

105. Hearing of application- (1) The Court, before which an application under any of the foregoing rules of this Order is pending, may fix a day for the hearing of the application.

(2) Where on the day fixed or on any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned the applicant does not appear when the case is called on for hearing, the Court may make an order that the application be dismissed.

(3) Where the applicant appears and the opposite party to whom the notice has been issued by the Court does not appear, the Court may hear the application ex pare and pass such order as it things fit.

Explanation-An application referred to in sub-rule (1) includes a claim or objection made under Rule 58.

14. Sub-Rule (1) of Rule 23 of Order XXI has no relevance to the context of the facts in hand as that would be attracted, where a notice to show cause is issued to the judgment debtor and such judgment debtor, either does not appear, or appears but does not show cause to the satisfaction of the Court. What, therefore, comes into play in the facts of this case is sub-rule (2) of Rule 105 of Order XXI of the Code. A reading of the Rule 105 (supra) shows that it speaks about the Court fixing a date for hearing of the application; that is what Sub-Rule (1) of Rule 105 envisages. The dismissal of the application under Sub-Rule (2) of Rule 105 last mentioned is, therefore, a dismissal that comes about as a result of absence of the applicant on the date fixed for hearing, either originally fixed or the adjourned date, where the applicant fails to appear. But, there is little doubt on a plain construction of provisions of Sub-rule (2) of Rule 105 that the power to dismiss in default for non prosecution, which is precisely the nature of the power conferred by the said sub-rule, must have been exercised on a day fixed for hearing of the Execution Application, that may be date fixed in the first instance or an adjourned date. It cannot be a date for any other purpose, such as taking steps, or for disposal of some report, or other application.

15. It would be gainful to refer to authority on the point where this question has arisen in the past. This question arose before the Gauhati High Court in Deo Narayan Goala (Deceased by L.R.) and others vs. Jagadish Pandit. It was a case where the Execution Application had been rejected on a date that was not fixed for hearing . The decree-holder applied to set aside the order rejecting the application in his absence, invoking the provisions of Section 151 CPC. In the said case, the Execution Application was dismissed on a date, which was fixed for disposal of an application by the Judgment Debtor, seeking stay of execution till harvesting was done. There were also objections by the decree-holder to that application up for orders. It was not a date fixed for hearing of the Execution Application but the Court had dismissed the Execution Application on ground that no steps were taken for proceedings with the execution. This, the Court did after dismissing the Judgment-debtor's application and the decree-holder's objections thereto as infructuous. The Executing Court on an application made to set aside the order dismissing the Execution Application, did so invoking its inherent powers under Section 151 CPC. That order was challenged before the Gauhati High Court. The Court holding that the provisions of Rule 106 of Order XXI do not apply, unless it is a date fixed for hearing of the Execution Application, said thus in paragraph 5 and 8 of the report:

"5. These two Rules were inserted by the Code of Civil Procedure Amendment Act, 1976 and were brought into force with effect from 1st February, 1977. R.105 deals with the hearing of an Execution Application. Sub-clause (1) of R.105 requires the court to fix a date for the hearing of an Execution Application. Sub-clause (2) of this Rule provides that if on the date fixed for hearing of the Execution Application or any application arising out of the Execution Application or on any other date to which the hearing may be adjourned, the applicant does not appear when the case is called on for hearing, the court may dismiss that application. Similarly if the other party to whom the notice has been served does not appear, the court may proceed to hear the application ex parte and pass such orders as it thinks fit and proper. Rule 106, empowers the executing court to recall the order of dismissal passed ex parte and it provides that the court may set aside the order passed either under sub-clause (1) of R.105 or of sub-clause (2) of R.105, if it is satisfied that there was sufficient cause for the non-appearance when the application is called on for hearing. R.105 also covers the Execution Application. The court may fix a date of hearing of an Execution Application if any objection is filed against the same and if on the date of hearing of the application, the decree-holder is not present, the application may be rejected. Similarly, if the judgment-debtor is not present at the time of hearing of the Execution Application, the hearing may be done ex parte and suitable orders may be passed in the case after hearing the decree-holder. R.105 however does not deal with the situation when an Execution Application is rejected on account of not taking the requisite steps in the case. It is quite plain from sub-clause (1) of R.105 that the court may fix a date for the hearing of the application. But before an application is set down for hearing, it should have in fact, ripened for the hearing. In other words, the judgment-debtor should have the information that an application has been moved against him and he may show cause against the same. In order to serve notices on the judgment-debtor certain steps are to be taken. If the decree-holder does not take the requisite steps to serve notice on the judgment-debtor, the Execution Application may be rejected on account of non-prosecution. But that order of rejection will not be covered by R.105, Code of Civil Procedure; because, the date was not fixed for hearing the application but was fixed for taking requisite steps in the case. This distinction is also made out in the provisions of O.9 of the Code of Civil Procedure. I have referred to the provisions of O.9 not with a view to say that those provisions apply to the execution case but I have just mentioned them by way of an illustration. It cannot, therefore, be said that R.105 covers all the situations and if any application has to be made for setting aside the ex parte order, it should be only under R.106 of O.21. In fact R.106 comes into play when an application was fixed for hearing and the applicant was absent at the time of the hearing and the application was therefore rejected. In the case in hand, the learned Munsiff rejected the Execution Application on the ground that the decree-holder took no other steps for proceeding with the execution. Quite obviously, the Execution Application was not fixed on 11th July 1980 for its hearing. The petition No. 49/11 filed by the judgment-debtor was fixed for hearing and that petition was rejected on that day. After rejecting that application, the court below further passed an order dismissing the execution case for default on the ground that the decree-holder took no other steps. This order was obviously not covered by the provisions of R.105 of O.21, Code of Civil Procedure. Hence the provisions of R.106 could not be invoked. The decree was passed on 4th March, 1968. The period of 12 years had expired on 4th March, 1968. The Execution Application was dismissed on 11th July, 1980. In these circumstances, the decree-holder filed an application under S.151, Code of Civil Procedure for recalling the order of 11th July, 1980 instead of filing a second application for execution.

8. I have already pointed out above that the provisions of Rules 105 and 106 of O.21 could not be invoked on the facts and circumstances of the instant case. There is no other express provision in the Code of Civil Procedure dealing with the situation which had arisen in the present case. The trial court had not fixed the Execution Application for hearing on 11th July, 1980. It had fixed that date for hearing of the petition of the judgment-debtor whereby he wanted the stay of the execution proceedings till the harvesting was done. That application was rejected by the court below as it had become infructuous. The parties were present before the court. If any steps were required to be taken by the decree-holder for proceeding with the execution, the court should have granted time for doing so. Instead, the court below rejected the application in default. The decree-holder therefore applied for setting aside that order. Such an order not being covered by R.105 of O.21, Code of Civil Procedure, the application for setting it aside could not be filed under R.106 of O.21. The inherent power of the Court was, therefore, invoked to set aside that order. The court below having found that there were sufficient grounds for setting aside that order, recalled it and allowed the application of the decree-holder and fixed 24th July, 1980 for taking steps in the case. Such an order could not be said to be capricious or arbitrary. The discretion exercised by the court below in setting aside the order dated 11th July 1980 could not therefore be interfered with. In fact the impugned order was passed in the interest of justice and taking of course the notice of the fact that the alternative remedy to file a fresh Execution Application had become barred by time. The petitioners have thus failed to make out a case warranting interference under S.115 of the Code of Civil Procedure."

16. Likewise, the question again fell for consideration before the Madhya Pradesh High Court in Khoobchand Jain and another vs. Kashi Prasad and other. In the said case, the decree put to execution was a money decree. The decree-holder applied for execution and after the judgment-debtor had put in appearance, a warrant of attachment of movables was issued, upon the decree-holder furnishing a list of movables and requisite process fee, within three days. The decree-holder took the requisite steps and warrant to attach the movables, in accordance with the list, was issued. The judgment-debtor, however, objected to the warrant before the Court on ground that suit as against him had been dismissed, and, therefore, his property could not be attached. In this circumstance, the Executing Court upheld the said objection and directed the decree-holder to furnish a list of movables of judgment-debtors and not the defendant against whom the suit was dismissed. The decree-holder could not furnish list of movables of the judgment-debtors, in consequence of which, no warrant of attachment could be issued. The Executing Court on the last date fixed had granted some further time to the decree-holder to furnish the requisite list of movables, and on such a list being furnished, ordered the warrant of attachment to be issued. The case was last adjourned for the purpose of furnishing that list to 21.08.1979. On the said date, neither the decree-holder or their counsel appeared in Court and the Execution Application was dismissed in default of the decree-holder's appearance. The decree-holder filed a restoration application under Order XXI Rule 106 of the Code on 24.09.1979, explaining the delay. The Application was opposed on ground of limitation by the judgment-debtor. The decree-holder filed an application for condonation of delay, which too was opposed by the judgment-debtor. The Executing Court rejected the application to set aside the order on ground that Section 5 of the Limitation Act does not apply to an application under Order XXI Rule 106 of the Code and a miscellaneous appeal to the District Judge was also dismissed. On a Revision being filed to the High Court, it was held thus in paragraph 17, 18, 19 and 20 of the report:

17. Rule 106 of O. 21 of the Civil P.C. provides that if the Court is satisfied that there was sufficient cause for non-appearance, when the application was called for 'hearing', the Court shall set aside the order. No such order shall be made unless the application is made within 30 days from the date of order.

Rule 105 contemplates dismissal of the application on a date of 'hearing', while Rule 106 provides, for restoration of application on making out sufficient cause for non-appearance, when the application was called for 'hearing'.

18. In my opinion, the date on which the Execution Application was dismissed for default of appearance of the decree-holders, namely, 21-8-1979 was not a date fixed for 'hearing' within the meaning of Rule 105. It was a date awaiting report as to execution of the warrant which was supposed to be issued on submission of a list of moveable property by the decree-holders within three days of the earlier order dated 21-7-1979. Consequently, the dismissal of Execution Application on 21-8-1979 was not under Rule 105(2) of O. 21 of the Civil P.C., and therefore, the provisions of R. 106 are not attracted. The dismissal of the Execution Application in default of appearance on 21-8-1979 is referable to inherent powers of the Court.

19. I have pointed out above that there is a specific provision for dismissal of suit for non-payment of costs etc. in O. 9, while there is no analogous provision in O. 21 of the Civil P.C. Consequently, the dismissal of Execution Application for non-payment of process-fee or for failure to comply with any direction of the Court, will be in exercise of inherent powers. In the present case, the dismissal was not failure of the decree-holders to pay process fee or to submit a list of property, but was in default of appearance of the decree-holders. The Courts below committed a mistake in treating the dismissal of Execution Application under R.105 so as to attract R.106 of O.21 of the Code. The orders passed by the Courts below cannot be sustained.

20. Since the dismissal of the Execution Application on 21-8-1979 was under inherent powers, the application for its restoration will be by invoking the inherent powers of the Court and in that event, no time limit is prescribed for invoking the inherent powers of the Court.

17. The same question fell for consideration before the Orissa High Court in Dambarudhar Mohanta vs. Mangulu Charan Naik and others. In the said case, the Execution Application was dismissed in default on a certain date because requisite steps were not taken by the decree-holder. A restoration application made under Section 151 C.P.C., beyond the period of 30 days was rejected on ground that provisions of Section 151 were not applicable, in view of specific provisions of Order XXI Rule 106 CPC, where a time barred application to set aside an order dismissing the Execution Application in default was not maintainable. In the context of the said facts, a Revision from the said order was allowed by the District Judge on ground that the provisions of Order XXI Rule 106 were not attracted. It was held in paragraph 6 of the report thus.

"6. On perusal of the impugned orders and the order of learned Civil Judge, provision under Order 21, Rule 106, CPC and the aforesaid contention of the petitioner, this Court finds that the view expressed by the District Judge relating to non-applicability of the provision of Order 21, Rule 106 relating to restoration of an execution case dismissed for default is correct. In other words, the execution proceeding dismissed in such a manner cannot be restored on an application under Order 21, Rule 106, CPC. In that respect in the absence of any specific provision in the Code of Civil Procedure. Provision in Section 151, CPC is the only provision to consider the prayer for restoration....."

18. The question was also considered by the Supreme Court in Damodaran Pillai and others vs. South Indian Bank Ltd., where the Execution Application, that was set down for hearing, was dismissed in default on 1.11.1990. The restoration application was filed on 4.4.1998 on ground that the decree-holder came to learn about the dismissal of the application on 25.3.1998, and not earlier. The restoration application was rejected by the Subordinate Judge, and so was the Revision by the Kerala High Court. Their Lordships of the Supreme Court upheld that order after distinguishing the decision of the Madhya Pradesh High Court in Khoobchand Jain and another (Supra), which verifies the legal position that the provisions of Order XXI Rule 106 C.P.C. apply if the application has been set down for hearing but not otherwise. It was held in Damodaran Pillai and others (Supra) by their Lordships thus:

"19. Mr Joshi, however, placed strong reliance upon Khoobchand Jainv.Kashi Prasad[AIR 1986 MP 66 : 1986 MPLJ 52] . The said decision, in our opinion, has no application to the facts and circumstances of the present case. Therein the Execution Application was dismissed on a day which was not fixed for hearing. The said order of dismissal, therefore, was not passed in terms of sub-rule (2) of Rule 105 of Order 21 of Code of Civil Procedure. In that situation it was opined: (AIR p. 69, para 15)

"15. In the present case, the decree-holders had already applied for execution and paid process-fee for issuance of a warrant of attachment. It was, therefore, for the Court to issue a warrant of attachment of such property as was in possession of the judgment-debtors. Submission of the inventory of movable property in possession of the judgment-debtors is not necessary under the relevant rules. In case, the warrant is returned unexecuted, the decree-holders could, in their discretion, make an application for examination of the judgment-debtors under Rule 41 or could resort to any other mode to recover the decretal amount."

It was further observed: (AIR p. 70, para 20)

"20. Since the dismissal of the Execution Application on 21-8-1979 was under inherent powers, the application for its restoration will be by invoking the inherent powers of the Court and in that event, no time-limit is prescribed for invoking the inherent powers of the Court."

19. The question was considered by this Court in Arjun Prasad vs. Sameer Jahan Begum. It is a case where the Execution Application had been dismissed on a date that was not fixed for hearing but for summoning the file. In that context Janardan Sahai, J. held thus:

"Sub Rule 1 of Rule 105 provides that the court before which an application under Order 21 is pending may fix a day for the hearing of the application. It is thus clear that it is not every date fixed in a pending application which is a date for hearing. A date for hearing would be a date fixed by the court for that purpose. A date for hearing would be one where the court proposes to hear the case or to apply mind to the case. The power of dismissal of the application in the absence of the applicant provided under Sub Rule (2) can be exercised on a day fixed for hearing or on a day to which the hearing has been adjourned. When the court fixes a date for production of the file it does not fix a date for hearing within the meaning of Sub Rule 1. If the record is not produced on that date and the court fixes another date for the production of the record, such adjourned date would not be a date to which the hearing has been adjourned within the meaning of Sub Rule (2) of Rule 105.

In the present case it has been held by the courts below that the date fixed was for summoning the file. The date was not one where the court proposed to apply mind or to hear the parties. Such a date cannot be treated as the date for hearing within the meaning of Rule 105 (2) of Order 21 CPC. The application for restoration in such a case would lie under Section 151 CPC and not under Rule 106."

20. This question was again considered by this Court in State of U.P. vs. Saifi Abdul Hasan Nimachawala, where after survey of most of the decisions refered to in detail hereinabove, it was held thus:

"15. The consistent view therefore, is that Rule 106 would apply only when the execution proceedings is fixed for hearing in terms of Rule 105 of Order XXI and in the event of the petition being dismissed prior to the stage of hearing, in absence of a specific provision, the court is competent ot restore the petition in exercise of its inherent power."

21. A perusal of the order dated 27.3.2010 does not spare the slightest doubt that 16.4.2010 was not a date fixed for hearing but orders or disposal of the service report, regarding steps earlier directed to be taken vide orders 31.10.2009 and 30.01.2010, and may be, also on the document that was filed, bearing paper no. 24 BC on 27.3.2010. It was certainly not a date that was fixed for hearing the application within the meaning of sub-rule (2) of Rule 105 of Order XXI C.P.C. Thus, the order dismissing the Execution Application on 16.4.2010 cannot be said to be an order passed in exercise of jurisdiction under Order XXI Rule 106 of the Code. That being so, a restoration application, or an application to set aside the order 16.4.2010 is not at all one made under Rule 106 of Order XXI, so as to attract the bar of limitation, under Sub-rule (3). It is clearly an application under Section 151 CPC to which the rule of limitation, under Sub-rule (3) of Rule 106 of Order XXI, does not apply.

22. Since, the impugned order dated 23.1.2019 proceeds entirely on the basis that the application is barred by limitation, which cannot be condoned treating it in manifest error to be an application under Order XXI Rule 106 of the Code, the impugned order aforesaid passed by the learned IVth Additional District Judge/Special Judge E.C. Act, Bulandshahar is manifestly illegal and liable to the set aside.

23. In the result, this petition succeeds and is allowed. The impugned order dated 23.01.2019 passed by the learned IVth Additional District Judge/Special Judge (E.C.) Act, Bulandshahar in Miscellaneous Case No. 1418 of 2017 is hereby set aside with a remit of the matter to the learned IVth Additional District Judge/Special Judge (E.C.) Act, Bulandshahar to redetermine the belated application for restoration, together with the delay condonation application filed in its aid in proper sequence, in accordance with law, after hearing all parties concerned, afresh. In doing so, the learned IVth Additional District Judge/Special Judge (E.C.) Act, Bulandshahar will bear in mind what has been said in this judgment. The learned IVth Additional District Judge/Special Judge (E.C.) Act, Bulandshahar will decide Miscellaneous Case No. 1418 of 2017 within a period of two months from the date of receipt of a certified copy of this order.

Habeas Corpus Writ Petition No. 564 of 2019

Aashif ...Petitioner/Detainue (In detention)
Versus
State of U.P. & Ors. ...Respondents

Counsel for the Petitioner:
Sri Sunil Singh, Sri Chandrakesh Mishra

Counsel for the Respondents:

A. National Security Act , 1980 - Section 3(2) read with Section 3(3) – Detention on basis of solitary incident and irrelevant considerations-no cogent material to enable a logical inference that on being released on bail, the petitioners would indulge in activity prejudicial to the maintenance of the public order or supplies and services essential to the community. (Para 26,27,28,34 & 35)

Ordinarily a solitary act may not be sufficient to sustain an order of preventive detention but where that act is of such a nature that it is reflective of, or has manifestation of, an organized criminal activity, or is so grave that it reflects the propensity of that person to repeat such an act, then even a solitary act could well be made basis for passing an order of preventive detention.

Except for the criminal history of Aas Mohd., the brother of the petitioner (Aashif) and uncle of the petitioner (Adil), which, in our view was extraneous and not a relevant consideration, particularly, in absence of further details as to how the petitioners were linked with him in his criminal activity, there is no material, cogent enough, to enable a logical inference, on the basis of a solitary incident, that on being released on bail, the petitioners would indulge in activity prejudicial to the maintenance of the public order or supplies and services essential to the community.

The incident was not such from which any inference could be drawn about the propensity of the petitioners to repeat, or indulge in, such activities. No co-accused similarly situated has been preventively detained.

Consequently, both the habeas corpus petitions are allowed. The detention orders quashed. Both the petitioners shall be set at liberty forthwith unless wanted in any other case.

(Delivered by Hon'ble Manoj Misra, J. & Hon'ble Mrs. Manju Rani Chauhan, J.)

1. These two habeas corpus petitions have been filed by uncle (Aashif) and nephew (Adil) questioning their detention under the provisions of the National Security Act (for short the Act, 1980) under separate detention orders dated 16th April, 2019, passed by the District Magistrate, Ghaziabad in exercise of powers under Section 3(2) read with Section 3(3) of the Act, 1980.

2. As the impugned orders seeking detention of the petitioners are based on identical grounds and the arguments advanced by learned counsel for the parties are same in both the petitions, with the consent of learned counsel for the parties, these petitions are being decided by a common judgment and order.

3. We have heard Sri Daya Shanker Mishra, learned senior counsel, assisted by Sri Sunil Singh and Sri Chandrakesh Mishra, for both the petitioners; Sri Deepak Mishra, learned A.G.A. for the State as well as the other State-Officers including the detaining authority in both the petitions; Sri G.P. Singh holding brief of Sri R.P.S. Chauhan for the Union of India in Habeas Corpus Petition No. 262 of 2019; and Ms. Annapurna Singh for the Union of India in Habeas Corpus Petition No. 564 of 2019; and have perused the record.

4. The impugned detention orders dated 16th April, 2019 would reveal that the District Magistrate, Ghaziabad (the Detaining Authority) has passed the order of detention by taking notice of an incident dated 25.05.2019 relating to a clash between two group of persons, namely, the petitioners along with seven named associates and others on the one side and Ata Ilahi and his seven named associates on the other side, at Rawali Surana Main Road near Bilal Masjid, which had breached public order. The order of detention was passed to prevent repeat of such activity so as to ensure maintenance of public order and essential services as well as civil supplies.

5. A perusal of the grounds of detention would show that on 25.3.2019 the police received an information that at Rawali Surana main road, near Bilal Masjid, two group of persons were indulging in exchange of fire and brickbats to establish their authority and hold over the area thereby causing utter confusion and panic in that area. Upon receipt of that information, the police reached the spot. The perpetrators, upon seeing the police, dispersed and escaped. From the spot few cartridge empties were recovered. Upon enquiry from persons found there, information was gathered regarding involvement of the petitioners and others in the incident. FIR was lodged naming 20 persons including the petitioners, though five or six others were left unnamed. FIR was registered as Case Crime No. 262 of 2019 at P.S. Muradnagar, District Ghaziabad, under Sections 147, 148, 149, 307, 341, 336, 504, 188 I.P.C. and section 7 Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1934. It was alleged that by the said activity of the petitioners, despite prohibitory orders issued under section 144 CrPC in view of impending Lok Sabha elections, there had been a breach of public order including disruption in movement of vehicles as well as civil supplies. The grounds of detention drew support not only from the police reports but also newspaper reports dated 26.03.2019 published in Hindustan; Dainik Jagran; and Amar Ujala. The news daily Hindustan reported that in the middle of the road for half-an-hour there was exchange of brickbats and fire between two groups. The news daily Dainik Jagran reported that at Muradnagar there had been indiscriminate firing. News daily Amar Ujala reported that there was exchange of fire and brickbats between two groups on account of money dispute.

6. After narrating the incident as above, in paragraph 8 of the grounds of detention, on the one hand it was stated that the petitioner and his family members are habitual criminals whereas, on the other hand, it was stated that no other case is reported against them. Though it was added that no one dares to lodge a complaint against them. The criminal history of Aas Mohd., who is brother of Aashif and Uncle of Adil, comprising 42 cases relating to abduction; murder; attempt to murder; Goonda Act; Arms Act; Gangster Act; and Extortion, was cited.

7. After completing the narrative, as above, by showing awareness that the petitioner(s) is/are in jail in connection with case crime no. 262 of 2019 (supra) and are striving for bail, it was observed that as there is likelihood of they being released on bail and indulge in activity that would disturb public order, with a view to prevent them from acting in a manner that might be prejudicial to the public order, it was necessary to detain them under the Act, 1980.

8. The grounds of detention were accompanied by reports of the Deputy Inspector General of Police, Ghaziabad/ Senior Superintendent of Police, Ghaziabad; Superintendent of Police, Rural, Ghaziabad; Circle Officer, Sadar, Ghaziabad; and Prabhari Nirikshak, P.S. Muradnagar, Ghaziabad as also photocopies of the Act, 1980 and Article 22 of the Constitution of India.

9. The report of the Superintendent of Police, Rural, Ghaziabad disclosed that the petitioners had filed Crl. Misc. Writ Petition No. 8099 of 2019 for pre-arrest protection which stood disposed off on 01.04.2019 by giving protection to the petitioners for a specified period with liberty to move for bail within that period. It was also reported that pursuant to the order dated 01.04.2019 the petitioners had surrendered on 10.04.2019 in the Court of Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate, VIth and had applied for bail which was rejected but, on the same day, bail application was moved in the Court of District & Sessions Judge, which was pending. The report also indicated that the Additional District & Sessions Judge-II, Ghaziabad, after hearing both sides on the bail prayer, had rejected the prayer for interim bail but had fixed 16.04.2019 for consideration of prayer for regular bail. With that background, it was reported that there was real possibility of the petitioners being released on bail.

10. The order of detention dated 16.04.2019 was approved by the State Government, under Section 3(4) of the Act, 1980, and, thereafter, upon receipt of positive report from the Advisory Board, by order dated 24.05.2019, the same was confirmed and detention was directed, provisionally, for a period of three months. This detention period has been extended up to six months, starting from the date of initial detention, vide order dated 12.07.2019.

11. Learned counsel for the petitioner has urged that the detention order passed against the petitioners is discriminatory. It has been submitted that the incident which forms the basis of the detention order is in respect of exchange of fire and brickbats between two group of persons in which no person received injury of any kind. Moreover, as per allegations in the FIR, the moment the police force arrived, the accused persons dispersed without offering any resistance to the police. The police, thereafter, named as many as 20 persons, including the petitioners, and left 5-6 other accused unnamed. But, except the two petitioners, detention order was not imposed against anyone else which suggests that the petitioners have been maliciously picked up for depriving them of their liberty.

12. In paragraph 7 of both the writ petitions, it has been stated that brother of the petitioner (Aashif), namely, Sri Vahab Chaudhari, who is uncle of the other petitioner (Adil), is MLA from Bahujan Samajwadi Party. It is stated that for Lok Sabha Elections 2019, the voting at Ghaziabad was in the first phase and, therefore, prohibitory order, under Section 144 Cr.P.C, was in existence. The petitioners along with family members were campaigning in support of the Mahagathbandhan (opposition) candidate, that is against the ruling party. The alleged incident was shown with a view to implicate the petitioners so as to exert pressure upon them.

13. It has been urged that if the incident had the potentiality to disturb the public order then all the persons named ought to have been detained. But the detention order is only against the petitioners, which is clearly reflective of misuse and abuse of executive power.

14. It has also been submitted that even assuming that the incident narrated had the potentiality to disturb the public order, detention could be justified only if there was any material to show or suggest that upon being released on bail, the petitioners would have repeated such activity that would be prejudicial to the maintenance of the public order. It has been submitted that the petitioners admittedly had no previous criminal history and the extraneous material relating to the criminal history of Aas Mohd, the brother of Aashif (petitioner of H.C. Petition No. 562 of 2019) and uncle of Adil (petitioner of H.C. Petition No. 564 of 2019), is completely irrelevant so as to infer that the petitioners would indulge in repeat of the act if let out.

15. It was urged that the incident, as reported in the first information report, did not disclose any organized activity from which it could be inferred that there was likelihood of the petitioners repeating such activity.

16. In addition to above, it has been submitted that as the first information report discloses that the moment the police arrived on the spot the accused persons escaped, without offering any resistance to the police, the incident did not have the potentiality to disturb the public order and was a mere breach of law and order. It has been urged that the statement that doors were shut and shutters of shops were downed is only to add color to the case for detaining the petitioner.

17. In addition to above, various other submissions were made by learned counsel for the petitioners, which are being noticed, in brief, below:-

(i) That before extension of the period of detention, which was initially for a period of three months only, a report was obtained from the District Magistrate but copy of that report was not supplied to the petitioners to enable them to effectively represent against the order extending the period of detention.

(ii) That the sponsoring authority though furnished the criminal history of Aas Mohd, the brother of petitioner (Aashif) and uncle of petitioner (Adil), but the criminal history was incomplete as it did not provide complete information regarding the current status of those cases and, otherwise also, papers relating to those cases were not provided, which has affected the right of the petitioners to make an effective representation against the order of extension of detention.

(iii) That the Sponsoring Authority in his report though disclosed about filing of Crl. Misc. Writ Petition No. 8099 of 2019 but copy of that writ petition was not supplied to the detaining authority and its copy was also not provided to the petitioners even though the same was a relevant document inasmuch as it contained the defence of the petitioners.

18. Per contra, the learned A.G.A. submitted that the grounds of detention reflect that the detention order was passed upon consideration of the activity of the petitioners with reference to the incident dated 25.03.2019 which had clearly disturbed public order inasmuch as parties had exchanged brickbats as well as fire on a busy street near Bilal Masjid. Hence, as the detention order was passed after showing awareness that the petitioners were in jail and striving for bail and on being released on bail they would indulge in similar activity which had the potentiality to disturb the public order, the satisfaction of the detaining authority, having been arrived at on the basis of relevant material, cannot be questioned and, therefore, no case for interference is made out. It has also been urged that the satisfaction of the detaining authority cannot be questioned on the ground that no detention order has been passed against co-accused. It was also urged that the copy of the Crl. Misc. Writ Petition No. 8099 of 2019 was not relevant as it sought quashing of the FIR which prayer was not accepted by the writ court. Otherwise, copy of the order passed therein was supplied by the sponsoring authority to the detaining authority.

19. Learned A.G.A. also urged that mere mentioning of criminal history of relative of the detenu would not vitiate the detention order on the ground that extraneous material had been taken into consideration because the detention order can be sustained on a solitary ground in view of Section 5-A of the Act, 1980.

20. It was also submitted that once the Advisory Board opines that the grounds of detention are sufficient and germane to detain a person under the Act, 1980, the period for which the detenu is to be detained is in the exclusive domain of the State Government and, therefore, if, for taking decision, to review the period of detention, the State Government considered report of detaining authority, which is confidential in nature, such report need not be supplied to the detenu. It has been submitted that Article 22 (5) of the Constitution of India provides for supply of grounds of detention to afford earliest opportunity to the detenu to make a representation. The material relating to the period for which a detenu is to be detained would not fall within the meaning of the phrase "the grounds of detention", therefore such material need not be supplied/shown to the detenu. It has thus been argued that neither the detention order suffers from any infirmity nor the continued detention has been rendered illegal, hence the petition is liable to be dismissed.

21. We have considered the rival submissions and have carefully perused the record.

22. Although several submissions have been noticed by us but since we propose to allow both the petitions on ground hereinafter stated, we do not propose to deal with the merits of the other submissions raised.

23. Before we deal with the ground on which we propose to allow the petition, it would be useful for us to notice the legal position as to when an order of preventive detention can lawfully be passed on a solitary act of the detenu. In this regard, it would be useful for us to notice the decision of nine-judges Bench of the Apex Court in Attorney General For India vs Amratlal Prajivandas and others reported in 1994 (5) SCC 54. In paragraph 48 of the judgment, as reported, the apex court has held as follows:-

"48. Now, it is beyond dispute that an order of detention can be based upon one single ground. Several decisions of this Court have held that even one prejudicial act can be treated as sufficient for forming the requisite satisfaction for detaining the person. In Debu Mahato v. State of W.B. it was observed that while ordinarily-speaking one act may not be sufficient to form the requisite satisfaction, there is no such invariable rule and that in a given case one act may suffice. That was a case of wagon-breaking and having regard to the nature of the Act, it was held that one act is sufficient. The same principle was reiterated in Anil Dey v. State of W. B. It was a case of theft of railway signal material. Here too one act was held to be sufficient. Similarly, in Israil SK v. District Magistrate of West Dinajpur. and Dharua Kanu v. State of W.B. single act of theft of telegraph copper wires in huge quantity and removal of railway fish-plates respectively was held sufficient to sustain the order of detention. In Saraswati Seshagiri v. State of Kerala , a case arising under COFEPOSA, a single act, viz., attempt to export a huge amount of Indian currency was held sufficient. In short, the principle appears to be this: Though ordinarily one act may not be held sufficient to sustain an order of detention, one act may sustain an order of detention if the act is of such a nature as to indicate that it is an organised act or a manifestation of organised activity. The gravity and nature of the act is also relevant. The test is whether the act is such that it gives rise to an inference that the person would continue to indulge in similar prejudicial activity. That is the reason why single acts of wagon-breaking, theft of signal material, theft of telegraph copper wires in huge quantity and removal of railway fish- plates were held sufficient. Similarly, where the person tried to export huge amount of Indian currency to a foreign country in a planned and premeditated manner, it was held that such single act warrants an inference that he will repeat his activity in future and, therefore, his detention is necessary to prevent him from indulging in such prejudicial activity. If one looks at the acts the COFEPOSA is designed to prevent, they are all either acts of smuggling or of foreign exchange manipulation. These acts are indulged in by persons, who act in concert with other persons and quite often such activity has international ramifications. These acts are preceded by a good amount of planning and organisation. They are not like ordinary law and order crimes. If, however, in any given case a single act is found to be not sufficient to sustain the order of detention that may well be quashed but it cannot be stated as a principle that one single act cannot constitute the basis for detention. On the contrary, it does. In other words, it is not necessary that there should be multiplicity of grounds for making or sustaining an order of detention."

(Emphasis Supplied)

24. In Surya Prakash Sharma v. State of U.P and others : 1994 (Supp.) (3) SCC 195, the petitioner was already in jail in connection with a murder case. The petitioner had no criminal history though there was a solitary case of broad day light murder registered against him. The argument raised before the apex court was that on the basis of that solitary case against the detenu, there could be no apprehension in the mind of the detaining authority that the detenu on being released would indulge in any such activity that would be prejudicial to the maintenance of public order. The apex court found that there was no cogent material placed before the court or before the detaining authority to enable an inference that the detenu on being released on bail would indulge in such offence that would be a threat to public order. The apex court, accordingly, quashed the order of detention and, while doing so, in paragraphs 5 and 6, as reported, observed as follows:

"5.The question as to whether and in what circumstances an order for preventive detention can be passed against a person who is already in custody has had been engaging the attention of this Court since it first came up for consideration before a Constitution Bench in Rameshwar Shaw v. District Magistrate, Burdwan, [1964] 4 SCR 921. To eschew prolixity we refrain from detailing all those cases except that of Dharmendra Suganchand Chelawat v. Union of India, AIR (1990) SC 1196 wherein a three Judge Bench, after considering all the earlier relevant decisions including Rameshwar Shaw (supra) answered the question in the following words:

"The decisions referred to above lead to the conclusion that an order for detention can be validly passed against a person in custody and for that purpose it is necessary that the grounds of detention must show that (i) the detaining authority was aware of the fact that the detenu is already in detention: and (ii) there were compelling reasons justifying such detention despite the fact that the detenu is already in detention. The expression "compelling reasons" in the context of making an order for detention of a person already in custody implied that there must be cogent material before the detaining authority on the basis of which it may be satisfied that (a) the detenu is likely to be released from custody in the near future and (b) taking into account the nature of the antecedent activities of the detenu, it is likely that after his release from custody he would indulge in prejudicial activities and it is necessary to detain him in order to prevent him from engaging in such activities."

6. When the above principles are applied to the facts of the instant case, there is no escape from the conclusion that the impugned order cannot be sustained. Though the grounds of detention indicate the detaining authority's awareness of the fact that the detenu was in judicial custody at the time of making the order of detention, the detaining authority has not brought on record any cogent material nor furnished any cogent ground in support of the averment: made in grounds of detention that if the aforesaid Surya Prakash Sharma is released on bail 'he may again indulge in serious offences causing threat to public order", (emphasis supplied), To put it differently, the satisfaction of the detaining authority that the detenu might indulge in serious offences causing threat to public order, solely on the basis of a solitary murder, cannot be said to be proper and justified."

25. In Yogendra Murari v. State of U.P. and others : (1988) 4 SCC 559, the apex court had the occasion to deal with a submission whether the detention order could be considered discriminatory on the ground of non-detention of co-accused in the same incident. Rejecting the claim of discrimination, raised on behalf of the petitioner, in paragraph 9 of the judgment, the apex court observed as follows:-

"9. There is no merit whatsoever in the petitioners grievance of discrimination on the ground that the other co- accused persons have not been detained. The role of the petitioner and that of the others are not identical and the reasonable apprehension as to their future conduct must depend on the relevant facts, and circumstances which differ from individual to individual. It would have been wrong on the part of the detaining authority to take a uniform decision in this regard only on the ground that the persons concerned are all joined together as accused in a criminal case."

26. From the decisions noticed above, what is clear is that though ordinarily a solitary act may not be sufficient to sustain an order of preventive detention but where that act is of such a nature that it is reflective of, or has manifestation of, an organized criminal activity, or is so grave that it reflects the propensity of that person to repeat such an act, then even a solitary act could well be made basis for passing an order of preventive detention.

27. In the instant case, the incident which forms the basis of the detention order by no stretch of imagination can be taken as an incident of an organized crime. The incident appears to be a clash between two group of persons. The clash is not shown to be communal in nature. Though brickbats and fire is said to have been exchanged but no injury is shown to have been sustained by any one. In fact, a specific stand has been taken by the petitioners that not a single person had sustained injury and no private person has made any complaint. Admittedly, the first information report was lodged by the police and a bare perusal of the first information report would indicate that as soon as the police arrived and challenged the persons, who were exchanging brickbats, all of them escaped without defying or challenging the authority of the police or even attempting to throw a single brick at the police. Under the circumstances, drawing an inference only against two participants, out of 25 odd persons who participated in that incident, that they were likely to repeat their act and be a threat to maintenance of public order, in our view, could not have been drawn merely on the basis of gravity of that incident/ act. Rather, it appears to us that it has been drawn on the basis of extraneous material that is the criminal history of Aas Mohd., a relative of the petitioners. Had the gravity of the incident been the reason to impose the order of detention not only the petitioners but other participants also would have been subjected to detention. Whereas, here, admittedly, the detention order has been passed only against the petitioners, which clearly reflects that the detention order has been passed on the basis of some other material which appears to be the criminal history of the relative of the petitioners.

28. Interestingly, in the grounds of detention as well as the report of the sponsoring authority, it is mentioned that there is not a single case registered against the petitioner except the one in respect of the incident dated 25.3.2018, yet, in paragraph 8 of the grounds of detention it is stated that the detenu and the members of his family are habitual criminals. In support of that statement criminal history of 42 cases of Aas Mohd., starting from the year 1995 and spread across two decades and a half, without any supporting documents in respect thereto, has been cited.

29. In Khudiram Das v. State of W.B., (1975) 2 SCC 81, a constitutional bench of the apex court while examining the scope of judicial review of the court against a preventive detention order, in paragraph 9 of its judgment, as reported, had observed as follows:

"9. But that does not mean that the subjective satisfaction of the detaining authority is wholly immune from judicial reviewability. The courts have by judicial decisions carved out an area, limited though it be, within which the validity of the subjective satisfaction can yet be subjected to judicial scrutiny. The basic postulate on which the courts have proceeded is that the subjective satisfaction being a condition precedent for the exercise of the power conferred on the Executive, the Court can always examine whether the requisite satisfaction is arrived at by the authority : if it is not, the condition precedent to the exercise of the power would not be fulfilled and the exercise of the power would be bad. There are several grounds evolved by judicial decisions for saying that no subjective satisfaction is arrived at by the authority as required under the statute. The simplest case is whether the authority has not applied its mind at all; in such a case the authority could not possibly be satisfied as regards the fact in respect of which it is required to be satisfied. ..... Then there may be a case where the power is exercised dishonestly or for an improper purpose : such a case would also negative the existence of satisfaction on the part of the authority. The existence of "improper purpose", that is, a purpose not contemplated by the statute, has been recognised as an independent ground of control in several decided cases. The satisfaction, moreover, must be a satisfaction of the authority itself, and therefore, if, in exercising the power, the authority has acted under the dictation of another body.....the exercise of the power would be bad and so also would the exercise of the power be vitiated where the authority has disabled itself from applying its mind to the facts of each individual case by self-created rules of policy or in any other manner. The satisfaction said to have been arrived at by the authority would also be bad where it is based on the application of a wrong test or the misconstruction of a statute. Where this happens, the satisfaction of the authority would not be in respect of the thing in regard to which it is required to be satisfied. Then again the satisfaction must be grounded "on materials which are of rationally probative value". ..... The grounds on which the satisfaction is based must be such as a rational human being can consider connected with the fact in respect of which the satisfaction is to be reached. They must be relevant to the subject-matter of the inquiry and must not be extraneous to the scope and purpose of the statute. If the authority has taken into account, it may even be with the best of intention, as a relevant factor something which it could not properly take into account in deciding whether or not to exercise the power or the manner or extent to which it should be exercised, the exercise of the power would be bad....."

(Emphasis Supplied)

30. The practice of submitting reports to the detaining authority touching the character of the detenu, without supporting material, has been deprecated by the apex court, and in Vashisht Narain Karwaria v. State of U.P., (1990) 2 SCC 629, the detention was held bad for consideration of such extraneous material.

31. In a recent decision of the apex court in Sama Aruna v. State of Telangana and another : (2018) 12 SCC 150, the apex court upon finding that the detention order was based on stale grounds, while setting aside the order of detention, made certain observations, in paragraph 17 of the judgment, as reported, which are relevant and are accordingly extracted below:-

"The detention order must be based on a reasonable prognosis of the future behavior of a person based on his past conduct in light of the surrounding circumstances."

32. Thereafter, in paragraph 26 of the said judgment, the apex court further observed as follows:-

"The influence of the stale incidents in the detention order is too pernicious to be ignored, and the order must therefore go; both on account of being vitiated due to malice in law and for taking into account matters which ought not to have been taken into account."

33. At this stage, we may revert to the averments made in paragraph 7 of the petition wherein it has been stated that the other brother of the petitioner, namely, Vahab Chaudhary was an MLA from

Bahujan Samaj Party and the petitioners were supporting the political party other than the ruling party. The District Magistrate though in his counter-affidavit has stated that the sub-Inspector has not lodged the FIR under political pressure but the fact that the brother of the petitioner was MLA and that they were supporting the other party has not been denied.

34. When we take a conspectus of the facts and circumstances of the case, we are of the view that except for the criminal history of Aas Mohd., the brother of the petitioner (Aashif) and uncle of the petitioner (Adil), there is no material, cogent enough, to enable a logical inference, on the basis of a solitary incident, that on being released on bail, the petitioners would indulge in activity prejudicial to the maintenance of the public order or supplies and services essential to the community. The incident dated 25.03.2019 is not reflective of organized criminal activity and, admittedly, was not an incident where any person died or got seriously injured. Thus, in our view, the incident was not such from which any inference could be drawn about the propensity of the petitioners to repeat, or indulge in, such activities. For the reasons stated above as also keeping in mind that no co-accused similarly situated have been preventively detained, we are of the considered view that the order of detention has been passed by being influenced with the criminal antecedents of petitioners' relative, which, in our view was extraneous and not a relevant consideration, particularly, in absence of further details as to how the petitioners were linked with him in his criminal activity. We are therefore of the considered view that on the basis of the solitary incident dated 25.3.2019 the detention order against the petitioners is not sustainable and as such the impugned detention orders are liable to be quashed.

35. Consequently, both the habeas corpus petitions are allowed. The detention orders dated 16th April, 2019, passed by the District Magistrate, Ghaziabad in respect of Aashif (petitioner in Habeas Corpus Petition No. 562 of 2019) and Adil (petitioner in Habeas Corpus Petition No. 564 of 2019) are hereby quashed. Both the petitioners shall be set at liberty forthwith unless wanted in any other case. There is no order as to costs.

A. Transfer of Property Act, 1882- Sections 106 & 113-Notice u/s. 106 issued determining the tenancy (month to month)- on expiry of the period of notice dated 09.09.2013 the relationship of landlady and tenant came to an end-the landlady has acquired right to obtain possession of the disputed shop by evicting the tenant.

B. Waiver u/s. 113-essentials being-Intention of landlord- to treat the lease as subsisting and knowledge of his conduct amounts to waiver-it cannot be said that mere acceptance of rent amounts to waiver of notice unless proved otherwise-landlady instituted and is contesting SCC Suit. Thus, no element of waiver of notice can be inferred.

"Waiver of notice to quit u/s 113, determination of tenancy U/S106 and deposition by power of attorney holder on behalf of landlord are the main questions involved in this petition."

1. Heard Shri Manu Khare, learned counsel for the defendants-tenants/petitioners and Shri Chetan Prakash, learned counsel for the plaintiff-respondent.

Facts

2. A shop in house No. D-58/12A-82, Gandhi Nagar, Sigra, Varanasi, was let out by its owner and landlady Smt. Sita Devi Agarwal (the plaintiff-respondent) to the defendants-tenants/petitioners no. 1 & 2 under a rent agreement dated 06.01.2009 at the monthly rent of Rs. 2,005/-. The tenancy commenced from 01.01.2009. Thereafter mutually the rent was enhanced with effect from 11.02.2011, from Rs. 2,005/- to Rs. 3,000/- per month. On 09.09.2013, the plaintiff-landlady/respondent issued a notice under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act 1882") to the defendants-tenants/petitioners determining the tenancy. Since the notice was not complied with by the defendants-tenants/petitioners, therefore, the plaintiff-landlady filed SCC Suit No. 49 of 2014 (Smt. Sita Devi Agarawal v. Pawan Kumar & Ors.) which was decreed by judgment and decree dated 24.08.2017 passed by the Judge Small Cause Court, Varanasi. Aggrieved with this judgment the defendants-tenants/petitioners filed S.C.C. Revision No. 15 of 2017 (Pawan Kumar and Anr. v. Sita Devi), which was dismissed by the Additional District Judge/ FTC-1, Varanasi by judgment dated 15.07.2019. Aggrieved with these two judgments, the defendants-tenants/ petitioners have filed the present petition under Article 227 of the Constitution of India.

Submissions

3. Learned counsel for the defendants-tenants/ petitioners, submits as under:-

i. The plaintiff-landlady has not appeared in the witness box rather her son and power of attorney holder Anoop Kumar Agarwal appeared and gave evidence, which is impermissible in view of the law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in Janki Vashdeo Bhojwani & Anr. vs. Indusind Bank Ltd. & Ors 2005 2 SCC 217, (para 13). The judgment of learned Single Judge in Union of India and another v. Sudarshan Lal Talwar, AIR 2002 (Allahabad) 212 relied by the plaintiff-respondent, has no application in view of the judgment of Hon'ble Supreme Court.

ii. A power of attorney was executed by the landlady Sita Devi Agarwal in favour of her son Anoop Kumar Agarwal on 17.07.2014 and thereafter, suit was instituted on 05.08.2014. Therefore, if the son of the plaintiff was well acquainted with all the facts of the case and competent to depose on behalf of the plaintiff-landlady, there was no need to execute the power of attorney. In fact, the son of the plaintiff-landlady was not aware of the facts of the case and therefore, he was not competent to depose on behalf of the plaintiff-landlady.

iii. In view of Section 111(h) readwith Section 113 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, the institution of a suit after one year of the notice would amount to waiver of the notice. The notice given by the plaintiff-landlady under Section 106 of the Act, 1882 was no notice in the eyes of law.

iv. The aforesaid notice was issued by the plaintiff-landlady for setting up the business for her son in the disputed shop who wanted to take franchise of Raymond.

v. Subsequently the plaintiff-landlady stated that she could not get franchiese of Raymond because the place was not available whereas in his cross examination son of the plaintiff-landlady has admitted that the shop was not suitable for franchiese of Raymonds. Thus, the need set up by the plaintiff-landlady was not bonafide.

vi. The defendants-tenants/petitioners have not violated any of the conditions of the rent agreement dated 06.01.2009. Therefore, the court below could not have granted a decree of eviction.

vii. Notice was issued by the plaintiff-landlady on 11.09.2013 under Section 106 of the Act, 1882 while the suit was instituted on 05.08.2014 and, therefore, the notice stood waived.

4. In support of his submissions Sri Khare, has relied upon the judgment of Hon'ble Supreme Court in Man Kaur (dead) by Lrs. Vs. Hartar Singh Sangha (2010)10 SCC 512 (para 18) and Sarup Singh Gupta Vs. S. Jagdish Singh and others (2006) 4 SCC 205 (para 6).

5. Learned counsel for the plaintiff-landlady/respondent submits as under:-

(i) The plaintiff has neither waived notice nor there is any material to indicate that there was any intention of the plaintiff to waive the notice. On the contrary after giving notice, the plaintiff-landlady instituted the suit on 05.08.2014. Thus, the submissions of learned counsel for the petitioner that the notice stood waived is wholly incorrect and misconceived

(ii) Anoop Kumar Agarwal is the only son of the plaintiff-landlady to whom she has given power of attorney. He gave evidence as P.W. 1 in his personal capacity. That apart he was well aware of all the facts of the case and, therefore, was competent to depose. Submission of learned counsel for the petitioner are wholly incorrect. Both the courts below have also found that the evidence given by plaintiff's son was in his personal capacity.

(iii) After giving notice to the tenant the tenancy stood determined. Therefore, the defendant-tenant/petitioner was bound to vacate the disputed shop. That apart the bonafide need of the disputed shop was fully established by the plaintiff-landlady/respondent.

6. In support of his submissions, learned counsel for the plaintiff-landlady/ respondent has relied upon a judgment of this court in Union of India Vs. Sudarshal Lal Talwar, 2002 AIR (All) 212.

Discussion & Findings

7. I have carefully considered the submissions of learned counsels for the parties.

Waiver of Notice

8. The submission of learned counsel for the defendant-tenant/petitioner that the plaintiff-landlady has waived notice dated 11.09.2013 by filing the suit after about 11 months on 05.08.2014 is wholly misconceived. Section 106 of the Act 1882 provides for termination of tenancy by notice. It does not provide that the notice of the landlord terminating the tenancy shall stand waived if suit is not filed within a particular period. Likewise Section 111(h) of the Act 1882 also does not provide for any limitation for filing a suit after giving notice to quit. On the contrary it provides that lease of immovable property shall stand determined on expiration of a notice to determine the lease or to quit, or of intention to quit, the property leased, duly given by one party to the other. Section 113 of the Act 1882 provides that notice given under Section 111 Clause (h) is waived, with the express or implied consent of the person to whom it is given, by any act on the part of the person giving it showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting.

9. Section 113 of the Act 1882 contains two conditions to waiver, namely :-

(i) Express or implied consent of the person to whom it is given, by any act on the part of the person giving it

(ii) which shows an intention to treat the lease as subsisting.

10. The principles of waiver are well settled. A waiver is an intentional relinquishment of a known right. There can be no waiver unless the person against whom the waiver is claimed had full knowledge of his rights and of facts enabling him to take effectual action for the enforcement of such rights. Intention of the landlord to treat the lease as subsisting and his knowledge of the fact that his conduct amounts to waiver, are the basic essentials of waiver contained in Section 113 of the Act 1882.

11. Facts of the present case leaves no manner of doubt that the plaintiff-landlady/respondent has never waived notice under Section 113 of the Act 1882. On the contrary, after determining the tenancy by notice dated 11.9.2013, she instituted SCC Suit No.49 of 2014 (Sita Devi Vs. Pawan Kumar and others) on 5.8.2014. She has been contesting the suit. Thus, no element of waiver of notice can be inferred on the facts of the present case. In the present case even rent was not accepted by her after determining the tenancy. Hon'ble Supreme Court in Ganga Dutt Murarka Vs. Kartik Chandra Das & others, AIR 1961 SC 1067 and this court in Anis Ahmad Vs. Special Judge/Additional District Judge, Saharanpur 1997(2) ARC 32 have held that mere acceptance of arrears of rent after expiry of notice or acceptance of rent for the period subsequent to the date of termination of tenancy by the landlord, does not amount to waiver of notice determining the tenancy under Section 106. Similar view has also been taken by this Court in Union of India and another Vs. Sudarshan Lal Talwar (supra).

12. The provisions of Section 113 of the Act has again been interpreted by Hon'ble Supreme Court in Sarup Singh Gupta's case (supra) which also does not support the case of the petitioner. Paragraph 6 and 8 of the said judgment is reproduced below:-

"6. The Learned Senior Counsel also relied upon a decision of a learned Single Judge of the Calcutta High Court in Manicklal Dey Chaudhuri v. Kadambini Dassi AIR 1926 Cal 763 wherein it was held that where rent is accepted after the notice to quit, whether before or after the suit has been filed, the landlord thereby shows an intention to treat the lease as subsisting and, therefore, where rent deposited with the Rent Controller under the Calcutta Rent Act is withdrawn even after the ejectment suit is filed, the notice to quit is waived. In our view, the principle laid down in the aforesaid judgment of the High Court is too widely stated, and cannot be said to be an accurate statement of law. A mere perusal of section 113 leaves no room for doubt that in a given case, a notice given under section 111, clause (h), may be treated as having been waived, but the necessary condition is that there must be some act on the part of the person giving the notice evincing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting. Of course, the express or implied consent of the person to whom such notice is given must also be established. The question as to whether the person giving the notice has by his act shown an intention to treat the lease as subsisting is essentially a question of fact. In reaching a conclusion on this aspect of the matter, the Court must consider all relevant facts and circumstances, and the mere fact that rent has been tendered and accepted, cannot be determinative.

8. In the instant case, as we have noticed earlier, two notices to quit were given on 10-2-1979 and 17-3-1979. The suit was filed on 2-6-1979. The tenant offered and the landlord accepted the rent for the months of April, May and thereafter. The question is whether this by itself constitutes an act on the part of the landlord showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting. In our view, mere acceptance of rent did not by itself constitute an act of the nature envisaged by section 113, Transfer of Property Act showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting. The fact remains that even after accepting the rent tendered, the landlord did file a suit for eviction, and even while prosecuting the suit accepted the rent which was being paid to him by the tenant. It cannot, therefore, be said that by accepting rent, he intended to waive the notice to quit and to treat the lease as subsisting. We cannot ignore the fact that in any event, even if rent was neither tendered nor accepted, the landlord in the event of success would be entitled to the payment of the arrears of rent. To avoid any controversy, in the event of termination of lease the practice followed by the courts is to permit the landlord to receive each month by way of compensation for the use and occupation of the premises, an amount equal to the monthly rent payable by the tenant. It cannot, therefore, be said that mere acceptance of rent amounts to waiver of notice to quit unless there be any other evidence to prove or establish that the landlord so intended. In the instant case, we find no other fact or circumstance to support the plea of waiver. On the contrary the filing of and prosecution of the eviction proceeding by the landlord suggests otherwise."

13. In view of the discussion, I do not find any force in the submission of learned counsel for the defendant-tenant/petitioner that the notice dated 11.9.2013 stood waived

Determination of Tenancy by notice U/S 106 of the Act, 1882 and Bonafide need

14. Section 106 of the Act 1882, provides as under :-

"106. Duration of certain leases in absence of written contract or local usage-

"(1) In the absence of a contract or local law or usage to the contrary, a lease of immovable property for agricultural or manufacturing purposes shall be deemed to be a lease from year to year, terminable, on the part of either lessor or lessee, by six months' notice; and a lease of immovable property for any other purpose shall be deemed to be a lease from month to month, terminable, on the part of either lessor or lessee, by fifteen days' notice.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, the period mentioned in sub-section(1) shall commence from the date of receipt of notice.

(3) A Notice under sub-section(1) shall not be deemed to be invalid merely because the period mentioned therein falls short of the period specified under that sub-section, where a suit or proceeding is filed after the expiry of the period mentioned in that sub-section.

(4) Every notice under sub-section(1) must be in writing, signed by or on behalf of the person giving it, and either be sent by post to the party who is intended to be bound by it or be tendered or delivered personally to such party, or to one of his family or servants at his residence, or (if such tender or delivery is not practicable) affixed to a conspicuous part of the property."

15. Admittedly, the rent of the disputed shop was Rs.3000/-, per month. Therefore, the provisions of U.P. Act No.XIII of 1972 are not applicable. The notice dated 11.09.2013 under Section 106 of the Act, 1882 was issued by the plaintiff-landlady for termination of the tenancy on expiry of 30 days. Thus, the tenancy stood terminated on expiry of the period of notice.

16. In Jeevan Dass vs. L.I.C. (1994) Suppl. 3 SCC 694, Hon'ble Supreme Court held that "Section 106 of the T.P. Act does indicate that the landlord is entitled to terminate the tenancy by giving 15 days' notice, if it is a premises occupied on monthly tenancy and by giving 6 months' notice and if the premises are occupied for agricultural or manufacturing purposes; and on expiry thereof proceedings could be initiated. Section 106 of the T.P. Act does not contemplate of giving any reason for terminating the tenancy." Undisputedly in the present set of facts, the tenancy was on month to month basis and a notice date 09.09.2013 determining the tenancy was issued by the plaintiff landlady to the defendant-tenant and the tenancy stood determined on expiry of the period of notice on 30 days. Thereafter the plaintiff-landlady instituted SCC Suit No.49 of 2014 for eviction of the defendant-tenant.

17. In Sri Ram Urban Infrastructure Ltd. vs. High Court of Bombay, (2015) 5 SCC 539 (Para-18), Hon'ble Supreme Court held that "if the notice is a short of the period specified in Sub-Section (1) but the suit or proceeding is filed after the expiry of the period mentioned in Sub-Section (1), the notice shall not be deemed to be invalid even though the suit was filed after six months of the notice."

18. In Vasantkumar Radhakisan Vora vs. Board of Trustees of the Port of Bombay, (1991) 1 SCC 761 (Para-6), Hon'ble Supreme Court held that "by issuance of notice to quit automatically the right created thereunder, namely, cessation of the lease, does not become effective till the period prescribed in the notice or in the statute i.e. Section 106 expires. On expiry thereof the lease becomes inoperative and the lessor acquires right to have the tenant ejected. When the tenant fails to deliver vacant possession, the lessor would be entitled to have the tenant ejected and to take possession in due process of law."

19. In Tata Steel Limited vs. State of Jharkhand, (2015) 15 SCC 55 (Para-33), Hon'ble Supreme Court held that "Section 111 of the Transfer of Property Act specifies various contingencies in which a lease of immovable property determines. Clause (h) stipulates that expiration of a notice to determine the lease duly given by the lessor (in compliance with the requirement of Section 106) is one of such contingencies but the Transfer of Property Act, does not authorise the lessor to physical recovery of possession of the property on the determination of the lease. The lessor is still required to approach the competent court for recovery of possession of the property over which the lease is terminated." Thus, on expiry of period of notice under Section 106 of the Act, 1882, the contractual tenancy of the disputed property stood determined. For recovery of possession, the plaintiff-landlady has approached the competent court by filing the SCC suit.

20. In V. Dhanapal Chettiar v. Yesodai Arnrnal, (1979) 4 SCC 214, a Seven Judges Constitution Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court held that "in the matter of determination of tenancy, the State Rent Acts do not permit a landlord to snap his relationship with the tenant merely by serving on him a notice to quit as is the position under the Transfer of Property Act." The landlord can recover possession of the property only on one or more of the grounds enacted in the relevant section of the Rent Act. Even after the termination of the contractual tenancy, the landlord under the definitions of landlord and tenant contained in the Rent Acts, remains a landlord and a tenant remains a tenant. The difference between the position obtaining under the Transfer of Property Act and the Rent Act in the matter of determination of a lease is that under the former Act in order to recover possession of the leased premises, determination of the lease is necessary because during the continuance of the lease, the landlord cannot recover possession of the premises while under the Rent Acts, the landlord becomes entitled to recover possession only on the fulfilment of the conditions laid down in the relevant sections. He cannot recover possession merely by determining the tenancy. Nor can he be stopped from doing so on the ground that he has not terminated the contractual tenancy. The principle laid in V. Dhanapal Chettiar (supra) has also been followed in Majati Subbarao vs P.K.K. Krishna Rao, (1989) 4 SCC 732 (Para-5). In V. Dhanapal Chettiar (supra), a Seven Judges Constitution Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court in para-6 appropriately explained the provisions of Section 106 and Section 111 (h) of the Act, 1882 and held as under:-

"6. Section III deals with the question of determination of lease, and in various clauses (a) to (h) methods of determination of a lease of immovable property are provided. Clause (g) deals with the forfeiture of lease under certain circumstances and at the end are added the words "and in any of these cases the lessor or his transferee gives notice in writing to the lessee of his intention to determine the lease." The notice spoken of in clause (g) is a different kind of notice and even without the State Rent Acts different views have been expressed as to whether such a notice in all cases is necessary or not. We only observe here that when the State Rent Acts provide under what circumstances and on what grounds a tenant can be evicted, it does provide that a tenant forfeits his right to continue in occupation of the property and makes himself liable to be evicted on fulfilment of those conditions. Only in those State Acts where a specific provision has been made for the giving of any notice requiring the tenant either to pay the arrears of rent within the specified period or to do any other thing, such as the Bombay Rent Act or the West Bengal Rent Act, no notice in accordance with clause (g) is necessary. A lease of immovable property determines under clause (h):- "On the expiration of a notice to determine the lease, or to quit, or of intention to quit, the property leased, duly given by one party to the other."

It is this clause which brings into operation the requirement of section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. Without adverting to the effect and the details of waiver of forfeiture, waiver of notice to quit, relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent etc. as provided for insections 112to114Aof the Transfer of Property Act, suffice it to say that under the said Act no ground of eviction of a tenant has to be made out once a contractual tenancy is put to an end by service of a valid notice undersection 106of the Transfer of Property Act. Until and unless the lease is determined, the lessee is entitled to continue in possession. Once it is determined it becomes open to the lessor to enforce his right of recovery of possession of the property against him. In such a situation it was plain and clear that if the lease of the immovable property did not stand determined under any of the clauses (a) to (g) of section 111, a notice to determine it undersection 106 was necessary. But when under the various State Rent Acts, either in one language or the other, it has been provided that a tenant can be evicted on the grounds mentioned in certain sections of the said Acts, then how does the question of determination of a tenancy by notice arise? If the State Rent Act requires the giving of a particular type of notice in order to get a particular kind of relief, such a notice will have to be given. Or, it may be, that a landlord will be well advised by way of abundant precaution and in order to lend additional support to his case, to give a notice to his tenant intimating that he intended to file a suit against him for his eviction on the ground mentioned in the notice. But that is not to say that such a notice is compulsory or obligatory or that it must fulfil all the technical requirements of section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. Once the liability to be evicted is incurred by the tenant, he cannot turn round and say that the contractual lease has not been determined. The action of the landlord in instituting a suit for eviction on the ground mentioned in any State Rent Act will be tantamount to an expression of his intention that he does not want the tenant to continue as his lessee and the jural relationship of lessor and lessee will come to an end on the passing of an order or a decree for eviction. Until then, under the extended definition of the word 'tenant' under the various State Rent Acts, the tenant continues to be a tenant even though the contractual tenancy has been determined by giving a valid notice undersection 106of the Transfer of Property Act. In many cases the distinction between a contractual tenant and a statutory tenant was alluded to for the purpose of elucidating some particular aspects which cropped up in a particular case. That led to the criticism of that expression in some of the decisions. Without detaining ourselves on this aspect of the matter by any elaborate discussion, in our opinion, it will suffice to say that the various State Rent Control Acts make a serious encroachment in the field of freedom of contract. It does not permit the landlord to snap his relationship with the tenant merely by his act of serving a notice to quit on him. In spite of the notice, the law says that he continues to be a tenant and he does so enjoying all the rights of a lessee and is at the same time deemed to be under all the liabilities such as payment of rent etc. in accordance with the law."

21. In the aforesaid judgemnt in V. Dhanapal Chettiar (supra), a Seven Judges Constitution Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court referred to the earlier Five Judges Bench judgment of Mangilal vs. Suganchand Rathi, AIR 1965 SC 101 in which it was held as under:-

"The Accommodation Act does not in any way abrogate Chapter V of the Transfer of Property Act which deals with leases of immovable property. The requirement of Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act is that a lease from month to month can be terminated only after giving fifteen days' notice expiring with the end of a month of the tenancy either by the landlord to the tenant or by the tenant to the landlord. Such a notice is essential for bringing to an end the relationship of landlord and tenant. Unless the relationship is validly terminated the landlord does not get the right to obtain possession of the premises by evicting the tenant. Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act does not provide for the satisfaction of any Additional requirements*. But then, Section 4 of the Accommodation Act steps in and provides that unless one of the several grounds set out therein is established or exists, the landlord cannot evict the tenant."*

22. Thus, in the present set of facts after the tenancy was terminated by the landlady on expiry of the period of notice dated 09.09.2013 under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, the consequence is that the relationship of landlady and tenant between the plaintiff-landlady and the defendant-tenant/ petitioner came to an end and the landlady has right to obtain possession of the disputed shop by evicting the tenant.

23. Much insistence has been laid by learned counsel for the tenants-petitioners on two lines of the evidence of P.W. 1 that the space of the disputed shop is not sufficient for the franchise. I have looked into the evidence of P.W. 1. The evidence of P.W. 1 has to be read as a whole and not in isolation. I find that P.W.1 has very specifically stated that adjoining the disputed shop is the shop of his father of Hosiery Goods. He narrated in detail that the tenants-petitioners have not vacated the disputed shop even after the tenancy was determined. Negotiations were going on for the franchise but he could not get the franchise. In his evidence on 17.11.2016, P.W.1 stated that for dealership company gave six months time to arrange for accommodation but the accommodation could not be arranged.

24. Both the courts below have recorded the concurrent findings of fact based on consideration of relevant evidences on record that need of the plaintiff-landlady for the disputed shop is her bonafide need. Therefore, it requires no interference.

Whether son/power of attorney holder of a landlord can depose on behalf of the landlord in a rent case in regard to matters involving personal knowledge:-

25. In support of his submission that the P.W. 1 could not have deposed on behalf of the plaintiff-landlady, learned counsel for the defendants-tenants/petitioners has relied upon the judgment of Hon'ble Surpeme Court in Man Kaur (supra)(paragrap 18), as under:-

"18. We may now summarise for convenience, the position as to who should give evidence in regard to matters involving personal knowledge:

(a) An attorney holder who has signed the plaint and instituted the suit, but has no personal knowledge of the transaction can only give formal evidence about the validity of the power of attorney and the filing of the suit.

(b) If the attorney holder has done any act or handled any transactions, in pursuance of the power of attorney granted by the principal, he may be examined as a witness to prove those acts or transactions. If the attorney holder alone has personal knowledge of such acts and transactions and not the principal, the attorney holder shall be examined, if those acts and transactions have to be proved.

(c) The attorney holder cannot depose or give evidence in place of his principal for the acts done by the principal or transactions or dealings of the principal, of which principal alone has personal knowledge.

(d) Where the principal at no point of time had personally handled or dealt with or participated in the transaction and has no personal knowledge of the transaction, and where the entire transaction has been handled by an attorney holder, necessarily the attorney holder alone can give evidence in regard to the transaction. This frequently happens in case of principals carrying on business through authorized managers/attorney holders or persons residing abroad managing their affairs through their attorney holders.

(e) Where the entire transaction has been conducted through a particular attorney holder, the principal has to examine that attorney holder to prove the transaction, and not a different or subsequent attorney holder.

(f) Where different attorney holders had dealt with the matter at different stages of the transaction, if evidence has to be led as to what transpired at those different stages, all the attorney holders will have to be examined.

(g) Where the law requires or contemplated the plaintiff or other party to a proceeding, to establish or prove something with reference to his "state of mind" or "conduct", normally the person concerned alone has to give evidence and not an attorney holder. A landlord who seeks eviction of his tenant, on the ground of his "bona fide" need and a purchaser seeking specific performance who has to show his ''readiness and willingness' fall under this category. There is however a recognized exception to this requirement. Where all the affairs of a party are completely managed, transacted and looked after by an attorney (who may happen to be a close family member), it may be possible to accept the evidence of such attorney even with reference to bona fides or ''readiness and willingness'. Examples of such attorney holders are a husband/wife exclusively managing the affairs of his/her spouse, a son/daughter exclusively managing the affairs of an old and infirm parent, a father/mother exclusively managing the affairs of a son/daughter living abroad.

26. The judgment of Hon'ble Supreme Court in Janki Vashdeo Bhojwani case (supra) relied by learned counsel for the petitioner has no application on the facts of the present case since it relates to filing of a suit due to non payment of loan by the borrower and not in a rent case.

27. Besides above, both the courts below have found that the P.W. 1 Anoop Kumar is the only son and power of attorney holder of the plaintiff landlady who has given his evidence in his personal capacity. This is a findings of fact.

28. Undisputedly, the plaintiff-landlady has appointed her power of attorney to Sri Anoop Kumar Agarwal who is the only son of the plaintiff-landlady. In paragraph-2 of the plaint of the S.C.C. Suit No.49 of 2014, it was clearly stated that the plaintiff-landlady is an old lady and often remains ill, and, therefore, on her behalf, her son Anoop Kumar Agarwal has always been looking after and maintaining the disputed house and collecting rent from tenants and taking action for eviction etc. The contents of this paragraph has been admitted by the defendant-tenant/ petitioner in paragraph-2 of the written statement. Thus, the evidence given by the power of attorney holder Sri Anoop Kumar Agarwal (son), falls under the recognised exception of the requirement of giving evidence by the landlord who seeks eviction of his tenant on the ground of his bona fide need. Admittedly, power of attorney holder and the only son Sri Anoop Kumar Agarwal has been exclusively managing the affairs relating to the house in question owned by his mother Smt. Sita Devi who is an old lady and often remains ill. Therefore, the deposition made by him, cannot be said to suffer from any legal infirmity, particularly in view of the law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Man Kaur (supra).

Conclusion:-

29. Conclusions reached in foregoing paragraphs of this judgment, are briefly summarized as under:

(i) Intention of landlord to treat the lease as subsisting and his knowledge of the fact that his conduct amounts to waiver, are the basic essentials of waiver contained in Section 113 of the Act 1882.

(ii) Facts of the present case leaves no manner of doubt that the plaintiff-landlady/respondent has never waived her notice under Section 113 of the Act 1882. On the contrary, after determining the tenancy by notice dated 11.9.2013, she instituted SCC Suit No.49 of 2014 (Sita Devi Vs. Pawan Kumar and others) on 5.8.2014. She has been contesting the suit. Thus, no element of waiver of notice can be inferred on the facts of the present case.

(iii) Mere acceptance of rent did not by itself constitute an act of the nature envisaged by section 113 of the Transfer of Property Act showing an intention to treat the lease as subsisting. Even after accepting the rent tendered, a landlord may file a suit for eviction, and even while prosecuting the suit he may accept the rent which was being paid to him by the tenant. It cannot, therefore, be said that mere acceptance of rent amounts to waiver of notice to quit unless there be any other evidence to prove or establish that the landlord so intended.

(iv) Section 106 of the T.P. Act does indicate that the landlord is entitled to terminate the tenancy by giving 15 days' notice, if it is a premises occupied on monthly tenancy and by giving 6 months' notice if the premises is occupied for agricultural or manufacturing purposes; and on expiry thereof proceedings could be initiated. Section 106 of the T.P. Act does not contemplate of giving any reason for terminating the tenancy.

(v) By issuance of notice to quit automatically the right created thereunder, namely, cessation of the lease, does not become effective till the period prescribed in the notice or in the statute i.e. Section 106 expires. On expiry thereof the lease becomes inoperative and the lessor acquires right to have the tenant ejected. When the tenant fails to deliver vacant possession, the lessor would be entitled to have the tenant ejected and to take possession in due process of law.

(vi) The difference between the position obtaining under the Transfer of Property Act and the Rent Act in the matter of determination of a lease is that under the former Act in order to recover possession of the leased premises, determination of the lease is necessary because during the continuance of the lease, the landlord cannot recover possession of the premises while under the Rent Act, the landlord becomes entitled to recover possession only on the fulfilment of the conditions laid down in the relevant sections. He cannot recover possession merely by determining the tenancy. Nor can he be stopped from doing so on the ground that he has not terminated the contractual tenancy.

(vii) In the present set of facts after the tenancy was terminated by the landlady on expiry of the period of notice dated 09.09.2013 under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, the consequence is that the relationship of landlady and tenant between the plaintiff-landlady and the defendant-tenant/ petitioner came to an end and the landlady has acquired right to obtain possession of the disputed shop by evicting the tenant.

(viii) Both the courts below have recorded concurrent findings of fact based on consideration of relevant evidences on record that need of the plaintiff-landlady for the disputed shop is her bonafide need. Therefore, it requires no interference.

(ix) Where the law requires or contemplated the plaintiff or other party to a proceeding, to establish or prove something with reference to his "state of mind" or "conduct", normally the person concerned alone has to give evidence and not an attorney holder. A landlord who seeks eviction of his tenant, on the ground of his "bona fide" need and a purchaser seeking specific performance who has to show his ''readiness and willingness' fall under this category. There is however a recognized exception to this requirement. Where all the affairs of a party are completely managed, transacted and looked after by an attorney (who may happen to be a close family member), it may be possible to accept the evidence of such attorney even with reference to bona fides or ''readiness and willingness'. Examples of such attorney holders are a husband/wife exclusively managing the affairs of his/her spouse, a son/daughter exclusively managing the affairs of an old and infirm parent, a father/mother exclusively managing the affairs of a son/daughter living abroad.

(x) Admittedly, power of attorney holder and the only son Sri Anoop Kumar Agarwal has been exclusively managing the affairs relating to the house in question owned by his mother Smt. Sita Devi who is an old lady and often remains ill. Therefore, the deposition made by him, cannot be said to suffer from any legal infirmity, particularly in view of the law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Man Kaur (supra).

30. For all the reasons aforestated, I do not find any merit in this petition. Consequently, the petition is hereby dismissed.

31. After this judgment was dictated in open court, learned counsel for the defendant-tenant/petitioner states on instructions that the petitioner shall vacate the disputed shop and shall handover its vacant and peaceful possession to the plaintiff-landlady/respondent on or before 31.03.2020 and shall also pay to the plaintiff-landlady a sum of Rs.30,000/- for the use and occupation of the disputed shop for the period from today till 31.03.2020, within a month and, therefore till 31.03.2020 the defendant-tenant/petitioner may not be dispossessed from the disputed shop. Learned counsel for the plaintiff-landlord/respondent has no serious objection to the aforesaid request.

32. Considering the statement made by the defendant-tenant/petitioner as aforenoted, it is provided as under:-

i). If the defendant-tenant/petitioner submits an undertaking to the aforesaid affect before the court below and also deposit Rs.30,000/- within a month from today, then in that event he shall not be dispossessed from the disputed shop till 31.03.2020.

ii). In the event, either the undertaking as aforesaid is not submitted or a sum of Rs. 30,000/- is not deposited within the stipulated period, then the protection given to the defendant-tenant/petitioner under this order shall automatically stand vacated.

iii). In the event, the defendant-tenant/petitioner does not vacate the disputed shop and does not hand over its vacant and peaceful possession to the plaintiff-landlady/respondent on or before 31.03.2020, then apart from other consequences as may follow, the defendant-tenant/petitioner shall also pay a sum of Rs. 1,000/- per day for each day of delay after 31.03.2020, in vacating the disputed shop and handing over its vacant and peaceful possession to the plaintiff-landlady/ respondent.

A. Code of Civil Procedure,1908 - Section 96(3) & 100 - Whether petition u/art. 227 maintainable or second appeal would lie against the impugned order/judgement of the first appellate court or the same is barred by Section 96 (3) of the Code of Civil Procedure?

B. Compromise between parties-duly signed & verified- Appellate Court recorded the compromise in part and refused to record the remainder (in favour of plaintiff)-further passed a decree in terms thereof-to be challenged by way of second appeal u/s. 100-as the bar contained u/s. 96(3)-not attracted.

Held: - The preparation of decree or formal order in terms of the impugned judgement is a ministerial act. Even if a formal order has been prepared and not decree in pursuance of the impugned judgement of the appellate court, it would not detract from the true nature of the order nor would denude the petitioner of its right to avail the statutory remedy of filing second appeal- Section 96 (3) is based on doctrine of estoppel which would equally apply to a consent decree passed in appeal. However, for other reasons stated in earlier part of the judgement, the bar under Section 96 (3) C.P.C. would not come in way of the petitioner in filing second appeal.

1. An interesting question as to whether second appeal would lie against the impugned order/judgement of the first appellate court or the same is barred by Section 96 (3) of the Code of Civil Procedure (for short 'Code' or 'C.P.C.') arises for consideration in the instant petition filed before this Court invoking its supervisory jurisdiction under Article 227 of the Constitution. In case, an appeal is maintainable, this Court in view of availability of efficacious remedy under the Code would decline to entertain the instant petition.

2. The backdrop in which the controversy has arisen is as follows:-

3. Two suits were instituted by the petitioner (hereinafter referred to as 'the plaintiff') bearing Original Suit Nos.381 of 1987 and 800 of 1987. In Original Suit No.381 of 1987, the plaintiff prayed for permanent injunction, declaration of its title in respect of the suit property and mandatory injunction against respondents no.1 to 14 (hereinafter referred to as 'the defendants 1st set). The declaration of title was sought on the ground that the suit property was donated to it by Dwarika Nath Bhargava, Kedar Nath Bhargava and Onkar Nath Bhargava by an unregistered instrument dated 10.3.1969. Since then, the plaintiff had been in possession of the same as its owner without any objection from any one and thus perfected its title by adverse possession. In alternative, the plaintiff also prayed for mandatory injunction directing defendants 1 to 10 as well as defendants 11, 12 and 13 to execute registered gift deed in pursuance of an alleged agreement dated 12.2.1969. In Original Suit No.800 of 1987, the plaintiff took the same stand and prayed for permanent injunction against respondents 12 to 20 (hereinafter referred to as 'the defendants 2nd set). Both the suits were dismissed by the trial court by judgement dated 14.12.2018. The trial court held that the plaintiff was not able to prove its title to the suit property; that it also failed to prove its possession and thus, also not entitled to declaration as owner on basis of adverse possession. Aggrieved by the judgement of the trial court, the plaintiff filed an appeal under Section 96 CPC. It was registered as Civil Appeal No.213 of 2018. During pendency of the appeal, the plaintiff entered into a compromise with defendants 12/1 and 14 (Paper No.18 Ka/4). The compromise was signed by the parties/their authorised representatives and their signatures were duly verified by respective counsel for the parties except respondents 1 to 11 and 13, who were discharged from the suit and also the compromise. There is a map annexed with the compromise, according to which, the portion of land shown with letters DEFH was admitted to be in possession of the plaintiff and would continue in its possession; ABHF was recognised as belonging to defendant 12/1 and BCDH as belonging to defendant no.14. On 22.1.2019 the date on which compromise application Paper No.18 Ga was filed before the appellate court, one Kapil Dev Upadhyay filed an application seeking his impleadment alleging title in respect of 322.66 sq. yards of the suit property on basis of a sale deed dated 18.1.2019 executed in his favour by Narain Das Agrawal, power of attorney holder of Desh Bandhu Kagaji (son of defendant no.13 of Original Suit No.381 of 1987 and defendant no.1 of Original Suit No.800 of 1987) and Manager of Phool Chandra Kagaji HUF. According to him, the original owner of the suit property namely Thakur Madan Mohan Ji Maharaj had executed registered lease deed on 29.12.1987 in favour of Phool Chandra Kagaji HUF with respect to 1320 sq. yards of the suit property. It is also his case that Phool Chandra Kagaji HUF had also obtained a sale deed dated 7.10.1987 (registered on 15.1.1988) in respect of the same land from the Bhargavas, through whom the plaintiff also claims title to the suit property. It is common ground between the parties that the predecessor of Bhargava family namely Late Girdhar Das Bhargava obtained the said property by way of a registered perpectual lease deed dated 21.8.1943 from the then Shebiat of Thakur Madan Mohan Ji Temple, the original owner of the property. According to both the parties, after death of Girdhar Das Bhargava, his three sons inherited the suit property. According to the plaintiff society, the three sons of Girdhar Das Bhargava donated the suit land to the plaintiff and since then, it has been in possession of the same.

4. The Appellate Court, by order dated 1.2.2019, rejected the impleadment application observing that intervention of a third party at the appellate stage when the matter had remained pending for last 32 years would not be in interest of justice. However, on the same date, it proceeded to pass order on the compromise application as well. The Appellate Court accepted the compromise in part i.e. in respect of defendant no.12/1 and 14 but it refused to decree the suit in favour of the plaintiff for the suit land DEFH observing that as per boundaries, it is the same land in respect of which Kapil Dev Upadhyay had filed impleadment application claiming title on basis of registered lease deed of thirty years. The Appellate Court has held that the plaintiff had failed to bring on record any document to prove its title; consequently, the compromise application in respect of land shown with letters DEFH was rejected. In pith and substance, the Appellate Court, in absence of any document of title with regard to the portion of land shown with letters DEFH, declined to grant declaration in favour of the plaintiff. The operative part of the order/judgement of the Appellate Court dated 1.2.2019 reads thus:-

"उपरोक्त सम्पूर्ण विश्लेषण के प्रकाश में संधि पत्र 18क/1–3 एवं उसके साथ संलग्न नक्शा संधि पत्र 18क/4 में दर्शित सम्पत्ति निशानी अक्षर डी. ई. एफ. एच को छोड़कर शेष भाग हेतु संधि पत्र व नक्शा संधि पत्र सत्यापित किया जाता है ।

पत्रावली नियमानुसार दाखिल दफ्तर हो।"

5. Being aggrieved by the above order/judgement of the Appellate Court, declining to record compromise in respect of the claim of the plaintiff while deciding the appeal, the instant petition has been filed.

6. Sri Diwakar Rai Sharma Advocate appearing on behalf of respondent no.14 raised a preliminary objection relating to maintainability of the instant petition under Article 227 of the Constitution. Sri Tarun Agrawal Advocate appearing on behalf of Kapil Dev Upadhyay, the applicant seeking impleadment also submitted that the petitioner has remedy of challenging the impugned judgement by filing a second appeal under Section 100 CPC. It is urged that since the remedy is available under the Code itself, therefore, the present petition under Article 227 of the Constitution should not be entertained and the petitioner should be relegated to the remedy available under the Code. It is urged by them that a second appeal would lie against the impugned order/judgement in view of Order 43 Rule 1-A read with Order 42 Rule 1 CPC and Section 100 and 108 CPC. In support of their contention, they have placed reliance upon the judgements of the Supreme Court in Banwari Lal Vs. Chando Devi (Smt.) (Through Lrs.) and another, Kishun alias Ram Kishun Vs. Behari and a Division Bench judgement of Madhya Pradesh High Court in Thakur Prasad Vs. Bhagwandas.

7. On the other hand, Sri Nirvikar Gupta, learned counsel appearing on behalf of plaintiff-petitioner submitted that the impugned order recording compromise in part and declining to record other part would not amount to a decree. He points out that even no decree has been drawn in pursuance of the impugned order. It is urged that clause (m) of Rule 1 of Order 43 under which an appeal was maintainable against an order recording or refusing to record an agreement, compromise or satisfaction was omitted by Act No.104 of 1976 w.e.f. 1.2.1977. Consequently, it is submitted that no appeal would lie against such an order. He further submitted that since rights of parties have not been decided under the impugned order, therefore, it would not amount to a judgement nor would result in a decree, therefore, Order 43 Rule 1-A (2) will also have no application. He placed a strong reliance on Section 96 (3) CPC and the same judgments upon which reliance was placed by the other side in contending that no appeal is maintainable from a decree passed by court with consent of the parties.

8. Before adverting to the submissions advanced by learned counsel for the parties, certain amendments carried out in the Code by Act No.104 of 1976 are worth noticing. Order 23 Rule 3 CPC envisages compromise of suit. Prior to its amendment by Act No.104 of 1976, it read as follows in its application to the State of Uttar Pradesh:-

"R.3. Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that a suit has been adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise, or where the defendant satisfies the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the suit, the Court shall order such agreement, compromise or satisfaction to be recorded, and shall pass a decree in accordance therewith so far as it relates to the suit."

" ALLAHABAD.- (1) In Rule 3 of Order 23 between the words " or compromise" and "or where" insert the words "in writing duly signed by parties"; and between the words "subject matter of the suit" and the words "the Court" insert the words "and obtains an instrument in writing duly signed by the plaintiff."

(2) At the end of the Rule 3 of Order 23 add the following, namely:

"Provided that the provisions of this rule shall not apply to or in any way affect the provisions of Order XXXIV, Rules 3, 5 and 8.

Explanation.- The expression "agreement" and "compromise", include a joint statement of the parties concerned or their counsel recorded by the Court, and the expression "Instrument" includes a statement of the plaintiff or his counsel recorded by the Court"- U.P. Gaz., 31-8-1974, Pt.II, p.52 (31-8-1974)"

9. Order 43 Rule 1 (m) enabled a party aggrieved by an order passed under Rule 3 of Order 23 recording or refusing to record an agreement, compromise or satisfaction to challenge the order in appeal. Clause (m) was to the following effect:-

"(m) an order under Rule 3 of Order XXIII recording or refusing to record an agreement, compromise or satisfaction;"

10. Section 96 (3) placed a specific embargo on maintainability of appeal from a decree passed by the court with the consent of parties. It reads thus:-

"96 (3). No appeal shall lie from a decree passed by the Court with the consent of parties."

11. Under Order 43 Rule 1 (m), an order recording or refusing to record an agreement, compromise or satisfaction could be directly challenged by filing an appeal even before the final judgement is passed in the suit. In cases where the decree is passed by the court with consent of parties, no appeal would lie in view of the prohibition contained under Section 96 (3). It was settled by a series of precedents that the prohibition under Section 96 (3) would remain limited to cases where the parties, after complying with the procedure prescribed under Order 23 Rule 3 CPC, invites the court to pass decree in a particular manner to which they had agreed to and the court acts accordingly. However, in cases where a party disputes being signatory to the compromise or the compromise decree is challenged on ground of fraud, undue influence or misrepresentation, the bar stipulated under Section 96 (3) would not come in way of filing an appeal. It was also open to such a party to file a regular civil suit challenging the compromise decree on the ground of it being void or voidable.

12. After the Code was amended by Act No.104 of 1976, clause (m) of Rule 1 of Order 43 was omitted, meaning thereby that an order recording or refusing to record an agreement, compromise or satisfaction is no more appealable. By the same amendment, Rule 1-A was inserted in Order 43. Sub-rule (2) thereof, which is relevant for our purpose, is as follows:-

"(2) In an appeal against a decree passed in a suit after recording a compromise or refusing to record a compromise, it shall be open to the appellant to contest the decree on the ground that the compromise should, or should not, have been recorded."

13. At the same time, certain amendments were also made in Rule 3 of Order 23 conferring jurisdiction upon the same court to decide whether adjustment or satisfaction has been arrived at where it is so alleged by one party while denied by the other. It has also been made mandatory that the compromise should be in writing and signed by the parties. An Explanation has also been inserted clarifying that an agreement or compromise, which is void or voidable under the Indian Contract Act, 1872, shall not be deemed to be lawful within the meaning of this rule. Rule 3-A, inserted by the same Amending Act of 1976 specifically bars a suit before civil court for setting aside a compromise decree on the ground that it was not lawful. Order 23 Rule 3 and Rule 3-A as amended by Act No.104 of 1976 are as follows:-

"3. Compromise of suit.-Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that a suit has been adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise, [in writing and signed by the parties] or where the defendant satisfies the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the suit, the Court shall order such agreement, compromise or satisfaction to be recorded, and shall pass a decree in accordance therewith [so far as it relates to the parties to the suit, whether or not the subject-matter of the agreement, compromise or satisfaction is the same as the subject-matter of the suit]:

[Provided that where it is alleged by one party and denied by the other that an adjustment or satisfaction has been arrived at, the Court shall decide the question; but no adjournment shall be granted for the purpose of deciding the question, unless the Court, for reasons to be recorded, thinks fit to grant such adjournment.]

[Explanation.-An agreement or compromise which is void or voidable under the Indian Contract Act, 1872 (9 of 1872), shall not be deemed to be lawful within the meaning of this rule.]"

"3-A. Bar to suit.- No suit shall lie to set aside a decree on the ground that the compromise on which the decree is based was not lawful."

14. In Pushpa Devi Bhagat Vs. Rajinder Singh, a two Judge Bench of the Supreme Court, after considering Rule 3 and 3-A of Order 23, summed up the statement of law emerging from these provisions as follows:-

"13.1. no appeal is maintainable against a consent decree having regard to the specific bar contained in Section 96(3) CPC;

13.2. no appeal is maintainable against the order of the court recording the compromise (or refusing to record a compromise) in view of the deletion of clause (m) of Rule 1, Order 43;

13.3. no independent suit can be filed for setting aside a compromise decree on the ground that the compromise was not lawful in view of the bar contained in Rule 3-A; and

13.4. a consent decree operates as an estoppel and is valid and binding unless it is set aside by the court which passed the consent decree, by an order on an application under the proviso to Rule 3 of Order 23."

15. Even before the above principles were laid down by the Supreme Court, another Division Bench in Banwari Lal (supra) considered the interplay between Order 43 Rule 1-A added by Act No.104 of 1976 and Section 96 (3) as well as the impact of deletion of clause (m) of Rule 1 of Order 43. The Supreme Court has observed that the amendments were carried out taking into consideration the past experiences, as on many occasions, parties used to file compromise on basis of which suit used to be decreed but later on, for one reason or the other, the validity of such compromise was challenged by way of separate suit dragging the litigation for years together. By the amendments made by 1976 Act, special requirements were introduced before a compromise is recorded by the court. The compromise should be lawful, must be in writing and signed by the parties. The relevant observations made in this regard by the Supreme Court in Banwari Lal (supra) are extracted below:-

"7. By adding the proviso along with an explanation the purpose and the object of the amending Act appears to be to compel the party challenging the compromise to question the same before the court which had recorded the compromise in question. That court was enjoined to decide the controversy whether the parties have arrived at an adjustment in a lawful manner. The explanation made it clear that an agreement or a compromise which is void or voidable under the Indian Contract Act shall not be deemed to be lawful within the meaning of the said rule. Having introduced the proviso along with the explanation in Rule 3 in order to avoid multiplicity of suit and prolonged litigation, a specific bar was prescribed by Rule 3-A in respect of institution of a separate suit for setting aside a decree on basis of a compromise saying:

8. Earlier under Order 43, Rule 1(m), an appeal was maintainable against an order under Rule 3 of Order 23 recording or refusing to record an agreement, compromise or satisfaction. But by the amending Act aforesaid that clause has been deleted, the result whereof is that now no appeal is maintainable against an order recording or refusing to record an agreement or compromise under Rule 3 of Order 23. Being conscious that the right of appeal against the order recording a compromise or refusing to record a compromise was being taken away, a new Rule 1-A has been added to Order 43 which is as follows:"

16. The 1976 Amendment, while on one hand conferred right to challenge decree passed in suit after recording a compromise or refusing to record a compromise by filing regular appeal but at the same time, Section 96 (3) of the Code, which says that no appeal shall lie from a decree passed by the court with the consent of the parties, was left untouched. The impact of insertion of Rule 1-A (2) upon Section 96 (3) was explained thus:-

"9. Section 96(3) of the Code says that no appeal shall lie from a decree passed by the Court with the consent of the parties. Rule 1-A(2) has been introduced saying that against a decree passed in a suit after recording a compromise, it shall be open to the appellant to contest the decree on the ground that the compromise should not have been recorded. When Section 96(3) bars an appeal against decree passed with the consent of parties, it implies that such decree is valid and binding on the parties unless set aside by the procedure prescribed or available to the parties. One such remedy available was by filing the appeal under Order 43, Rule 1(m). If the order recording the compromise was set aside, there was no necessity or occasion to file an appeal against the decree. Similarly a suit used to be filed for setting aside such decree on the ground that the decree is based on an invalid and illegal compromise not binding on the plaintiff of the second suit. But after the amendments which have been introduced, neither an appeal against the order recording the compromise nor remedy by way of filing a suit is available in cases covered by Rule 3-A of Order 23. As such a right has been given under Rule 1-A(2) of Order 43 to a party, who challenges the recording of the compromise, to question the validity thereof while preferring an appeal against the decree. Section 96(3) of the Code shall not be a bar to such an appeal because Section 96(3) is applicable to cases where the factum of compromise or agreement is not in dispute."

17. Once again, in paragraph 13 of the Law Report, the Supreme Court explained the interplay between the above provisions as follows:-

"13. When the amending Act introduced a proviso along with an explanation to Rule 3 of Order 23 saying that where it is alleged by one party and denied by other that an adjustment or satisfaction has been arrived at, "the Court shall decide the question", the Court before which a petition of compromise is filed and which has recorded such compromise, has to decide the question whether an adjustment or satisfaction had been arrived at on basis of any lawful agreement. To make the enquiry in respect of validity of the agreement or the compromise more comprehensive, the explanation to the proviso says that an agreement or compromise "which is void or voidable under the Indian Contract Act..." shall not be deemed to be lawful within the meaning of the said Rule. In view of the proviso read with the explanation, a Court which had entertained the petition of Compromise has to examine whether the compromise was void or voidable under the Indian Contract Act. Even Rule 1(m) of Order 43 has been deleted under which an appeal was maintainable against an order recording a compromise. As such a party challenging a compromise can file a petition under proviso to Rule 3 of Order 23, or an appeal under Section 96(1) of the Code, in which he can now question the validity of the compromise in view of Rule 1-A of Order 43 of the Code."

(emphasis supplied)

18. Again, in Kishun alias Ram Kishun (supra) it was held that where the compromise is contested, the bar under Section 96 (3) will not come into play. The order passed by the court on such contest and the resultant decree would be subject to appeal and second appeal. It has been observed that "when there is a contest on the question whether there was a compromise or not, a decree accepting the compromise on resolution of that controversy, cannot be said to be a decree passed with the consent of the parties. Therefore, the bar under Section 96(3) of the Code could not have application. An appeal and a second appeal with its limitations would be available to the party feeling aggrieved by the decree based on such a disputed compromise or on a rejection of the compromise set up."

19. The law laid down in Ram Kishun has been reiterated by the Supreme Court in a more recent judgement in Daljit Kaur and another Vs. Muktar Steels Private Limited and others holding that bar under Section 96 (3) CPC will not get attracted where the compromise is disputed. In my considered opinion, the same would also be the position where the court refuses to record compromise or part of it on the ground that it is not lawful, as in the instant case.

20. The legal position which thus emerges after amendment of Civil Procedure Code by Act No.104 of 1976 is that the appellant in an appeal against a decree passed in suit after recording a compromise or refusing to record a compromise is entitled to contest the decree on the ground that the compromise should, or should not, have been recorded (Order 43 Rule1-A). The same principle would apply where the court records some part of the compromise while declines to record the remaining part. In such cases, the bar contained under Section 96 (3) CPC would not get attracted. These principles would also apply to appeals from appellate decrees in view of Order 42 Rule 1 read with Section 108 CPC.

21. In the instant case, as would appear from the facts noted above, the appellate court, while deciding appeal under Section 96 CPC, has passed a composite order recording compromise in part and refusing to record other part of compromise in so far as it relates to the plaintiff-petitioner. On the same date, the appellate court has also proceeded to decide the appeal finally. This takes the Court to the other limb of the argument of learned counsel for the petitioner i.e. the order passed by the appellate court would not qualify to be a decree, as there had been no adjudication of its rights. Consequently, no appeal would lie at this stage.

22. The submission made in this regard, albeit attractive, is bereft of any substance. A plain reading of the order passed by the appellate court on 1.2.2019 reveals that the appellate court has not only recorded the compromise in part and refused to record the remainder, but has also proceeded to pass a decree in terms thereof. The order specifically provides that the compromise application and the map would form part of the decree except in respect of property shown with letters DEFH. There is a specific direction for consigning the file to the record room. The operative part evinces a clear intention that the proceedings of the appeal have thereby terminated. It is not the case of the petitioner that the appellate court is incompetent to pass a composite order verifying/refusing to verify the compromise and also pass decree in accordance therewith on the same date. The main thrust of the argument of learned counsel for the petitioner is that the appellate court has not adjudicated the rights of the plaintiff in the suit land, consequently, the order impugned would not qualify to be a 'decree' within the meaning of Section 2 (2) CPC.

23. In Rana Narang Vs. Ramesh Narang, the Supreme Court has held that a compromise decree is as much a decree as a decree passed on adjudication. It is not merely an agreement between the parties. In passing the decree by consent, the court adds its mandate to the consent.

24. A similar controversy arose before a Three Judges Bench of the Supreme Court in Shyam Sunder Sharma Vs. Pannalal Jaiswal and others though in a slightly different context. The issue before the Supreme Court was whether an order of dismissal of appeal as barred by limitation would amount to a decree or not. The contention before the Supreme Court was that in such a case there is no adjudication of lis on merits, therefore, it is merely an 'order' and would not amount to a 'decree'. The Supreme Court, while deciding the said issue, considered an earlier judgement by Two Judges Bench in Ratan Singh Vs. Vijayasingh and others, wherein it was held that dismissal of an application for condonation of delay would not amount to a decree, therefore, dismissal of appeal as time barred was also not a decree. The Supreme Court overruled the said judgement relying on previous judgments by Larger Bench taking a contrary view. The Supreme Court observed as follows:-

"12. Learned counsel placed reliance on the decision in Ratansingh vs. Vijaysingh and others [(2001) 1 SCC 469] rendered by two learned Judges of this Court and pointed out that it was held therein that dismissal of an application for condonation of delay would not amount to a decree and, therefore, dismissal of an appeal as time barred was also not a decree. That decision was rendered in the context of Article 136 of the Limitation Act, 1963 and in the light of the departure made from the previous position obtaining under Article 182 of the Limitation Act, 1908. But we must point out with respect that the decisions of this Court in Messrs Mela Ram and Sons and Sheodan Singh (supra) were not brought to the notice of their Lordships. The principle laid down by a three Judge Bench of this Court in M/s Mela Ram and Sons (supra) and that stated in Sheodan Singh (supra) was, thus, not noticed and the view expressed by the two Judge Bench, cannot be accepted as laying down the correct law on the question....."

25. The judgement rendered in Sheodan Singh Vs. Daryao Kunwar was rendered by Four Judges Bench of the Supreme Court holding thus:-

"We are therefore of opinion that where a decision is given on the merits by the trial court and the matter is taken in appeal and the appeal is dismissed on some preliminary ground like limitation or default in printing, it must be held that such dismissal when it confirms the decision of the trial court on the merits, itself amounts to the appeal being heard and finally decided on the merits whatever may be the ground for dismissal of the appeal."

26. In Messrs Mela Ram and Sons Vs. The Commissioner of Income Tax, Punjab on which reliance was placed by the Supreme Court in Shyam Sunder Sharma (supra), it was held as follows:-

".....although the Appellate Assistant Commissioner did not hear the appeal on merits and held that the appeal was barred by limitation his order was under Section 31 and the effect of that order was to confirm the assessment which had been made by the Income-tax Officer."

27. The Supreme Court concluded by holding that dismissal of an appeal on ground of delay in filing the same has the effect of confirming the decree appealed against. Para 10 from the said judgement reads thus:-

"10. The question was considered in extenso by a Full Bench of the Kerala High Court in Thambi vs. Mathew (1987 (2) KLT 848). Therein, after referring to the relevant decisions on the question it was held that an appeal presented out of time was nevertheless an appeal in the eye of law for all purposes and an order dismissing the appeal was a decree that could be the subject of a second appeal. It was also held that Rule 3A of Order XLI introduced by Amendment Act 104 of 1976 to the Code, did not in any way affect that principle. An appeal registered under Rule 9 of Order XLI of the Code had to be disposed of according to law and a dismissal of an appeal for the reason of delay in its presentation, after the dismissal of an application for condoning the delay, is in substance and effect a confirmation of the decree appealed against. Thus, the position that emerges on a survey of the authorities is that an appeal filed along with an application for condoning the delay in filing that appeal when dismissed on the refusal to condone the delay is nevertheless a decision in the appeal. "

28. The order by the appellate court deciding appeal results in merger of the judgement of the trial court with that of the appellate court. A perusal of the operative part of the judgement would reveal that the judgement passed by the trial court stands superseded by the decree now passed by the appellate court whereunder rights of respondents 12/1 and 14 have been specifically recognised, while that of the plaintiff in respect of part of the suit land shown with letters DEFH has not been accepted. It is the judgement of the appellate court which would govern the rights of the parties and not the one passed by the trial court.

29. The questions (i) whether the appellate court was justified in declining to record part of the compromise, (ii) whether it was justified in dismissing the claim of the plaintiff straightaway after refusing to record part of the compromise without giving the petitioner opportunity to establish its claim on basis of other material on record and (iii) whether the finding recorded in the impugned order that there is no evidence on record to establish the title of the plaintiff-appellant in respect of property DEFH may or may not be correct, but on that score the remedy of further appeal provided under the Code would not be lost. The nature of the order has to be ascertained in accordance with the legal principles discussed above. The preparation of decree or formal order in terms of the impugned judgement is a ministerial act. Even if a formal order has been prepared and not decree in pursuance of the impugned judgement of the appellate court, it would not detract from the true nature of the order nor would denude the petitioner of its right to avail the statutory remedy of filing second appeal.

30. Before parting, I would also like to deal with an alternative submission made by Sri Tarun Agrawal, learned counsel appearing for the applicant seeking impleadment. He urged that the bar contained under Section 96 (3) regarding filing of appeal against consent decree is only applicable to first appeals and not to second appeals filed under Section 100 CPC. However, the submission is devoid of any force. Section 108 CPC specifically provides that the provisions of Part VII relating to appeals from original decree shall as far as may be applied to appeals from appellate decrees. Section 96 (3) is contained in Part VII. Section 96 (3), as noted above, is based on doctrine of estoppel which would equally apply to a consent decree passed in appeal. However, for other reasons stated in earlier part of the judgement, the bar under Section 96 (3) C.P.C. would not come in way of the petitioner in filing second appeal.

31. In consequence, the instant petition is dismissed on the ground of availability of alternative remedy of second appeal under the Code itself. The petitioner shall be free to avail the said remedy, in which event, nothing observed herein would be taken as expression of opinion on merit of the case.

32. Office is directed to return certified copies of the impugned judgments to counsel for the petitioner after retaining photo copies on record.

2. This petition under Article 227 of the Constitution of India has been filed praying to set aside the order dated 30.04.2019 in Misc. Case No.45 of 2018 (Shrawan Vs. Javed) under Rule 32 of the U.P. Urban Buildings (Regulation of Letting, Rent and Eviction) Rules, 1972 (hereinafter referred to "Rules, 1972") read with Section 151 C.P.C. passed by the Civil Judge (S.D.), Court No.18, Deoria, rejecting the restoration application 4 Ga, filed by the applicant-petitioner for recall of the ex-party judgment and decree dated 07.04.2018 in P.A. Case No.01 of 2017 {Javed Ahmad Vs. Smt. Renu Kushwaha, Dipu Kushwaha, Gaurav Kushawaha (defendant 1st set) and Venketeshwar (defendant 2nd set)}.

3. Learned counsel for the petitioner has submitted at the very outset that he is not pressing the relief no.2 since the application has been decided by the impugned order.

Facts:-

4. Briefly stated facts of the present case are that the defendant 1st set/respondent nos.1, 2 and 3 are the tenants of a portion of the disputed house and the defendant no.4 Venketeshwar (defendant 2nd set) is tenant of a separate portion/shop in the disputed house No.201, Ward No.22, Abubkar Nagar, Station Road, Tappa - Deoria, Pargana - Salempur Majhauli, Tehsil & District - Deoria. The aforesaid disputed house was originally owned by one Brijish Johara, son of Farukh Chisti who had let out separate portions in the aforesaid house to the defendant 2nd set and the father of the defendant 1st set. He sold the disputed house to the plaintiff-opposite party no.4 Sri Javed Ahmad by a registered sale deed dated 10.04.2013. The aforesaid plaintiff/opposite party no.4 Javed Ahmad filed a P.A. Case No.01 of 2017, alleging that a registered notice dated 22.09.2015 and 10.02.2014 were given by him to the defendant 1st set and the defendant 2nd set to vacate the disputed house on the ground of bonafide need of the disputed accommodation. The notices were shown to be served by substituted service i.e. by the alleged publication of notice in some news paper "Jagat Asha". Thereafter the P.A. Case was proceeded ex-parte and an ex-parte judgment and decree dated 07.04.2018 was passed by Civil Judge (S.D.), Court No.18, Deoria, giving reasons and his findings as under:-

"प्रस्तुत वाद में दाखिल साक्ष्य के आधार पर न्यायालय का यह मत है कि वादी विवादित मकान का स्वामी व मकान मालिक है तथा प्रतिवादी प्रथम पक्ष व द्वितीय पक्ष किरायेदार है। वादी को विवादित मकान की सद्भावी आवश्यकता है। यदि वादी सदभावी आवश्यकता के आधार पर प्रश्नगत मकान को उसके पक्ष में अवमुक्त नही किया गया तो वादी को अधिक कठिनाई कारित होगी।

पत्रावली पर उपलब्ध मौखिक व दस्तावेजी साक्ष्यो के अवलोकन के उपरान्त न्यायालय इस मत का है कि वादी अपने वादपत्र के कथनों को साबित करने में एकपक्षीय रूप से सफल रहा है। इसके खण्डन में पत्रावली पर ऐसा कोई साक्ष्य नहीं है

जिससे वादी के कथनों पर अविश्वास किया जाये। अतएव वादी का आवेदन आज्ञप्त किये जाने योग्य है।"

5. It was well within the knowledge of the plaintiff-opposite party no.4 Javed Ahmad that the defendant 2nd set, namely Sri Venketeshwar is missing since the year 2013. It appears that when one Sri Subhas son of the defendant 2nd set heard about the aforesaid P.A. Case No.01 of 2017, he filed an impeleadment application 28 Ga stating that the defendant no.4 is missing since the year 2013 and, therefore, he may be impleaded as defendant. The Impleadment application 28 Ga was rejected by the Civil Judge (S.D.) Court No.18, Deoria, by an order dated 16.02.2018 on the grounds firstly that the applicant - Subhash son of Venketeshwar could not file any evidence to establish that his presence is necessary in P.A. Case No.01 of 2017 for effective disposal of the case and secondly that seven years have not passed since the missing of defendant no.4 Venketeshwar, therefore, his civil death can not be assumed.

6. The aforesaid Subhash son of the defendant no.4 has filed an appeal challenging the aforesaid ex parte judgment and decree dated 07.04.2018 which is stated to be pending.

7. The defendant 1st set, namely, Renu Kushwaha and others filed an application 4 Ga under Rule 32 read with Section 22 (b) of the Rules 1972 for setting aside the aforesaid judgment and decree dated 07.04.2018, which was registered as Misc. Case No.46 of 2018 (Renu Kushwaha Vs. Javed). It was allowed by the Prescribed Authority/Civil Judge (S.D.), Court No.18, Deoria, by order dated 08.04.2019 in which the Prescribed Authority recorded a finding that the news paper in which the notice of P.A. Case No.01 of 2017 was published, had no circulation in the area. Accordingly, the service of notice upon the defendant 1st set was held to be not sufficient. Consequently the judgment dated 07.04.2018 was set aside and the P.A. Case no.01 of 2017 (Javed Ahmad Vs. Smt. Renu Kushwaha and others) was restored to its original number with respect to the defendant 1st set (defendant nos. 1 to 3). It was also observed that service of notice was not made upon the defendants as per rules and the impugned ex-parte judgment has been passed without proper service upon the defendants.

8. The applicant/petitioner is the son of the defendant 2nd set, namely, Sri Venketeshwar. He also filed an application 4 Ga, dated 14.05.2018 under Order IX Rule 13 read with Section 151 C.P.C. and Rule 22 of the Rules, 1972. The defendant 1st set and the applicant-petitioner herein both have filed the recall applications simultaneously. In his recall application the applicant petitioner has clearly stated that he came to know about the ex parte judgment dated 07.04.2018 in P.A. Case No.01 of 2017 when the plaintiff-opposite party no.4 herein threatened him for eviction on the basis of the aforesaid judgment and decree then he contacted his counsel and enquired and got inspected the file of the case on 10/11.05.2018 and came to know that fraudulently the plaintiff-opposite party no.4 had instituted the P.A. case and got it decreed ex-parte by judgment and decree dated 07.04.2018 and no notice of the aforesaid case was served. The aforesaid recall application of the applicant/petitioner was registered as

Misc. Case No. 45 of 2018 (Shravan Vs. Javed) which was rejected by the impugned order dated 30.04.2019, passed by the Civil Judge (S.D.), Court No.18, Deoria, observing as under :-

"पत्रावली के साथ पी0ए0वाद सं0–01/17 की पत्रावली उपलब्ध है, जिसके परिशीलन से यह प्रकट होता है कि उक्त मामले में वर्तमान प्रकीर्ण वाद के कायमीदाता जावेद अहमद की ओर से एक प्रार्थना पत्र 28ग प्रस्तुत किया गया था तथा उक्त प्रार्थना पत्र के माध्यम से प्रार्थी के द्वारा यही तर्क लिया गया था कि उसके पिता बैकटेश्वर जो कि प्रतिपक्षी सं0–4/ द्वितीय पक्ष है। 4–5 वर्षो से गायब है। अतः उसे उपरोक्त मामले में उनके विधिक प्रतिनिधि के तौर पर पक्षकार कायम कर लिया जाय। जिस प्रार्थना पत्र पर दिनांक 16.02.18 को न्यायालय द्वारा गुण दोष पर आदेश पारित करते हुये प्रार्थी को वाद का उचित एवं आवश्यक पक्षकार होना नही माना गया तथा उसका पक्षकार बनाये जाने का प्रार्थना पत्र 28ग गुण दोष पर निरस्त कर दिया गया है, जिस आदेश के विरूद्ध प्रार्थी/ कायमीदाता की ओर से कोई अपील/ रिवीजन प्रस्तुत नही की गयी है तथा उक्त आदेश अंतिम हो चुका है जो इस न्यायालय पर भी बाध्यकारी है। आदेश–9 नियम–13 सी0पी0सी0 में दिये गये प्रावधान के अनुसार "किसी ऐसे मामले में जिसतकं डिक्री किसी प्रतिवादी के विरूद्ध एकपक्षीय पारित की गयी है, वह प्रतिवादी अपास्त कराने के आदेश के लिये आवेदन उस न्यायालय में कर सकेगा, जिसके द्वारा वह डिक्री पारित की गयी थी और यदि वह न्यायालय का यह समाधान कर देता है कि सम्मन का तामीला सम्यक् रूप से नही की गयी थी या वहवाद की सुनवाई के लिये पुकार होने पर उससंजात होने से किसी पर्याप्त हेतुक से निवारित रहा था तो खर्चे के बारे में न्यायालय में जमा करने के या अन्यथा ऐसे निबंधनो पर जो वह ठीक समझे, न्यायालय यह आदेश करेगा कि जहां तक डिक्री उस प्रतिवादी के विरूद्ध है वहां तक वह अपास्त कर दी जाय, और वाद में आगे कार्यवाही करने के लिये दिन नियत करेगा:

परन्तु जहां डिक्री ऐसी है कि केवल ऐसे प्रतिवादी के विरूद्ध अपास्त नही की जा सकती है वहां वह अन्य सभी प्रतिवादियो या उनमें से किसी या किन्ही के विरूद्ध अपास्त की जा सकेगी:

परन्तु यह और कि यदि किसी न्यायालय का यह समाधान हो जाता है कि प्रतिवादी को सुनवाई की तारीख की सूचना थी और उपसंजात होने के लिये और वादी के दावे का उत्तर देने के लिये पर्याप्त समय था तो वह एकपक्षीय पारित डिक्री को केवल इस आधार पर अपास्त नही करेगा कि सम्मन की तामीला में अनियमिता हुई थी।"

अर्थात् जहां प्रतिवादी को वाद की सुनवाई की तारीख की सूचना थी वहां तामीला में अनियमिता के आधार पर एकपक्षीय डिक्री को अपास्त नही किया जा सकता है। प्रस्तुत मामले में एकपक्षीय डिक्री दिनांक 07.04.18 को पारित की गयी है जबकि दिनांक 16.02.18 को प्रार्थना पत्र 28 ग जो कि प्रस्तुत मामले के कायमीदाता के द्वारा प्रस्तुत किया गया है, खारिज किया गया था अर्थात् कायमीदाता को उक्त वाद की पूर्ण रूप से जानकारी थी तथा वह उक्त मामले में उपस्थित भी रहा था। यद्यपि न्यायालय द्वारा उसे वाद का पक्षकार होना नही माना गया तथा न्यायालय के उक्त आदेश के विरूद्ध कोई चाराजोई नही किये जाने के कारण यह भी माना जायेगा कि उसके द्वारा अपने पक्षकार बनने के अधिकार का परित्याग भी कर दिया गया है। यदि प्रस्तुत मामले में उसका प्रार्थना पत्र 4ग कायमी हेतु स्वीकार किया जाता है तो इसका प्रभाव आदेश–1 नियम–10 सी0पी0सी0 में दिये गये प्रावधान के अनुरूप तृतीय पक्षकार को पक्षकार कायम करने जैसा होगा तथा अपने पूर्व आदेश दिनांक 16.02.18 को प्रतिकूल भी होगा जिसकी अनुमति विधि प्रदान नही करती है जैसा कि माननीय सर्वोच्च न्यायालय द्वारा विधि निर्णय Ram Prakash Agarwal and Another Vs. Gopi Krishnan(Dead through L.Rs.) and Others 2013(4) AWC 3856(SC) में अवधारित भी किया गया है कि–

" 16. --------Permitting an application under Order IX, Rule 13, CPC by a non-party, would amount to adding a party to the case, which is provided for under Order 1, Rule 10, CPC, or setting aside the ex-parte judgment and decree, i.e., seeking a declaration that he decree is null and void for any reason, which can be sought independently such a party.

20. In view of the above, the legal issues involved herein, can be summarised as under:

(I) an application under Order IX, Rule 13, CPC cannot be filed by a person who was not initially a party to the proceedings."

कायमीदाता के द्वारा भी कायमी प्रार्थना पत्र के माध्यम से अप्रत्यक्ष रूप से अपने प्रार्थना पत्र

28ग जो पी0ए0वाद सं0 01/17 में खारिज किया जा चुका है, को स्वीकार कराये जाने का प्रयास किया जा रहा है, जिसका इस न्यायालय को क्षेत्राधिकार प्राप्त नही है क्योंकि उक्त आदेश दिनांक 16.02.18 एक अंतिम आदेश है, अतः माननीय सर्वोच्च न्यायालय की विधि व्यवस्था Ram Prakash Agarwal and Another Vs. Gopi Krishnan(Dead through L.Rs.) and Others (SUPRA) के अनुरूप कायमीदाता जो कि पी0ए0वाद सं0–01/17 का पक्षकार नही था उक्त पी0ए0वाद में पारित एकपक्षीय डिक्री को अपास्त कराने का अधिकारी नही है। प्रार्थना पत्र कायमीदाता पोषणीय नही है, खारिज किये जाने योग्य है।"

9. Aggrieved with the aforesaid order dated 30.04.2019 in Misc. Case No.45 of 2018 (Shravan Vs. Javed), passed by the Civil Judge (S.D.), Court No.18, Deoria, the present petition under Article 227 of the Constitution of India has been filed by the applicant/petitioner.

Submissions

10. Learned counsel for the applicant-petitioner submits as under:-

(i) The P.A. Case was filed by the plaintiff-opposite party no.4, fraudulently knowing it well that the tenant defendant 2nd set (father of the applicant) is missing. The applicant-petitioner is the legal representative of the defendant 2nd set , namely, Sri Venketeshwar and is occupying the tenanted portion but he was not impleaded as defendant. As and when the ex-parte judgment in P.A. Case no.01 of 2017 came to his notice, he filed the restoration application. Almost in similar set of facts the restoration application of the defendant nos. 1, 2 and 3 (defendant/tenant 1st set) was allowed by the court below but recall application of the applicant was arbitrarily and illegally rejected by the impugned order.

(ii) The provisions of Rule 22 (b) and Rule 32 of the Rules 1972 are applicable for setting aside the ex-parte judgment and restoration of the P.A. Case.

(iii) The impugned order has been passed illegally and contrary to the provisions of Rule 22(b) read with Rule 32 of the Rules, 1972 and Section 151 C.P.C.

11. In support of his submissions he relied upon the judgments of this Court in Heera Lal Sharma Vs. XVth Addl. District Judge, Kanpur & others 1983 ARC 535 (para 11 to 14) and Tara Shankar Vs. Vinod Kumar Verma and others 1993 (2) ARC6 (paras 4 & 7).

12. Sri Anoop Trivedi, learned Senior Advocate, submits as under:-

(i) The applicant-petitioner had no locus standi to file an application 4 Ga for recall of the ex-parte judgment and decree dated 07.04.2018 in P.A. Case No.01 of 2017, since the applicant-petitioner was not party to the aforesaid P.A. Case. Under Order IX Rule 13 C.P.C. only that person who is a party in the suit can apply for recall of the ex-parte judgment and decree.

(ii) Since the impleadment application of the brother of the petitioner (paper no.28 Ga) was rejected by the court below by order dated 16.02.2018, therefore, it shall operate as res judicata. Therefore, the restoration application 4 Ga filed by the applicant - petitioner was lawfully rejected by the courts below.

(iii) Application under Rule 22 of the Rules, 1972 could be filed only when a substitution in respect of defendant no.4 is made. Since from the date of missing of the defendant no.4

seven years have not passed, therefore, no one could be substituted in place of the defendant no.4 Venketeshwar. Therefore, without substitution, no application under Rule 22 read with Rule 32 of the Rules, 1972 was maintainable. Therefore, it was rightly rejected by the court below.

13. In support of his submissions Sri Anoop Trivedi, learned Senior Advocate, has relied upon a judgment of Hon'ble Supreme Court in Ram Prakash Agarwal and another Vs. Gopi Krishan (Dead through Lrs.) and others, 2013 (4) AWC 3856.

Discussion & Findings:

14. I have carefully considered the submissions of learned counsels for the parties and with their consent this petition is being finally heard without calling for a counter affidavit.

15. Undisputedly, a composite release application was filed by the plaintiff-opposite party no.4 against two distinct tenants of separate tenanted portions which was allowed by ex-parte judgment and decree dated 07.04.2018 in P.A. Case No.01 of 2017, passed by the Civil Judge, (S.D.), Court No.18, Deoria, which neither contained any discussion to the evidence led by the plaintiff-respondent no.4 to establish his bonafide need nor the comparative hardship to be in his favour. Conclusion based on no reason was recorded and the P.A. Case was decreed. The service of notices upon the defendants were shown by substituted service by publication of notices in some newspaper "Jagat Asha" which had no circulation in the area as has been observed by the same Civil Judge/Prescribed Authority while allowing the restoration application of the defendant 1st set/opposite party nos. 1,2 and 3, thereby setting aside the ex-parte judgment and decree dated 07.04.2018 in P.A. Case No.01 of 2017 and restoring the P.A. Case to its original number.

16. It is admitted case of the plaintiff-opposite party no.4 that the defendant 2nd set, namely, Venketeshwar (father of he applicant-petitioner herein) is missing since the year 2013, which fact is evident from his own application dated 30.10.2014 (paper no.25 Ga) filed in Suit No.592 of 2013 (Venketeshwar Vs. Javed Ahmad). Thus, at the time of giving notice dated 22.09.2015 or 10.02.2014 as well as at the time of filing P.A. Case no.01 of 2017, the plaintiff-opposite party no.4 was well aware of the fact that the defendant-2nd set, namely, Venketeshwar is missing since the year 2013 and yet he has deliberately not impleaded any of his legal representatives or his family members who were occupying the tenanted premises.

17. The application 4 Ga being Misc. Case No.45 of 2018 (Shrawan Vs. Javed) was filed by the applicant-petitioner and not by his brother Subhash. However, in the impugned order rejecting the said application the court below has proceeded with the assumption as if the applicant-petitioner Shrawan had earlier filed an Impleadment application 28 Ga. The Impleadment application 28 Ga was filed by the brother of the applicant-petitioner which was rejected by the court below by order dated 16.02.2018 for the reasons aforementioned which itself speaks about the correctness of the order. That order prima facie appears to have been passed leaving the tenants remedyless and denying them opportunity of hearing before passing the ex parte judgment dated 07.04.2018.

18. The application 4 Ga filed by the applicant-petitioner herein for recall of the ex parte judgment dated 07.04.2018 refers to the provisions of Section 151 C.P.C. and Rule 22 of the Rules 1972. The relevant provisions in rent matters under U.P. Act 13 of 1972, for restoration of cases are the provisions of Section 34 (8) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972 and Rule 22 (b) and Rule 32 of the Rules, 1972, which are reproduced below:-

"Section 34 (8) - Powers of various authorities and procedure to be followed by them - For the purposes of any proceedings under this Act and for purposes connected therewith the said authorities shall have such other powers and shall follow such procedure, principles of proof, rules of limitation and guiding principles as may be prescribed.

Rule 22 . Powers under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 [Section 34 (1) (g)] - The District Magistrate, the Prescribed Authority or the Appellate or revising Authority shall, for the purposes of holding any inquiry or hearing any appeal or revision under the Act, shall have the same powers as are vested in the Civil Court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, when trying a suit, in respect of the following matters, namely-*

*(a) * * * * * * **

(b) the power to proceed ex parte and to set aside, for sufficient cause, an order passed ex parte;

*(c) * * * * * * **

Rule 32 - Application for setting aside an ex parte order or for restoration [Section 34(8) and 41]- The District Magistrate, the Prescribed Authority or the Appellant or Revising Authority, as the case may be, may for sufficient cause-*

(a) set aside an ex parte order deciding an application for the determination of a dispute under Section 8 or for the determination of Standard rent under Section 9 or for the release of any building or specified part thereof or any land appurtenant to such building under Section 21 or for allotment of a new building under sub Section (2) of Section 24or for restoration of any amenity under sub-section (1) of Section 27 or for major repairs under sub-section (4) of Section 28 or an appeal under Section 22 or a revision under Section 18;

(b) restore an application or an appeal or revision referred to in clause (a) as well as an application , for release of any building or part thereof or any land appurtenant to such building where such application or appeal or revision has been dismissed for default of appearance of the applicant or the appellant or revisionist, as the case may be, or his counsel."

Service of Notice under the U.P. Act XIII of 1972:-

19. Section 21(3) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972 specifically mandates that "no order shall be made under sub-section (1), or sub-section (1-A) or sub-section (2) except after giving to the parties concerned a reasonable opportunity of being heard, provided that where the tenant being a servant of Government or of any local authority or any public sector corporation does not contest the application, then a reasonable opportunity of being heard shall be given to the District Magistrate, who shall have the right to oppose the application. Thus service of notice under Section 21 of the Act is sine qua non for the exercise of jurisdiction under the section 21. Section 34 provides for applicability of certain provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure Code 1908 in matters under U.P. Act 13 of 1972 for the purpose of exercising powers by various authorities and procedure to be followed by them. Rule 28 of the U.P. Urban Buildings (Regulation of Letting, Rent and Eviction) Rules, 1972 is referable to Section 34(8) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972 and it provides for service of notice. Rule 28 of the Rules 1972 is reproduced below:-

"Rule 28 :

Service of notice [(Section 34(8)] (1) A notice Issued by the District Magistrate, the Prescribed Authority or the Appellate or Revising Authority under the provisions of the Act shall be served on the person concerned-

(a) by giving or tendering it to such person, or his Counsel, or

(b) by giving or tendering it to any adult member of his family ; or

(c) if no such person is found, by leaving it at his last known place of abode or business or in the case of an appeal or revision at his address as given under Rule 6, or

(d) if none of the means aforesaid is available by affixing it on some conspicuous part of his last known place of abode, or business or in the case of an appeal or revision at his address as given under Rule 6.

(2) If party files a duly stamped and addressed envelope for service of any notice, then it shall be served by registered post.

(3) In the case of an appeal or revision unless the Appellant has taken action under Sub-rule (2), the Appellate or Revising Authority shall send the notices to the District Magistrate or the Prescribed Authority, as the case may be for having service effected."

20. The Rule 22, 28, and 32 have been framed in exercise of powers conferred under Section 34. Perusal of Rule 28 of the Rules 1972 shows that it does not provide for service of notice by publication. Clause (a) of Sub-section 1 of Section 34 of U.P. Act 13 of 1972 provides for "summoning and enforcing the attendance of any person and examining him on oath". It does not refer to service of notice of the proceedings under the Act to the parties against whom an action under Section 21(1) is sought to be taken. The language used in Section 34(1)(a) of the Act is plain. It refers to the procedure for procuring and enforcing attendance of a witness for being examined on oath. Rule 28 specifically provides the procedure for service of notice. It provides that a notice issued by the District Magistrate, the Prescribed Authority or the Appellate Authority or the Revising Authority under the provisions of the Act shall be served on the person concerned in the manner prescribed therein. It is as such this Rule which contains the procedure by which a notice contemplated by sub-section 3 of Section 21 of the Act had to be issued.

21. The provisions of Section 21(3), Section 34(1)(a) of the U.P. Act 13 of 1972 and Rule 28 of the Rules, 1972 have been explained by this Court in Heera lal Sharma Vs. XVth Addl. District Judge, Kanpur and others, 1983 ARC 535

"8. A copy of the order-sheet of the Court of the Prescribed Authority has been filed along with the writ petition and a certified copy thereof has been filed along with the rejoinder-affidavit. It indicates that before passing the order for the notices being published in a newspaper the Prescribed Authority was of the view that service of notice by other methods was not sufficient. If, therefore, it was not possible to serve the notice under Section 21 by publication it is a case where even on the own finding of the Prescribed Authority the notice of application under Section 21 had not been served under any of the modes provided under Rule 28 of the Rules. Sub-section (3) of Section 21 of the Act contemplates that no order shall be made under Sub-section (1) or Sub-section (1-A) or Sub-section (2) of Section 21 except after giving to the parties concerned a reasonable opportunity of being heard. The process of granting of reasonable opportunity of being heard starts by serving of notice on the person concerned to appear in order to have his say in the matter. As such, service of a notice under Section 21 of the Act is sine qua non for the exercise of jurisdiction under the said section. In Shantanu v. State {1970ALJ 1174(FB)} a Full Bench of this Court has held that service of a notice where such notice is required is preliminary to the acquisition of the jurisdiction to proceed in the matter. It was further held relying on the decision of the Supreme Court in Kiran Singh v. Chaman Paswan AIR 1954 SC 340 that it was well settled that an objection to lack of jurisdiction can be taken at any stage of the proceedings and even in collateral proceedings. It is settled law that plea of res-judicata raises a question of jurisdiction (See Joy Chand v. Kamalaksha AIR 1949 PC 239). It is again settled law that if a statute requires a particular thing to be done in a particular manner, it should be done in that manner or not at all (See Asstt. Collector C.E v. N.T. Co. of India Ltd. AIR 1972 SC 2563 and Ram Chandra v. Govind : AIR 1975 SC 915). In the case of Ramchandra (supra) it was emphasised that failure to comply with the prescribed provisions vitiate the consequential order and render it non est. As already seen above Sub-section (3) of Section 21 of the Act contemplates a notice being given in order to enable the respondent to the application to have a say in the matter. In Mathura Prasad v. Dossibai, AIR 1971 SC 2356, it was held that a question relating to jurisdiction of a Court cannot be deemed to have been finally determined by an erroneous decision of that Court. If by an erroneous interpretation of the statute the Court holds that it has the jurisdiction, the question would not operate as res-judicata. Similarly by an erroneous decision if the Court assumes jurisdiction which it does not possess under the statute, the question cannot operate as res-judicata between the same parties, whether the cause of action in the subsequent litigation is the same or otherwise, because, if these decisions are considered as conclusive, it will assume the status of a special rule of law applicable to the parties relating to the jurisdiction of the Court in derogation of the rule declared by the legislature.

12. The only clause on which reliance has been placed by Counsel for respondent No. 3 in support of his submission that recourse to service of notice by publication could be taken is Clause (a) of Sub-section (1) of Section 34 of the Act which reads:

"(a) summoning and enforcing the attendance of any person and examining him on oath."

A perusal of Rules 9 to 20 of Order V, C.P.C. indicates that all the modes of service which are prescribed in Rule 28 of the Rules are to be found in one or the other rule between these Rules 9 to 20 of Order V. If Clause (a) of Section 34(1) of the Act is interpreted in such a manner as to confer on the authorities mentioned in Section 34 of the Act the power to take recourse to the modes of service prescribed in Order V, Rules 9 to 20 C.P.C. there would have been apparently no necessity of enacting Rule 28 of the rules at all in as much as whatever is prescribed in Rule 28 is already to be found in one or the other rules between Rules 9 and 20 of Order V, C.P.C. Sub-clause (F) of Section 34(1) contemplates exercise of power in regard to any other matter which may be prescribed. Likewise Sub-section (8) of Section 34 contemplates prescription by rules in regard to such other powers. The expression "such other powers" obviously means what has not already been provided in any of the Sub-clauses (a) to (f). This also makes it clear that the provisions contained in Rules 9 to 20 of Order V, C.P.C. had not been made applicable to the proceedings under the Act and Clause (a) of Section 34(1) of the Act cannot therefore be interpreted in a manner to include that power.

13. Further as seen above, Clause (a) of Section 34(1) provides for summoning and enforcing the attendance of any person and examining him on oath. This obviously refers to issuing of summons requiring a person to attend and given evidence as witness. It does not refer to service of notice of the proceeding under the Act to the party against whom an action is sought to be taken. When a notice is issued to the Defendant or Respondent in a proceeding he is not required to attend for being examined on oath. Further, he is not compelled to appear. It is left to his choice whether or not to appear and contest the proceedings. In this view of the matter there is no question of enforcing his attendance. On the other hand a witness is required to attend for being examined on oath and if he fails to appear his attendance is to be enforced. On the language used in Section 34(1)(a) of the Act it is plaint that this provision refers to the procedure for procuring and enforcing attendance of a witness for being examined on oath. Rule 28 on the other hand provides that a notice issued by the District Magistrate, the Prescribed Authority or the appellate or revising authority under the provisions of the Act shall be served on the person concerned in the manner prescribed therein. It is as such this rule which contains the procedure by which a notice contemplated by the Sub-section (3) of Section 21 of the Act had to be issued."

22. In Tara Shankar Vs. Vinod Kumar Verma and others, 1993 (2) ARC 6 (7) (paras 3 & 7), Hon'ble Single Judge considered the provisions of Order 9 Rule 13 C.P.C. while dealing in trust matter and held as under:-

"3. The brief question that falls for consideration is whether a decree passed ex parte, affecting a person, who was not a party to the decree could be set aside under Order 9 Rule 13 C.P.C.

7. In the case of Surajdeo v. Board of Revenue U.P. Allahabad and others reported in AIR 1982 All 23, this Court has observed that where a stranger who was not a party to a suit alleges that the decree passed therein is obtained by fraud and collusion, he can bring a regular suit for the reliefs claimed by him but there is no hard and fast rule that he cannot bring the correct facts to the notice of the court concerned that fraud had been practised upon the court and that the court had committed patent Illegality in passing the ex parte decree in favour of the Plaintiff in that suit specially when he was likely to be affected by the ex parte decree in favour of the Plaintiff in that suit. It was held that when a stranger is vitally interested in the subject matter of the suit decree ex parte application by him to set aside the ex parte decree under order 9 Rule 13 Code of Civil Procedure is competent. It is maintainable under Section 151 Code of Civil Procedure also. It would not be correct to say that the trial court in such circumstances had no jurisdiction to set aside the ex parte decree, which was obtained by collusion and fraud practised by the Plaintiff and the Defendants in that suit."

(Emphasis supplied by me)

Inherent power to recall and set aside an order:-

23. In the case of Indian Bank vs M/S Satyam Fibres (India} Pvt.Ltd, (1996) 5 SCC 550 (Para 23), Hon'ble Supreme Court has held that the Court has inherent power to recall and set aside an order :-

(i) when fraud has been practised upon the Court

(ii) when the Court is misled by a party or

(iii) when the Court itself commits a mistake which prejudices a party

24. In A.R. Antulay Vs. R.S. Nayak & Anr. (1988) 2 SCC 602 (para para 130), Hon'ble Supreme Court noticed motions to set aside judgments being permitted where: (i) a judgment was rendered in ignorance of the fact that a party had not been served at all and was shown as served or in ignorance of the fact that a necessary party had died and the estate was not represented, (ii) a judgment was obtained by fraud, (iii) a party has had no notice and a decree was made against him and such party approaches the Court for setting aside the decision ex debito justitiae on proof of the fact that there was no service.

25. In Corpus Juris Secundum (Vol. XIX) under the Chapter "Judgment-Opening and Vacating" (paras.265 to 284, at pp. 487-510) the law on the subject has been stated. The grounds on which the courts may open or vacate their judgments are generally matters which render the judgment void or which are specified in statutes authorising such actions. Invalidity of the judgment of such nature as to render it void is a valid ground for vacating it at least if the invalidity is apparent on the face of the record. Fraud or collusion in obtaining a judgment is a sufficient ground for opening or vacating it. A judgment secured in violation of an agreement not to enter judgment may be vacated on that ground. However, in general, a judgment will not be opened or vacated on grounds which could have been pleaded in the original action. A motion to vacate will not be entered when the proper remedy is by some other proceedings, such as by appeal. The right to vacation of a judgment may be lost by waiver or estoppel. Where a party injured acquiesces in the rendition of the judgment or submits to it, waiver or estoppel results.

26. In Budhia Swain and others Vs. Gopinath Deb and others (1999) 4 SCC 396 (paras 8 & 9) Hon'ble Supreme Court again considered the scope of power of a Tribunal or a Court to recall an order and held as under:-

*"8.In our opinion a tribunal or a court may recall an order earlier made by it if

(i) the proceedings culminating into an order suffer from the inherent lack of jurisdiction and such lack of jurisdiction is patent,

(ii) there exists fraud or collusion in obtaining the judgment,

(iii) there has been a mistake of the court prejudicing a party, or

(iv) a judgment was rendered in ignorance of the fact that a necessary party had not been served at all or had died and the estate was not represented.

The power to recall a judgment will not be exercised when the ground for re-opening the proceedings or vacating the judgment was available to be pleaded in the original action but was not done or where a proper remedy in some other proceeding such as by way of appeal or revision was available but was not availed. The right to seek vacation of a judgment may be lost by waiver, estoppel or acquiescence.

9. A distinction has to be drawn between lack of jurisdiction and a mere error in exercise of jurisdiction. The former strikes at the very root of the exercise and want of jurisdiction may vitiate the proceedings rendering them and the orders passed therein a nullity. A mere error in exercise of jurisdiction does not vitiate the legality and validity of the proceedings and the order passed thereon unless set aside in the manner known to law by laying a challenge subject to the law of limitation. In Hira Lal Patni Vs. Sri Kali Nath AIR 1962 SC 199, it was held :-

".....The validity of a decree can be challenged in execution proceedings only on the ground that the court which passed the decree was lacking in inherent jurisdiction in the sense that it could not have seisin of the case because the subject matter was wholly foreign to its jurisdiction or that the defendant was dead at the time the suit had been instituted or decree passed, or some such other ground which could have the effect of rendering the court entirely lacking in jurisdiction in respect of the subject matter of the suit or over the parties to it."

Whether ex parte judgment was liable to be recalled:-

27. The fact regarding missing of the tenant-defendant 2nd set (defendant no.4) since the year 2013, came to the notice of the Court during pendency of the P.A. Case No.16 of 2017. Order I Rule 10 sub-Rule 2 confers power upon the Court that the Court may at any stage of the proceedings, either upon or without the application of either party, and on such term as may appear to the Court to be just, order that the name of any party improperly joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant, be struck out, and that the name of any person who ought to have been joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant, or whose presence before the court may be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, be added. Thus, as per this provision, the Court may either upon or without the application of either party order that the name of any person who ought to have been joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant, or whose presence before the Court may be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, be added. The original tenant Venketeshwar (defendant 2nd set) was missing. His sons were occupying the tenanted portion as tenant. The applicant-petitioner is the son of tenant-defendant 2nd set. Therefore, the Court below should have added him as party inasmuch as the original tenant was not available to contest the P.A. Case because he was missing since the year 2013. Notice as contemplated under Section 21(3) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972 was not served upon the tenant-defendant 2nd set or upon the applicant-petitioner in the manner prescribed by Rule 28 of the Rules. In the matter of the tenant-defendant 1st set the court below found that there was no valid substituted service inasmuch as the newspaper in which the publication was made, had no circulation in the area. By one and the same publication in the same alleged newspaper the notices were sought to be served upon both sets of defendants. Therefore, once the Court itself found in the matter of the tenant-defendant 1st set that there was no valid substituted service, therefore, it can be safely concluded that there was no substituted service upon the tenant-defendant 2nd set also. Thus, the judgment and decree dated 07.04.2008 in P.A. Case No.01 of 2017, was passed ex-parte without service on notice upon the tenant and in breach of Section 21(3) of the Act and Rule 28 of the Rules.

28. Perusal of the aforequoted provisions leaves no manner of doubt that for sufficient cause an ex parte order can be set aside. It is not in dispute that the applicant-petitioner is the son of the tenant-defendant 2nd set (defendant no.4), who is stated to be missing since the year 2013. The plaintiff-opposite party No.4 had filed the P.A. Case in question on 31.01.2017. It is also not in dispute that the tenanted portion is in occupation of the sons of the tenant-defendant-2nd set (defendant no.4). The court below itself has held in its order dated 8.4.2019 in Misc. Case no.46 of 2018 (Smt. Renu Kushwaha Vs. Javed) arising from the same P.A. Case No. 01 of 2017 that the substituted service of notices upon the defendants by publication of notices in the news paper was not sufficient, but it set aside the ex-parte judgment and decree only with respect to the defendant no. 1 to 3. Therefore, since the impugned judgment in P.A. Case No.01 of 2017 was passed ex-parte without any service of notices upon the defendants including the tenant-defendant no.4 (defendant 2nd set), therefore, under the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case the impugned ex- parte judgment and decree should have been set aside in respect of the defendant no.4 also and the applicant petitioner(son of the defendant no.4) in occupation of the tenanted portion as tenant, should have been afforded an opportunity of hearing.

29. The judgment in the case of Ram Prakash Agarwal (supra) relied by learned counsel for plaintiff-respondent does not support the case of the plaintiff-respondent. In paragraphs 28.2 and 28.3 of the aforesaid judgment, Hon'ble Supreme Court has observed that inherent power under Section 151 C.P.C. can be exercised by the court to redress only such grievance for which no remedy is provided under C.P.C. and that in the event such an order has been obtained from the Court by playing fraud upon it, it is always open to the court to recall the order on the application of the person aggrieved. Perusal of the release application of the plaintiff-opposite party no.4 shows that even knowing it well that the defendant no.4 is missing yet the plaintiff-opposite party No.4 has neither mentioned this fact in his application nor impleaded the defendant No.4 through his sons. This shows malafide intention of the plaintiff-opposite party no.4 to get an ex parte decree of eviction. Therefore, the principles laid down in the judgment in the case of Ram Prakash Agarwal (supra) do not support the case of the plaintiff-opposite party no.4 rather it is against him.

Conclusion:-

30. The discussion made above are briefly summarised as under:-

(a) In a case filed under Section 21(1) of U.P. Act 13 of 1972, no order can be made under sub-section 1 or sub-section (1-A) or sub-section 2 of Section 21, except after giving to the parties concerned a reasonable opportunity of being heard.

(b) Service of notice under Section 21 of the Act is sine qua non for the exercise of jurisdiction under Section 21(1)/(1-A)/(2) of the U.P. Act 13 of 1972.

(c) Rule 28 of the Rules, 1972 has been framed by the State Government in exercise of powers conferred under sub-section 8 of Section 34 of the U.P. Act 13 of 1972.

(d) Rule 28 prescribes the procedure of service of notice under the Act by the District Magistrate, the Prescribed Authority or the appellate authority or the revising authority.

(e) Notice as contemplated under Section 21(3) of the Act in the rent case under Section 21(1) of the Act was not served upon the tenant-defendant 2nd set in the manner prescribed by Rule 28 of the Rules.

(f) Service of notice required by the aforesaid provisions is preliminary to the acquisition of jurisdiction to proceed in a rent case under Section 21(1) of the Act. Since there was no service of notice upon the tenant-defendant 2nd set, therefore, the ex parte judgment and decree dated 07.04.2018 in P.A. Case No.01 of 2017 (Javed Ahmad Vs. Smt. Renu Kushwaha & others) with respect to the tenant-defendant 2nd set, is liable to be set aside and the P.A. Case is liable to be restored to its original number by setting aside the impugned order dated 30.04.2019 in Misc. Case No.45 of 2018 and allowing the application 4 G.

(g) The Court has inherent power to recall and set aside the order where:-

(i) fraud has been practised upon the Court, or
